"Article III.—This society shall be under the supervision and direction of women, known as the Woman's Board of Home Missions of the M. E. Church, South, and consisting of a president, two vice-presidents, a general secretary, a recording secretary, a general treasurer, and the corresponding secretary or alternate of each Conference society."

This change in the form of the executive body of the society was designed to secure a broader, more connectional management of its affairs by giving each of the Conferences a representative in the Board. The annual convention, in which the Conference secretaries have acted hitherto, was not authorized by the Constitution, and, therefore, was an irresponsible body without legal powers. The Central Committee and convention are now merged into one Board, with full legislative and administrative powers. The connecting link between the society and the Board of Church Extension remains unbroken, Art. VIII. securing to the latter its past authority in the approval and administration of all funds raised for parsonages. This was the extent of its power before.

"Article X.—All dues, special contributions, and other moneys collected for the use of the general work of the Woman's Board of Home Missions, shall be sent to the general treasurer, to be expended by the Board. Fifty per cent. of the dues sent in by each Conference society, less the amount paid out for Conference expenses, shall be held subject to the order of the proper officers of said Conference for aiding parsonages within the bounds of the same; but any such funds unappropriated by said Conference at the close of each fiscal year shall be used by the Board to aid the work in more needy Conferences."

Note that the fifty per cent. of dues formerly retained in the Conference treasury is to be held by the general treasurer subject to the appropriations of the Conference society for one year, the Conference having just as much power as in the past to appropriate that fund. The important gain being, this money going out from the general treasury, with the endorsement of the Board of Church Extension, is secured to the society by a refunding bond on the parsonage and compulsory insurance for one year. This bond can not be had by a Conference society, because it is not a chartered body. Without this bond, if the parsonage should be sold, the money given by the Conference society could be (and has been) diverted to other purposes, and lost to the society and parsonage-building. Compulsory insurance will save hundreds of dollars annually to the society.

If at the close of the year any of this money is not needed, and is not called for by the Conference remitting it, it can be used for parsonages for which applications have been made to the Board, thus cultivating the true connectional spirit, which is the key-note of our Methodist polity. This change looks especially to the aiding of the weaker Conferences by leading the older, better-established Conferences out of their abundance to supply the greater need of other portions of the church, instead of hoarding it from year to year unneeded in their Conference treasuries. This money can not be used for any other purpose than building and aiding parsonages.

The provisions of Art. X. do not affect the funds raised for local work. Such funds have never been sent to the general treasury, and are not now, but will be retained and expended exactly in the same way and under the same conditions as in the past. The rule of the society is unvarying—all funds shall be used only for the objects for which they are donated.

The changes in the Constitution were asked for and made after earnest consideration and prayer for the guidance of the Holy Spirit, and I trust the future will show their wisdom by an increase in the growth and activity of the society. Let every woman stand undaunted at her post of duty, and faithfully do her part in the great work committed to our hands, remembering we serve the God of hope and love, who has made us partakers of his divine nature.

HOW TO CULTIVATE THE ART OF TALKING TO CHILDREN.

BY MRS. A. F. WATKINS.

It was said of Victor Hugo, "He loved God and little children." So it must be with us who would lead and guide the little ones; we must love them. Yet it is impossible for us to love that which we do not in some measure understand, and understanding is based upon sympathy; therefore, first of all, a right condition of feeling must exist, from which will arise the right thought, and eventually the right expression. Let us be indeed as little children, that we may enter the kingdom of heaven upon earth. "Let us keep near to our childhood, for in going from it we are going away from God." Cultivate within yourselves the habit of recalling impressions of early days. You will thus be enabled to look at things from the child's standpoint. What you have to say will come from your heart. Words will not be found wanting, neither will the form conflict with the spirit. Encourage your children to retain vivid impressions of all that characterizes their home life.

I have just been reading the autobiography of that great and good woman, Frances Willard, and no other feature of the book struck me more forcibly than the many and vivid recollections which she held of her happy childhood. When Henry Grady, the young prophet of the New South, visited the place of his birth a few weeks before his death, he said, "I want to go to Sunday-school and be a boy again," and as the children sang, "Shall we gather at the river?" the tears ran unrestrained down his cheeks. Who shall estimate the value of such memories as these?

Much has been said about conversation being a "lost art." I am not prepared to either admit or deny this statement, but I do assert that it is no more an art to talk to children than it is to grown-up folks. Many teachers make the mistake of supposing that children are on a much lower plane of intelligence, and, in endeavoring to be simple, make themselves foolish, losing all hold of the child. Lift them to your level, and talk to them as if they are rational beings. Let your style be simple and concise; imaginative, but not falsely so—that is, it should not appeal to the love of the abnormal or the desire for the unusual, but rather seek to widen the field of possible experience to the little listeners, and lift their souls to realms unthought of—the realm of the imagination, the beautiful, the ideal; but in endeavoring to lead the little children to an expression of the beautiful, the ideal that is within them, we must remember that they are but little children; that their ideals are children's ideals.

We must win the child's confidence by allowing him to express himself; sympathizing with his joy or sorrow, and never laughing at his mistakes. In talking to little children on eternal and spiritual subjects we must reach them through things of time and sense, for as God works through nature to man, the child may work through nature to God.

Spiritual truth in the abstract is beyond a little child's comprehension. How natural with this thought seems the longing cry of the apostles when they were yet "babes in Christ," "Shew us the Father," and the tender response, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." Before this time material things had illustrated spiritual truths; nor was it possible till Jesus had come that the power of the invisible spirit should rest on his disciples. So the little child's "inner consciousness" is awakened, first, by contact with the real and tangible, wherein the spiritual may be found. He must experience something of what is given him, or it is of little value to him. Speak to him of his earthly father's love for him. His emotions being aroused and moved to action, he may, by loving his father whom he hath seen, be led to love also the God and Father whom he hath not seen. We must start with what is nearest to them, and with their powers of personification a close sympathy with nature is always found.

Godliness is a very practical thing to a child. A little girl, on being asked what religion was, said, "It is being what Christ would be, and doing what Christ would do, if he were a little girl and lived at our house." The child must be given something to do, and not be put off with the indefinite injunction to "be good," which is simply a generalization. No opportunity given for definite action, and desire dies a natural death.

The child sees in creation the embodied thoughts of God. Thus the teachers must make the most of such lessons, as the resurrection ideas of the Spring-time and the fading of the Autumn, teaching the double lesson that while "we all fade as the leaf," there is no death to the child of God.

Above all, our work is to create religious feelings and desires rather than religious ideas. While working for this, the fruitage of labor and the interdependence of all will be felt by children if the teacher sees the truths she teaches.

"Thou must be true thyself,
If thou the truth would teach;
Thy soul with love must overflow, if thou
Another soul wouldst reach.
It needs the overflowing heart
To give the lips full speech."

PATRIOT OR COSMOPOLITAN?

Patriotism, the love of the land in which we were born, the pride in it, the desire for it whenever we are absent, is a sentiment which pervades almost every human breast, and induces each individual to prefer the land of his birth, not because it is better than another country, but merely because it is his own country. It has often been observed that the man who is incapable of it is incapable of any noble emotion. The feeling lies deeper than any logical expression, among those pulses of the heart which vibrate to the sanctities of home and to the thoughts which gather around the graves of our fathers. It has power to transfigure the most barren and repulsive country with a glory all its own. The Ethiopian imagines that God made his sands and deserts, while angels only were employed in the formation of the rest of the world. The Maltese, isolated on a rock, dignify their island with the proud appellation of "The Flower of the World." The Norwegians are not ashamed of their frowning rocks and bare hills, but inscribe upon their rix-dollars the motto: "Spirit, loyalty, valor, and whatever is honorable, let the world learn among the rocks of Norway." Even the Esquimaux, imprisoned in ice and snow, think no country like their own, esteeming blubber-oil the best kind of food, and an ice-cabin the most comfortable kind of house. So general and powerful is the sentiment of patriotism that every true man finds his heart leaping up in response to the passionate appeal of the Scottish poet:

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself hath said,
This is my own, my native land!
Whose heart hath ne'er within him burned
As home his footsteps he hath turned
From wandering on a foreign strand!
If such there be, go, mark him well;
For him no minstrel raptures swell
High though his titles, proud his name,
Boundless his wealth as wish can claim;
Despite those titles, power, and pelf,
The wretch, concentred all in self,
Living shall forfeit fair renown,
And, doubly dying, shall go down
To the vile dust, from which he sprung
Unwept, unhonored, and unsung."

A class of writers and speakers have come to the front in our generation who claim that they have merged patriotism in a higher affection which they call cosmopolitanism; but closer acquaintance with them reveals the fact that either in their own hearts they love their own country best, in spite of all that they say, or else that in their exchange of patriotism for cosmopolitanism they have lost more than they have gained. Some of them cloak their change with the sanction of Christianity, arguing that the aloofness of Christ from the burning questions of his day, the super-nationality of his chief apostles, the teaching of the Sermon on the Mount, and the comprehensive charter of the kingdom of God, justify their attitude. They maintain that the claims of Christianity are inconsistent with devotion without reserve to one's own country. This would be most unfortunate, if it were true, for it would place in conflict two of the strongest and noblest instincts of our human nature—loyalty to the church of Christ into which we have been baptized, and loyalty to the state into which we have been born. But the dilemma is purely artificial, and can not stand the scrutiny of careful consideration. There is and can be no antagonism between Church and State. The State in any land is the nation acting in a civil capacity, and having to do with the things that are seen, while the Church is the nation acting in a spiritual capacity, and having to do with the things that are unseen. Christian men ought never to forget that the State is as much the creature of God as the Church, and that both are institutions, the activity of which ought to be combined in a harmonious whole for the promotion of the highest welfare of the race.

Patriotism may and should merge into cosmopolitanism, but it can not do so by losing its individual aim and character. On the contrary, it will accomplish that ideal best by impressing upon each country its duty to fulfill its own destiny, do its own work, and be loyal to its own traditions, and so push up the aggregate of humanity into fuller sunshine and prosperity. Just as he who tills his own plot of ground the most thoroughly adds thereby the most effectually to the cultivation of the globe, so the nation which the most diligently adds to the agencies that foster the growth and strength of its own individual life does the most valuable service for the welfare of the race at large. The world is not a mass of separate units, but like a body which has many members, and what makes one member vigorous increases the vigor of the whole body.

Patriotism is not shouting in stentorian tones the greatness and goodness of one's own country, getting up open-air demonstrations, or indulging in newspaper articles with big adjectives and glowing periods. The testimony of history and of experience shows that the man who considers his countrymen as God's creatures and himself as accountable for his acting toward them, is the man who does most to defend and serve the country in which he lives. The inward sense of duty and conscience is a far more powerful factor in the formation of a true patriot than the love of praise and greatness. The cultivation of that sense is the clamant need of our generation.—Central Advocate.

When man is not properly trained, he is the most savage animal on the globe.—Plato.

When you go away from home, don't forget that God is everywhere.

THE GOLDEN SIDE.

BY M. A. KIDDER.

There is many a rest in the road of life,
If we only would stop and take it;
And many a tone from the better land,
If the querulous heart would make it.
'Tis the sunny soul that is full of hope,
And whose beautiful trust never falleth.
The grass is green and the flowers are bright
Though the Winter storm prevalleth.

Better to hope though the clouds hang low,
And to keep the eyes still lifted.
For the sweet blue sky will soon peep through
When the ominous clouds are lifted.
There never was a night without a day,
Or an evening without a morning.
And the darkest hour, as the proverb goes,
Is the hour before the dawning.

There is many a gem in the path of life,
Which we pass in our idle pleasure,
That is richer far than the jeweled crown
Or the miser's hoarded treasure;
It may be the love of a little child,
Or a mother's prayers to heaven,
Or only a beggar's grateful thanks
For a cup of water given.

Better to weave in the web of life
A bright and golden filling,
And to do God's will with a ready heart
And hands that are swift and willing,
Than to snap the delicate, minute threads
Of our curious lives asunder,
And then blame heaven for the tangled ends,
And sit and grieve and wonder.

"CHEW YOUR BULLETS."

In other days, when the muzzle-loading rifle was in use, we would chew the bullet if we wanted it to tear its way successfully through the victim. In shooting the gospel gun, would it not be well to chew the bullet, especially in this age of so much worldliness and general indifference to the truth? There are many who hear us Sunday after Sunday, and go away without one positive conviction. They are not aroused under our sermons. Let us chew our bullets and kill every fire. The hearer should be made to feel the weight of our message. I can not say that I like to see them get mad, yet I must confess I believe it better to take the chances and tell the people the whole truth, both as to their sins and what the Word of God says about it. When we expose personal sins some will get mad, but the more considerate will repent and turn to God. There is some hope for the hearer that gets angry when rebuked; but no hope for the unmoved. We sometimes claim that our congregations are impervious, when the fault lies in our gospel gun and the bullet. We don't shoot to hit; we don't hit to kill. I had rather have to bury a few dead men than sit up with a dead church. There is so much of so-called society—the "upper tens"—that stands for the world every time and seldom for Christ. They usually make it unpopular for the preacher that exposes the sins of his congregation. If he does it, they raise a cry that he is a fanatic, a crank, only because he is trying to save the people from ruin. It would not hurt the church much to kill off a lot of this sort of society in church circles. I generally chew my bullets. I am going to do more of it after this. Sometimes my congregation makes it a little warm for me, but I am aware the breezes are hot where they stay. The fact is, we are a-firing into the devil, and not the people; but as soon as they see we are ready to shoot to kill, they step in between our guns and the devil, and get the whole load themselves. They go home raving, and say it was all meant for them.

The Lord have mercy upon the poor little church sinners. I dislike so much to have to hurt their little feelings, but I shall turn my gospel gun loose on the devil every time. They will have to keep out of the way.

AT EARLY MORN.

A TRIBUTE TO MY GRANDMOTHER, MARY HARRIS KEARNEY.

My grandmother's life was always associated with the early morning; and when she was sufficiently strong, it was her delight to arise early and be at work in the flower or vegetable garden when the sun arose. She succeeded in interesting my cousin (my childhood's playmate) and myself in horticulture, and passers-by might have been interested in the pretty picture that the dear old Louisiana garden presented. Two little girls, the dark hair of the one contrasting prettily with the fair curls of the other, while the patient, faithful grandmother taught them just how deep this vegetable must be planted, and how shallow that one. Then, sometimes, in the early morning grandma would have us study our lessons; and as habits cling to one through life, I find the calibre of my early morning thoughts very different from those which come to me later on in the day. But a more sacred memory of my grandmother's connection with the early morning is our going with her to the sunrise prayer meeting. Scarcely more beautiful is my dream of heaven's holy serenity than is my memory of those mornings: waking from the sweet sleep of a child, hastening through the morning bath, hurriedly getting on the little clothes, that we might be in the church at sunrise; then the walk up the hill, through the dew-laden weeds, to the church; and though memory does not recall one song that was sung in the prayer meeting, nor the Scripture that was read, yet somewhere in prayer, Scripture, or song, an indelible impression was made for "God and the right."

When my grandmother died the train which was to carry her body to its final resting-place left in the early morning. So, after all our delightful associations with the early morning, it was at the hallowed hour of dawn that the casket was closed which shut my grandmother's face from us. This fact seemed to make her death harder to bear, and as I gazed into the vast solemn stillness of the early morning, for one moment all my Christian fortitude forsook me, and the world seemed as lonely, and my heart was as desolate as it would have been in my childhood's days, if I had suddenly looked up from my little "garden-row" and found my grandmother gone. The years had indeed flown backward in their flight, and I felt dazed and like a lost child. But not in vain has the dear heavenly Father promised comfort, and my heart is calm with the thought that grandma has gone to the country where, in the glory of God's presence, the exquisite beauty of early morn is eternally felt.

Meridian, Miss.

TO THE PASTORS AND PEOPLE IN SEASHORE DISTRICT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MY DEAR BRETHREN: I herewith present the report of the Committee on District Parsonage adopted by our late District Conference, held in Hattiesburg, Miss., May 26-29.

Please appoint some active, interested person to collect the amounts apportioned, and forward same to Mr. J. P. Carter, Hattiesburg, Miss., or myself. The committee are anxious to commence work at once.

Hattiesburg Methodism proposes to raise half the sum required to build a commodious and comfortable parsonage.

Please see to it that these amounts are raised and forwarded at the earliest day practicable.

The following report will give you the action of the District Conference:

REPORT OF THE DISTRICT PARSONAGE COMMITTEE.

Your committee directed to formulate a plan to raise $600 to $700, with which to rebuild the district parsonage at Hattiesburg, beg leave to report as follows:

That the best way to get the district parsonage built will be to divide the whole amount required between the various charges composing the district. To lay upon the pastors of the district the privilege of giving the matter their earliest attention, with such assistance as they may select from their congregations. Hattiesburg, as we are given to understand, having assumed upon this enterprise $700. The remainder of the district has been assessed the appended sums, to complete the amount desired: Moss Point, $100; Ellisville and L., $60; Lumberton and P., $60; Pearlington and L., $60; Columbia, $50; Bay St. Louis and L. B., $45; Biloxi, $50; Purvis, $30; Ocean Springs and S., $30; Vancleave, $50; Whittington, $30; Americus, $30; Galloway, $30; Escatawpa, $30; Fuller, $30; Williamsburg, $30; Gulfport, $30; Leakesville, $10.

Your committee wishes to express its commendation of the liberal spirit declared by Hattiesburg. She vindicates the right to be the home-point of the district.

For the committee,

I. W. COOPER, Chair'n.

With devout thankfulness to God for the prosperity attending us, let us go on to yet larger and better things.

Fraternally yours,

C. A. POWELL.

SPECIAL PROVIDENCES.

They stand out sharply defined in individual experiences and historical incidents. We cite one historical occurrence: In 1588 Philip II. was King of Spain, and Pope Sextus V., with papal authority, had made over England to the arrogant bigot whose ambition was to crush both the Protestant faith and human freedom. With this spur to his action, he prepared a fleet of 130 vessels, and of greater size than Europe had ever known.

The trained Catholic soldiers of the continent hastened to offer their services, that they might be in at the death of Protestantism, and share the glory of obliterating offensive English liberty.

Could you have poised your vision over Lisbon's port, you might have seen the mustering of 20,000 veteran soldiers, beside the sailors. About to sail, the death of the greatest sea captain, the Marquis of Santa-Croce, fell like a pall; and then the death of the vice-admiral, Paliano, second in command. Then the Duke of Medina put a wholly inexperienced man in sea affairs at the head.

Then you would have seen the thrilling sight of those 130 men-of-war sailing from Lisbon harbor, and next day struck by cyclone and scattered like wild ducks. Many of the vessels were lost, and the fleet returned to repair damages. But promptly assuming they could not fail, and the invincible Armada sailed for the English Channel, and picking up a fisherman who made them believe that the English, in their cowardly flight, had run their ships into Plymouth harbor, and discharged the sailors.

A little later on this invincible fleet, opposed by a few small vessels composing the English squadron, and sailing onward to take on 34,000 more picked soldiers in waiting under the command of the bloody Duke of Parma, was blown to pieces by an unparalleled hurricane, and sinking 100 vessels with all on board, and all the rest utterly disabled.

AN OPEN LETTER TO "GILDEROY."

DEAR BROTHER: In your letter to the ADVOCATE, of May 19, you warn your brethren against too fervent expressions of patriotism, and express your fear that the fires of patriotism are being kindled where only the fires of God should burn; and doubtless you consider the warning necessary; but will you kindly answer a few questions suggested by your warning?

First, Is the love of country incompatible with the love of God? Some of us had supposed they could burn with holy fervor in the same heart, and that we had divine authority and example for it; that, passing over the long list of Old Testament heroes and heroines whom God called and prospered, we had in our Lord himself an example of true patriotism; that "he came unto his own," and that, "having loved his own, he loved them to the end." Will you tell us why he wept over Jerusalem and not over Rome? Destruction impended over both, yet over his capital city only do we hear his lament.

Was not Stephen a patriot when he made his defense before the council? Did he not say in that many things about the history, political and otherwise, of his people? The men who listened seemed to think so, at all events. Was not Paul a patriot when he could wish himself accursed for his brethren's sake, and when he wrote the eleventh chapter of Hebrews? Did not our Lord come to break every yoke and let the oppressed go free? Are not justice and judgment the habitation of his throne, and shall not mercy and truth go before his face? Has he not said, "Open thy mouth for the dumb in the cause of such as are appointed to destruction," and, "Open thy mouth, judge righteously, and plead the cause of the poor and needy"?

Mrs. H. W. Foote, of North Miss. Conference
Mrs. E. R. Parker, of Mississippi Conference
Mrs E. E. Kennedy, of Louisiana Conference

We have now reached the close of another year, and we trust and believe it to be the most successful that our P. and H. M. Society has ever had. Christ, who exhibited manhood in its best estate, has left us an example of helpfulness which we should earnestly strive to imitate. He said of himself that he came not to be ministered unto, but to give his life in service for others; and so it is that the faithful Christian women of our land, realizing this, and endeavoring to follow in his footsteps, have put forth some mighty efforts to relieve the poor and needy, and help those who are in distress.

Some have learned that real happiness is to be found only through helpfulness, and in striving to bring sunshine and happiness into the lives of others, have found their own hearts filled with joy and gladness as never before. There is always a reflex power in doing good; a good action will react upon the doer. We see a man faltering and sinking under a heavy weight. It may be he is poor and aged, and that the load upon his shoulders is either to feed or warm those who are dependent upon him. We help him carry his burden, and his heart is made glad and thankful, and the exercise has made us stronger in body, and the kind intent has made us happier in soul.

Home mission work embraces every phase of Christian benevolence. Our Visiting Committees are accomplishing a great work by coming in touch with suffering humanity, for they have the power to carry into the recesses of their souls sunshine and gladness by making the atmosphere more congenial.

The ladies of the P. and H. M. Society are making greater efforts to induce the children to attend Sunday-school. The indifferent and unconcerned have been invited to hear the gospel message as sent through our faithful ministry. More homes for our pastors have been provided than ever before. We realize of a truth that a church without a parsonage is like a family without a home, and feeling that a lack of these is a great obstacle in the evangelization of the West, we would urge our sisters to strive yet more diligently, and insist on the prompt payment of all dues—$1.20 a year; also the contingent fund of twenty-five cents that we may help the needy charges.

Our society has a broad field of usefulness. All of our preachers must have homes for their wives and little ones, and we can't afford to comfortably house our own pastor, then let those brave preachers who go to the Western frontier endure hardships on a pitiful salary, and then be without a home.

Surely there is a greater missionary spirit within us than that. It is the law of God that every good deed performed will bring the doer a harvest in some way. Who has not been repaid by watering withered flowers? Who has not been recompensed a thousand times over by watering withered souls, and who has not received tenfold in doing the kind act?

As you turned back to your own pleasant fireside and thought of the happiness and joy that you had brought to some one of our Lord's workmen, were you not repaid? While we are helping to build parsonages in the far West we do not forget to look after our home interests. In our own district this past year Longtown received an appropriation of $75. Cockrum and Arkabutla made application for help, but, owing to these applications being made out incorrectly, they were not considered.

Our Supply Department has blanks printed giving number of family, size of all garments needed by preachers' families. These are sent to societies who ask for them and desire to help in this way. Carrollton, Oxford and Cleveland sent barrels of clothing last Winter. Sardis district did not furnish any, but I believe there are some who are preparing to send them this year.

How many of you are willing to help in this blessed work? It will only take but little of your time and money; yet, by that little, you may do great good.

By request we received from Dr Lambuth the following leaflets "How Are We Doing the Lord's Business?" "The Promise of the Father;" "The Responsibility of Young People and Their Societies for Foreign Missions;" "The Missionary Uprising among the Young;" "Why? Missionary Motives: 1st. Why Should I Pray for Missions? Why Should I Study Missions? Why Should I Give to Missions? Why Should I Be a Missionary?" "If They Only Knew;" "The Claims of Chinese Women;" "A Living Sacrifice;" "Medical Missions;" "The Value of Medical Missions;" "Wanted, Female Physicians;" "Young Women as Medical Missionaries;" "Letter From Korea," etc.

Being deeply impressed with the value and great need of medical missionaries, especially female physicians, some years ago, we wrote at length for our column. We have felt more and more interested, and now feel constrained to kindly urge most serious consideration of the subject, and personal responsibility concerning it.

We will distribute these leaflets among the district secretaries, and request wise circulation. Let us pray earnestly, work harder than ever, use all the means at our disposal to advance the great commission, lest Satan takes advantage of these times, and cause us to be too much concerned about the war, and to relax our efforts to send out the glad tidings of "peace and good-will toward men."

Miss Anna Trotter, Sec., Enterprise district, May 13: "The meeting of W. F. M. S. of Enterprise district was held April 23 and 24 at Waynesboro, Miss. Of the six adult auxiliaries in the district, five were represented by delegates who had with them written reports of the year's work. One of the two juvenile societies was represented by a little girl, who made an encouraging report from her society. We also had with us a delegate from the young people's missionary society of Shubuta.

"Among the difficulties of the auxiliaries was mentioned the non-attendance of the members at the monthly meetings. Our Conference secretary gave us a remedy for this: 'Give them something to do.' Though no public meetings had been held, a discussion of it led to the conclusion that they were necessary. A large number of subscriptions to the W. M. Advocate was urged. Rev. J. T. Nicholson preached a stirring missionary sermon, which, we trust, will long be remembered, and bring forth much fruit. A paper, 'The Measure of Love,' was read by Mrs. Hand, and a resolution requesting that it be published in the Woman's Missionary Advocate was adopted.

"A collection was taken for district work, amounting to six dollars and eighty seven cents. Altogether, the interest in our work seemed to be revived."

With great pleasure we give place to the following report, as well as the above, and trust it will provoke more reports from the juveniles; also the older or young people's societies:

DEAR ADVOCATE: Perhaps some of your little readers will be glad to hear that our juvenile society is still at work. Our name is "Buds of Promise." We have twenty members. Mrs. Emma Siebe is our lady manager, and she takes much interest in our little band. We meet twice a month at her house. We meet there so as not to interfere with the class for Bible study at the church. Myra Porter is president; Pet Eagan is vice-president; Hattie Lewis, recording secretary; Dick Eagan, treasurer; Susette Kethley, corresponding secretary. Last year we made money enough to buy a bed for the Mary Black Hall, of the hospital in Suchow. This year we are working for Korea.

Hoping that we may verify our name, I am, Very truly,

SUSETTE KETHLEY.

SIMPLE CHEERFULNESS.

There are a number of women in the world who are fond of heroics. They are the people who exhaust themselves with unnecessary work, and take upon themselves a vast amount of suffering, physical and mental, that could readily be eliminated from their lives. In general, they keep themselves and all surrounding them in a tense state of mind and nerve, creditable, or at least excusable, in an early martyr, but decidedly uncalled for in the ordinary cares of ordinary life.

"If conditions were different!" sighs some careworn individual. "If this load of trouble were off my shoulders, or if it were not just what it is, I could afford to be cheerful and jolly. But what can one do when one's life is nothing but worry, worry, from morning till night?"

And so the worry of the world goes on, eating into the sweet, bright flowers of cheerfulness that ought to bloom in every soil.

Why is it that we women either work ourselves to death, or do so little that we take to cultivating our health and our nerves? Why do we weigh ourselves down with worries of our friends and kindred? Why do we devote so much more time to discontent with that we haven't got, rather than content with the gifts, numerous enough in every case, the gods have provided us?

Is there a good deal of caustic truth in George Eliot's saying of a discontented heroine: "You are discontented with the world because you can't get just the small things that suit your pleasure, not because it's a world where myriads of men and women are ground by misery and wrong, and tainted with pollution"?

Happiness lies within the reach of everybody. Let a woman have enough occupation, of the manual order as well as mental, and not too much; enough exercise in the open air; enough trust in providence to believe that problems beyond her solution are given her for the exercise of faith and patience, and not as causes of worry and mental torment. Then that plain and unpretending virtue of simple cheerfulness will seem to her a thing to be admired and hoarded.

Then, if you will permit me another quotation, she will not think it a mere rhetorical flight of poetic fancy when Faber exclaims: "In God's wide world there is no room for sin, no provision for sorrow, not a corner for unhappiness. Every created intelligence drinks its fill of the fountains of his gladness. Every instinct of animals beats with a pulsation of divine enjoyment. Every tree uplifts its head and flings out its branches, every flower blooms and sheds sweet odor, every mineral glances and sparkles, just as the clouds sail, and the waters flow, and the planet turns in the excess of the happiness of God."—Selected.

ENJOY TO-DAY.

Live in present thanksgiving. Count thy sunbeams now. Treasure to-day the gems which are strewn upon thy path. The love which is merely retrospective is a very painful thing. If thy days of sorrow at any time should cloud thy days of joy, I would like thee to be able to say, "Well, while they lasted, I did appreciate them." There are some who want to feel at death that their life has been a vain show. I would not have it so with thee, O my soul! I would like, when death comes, to feel that I had thoroughly enjoyed life—taken the honey from the flower as God meant me to take it. It shall be a great solace to me at twilight that I have basked with conscious joy in the heat of the day. Therefore, I shall bask in it now. The cup of gladness which my Father has given me, shall I not drink it even unto the dregs? I shall thank him for every bird that sings. I shall praise him for every flower that blows. I shall bless him for every stream that warbles. I shall love him for every heart that loves. I shall see the sparkling of the cup ere it passes to the hand of my brother.—George Matheson, D. D.

I seldom hear the bell toll for one that is dead but conscience asks me: "What hast thou done for the saving of that soul before it left the body? There is one more gone into eternity! What didst thou do to prepare him for it? And what testimony must be given to the Judge concerning thee?"—Richard Baxter.

If the soul has the least scintillation of a desire to be holy; much more, if it is bent on being holy; still more, if it is striving and struggling to be holy; is it conceivable that the Incarnate Love should not meet that desire, that longing, that striving, and visit the soul with power?—Goudburn.

The true happiness of man consists in being united to God, and his only misery is being separated from Him.—Plato.

If our religion makes us want to fight to defend it, we have the wrong kind.

BATON ROUGE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

On Wednesday morning, May 25, I left Amite City en route for Clinton, the seat of the Baton Rouge District Conference. The trip was made across the country by buggy—a distance of about forty miles. As this part of my own native State is entirely new to me, the trip was full of interest. A pleasant drive of a few hours brought us to Greensburg. This is the heart of the St. Helena circuit, and here, in a snug little parsonage, resides the genial, good-humored pastor, G. D. Anders. Here also is located the Johnson Institute, a flourishing school under the management of our church.

From this point, in company with G. D. Anders and N. J. Roberts, we journeyed on to Clinton. The Conference was opened Thursday, May 26, at 9 A. M., and presided over by the deservedly popular presiding elder, R. W. Tucker. This scribe was elected secretary. The Conference was one of the most enjoyable it has ever been my privilege to attend. There was not a dull hour from start to finish; not a discordant note to mar the harmony and good feeling of the entire session. The reports from the various works indicated honest work done, with good results following.

After the opening services Saturday morning, some brother moved to prolong the devotional exercises, and more than half an hour was spent in a testimony meeting. It was good to be there. Truly, many can still, from sweet experience, witness to the power of redeeming grace to save from sin.

One young brother, Henry N. Brown, was licensed to preach. Three were recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial into the traveling connection: J. F. McClellan, G. P. White, and H. N. Brown. The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: J. A. Tillery, T. D. Lipscombe, W. S. Holmes, and F. H. Holden. I. D. Wall and D. H. Dyer were elected alternates.

The Conference was royally entertained by the good people of Clinton, and the pastor, Rev. S. J. Davies, proved himself to be a capital Conference host.

Being a sermon by this scribe, the preaching was of a high order, giving no uncertain sound; calling sinners from their sins and Christians to a more consecrated life and more earnest effort for the salvation of souls.

The next session of the Conference goes to Franklinton.

J. I. HOFFPAUIR, Sec.

ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Our District Conference (Alexandria district) has just closed. We had a very pleasant session. Most of the pastors were present, but few laymen were with us, owing to the time of holding. Two superannuates were there: Bros. P. A. Johnston and George Jacksen; both in good health and fine spirits. No friction. The brethren were of nearly one mind as any Conference that I ever attended. Business was put through a little in haste, but in good order (more time at our Conference sessions would add strength and success to the work). All were in the spirit of the Master, and seemed to realize that they were about the Master's work.

Sabbath was a full day (most too much so). Love-feast at 10 o'clock, conducted by Bro. Hughes; at 11 o'clock a sermon of power and edifying by the presiding elder (Bro. Skipper) from the last clause of the Lord's Prayer, "Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory;" at 4 o'clock a sermon by Bro. Turner, of Columbia, after which came a sermon to the children by the presiding elder, at the close of which several joined the church; at 7 o'clock a lecture by Sister Skipper, and the organization of a Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society; then the closing sermon by Bro. Haney, of Bunkie.

The entertainment of the Conference was all that could be asked. The pastor and people of Simsport did it well, and all of the preachers and delegates were comfortable and glad of heart, and the people did it with such grace and delight, it was difficult to decide which was the more in love—the Conference or the people. ROBERT RANDLE.

THE ORPHANS' HOME.

Some weeks since our good friend and neighbor, Miss Mattie Barrington, on her way home from the State Sunday-school Convention, paid a short visit to the Orphans' Home in Water Valley. Her account of the Home, and the household gathered there, is so charming that we regret that all the Methodists in Mississippi can not share our pleasure in listening to it. She reports a most delightful family circle, a model home, with Bro. and Sister Burton, with their faithful assistants, leading and directing lovingly, yet systematically, and their young charges responding affectionately to their earnest care.

As Miss Mattie's interest in anything is sure to end in practical results, it was not surprising that she should decide to give her fellow-Methodists an opportunity to join her in sending a box of presents to the children. If the receipt of this box gives half the pleasure it afforded the senders, it will be much enjoyed. Grown people bought dry goods, etc.; but the children's offerings were inexpressibly touching. For example, one little girl earned the money with which she bought a china doll apiece for the girls; another bought material for a pretty lawn dress; another, a nice tablet and pencil; others, picture books, etc. Nor were the boys behind in willingness. One little fellow had been made glad with a set of toy gardening tools, which he had enjoyed but a few hours, when, learning of the box, he brought them, and some of his cherished books; another brought a collection of pictures, which he had carefully preserved for his own amusement; while still another sent his prettiest new shirt waist. When a substitute was suggested, he stoutly refused to permit it. "No," said he, "I want to send that one; I don't like the other." And, accordingly, the prettiest went. Who can calculate the blessing of such a spirit diffused among our children? Already the Home is bringing forth fruits meet for the Master's use. That he will garner them, who can doubt?

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolutions adopted unanimously by rising vote by the Baton Rouge District Conference:

Whereas, It is known that a petition is being circulated by the friends of the liquor traffic in and about the town of Jackson, La., requesting the State Legislature to repeal the special law prohibiting the sale of liquors within five miles of Centenary College; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this body does hereby express its condemnation of this, and of any such petition, and does hereby pray the Legislature to refuse to repeal said five-mile limit law, passed in the interests of the students of Centenary College.

Resolved, further, That each member of this Conference be requested to use his influence with his representative, and our people, to further the interests of temperance in this particular case and in all others coming within the compass of his influence and action.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded at once to the House of Representatives and Senate, and that a copy be sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, Times-Democrat, and Picayune, with the request for immediate publication.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. Wm. B. Van Valkenburgh, Welsh, La., June 8, 1898: "We are in the midst of a big meeting at this place. Will probably run over the next Sabbath. Opened up on the twenty-seventh of last month, and the services have gone on with increasing interest."

Rev. C. C. Griffin, P. C., Hiram, Miss., June 4, 1898: "We are getting along on the Wilkinson circuit finely. Our second Quarterly Conference has passed. Our presiding elder was present, and presided with usual dignity, looking well after the interest of the church, requiring a report from every steward, the number of members that each one had been to see, revealing the fact that some had done very little. There has been an improvement on every line of church work. The presiding elder said that the work made a better report this year than last for the same length of time. There has been a wonderful improvement in the Sunday-school work. We have six Sunday-schools in good working order, and the school at Macedonia deserves special notice under the leadership of Bro. Clark McCraimie. Their Children's Day exercise was a grand success. We were led in the singing by the Pettie choir, brothers and sisters of Bro. Hines Pettie, secretary of the Sunday-school at Macedonia. The singers were from Louisiana. I think that the prospects are good for a general revival this year on the Wilkinson circuit. I will close, for fear my letter may find its way to the waste-basket. Please say to the church that my address for this year will be Hiram, Wilkinson county, Miss."

Rev. John W. Ramsey, P. C., Pontotoc, Miss., June 8, 1898: "The second Quarterly Conference for Pontotoc charge is just over. Bro. Cameron was with us, presiding over the Conference and preaching to the delight of all the people. This charge is moving along nicely, and advancing in almost every direction. Up to the present time the finances are far ahead of last year. This is true with reference to the general collections as well as the salaries of the presiding elder and pastor. Our church-building here in Pontotoc, while not what we expect to make it, has been repaired and remodeled, and is now by far the neatest and prettiest church-building in our little city of twelve hundred inhabitants. The appearance of the church adds much to the looks of the town, giving it quite a citified air. We are improving spiritually as well as materially. I am told that the prayer meeting is better now than for the past ten years. We also have a fine Sunday-school at every point on the charge except one. Children's Day has not been observed here for some time, but we recently had a delightful day. All things considered, we are expecting great things from God this year, and are looking forward to the revival season with much hope, and trusting and praying to God for a baptism of the Holy Ghost upon all the people."

HATTIESBURG STATION.

I am happy to be able to say that our protracted meeting was a success. Some were converted and many were greatly blessed. Twenty-nine joined our church. It is true, not all of these have been received into full connection with the church. Admitting this to be the case, yet we are thankful to say that we have taken into full fellowship into our church 203 persons during our pastorate of seventeen months here.

Bro. Ira Hawkins, of Decatur, Ala., and Bro. Henry Hawkins, of South Side, Meridian, Miss., did the preaching during our series of meetings. These brethren are consecrated fully to our Lord's work, and, by the power of the Holy Ghost, they are efficient workers for the Master. They are men of great faith and of great spiritual power. We were much pleased with their earnestness and the pointedness and power of their preaching. We were most truly delighted with the readiness and power of speech with which Bro. Henry Hawkins is now gifted, as well as his correctness and depth of theological thought. We do not say too much when we say that these brethren fed us on the Word of God.

Since our protracted meeting our District Conference has met here, and we can unhesitatingly say that it was a feast of fat things. The attendance was fine; perhaps better than it has been for years, if not better than it ever was before. It was not only well attended, but it was quite spiritual. With the exception of an occasional ripple, it was spiritual from the beginning to the end. Our presiding elder, Bro. C. A. Powell, was in sufficient health to preside over and to conduct its business with success. This year ends his time as presiding elder of this district. His health is much improved, and we hope and pray that it may be perfectly restored. Feeling that the secretary of our District Conference will give a full report of the same, we will now close.

ISAAC L. PEEBLES.

CONCRETE MEANNESS.

A prosperous merchant said to the writer, "It costs me over $1,000 a year to support my family." (He has two children, and they are not wholly dependent upon him.) "I have —— thousands in my business" (it was a fortune). "I have laid up outside —— thousands, and it is time I should be enjoying myself." I remarked: "And I am your pastor, and I have saved nothing these three years. I have asked an increase of salary, and you have been the one to clamor against it the loudest." "Well," said he, "when a preacher gets a congregation that will raise his salary he will raise his style of living, and when he gets to doing that nobody knows where he will end or what he will want."—Methodist Protestant.

A worldly-minded man does not wait to be expelled from a prayer meeting. The atmosphere is so uncomfortably spiritual in that pious circle that he stays away of his own accord. Self-respect and composure of feeling restrain him from giving the offense of his presence in such exercises. He feels far more keenly than the pious participants the incongruity of his situation. It would be a miserably irreligious devotional service in which he could feel at home. The continuance of notoriously bad people in the membership of a church is as much a reflection on the church as on the bad people. Spiritual life ought to be so pronounced and church sentiment so well understood that it would be more uncomfortable inside than outside the church to one not qualified for membership. This is the uncultivated part of the field of church discipline.—Central Baptist.

Over the mantlepiece in Mr. Gladstone's bed-room there is emblazoned a text which explains a great deal of the tranquility which has saved Mr. Gladstone from the nervous exhaustion which has carried off many other men. The text runs: "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is set on Thee."—Churchman.

The Mormons are becoming very active in New Zealand, and it is stated that eight more missionaries are on their way from Salt Lake City to this colony. They intend to work principally among the Maoris, of whom there are already four thousand members of the Mormon Church.

You should expect temptations; you should not be afraid of them; for although the devil can tempt you against your will, he can not conquer you unless you consent to be conquered.—Peschoud.

Moonlight on the sea. There are pictures and dreams and castles in the air for the woman who sits and gazes out ever it. Pictures of a happy home, dreams of a manly husband, beautiful castles to be built by the loving hands of mutual helpfulness and filled with healthy, happy children.

Almost without exception these dreams might become realities if mothers would only teach their daughters the most common sense facts about their own physical make-up, and advise them how to protect themselves from the perils of the three critical periods of their lives—puberty or maturity, motherhood and the "turn of life." Women at these times suffer from irregularities and weaknesses which, if neglected, will develop into dangerous diseases and make their whole lives wretched.

The delicate organs that make wifehood and motherhood possible, cannot be neglected with impunity. If they are neglected the result is unhappy wifehood, and motherhood will be a menace of death. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is an unfailing specific for all diseases of these organs. It restores them to perfect health. It promotes regularity of their special functions. It fits for wifehood and motherhood. It tones, invigorates and builds up the nerves that have been shattered by pain and suffering.

"For years my wife suffered from what the doctors called prolapsus of the uterus," writes Mr. Harry Chant, of 241 Haskell Street, Dallas, Texas. "She was nervous, had cold hands and feet, palpitation, headache, backache, constipation, a disagreeable drain, bearing-down pains and no appetite. She got so weak she could not get around. I am only a laborer, and was always in debt to the doctors, and all for no good, as none of them did her any good. She began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it seemed to work like a charm. She has taken about thirteen bottles and is to-day as stout and healthy as any woman in the United States."

Best Edition of the World's Best Book,

—THE—

"COMBINATION" BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers. New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$5.00. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to June, '99. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Send for circular. Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

SELF-PRONOUNCING

S. S. Teachers' Reference Bible.

Text Conforms Exactly to the Oxford Teachers' Edition.

The self-pronouncing text enables the reader to pronounce all proper names at a glance.

This Bible is printed from Large, Beautiful and Clear New Type. All Proper Names are Divided into Syllables and Every Vowel is Marked and the Syllables Inflected, showing the Sounds and Accents as they are given in a Dictionary, thus enabling the reader to properly pronounce every word. This feature is a great improvement and a strong recommendation for this Bible over others.

This Bible contains the celebrated Oxford Teachers' Helps together with a complete series of New Maps illustrating the geography of Palestine and the surrounding countries from the earliest times, and embodying the most recent discoveries renders this Bible especially desirable to teachers and students of the Holy Scriptures.

Imperial Seal Binding, Tuck Edges, known as "Divinity Circuit," Linen Lined, Round Corners, Red under Gold Edges, Price, $4.00.

This book in Bourgeois type will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price ($4) to any address; but to that select class who read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, we furnish it on the following terms: Pay your subscription one full year in advance, viz., to June, '99, and we will send it to you, postpaid, for $1.75. (A little later you will have to pay to July, '99.) We will also send this book as a premium for two new subscribers at the regular rate—$2 per annum. We will also send this Bible with index for 30 cents additional.

For fifty cents additional we will send Bible with index. For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved on the outside in gilt letters.

P. S.—We are still handling the Minion type and the Emerald type Bible; but will not continue to do so long. Those who wish to order should do so at once.

PREVALENT IMPATIENCE.

It reqnires no labored argnment to prove to ns that the spirit of impatience is startlingly characteristic of the age in which we live. On almost every hand we see indications of it. In commerce, in war, in hnilding, in education, in politics, and even in religion, there are nnmistakable signs of impatience that forbode no little evil. That we live in an age of unparalleled progress is trne beyond qnestion; nor is there any donbt that the slow methods and crude applianoes once successfully employed must, in the main, be discarded, if we would keep np with the times. Bnt in the haste to achieve resnlts, to make changes, and try experiments, there is danger that recklessness and impatience will lead to defeat and disaster in more than one direction. With not a few patience is fast becoming a lost virtne.

Jnst now a large portion of our popnlace are unwisely giving vent to expressions of impatience at the slow progress of the war with Spain, and are raising the cry of "On to Havana," as though they understood the whole Cuban qnestion, and knew better what onght to be done than all the government officials and military men, who undoubtedly have the most favorable opportunities for obtaining correct information, and the strongest possible reasons for adopting the best and safest plans. The invasion of Cuba had better be delayed five or six months than to risk having an army from American shores destroyed or rendered ineffective by yellow fever and other diseases dnring the Snmmer months, which wonld almost certainly be the case were a large force to be sent over at once. Better a delay now than a disastrous defeat through over-haste. The taking of Havana and other Spanish strongholds in Cuba will not, in onr opinion, be the work of a day. Hence there is much need of both prudence and patience in the attempt at their captnre. Some of those who are severest in criticising our leaders for lack of promptness and decision in the management of the war with Spain know the least about military affairs. What does the average journalist, for instance, know about conducting a military campaign? Notwithstanding their utter ignorance in snch matters, scores of editors—especially those connected with the metropolitan dailies—are abusing the President and the Secretary of War for not pushing matters more vigorously. Perhaps, if some of them had to go to the front, they would sing a different tune.

Thonsands think that the Spaniards onght to be, and can be, whipped in a jiffy. So thought the North about the South at the beginning of the Civil War. Whether the present contest will be a short one, or not, is more than any man can tell. Many contingencies may arise to cause its prolongation. Present indications are that it will be a longer strnggle than was at first anticipated. Spain's evident policy is to protract it as long as possible. We believe in the use of vigorous measnres for the ending of the war, bnt we do not believe in recklessness and needless loss of life. The recent defeat suffered by three of our vessels in the harbor of Cardenas was due to foolhardiness and impatience to win a victory.

If we are not mistaken, American newspapers have already done our cause no little harm by their haste in publishing news about the movements of vessels, the plans of the military authorities, etc., which information has at once been cabled to Spain, and made use of by our enemies. Impatience to obtain and to publish sensational news is unfortunately too true of not a few of our dailies.

During the present state of affairs both citizens and soldiers need to "possess their souls in patience." Let us calmly wait developments; not seek to precipitate them before the time is ripe for them.

As the editor of the Western Christian Advocate well says: "The American people are scarcely less impulsive than the French. We are in danger of undue elation over Commodore Dewey's brilliant victory. It has excited unreasonable expectations, which ill fit us for the philosophic endurance of reverses. The possibility of our final defeat no intelligent American admits. The possibility of reverses no intelligent American denies. We are not fighting a race of cowards. The testimony of our own men shows that the Spaniards fought with desperate valor at Manila. Had their guns been of the most modern patterns, and their battleships equally protected as our own, the result might have been different. Bnt the fleet that is expected to try conclusions with Admiral Sampson is modern in its armor and armament. The battle will be titanic. The Spaniards have Manila to wipe out. The honor of Spain, the throne of their king, almost the existence of their nation, will incite them to furious valor. Such being the case, we should accustom ourselves to consider all of war's grim possibilities. Having contemplated every possible issue, we shall be prepared for any. To the impulses of patriots we must add the imperturbability of philosophers."

MILLSAPS COMMENCEMENT.

The Board of Trustees of Millsaps College met in annual session on Friday, June 10, in the college library; the president, Bishop C. B. Galloway, in the chair. The report of the president of the college was quite gratifying. The enrollment for the session is 168 in the Literary Department and 22 in the Law Department, making a total of 190.

In view of the late opening of the session, caused by the quarantine regulations of last Fall, this is a very remarkable showing. There are 13 graduates in the Literary Department and 26 in the Law Department. The spirit of the student body is admirable. Better work has been done than at any previous session. The treasurer's report shows the institution to be in a good financial condition. The president having tendered his resignation, the following resolution was adopted unanimously and with great enthusiasm:

Resolved, That, as a Board of Trustees, we express our high appreciation of the valuable service rendered to this college and the cause of Christian education by the president, the Rev. Dr. W. B. Murrah; and in view of the fact that his presidency has united most harmoniously the two Conferences of the State of Mississippi in their educational work, and believing that his continuance in this relation would best conserve the interests of Christian education and connectional Methodism, we respectfully decline to accept his resignation tendered in order to assume the duties of the Secretaryship of Education to which he was elected by the General Conference, and earnestly request him to remain here at the head of this institution.

J. R. BINGHAM,
W. B. LEWIS,
S. M. THAMES,
R. M. STANDIFER,
T. W. LEWIS.

The Board adjourned at eleven o'clock to be present at the Freshman prize declamation. The speakers were: L. F. Magruder, L. W. Felder, T. A. Rector, N. V. Robbins, C. N. Smylie, G. Q. Whitfield, C. P. Manahip—all of whom acquitted themselves creditably. Some of them evinced oratorical ability of a high order. The medal was awarded to C. N. Smylie, of Meridian, a son of the late Rev. J. J. Smylie, of the Mississippi Conference.

The Board of Trustees held a meeting in the afternoon, at which business of importance was transacted, and then adjourned sine die.

At night the annual debate between representatives of the two literary societies took place. The subject was: "Resolved, That the principle of the Swiss Referendum should be incorporated into the Constitution of the United States." The speakers on the affirmative, representing the Galloway Society, were: H. T. Lewis and R. A. Clarke. Those on the negative, representing the Lamar Society, were: H. T. Carley and A. H. Shannon. A decision was rendered in favor of the negative. H. T. Carley was named as the best debater.

On Saturday morning came the Sophomore oratorical contest for the Oscar Kearney Andrew medal. The contestants were: J. E. Alford, M. H. Brown, E. H. Galloway, J. S. Hammack, C. N. Guice, W. W. Holmes, T. M. Lemly, J. A. Teat. These orations were all original. Their merit from a literary standpoint was such as to reflect great credit upon the institution. The oratory also was of a high order. The medal was awarded to C. N. Guice, of Natchez.

Dr. J. D. Barbee was to have preached the commencement sermon. In his absence the duty was imposed upon the editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, who discharged it to the best of his ability. The spacious auditorium—the First Methodist Church—was crowded to its utmost capacity.

At night came the anniversary of the College Y. M. C. A. A most excellent sermon was preached by Dr. C. G. Andrews.

Monday, at eleven, the annual address was delivered by Prof. W. B. Smith, of Tulane University, his theme being. "The Twilight of the Century." It was a very learned discourse, clothed in choice English.

The contest for the W. A. Gunning medal for Scripture reading took place Monday afternoon. At this writing we are unable to give the name of the winner of the prize.

We had to leave Monday afternoon for Greenshoro, Ala., and hence could not be present at the graduating exercises.

During our stay in Jackson we were delightfully domiciled in the home of Dr. Murrah, to whom and to his accomplished wife we are indebted for many appreciated courtesies. We also enjoyed the hospitality of Bro. and Sister J. C. Enochs. We had the pleasure of exchanging greetings with a large number of our old friends and parishioners.

A NEW BOOK.

PRIZE-FIGHTING IN THE SCHOOLS, AND OTHER ESSAYS. By W. L. C. Hunnicutt, D. D. 208 pages. Cloth, 50 cents. Paper, 30 cents. Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn.

This little volume contains seven able and highly entertaining essays on a variety of interesting topics, besides several short poems of considerable merit. The opening essay is a frank discussion of the evils resulting from the present system of offering exclusive prizes in the schools, the author taking the position that, in many instances, to obtain the prize, one need not be worthy or faithful, but simply superior to others. The fact is pointed out that in a short time after prizes are offered, the contest narrows down to a few brilliant or superior trained students, while the majority in the class, seeing little or no chance of success, relax effort, and are scarcely benefited at all by the competition. The author contends that if prizes be awarded, the number should equal the number of competitors, each receiving a due reward, as was the case in the athletic contests among the ancient Greeks.

Following are the titles of the other essays, several of which are worthy of two or three readings: "Freedom, Human and Divine;" "Mrs. Susannah Wesley," "The Study of the New Testament in Greek," "Noise as a Brain Developer," "The Former Days and These," and "Money." These essays present much valuable thought in attractive dress, and are likely to please readers of all classes. The essay of "The Former Days and These" is alone worth the price of the volume.

The author is a forceful writer, an astute reasoner, and a man of philosophic bent and attainments. A rich treat is in store for those who peruse this modest, but meritorious little volume. The poems, thrown in by way of variety, are bright and readable, and will delight not a few readers. Deserving of special notice are the two entitled, "The Rill," "We Miss Our Father Everywhere."

M. M. BLACK.

REV. J. F. PURSER.

HE RESIGNS HIS PASTORATE HERE TO ACCEPT ANOTHER IN ALABAMA.

Next to the sorrow which this community felt at the pathetic death of the late Rev. D. I. Purser will come the keen regret that his brother, Rev. Dr. J. F. Purser, has thought it expedient to resign the pastorate of the First Baptist Church and to leave New Orleans, which he did last week.

Rev. Dr. Purser has been in this city just five years and a half, and during that time has been prominent in every movement for the general good of his fellow-men and for the uplifting of the fallen. On his arrival here he purchased the building on Magazine street, between Washington and Sixth, which he will leave the church entirely free from debt. Dr. Purser's destination is Opelika, Ala., where he has been called to a pastorate. In connection with this he will do some institute work throughout that State. It will be remembered that last Fall, when Rev. Dr. D. I. Purser was so ill, his brother was at his bedside night and day. This severe strain, with his subsequent grief at his loved brother's death, has had its effect, and Dr. Purser has said that he must have a change of work and a diversion from such painful and unnerving memories.

Rev. Dr. J. F. Purser was born in the town of Hazlehurst, Miss.; graduated at the Mississippi (Baptist) College of Clinton in 1881, and from the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville in 1885 During his college days he and his brother did a great deal of revival preaching throughout Mississippi, and there is hardly a town in that State that has not known and loved them both. He was in Birmingham as pastor for a short time after his graduation, but his first regular charge was Troy, in that State. From Troy he came to this city, and from here he will go to Opelika—Picayune.

COMMENCEMENT AT CENTENARY COLLEGE.

The closing exercises of our college began on Saturday night, June 4, with the exhibition of the Preparatory Department, and ended with the graduation of six young men on Wednesday, June 8. Our Sunday services were specially interesting and helpful; Dr. Hunnicutt, the former president, discoursing on the "Resurrection of the Body," and Bro. Rickey, of Baton Rouge, presenting to the Y. M. C. A. the character of Daniel as one worthy of imitation. It was the judgment of many that we never had better speaking at Centenary. The young men acquitted themselves with credit and honor.

We had two notable addresses; one by Dr. Smith, of the State University, on "Southern Oratory," and one by T. C. Gordon, of Dyersburg, Tenn. This latter, being the Alumni address, was entirely reminiscential and was the finest of its kind. These two addresses have not been surpassed at Centenary within the present memory.

At last the Board of Trustees have determined to do what I urged three years ago. They have appropriated money to repair the building. Several changes have been made in the faculty. Rev. Inman W. Cooper, D. D., of the Mississippi Conference, has been elected president in place of this writer, who has convinced himself and everybody else that he was not cast in the mould of a school teacher. W. B. Griffin, Jr., of Emory College, has charge of the Department of Languages, and M. G. Evans, of Moss Point, Miss., is principal of the Preparatory Department. Profs. W. H. Carter and J. M. Sullivan still retain their positions. Thus equipped the college expects to go on with the good work it has been doing for more than a half century.

C. W. CARTER.

Jackson, La., June 10, 1898.

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

I have accepted the presidency of this college as a call from the church to which I have dedicated my life. I have accepted the trust in the spirit of faith. We expect to have a forward movement. We must open in September with not less than 150 boys. The trustees have planned great things. The college fences are to be made new, the chapel will be repaired, the grounds beautified, two professors' homes will be built, the dormitories improved, and the mess-hall system for the boarding of poor boys will be inaugurated. The faculty is the very best. We expect to have a first class agent.

Let the pastors and laymen of Louisiana give us their prayers and sympathy, and success is assured. I shall travel extensively during the Summer, hold meetings, and use every effort to build up this noble institution.

I. W. COOPER.

Lumberton, Miss., June 9, 1898.

MY DEAR BROTHER PRESIDENT—The Picayune, of this date, brings word of your election to the presidency of Centenary. Vive Centenary! Vive President Cooper! It is mingling feelings to say what I think in this connection.

Am I to congratulate my friend Cooper, upon his accession to a collegiate throne? Or shall I consider the putting on of crepe in memoriam of one of our bright, useful men, gone out from the house of his brethren? I am inclined to do both. You are congratulated upon the promotion. The crown just placed upon your head will be full, I trust, of gems of increasing lustre and value. That such crowns sometimes become chaplets of thorns offers the more serious matters of consideration. You will be at peace, I think, because of a favorable outlook for your college. The work there has been well done lately, and you will find good foundation work already done. And I do not know the man who can more genially put on the superstructure than you can.

We, your brethren of Mississippi, will miss you, and mourn your absence from your old accustomed place. You have circulated largely in our bounds, and your presence everywhere has given impetus and force to things which make for good. I feel tender emotions about you, not realizing so keenly before how affectionately I have held you.

God bless you, Brother Inman, with constant strength and thorough furnishing of the Holy Spirit. If I can help in any way at any time, do not fail to make the demand.

With affectionate regards from us all, I am,

Sincerely yours,
W. H. HUNTLEY.

NOTES.

Rev. R. W. Bailey has been appointed to First Church, Jackson, in place of Dr. H. M. DuBose.

Bishop H. Clay Morrison will preach the commencement sermon at the Louisiana State University.

Dr. Nathan A. Patillo and Miss Grace Peale Hanks were married in Baltimore, Md., on Wednesday, June 8. We extend to the noble groom and his winsome bride our heartiest congratulations.

Dr. R. M. Standifer, of the North Mississippi Conference, will attend the World's Sunday-school Convention at London this Summer. He will leave about the last of this month, and will be absent about two months. He promises to favor the ADVOCATE with notes of travel.

We invite special attention to the communication of Miss Mary Helm, on our first page, in regard to the changes made by the General Conference in the Constitution of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society. These changes were favored by Miss Lucinda B. Holm and by Dr. David Morton, and were asked for by the convention of the society held recently at Knoxville.

Rev. J. M. Martin, pastor of our church at Delhi, La., is attending a Summer Bible Institute at Fort Worth, Texas. His pulpit will be filled during his absence by Rev Sam. Riggs, a student of Centenary College. Dr. W. F. Lloyd, president of Polytechnic College, will conduct the Institute. Bro. Martin is enjoying a much-needed rest.

The City Council of this city, having memorialized the Legislature in favor of a repeal of the Sunday law as it applies to dram shops, went to Baton Rouge to add the weight of their personal influence and the arts of persuasive speech to the memorial. And yet the City Council is supposed to be a body of reformers. From such reformers, good Lord, deliver us. The old boodle Council could not have done worse.

Dr. C. W. Carter having resigned the presidency of Centenary College, his place has been filled by the election of Dr. I. W. Cooper, of the Mississippi Conference. Prof. W. B. Griffin, of Emory College, has been elected to the chair of ancient languages in place of Prof. Thomas Carter, who resigned some time since to accept a chair in Tulane University. M. G. Evans has been elected principal of the Preparatory Department.

Bro. Bowen writes us that a meeting has been in progress at Main Street Methodist Church, Water Valley, Miss. The pastor, Rev. H. P. Gibbs, was assisted by Revs. J. B. Culpepper, O. L. Savage, and others. It grew to such proportions that they moved into a large tent. There were over one hundred conversions, forty-eight accessions to the two Methodist Churches, and several more to join soon. The other churches received a good number.

REPORT OF THE SARDIS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Sardis District Conference convened at Coldwater, May 25, and adjourned May 29. The afternoon of the first day and forenoon of the second were devoted to the interests of the Forelgn and Parsonage and Home Missiou Societies. These two societies, under the management of our two energetic and consecrated district secretaries, Misses Rosa Taylor and Julia Jones, are growing in nnmbers and in interest.

Sister McIntosh, our Conference secretary, was with us, and added much to the interest and profit of the occasion.

Sister Wall, our ex district secretary, to whom the work of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society owes a large debt of gratitude for her faithful and efficient labors, cheered the hearts of her sisters by her presence and wise counsels.

Some of the reports given as to how their money was raised, gave evidence of a self-sacrificing devotion to the canse of our Master that was indeed touching and inspiring.

The regular business of the District Conference was begun the afternoon of the twenty-sixth; Dr. T. C. Wier, P. E., in the chair. A. P. Callicott was elected secretary. All the preachers from the district were present, and gave encouraging reports from their charges. The various interests of our church were carefully examined by our presiding elder, which revealed substantial progress along certain lines. A number of charges had increased their assessments for ministerial support. Some were in advance of last year in money forwarded for connectional purposes. There was an interesting program provided, covering the various interests of our church, which elicited animated and, we trust, profitable discussions from preachers and laymen.

The preaching during the Conference was exceptionally good. Bro. Kendall preached the opening sermon, and those who keep green the memory of other years say he has lost none of his old-time ferver and power. May his steps be as sturdy, his head as clear, and his heart as warm for many years, to tell the blessed story of the cross, which he tells so well!

Bro. Malone was with us; preached a strong sermon on Christian education. He gave an encouraging report of our college at Grenada, and earnestly advocated its enlargement and endowment, to which we responded with a hearty amen, which we trust is the forernnner of a response in a more substantial way. We believe with him the time has come for a forward movement in the educational work of our girls, and we trust there shall arise some man with a Millsaps heart and a Millsaps purse to place the educational advantages of our girls npon a par with that of our boys.

Bro. Burton was with us, and made a telling speech in the interests of our Orphans' Home at Water Valley. When the heart is touched the purse-strings loosen. Without a request the people began to give, which culminated in about $150 in cash and subscriptions for the Home, beside some other substantial gifts not in money. We believe Bro. Burton is the right man in the right place.

Our esteemed and faithful colporter, Bro. Bachman, was with us, distributing the gospel in print. We were glad to hear that up to date this is the best year in his work.

The NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE was highly commended by our Conference; and we believe to double its circulation would bring an incalculable blessing to every pastor's charge.

As your scribe is domiciled in the newest, best parsonage in the district, in the town of Coldwater, modesty prevents him from speaking of the hospitallty of his people; but should I voice the expressions of the preachers and delegates, this part of the report would not be lacking.

P. E. DUNCAN.

TO THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

DEAR BRETHREN: There are twenty-three (23) children in the Orphans' Home. Four of this number are the children of Rev. O. N. Koon, deceased. We are glad to report that the health of the Home is perfect so far, and that every department of the work is giving entire satisfaction. The manager and his assistants are doing a great work, and they are meeting every demand. The large number of applications now on file indicate that we will soon have fifty children in the Home.

Pastors will please observe Orphans' Day at once, and send the money to Capt. I. T. Blount or Rev. M. L. Burton, Water Valley. We are sorry to learn that so few have observed the day up to date. We know that you are deeply interested in the Home, and all you need is a kind notice of the immediate needs of the institution. The people respond to this cause more freely than to any other. If you could see the precious orphans so happy in the Home, learning the Bible and their school books, and learning how to work, then see them at church singing our hymns and reciting good lessons in Sunday-school, you would be delighted.

We are expecting a great day next Sunday, when the orphans will take a prominent part in the Children's Day exercises

Please permit me to call your attention to "Our Home," a beautiful paper, edited and published by the management. If you will take the paper, it will keep you posted about the Home. The Joint Board of Directors will meet in Water Valley, June 28 and 29. A full attendance is much desired.

OPELOUSAS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Opelousas District Conference will be held at Lafayette, commencing July 5, 1898, at 9 o'clock; Bishop H. C. Morrison presiding.

The following are the committees, viz:

For License to Preach and Admission to the Traveling Connection—R. J. Harp, J. M. Henry and R. M. Blocker.

For Deacon's and Elder's Orders—T. K. Faunt LeRoy, J. W. Davis and S. B. Beall.

Introductory sermon, at 11 o'clock, July 5, by Rev. R. J. Harp.

Afternoon and night of first day will be Sunday-school Conference. A suitable programme will be published later.

The recording stewards will please have the Quarterly Conference Records present. I would urge all ministers, itinerant and local, and all delegates to attend.

EPWORTH LEAGUE WORK.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, who is visiting the Epworth League in this State mainly in the interest of missions, gave us two excellent talks at Jeanerette, and organized a class in mission study, and induced the League to purchase several books on missions toward getting up a good library. Our leaguers were much pleased with Bro. Atkinson. He is a young man of fine promise, and seemed to be deeply consecrated to the Lord. It is worthy of note that one of the ladies joining the mission study class is a Roman Catholic. She contributed liberally to the library. I consider our League in condition.

GONE HOME.

Our teacher at White Chapel, Prof. C. R. Wallace, died on the twenty-second instant. He was a good teacher and splendid church worker. His position will be filled by a local committee about the end of July. Should any of the readers of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE desire to apply, they should address Mr. Hope Phillips, at Barbreck, La. Applicants should be able to teach Latin and higher mathematics. A good position.

A reduction of one and one-third fare has been secured on the Southern Pacific railroad from all points within 100 miles of Opelousas.

NOTICE.

To the Pastors of the Durant District—

BRETHREN: Please send me soon the names of all members of the District Conference who will be present at Eupora, July 7-11. If your wives are coming, let me know. Come with a blessing for us from the Lord. We shall look for you, Mr. Editor.

OF INTEREST TO STOCKHOLDERS.

FREE TRANSPORTATION TO ATTEND THE ANNUAL MEETING AT CHICAGO. SOME INTERESTING FACTS.

In order that stockholders of the Illinois Central Railroad Company may more readily attend in person the annual meetings, there has been posted in each station of the Company a notice to the effect that, in accordance with a resolve of the Board of Directors, there may be issued to each holder of one or more shares of the capital stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, as registered on the books of the Company, a ticket enabling him or her to travel free over the Company's lines from the station of the Illinois Central Railroad nearest to his or her registered address, to Chicago and return, for the purpose of attending, in person, the next Annual Stockholders' Meeting of the Company, which will be held at its General Office in Chicago on Wednesday, September 28, 1898, at noon. Details as to the necessary procedure to obtain such ticket, the date of its issue and its limit, are fully set forth on the posted notices referred to. In this connection, it will be interesting to note that since, in 1852, the capital stock of the Company became full paid, a cash dividend, ranging from 4 per cent. to 10 per cent. per annum has been paid semi-annually to every holder of stock, and that it is now twenty years since the Company, in any year, paid less than 5 per cent., the present rate of distribution.

THAT BOY ACROSS THE WAY.

BY LIZZIE DE ARMOND.

Over the way is a cottage small,
Not fine, but trim and neat,
While in and out, through storm and shine,
Hurry the busy feet
Of a sturdy lad with freckled face,
Who whistles, oh! so gay,
With never a frown upon his brow,
That boy across the way.

His clothes are patched, but his face is clean,
And full of honest pride,
His hands are hard, but the kindly deeds
They do all roughness hide:
A burden heavy those shoulders bear,
The mainspring, so they say,
Of the cottage is that whistling lad
Who lives across the way.

Yet never an ugly word I hear,
From early morn till night,
Done heartily, as unto the Lord,
Love makes each task seem light;
And as I list to the cheery notes,
Down in my heart, I pray,
O Heavenly Father, bless the lad
Who lives across the way.

COURTESY IN THE HOME.

Why should parents be rude to children? It is usually admitted that children should not be rude to parents, and that demands no argument; but cause has yet to be shown why a father's love should admit of pitiless snubs administered to helpless children, or a mother's love should allow itself outbursts of spleen, which no one will bear except her children, and they only because they have no defense. Courtesy can exist without love, but love without courtesy quickly gets bedraggled and haggard. For the maintenance of love few motives would be more favorable than this, that home is a good practicing-ground for habitual courtesy, neglecting which shall make a poor show on field days. Pity that love should pine for want of so small a thing. But passing down these paths of suggestion from the spiritual truth which was our starting-point, I can not but observe that love is good enough to merit some diligent cultivation in addition to the negative protection of politeness. "Love-making" is a poor, wilted term which generally provokes a smile. I would raise love-making to a fine weaving art, at which none could laugh, and I would employ all hands in the home at this busy loom.

Love-making is not only the finest of fine arts, but it is the sweetest of good employments. Thoughtfulness is the warp, and activity the woof; the design which grows on the piece is very beautiful to see. Children can work at this loom, and indeed in some homes it is left entirely to them. But for their small arms twining around older necks, and the sweet laugh of love in their eyes, there would be no love-making in many homes. Husband and wife turned sick at heart from the loom long ago, and for want of making love with one another they lost the power of making it with their children. It is an art that dies with disuse, and once discontinued it is taken up again with stiff and awkward fingers. In the torn garment of the home life, hard hearts and unloving natures tear rent after rent until it is all in tatters, but love never lets the rents grow large; its busy needle patches them up, and by an act it must have learned in heaven, scatters the loveliest sprays of embroidery and silver work about the darn, so that what threatened destruction has proved to be a strength and a beauty, and the garment has become a symbol of love's power, instead of the jagged rags which witness to love's defeet.—From "The Four Pillars of the Home," by Robert F. Horton, D. D.

PRAISE TO THE FACE.

I once saw a father walk up to a map his little boy had made and pinned on the wall. He stood before it a long time in silence, and in silence walked away. The little fellow was sitting in the room, and his father knew he was there. He was watching with his eager child's eyes, waiting anxiously for a word of approval. As none came, his poor little face fell unhappily. Straight into the next room walked the father, and said, carelessly:

"Robert has drawn a very clever little map in there. Look at it when you go in."

"Did you tell him it was clever?" asked a judicial listener, following them the room where little Robert still sat.

"Why, no. I ought to have done so. I never thought to mention it"

"Well, you ought to be ashamed of yourself," was the deserved reply. "Go back now and tell him."

We ought all of us to be ashamed of ourselves a dozen times a day for like sins of omission. It costs so little to say nice things, and the result in another's pleasure is out of all proportion to our trouble. "Praise to the face, open disgrace." No such thing. The proverb is wrong. Praise to the face is one of the sweetest things on earth, and there is no disgrace in it, unless untruth enters, or unless the praise is undeserved. It is the more grateful because no one may ask for open praise and receive by asking; its fine flavor is quite gone, and it is but flattery.—Harper's Bazar.

SAINTLY FACES.

Sometimes, in passing through a crowd, we see a face that attracts us by its sweetness of expression. Perhaps it is an old face, crowned with a glory of hoary hairs; yet love, joy, and peace shine out of every dot and wrinkle in it. Sometimes it is a young face, that beams with health, and purity, and beauty. But whether old or young, when we see that unmistakable sonlight in a face, we know the heart behind it is pure, the life good, and that the body thus illuminated is the temple of the Holy Spirit. To keep the mind occupied with good, pure, useful, beautiful, and divine thoughts precludes the possibility of thinking about and thus being tempted by things sinful, low, or gross. It is because Paul knew this that he says so earnestly: "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, think on these things." In the well-formed habit of thinking pure thoughts, lies the secret of being pure in heart; and in the daily and nightly meditation in the law of the Lord, is a safeguard against many of the sins which defile the carnal heart, and debase and blacken the human countenance. —Scottish Reformer.

ONLY ONE WAY.

There is really only one way to live a genuine, healthy, useful, Christian life. And that is never to draw any promissory notes for our blessed Lord and Savior, but to perform the duty of the hour in the hour, and to take the next step that is right before us. The eccentric John Randolph once cried out in his shrill tones, "Mr. Speaker, I have discovered the philosopher's stone—it is, pay as you go!" This is as sound a maxim in religion as in finance. A vow of consecration is a rightful, solemn, legitimate act; but like the vow of wedlock, is to be of perpetual obligation. To perform a vow means to do at once our dear Master's bidding. The secret of faithful keeping of our vows to him is to keep our hearts in the love of Jesus.—Rev. T. L. Cuyler.

HE WAS A CRITIC.

A man walking down a Chicago street came in front of a taxidermist's, in the window of which was an owl with other animals.

"Well," said he, "if I couldn't stuff an owl better than that I would quit the business. The head isn't right, the poise of the body isn't right, the features are not on right, the feet are not placed right." Before he could finish the owl turned his head and winked at him. The crowd laughed and the critic moved on.

The above reminds us of two opinions given us in regard to "Black Beauty" when we first began to print it, and which, if we had heeded, might have made a vast difference in the circulation of that book.

No. 1, an eminent publisher, said it wouldn't pay to print it, and No. 2, the president of a great American News Company, said it would never sell.

We did not agree with either, and so went on printing it, and it has now reached a circulation of probably two million copies and has been translated into nearly all European and three Asiatic languages.—Dumb Animals.

"Do you want a boy?" he asked of the magnate of the office, standing before him, cap in hand. "Nobody wants a boy," replied the magnate. "Do you need a boy?" asked the applicant, nowise abashed. "Nobody needs a boy." The boy would not give up. "Well, say, mister," he inquired, "do you have to have a boy?" The magnate collapsed. "I'm sorry to say we do," he said; "and I guess you're about what we 'have to have.'"—Deaconess Advocate.

Hygiene.

SLEEP.

There are a good many little things which may be used to promote sleep which I will mention in order.

The cold water drawing off the surplus heat allows the blood vessels to contract and relieve the blood-pressure, which keeps up the automatic thinking in spite of all efforts of the will to the contrary. In some cases, especially after great intellectual effort in the evening, it may be necessary to apply ice-cold cloths to the head and back of the neck for a half hour or so to accomplish the required result. When the head bath has been concluded, dry the hair thoroughly with a towel, cover it with a light flannel covering to prevent further evaporation, and go to bed. Though less convenient a warm sitz bath for ten or fifteen minutes, temperature about 90°, often answers the same purpose; a hot foot bath is sometimes sufficient. A warm bath, or a Turkish bath, or even a cold sponge bath, may be all that is required to relieve a temporary loss of power to sleep. Dipping the feet and legs in cold water for a moment, rubbing and massaging them with both hands 'till dry and warm, is an excellent promoter of sleep for anyone, and the feet, which are more or less imprisoned during the day, are also benefited.

There are many methods which physicians have suggested to promote sleep. Counting is a good illustration of the whole series. The object is to occupy the mind with some monotonous process and thus drive out sleeplessness. The difficulty with these methods is that, like counting, they may go on automatically and allow of other brain activities at the same time. Experience has proven to me that some more intricate and difficult mathematical process is better, as for instance multiplying 99 by 99 in the head. Other numbers may be used. This takes up the attention so fully that other processes of thought can not go on at the same time.

Listening to soothing music is an excellent preparation for sound sleep. It may be instrumental or vocal. The mother's lullaby songs promote sleep in the child. They or other melodies will often do the same for the adult. We do not yet know all the virtues of music.

The reading of brief poems, or comforting passages of Scripture, or highly moral and inspiring sayings of the sages, sayings which lift the mind and heart out of a world of care and sorrow into a realm of peace and joy, are means of bringing sweet and refreshing sleep, too generally neglected. If they were more frequently relied on, they would save many a mind from going down in a wreck of ruin for a long life of happiness and usefulness.

Food may be used to promote sleep. This is most beneficial to nervous persons whose digestion is fairly good and who have not eaten a very hearty or indigestible late meal. What kind of food it shall be does not matter very much, provided it is nutritious and easily digested. Some prefer one kind, some another. One man prefers a plate of raw oysters with some crackers and butter, another a glass of milk or a dry biscuit. One eminent minister thought he had made a great discovery when he found that by eating a pint of roasted peanuts before going to bed he could sleep soundly. Others have found that a glass of hot milk or any of the many excellent substitutes for milk answers just as well. The food seems to take away from the brain the blood which keeps it in a state of activity to perform the act of digestion. Those who eat hearty, indigestible late dinners will not be benefited by food just before bed-time, nor those whose digestive organs are in a very abnormal state and the stomach foul. The old notion that one should go to bed with an empty stomach seems to have been proved for some persons at least bad, good as it may be for others. By a little carefulness and experimenting one may find what food taken at bed-time agrees, and what does not, and if the practice is good or bad for himself or not. To some extent it is true that what is good for one may not agree with another.

The farmer, the mechanic, the laboring man, who work with their muscles many hours daily in the open air, will read these prescriptions for sleep with a smile. Their sleep is sound and refreshing without them. Why should not that of all persons be so also? They may perform mental work at night, undergo nervous excitement and even worry, and still sleep soundly. What has been written is not for them, but for those who can not.—Journal of Hygiene.

Take notice that we are now handling two different Bibles. The difference between the two is that the one called the "Combination" Bible has all the advantages of the other Bible, and also has all the changes made by the revisers. These changes are given, however, brief notes at the bottom of each page, reference to them being facilitated by a very convenient system of notation. Thus you have all the benefits of the two versions in parallel columns without the bulkiness of such an arrangement. In ordering this edition be sure to say "Combination" Bible.

BISHOP WILSON

in speaking of the "Combination Bible says:" "In all respects it seems to me the best for use of teachers and students, ever published." Similar testimonials have been given by Bishop Hendrix, and by Bishops Hurst, Fowler, Ninde, Foss, Vincent and Warren, of the M. E. Church, by a number of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and by hundreds of the leading ministers of all Protestant denominations. Let it be noted that this Bible can be procured by sending us three new subscribers with the cash—$6.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT TO MRS. M. H. KEARNEY,

Of Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, Central Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss.

"There is a reaper whose name is Death,
And with his sickle keen
He reaps the bearded grain at a breath,
And the flowers that grow between."

With unrelenting hand the grim Harvester thrusts in his reaping-hook and cuts down another of our little mission band. One by one we are passing over, and still he reaches hungrily after our best and dearest; yet must we bow submissive to the mandate of the King.

At a meeting of officers of our society it was decided to place on record our tribute of love and respect to our translated sister, Mrs. M. H. Kearney:

Whereas, God has called from earth to skies our devoted sister and co-worker; therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we mourn the breaking of earthly ties, as human hearts must ever do, we can truly rejoice that she has ascended to her everlasting reward, beyond the touch of pain or sorrow, to be forever with the Lord.

Resolved, That we cherish her memory in our society as a mother in Israel whose example is set before us truly worthy of our best endeavor as Christian soldiers.

Resolved, That her life-long devotion to the church and missions, and her liberality to our own society in days that are past, be ever brought to minds at mention of her name.

Resolved, That the united love and sympathy of Central Church Society go and are hereby extended to her family and relatives, and especially to the daughter who so tenderly ministered to her declining years, smoothing her pathway to the "low green tent, whose curtain never outward swings."

Resolved, That while her name is transformed from our register to that of the King's household we cherish her memory in our immortal hearts, realizing truly that loss to me, to her is everlasting gain.

SALLIE SMYLIE,
For Committee.

BAILEY—Miss ELIZA J. BAILEY, daughter of R. T. and M. E. Bailey, was born in Holmes county, Miss., Aug. 15, 1835, and died April 5, 1898.

She joined the church when very young, and was a consistant member until death. She was modest and retiring, but always willing to do whatever the church required at her hands. She took great interest in the Woman's Missionary Society, and contributed much to its success. She sat at the Master's feet. No gift she had was too precious for his use. Her pastor always found in her a true friend. In the community she was beloved by all. No one, saint or sinner, ever called in question her piety. No parents ever had a more obedient and devoted child. Her mother has not been able to walk a step for four or five years. Her father has been so afflicted for the last two years that he can rarely leave the house. Through these years of their affliction her devotion and care for them has never flagged. Anticipating their smallest wants, she was never too tired or feeble to wait on them. When taken sick on Thursday before dying on Tuesday, she told her sister that God had impressed her that her work was done, and gave directions concerning her burial. During her sickness she exhorted all to a better life. When some one told her she was dying, she said, "Surely this can't be death; it is so sweet." With this she asked the family not to grieve after her, and bid them adieu.

W. C. LESTER.

MARSHALL—JOHN P. MARSHALL was born in Madison county, Ala., Jan 1, 1812; came to Mississippi in 1833, moved to Carroll county in 1835, and died after a brief illness at his residence near Carrollton, Miss., March 22, 1898.

Bro. Marshall was for many years a consistent and useful member of the Methodist Church. He possessed in a marked degree the Christian grace of hospitality, ministering to the necessities of saints. In his elegant home many a weary itinerant has found rest and refreshment. In his public life he enjoyed the confidence of his fellow-citizens, being for many years an official of his county. In church work he was unostentatious, standing in his lot and discharging his duty in that sphere of life in which it had pleased God to call him. Bro. Marshall's attachment to the church of his choice was intelligent and strong. He loved Methodism for the good it had wrought in the world, as well as for the good it had wrought for and in himself. He loved her ordinances, respected her ministers, believed in her communion, and supported her institutions. The bereaved have the sympathy of all who remember the one who is of the visible home circle no more. His kindness to the poor, his fidelity to trust, and his general Christian character, won the esteem and love of all who knew him. He is one "of those immortal dead who live again in lives made better by their presence."

J. S. OAKLEY.

HAYES—EUBENE CLIFFORD, son of J. M. and A. J. Hayes, was born Dec. 9, 1897, in Melville, La., and died April 28, 1898, at Mr. Hayes' father's, near Richard, La.

This is the second great bereavement that these dear parents have passed through during the past twelve months. Their first-born died during the early part of last year. Both passed to God in infancy. God is gathering the children to himself. Oh, may the parents follow! May God's tenderest smile be upon them in their deep affliction!

ROBERT RANDLE, P. C.
Big Cane, La.

DURBIN—MARY OLIVE DURBIN, the beloved wife of Mr. Wm. M. Durbin, of Natchez, Miss., died after a brief illness, April 27, 1898, aged twenty-two years. She had been married a few days over a year; a member of the M. E. Church, a pure Christian from childhood. She leaves many friends and loved ones to mourn her loss.

We will miss thee, dear Olive; thy sweet voice, bright smile. An angel awaits to greet thee on heaven's bright shore. With a sweet smile she passed in the arms of Jesus. He gave thee, he took thee, and he will restore thee. Husband, mother, sisters, friends, though now divided by the narrow stream of death, we shall meet again, and on the wings of love to joys celestial rise.

MARGINS.

The late President Garfield is said to have once made a speech to a boys' school on the subject of "Margins." He told the boys that the great successes of the world are won not so much by large natural advantages as by using every inch of margin. The application he made of the illustration was the use of margins of time, counseling his hearers not to waste the minutes; a warning always in season, if somewhat commonplace. But the principle extends through the whole sphere of conduct, and there are margins of character as well as of time and money. The natural differences among men in the same locality and social class are not nearly so great as is sometimes supposed. What one man wins by hard and slow self-culture, another fails to acquire because unwilling to make the necessary effort to overcome some natural handicap. The one has a slight margin to start with, which he increases many fold by persistent effort; the other has doubtless some equivalent advantage, which he neglects and thereby loses. How frequently this truth appears in the teaching of Jesus as to character! The man with the talents, though unequally endowed, seem to have had an equal capacity to double their trust funds, which two improved and one neglected. Those who used opportunities to feed the hungry, give drink to the thirsty, and receive the stranger, had perhaps no larger natural sympathies or more abundant means than those who neglected those opportunities; but Jesus foretold a sharp and eternal division between them at the judgment, because small decisions had involved great issues.

On the margin of conscientious performance of duty, of Christ-like self-denial, of incorruptible integrity, which one man uses and another despises, depends much of the eternal destiny of mankind. So delicate are the scales of God that an unspoken thought may vindicate the fitness or unfitness of a soul for endless life with him. All history proves the importance of trifles; and no man who is honest with his own soul can make the reply of him who hid his one talent, "Lo, thou hast thine own." The margin is the Lord's; the possibility of something better, small though it be, is sacred, and demands untiring effort. Until one learns to see a little of God's ideal for his life, he fails to meet the responsibility which is at once his glory and his burden.—Standard.

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

The parable of the rich man and Lazarus admits of more than one explanation; but at least they who regard it as not one of the plain and obvious application, that the decisions of the next world will often reverse the estimation wherein men are held in this; that God is no respecter of persons; that the heart must make its choice between the "good things" of this life and those which the externals of this life do not affect. And what may be called the epilogue of this parable contains a lesson more solemn still, namely: that the means of grace which God's mercy accords to every living soul are ample for its enlightenment and deliverance; that if these be neglected, no miracle will be wrought to startle the absorbed soul from its worldly interests; that "if they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead." Audiunt illi salvamur, says Bengel; non apparitionibus—"We are saved by faithful hearing, not by ghosts" (Farrar).

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address

This is the masterpiece of T. S. Arthur, and has been one of the most effective means of temperance reform ever conceived. Graphic, pathetic, convincing. Every young person in the land ought to read this book.

ÆSOP'S FABLES.
Translated by REV. G. F. TOWNSEND.
For centuries this collection of fables has been the fountain of worldly wisdom. Its apt and terse comparisons are calculated to clear the mind of falsehood, vanity and folly.

All these books are printed in large, clear type, and bound in white and gold (paper covers). Size of book 4¼x6¼ inches, such as have been usually sold at 25 cents each.

OUR SPECIAL OFFER.

To any one subscriber, new or old, who will pay his subscription one full year in advance—viz, to June, '99—and send us 25 cents additional, we will send all five of these books, postpaid.

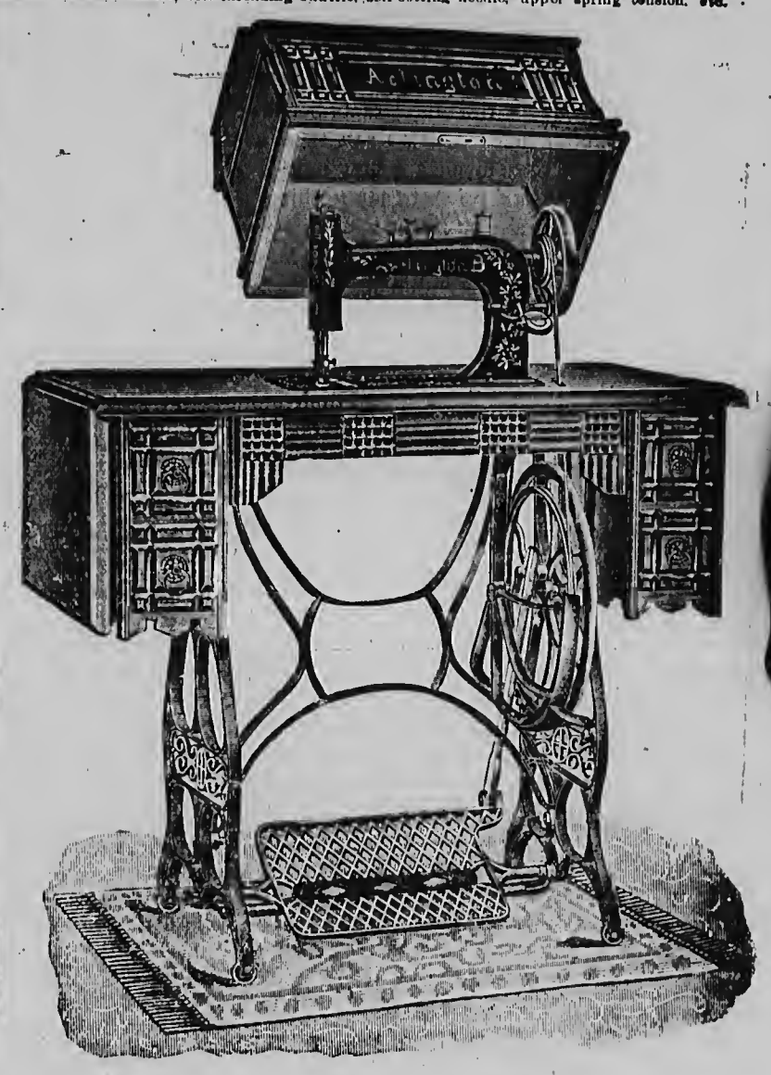
Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without nilling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the thread perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is as positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

ALL PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $19, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to December, '99, and send $17 additional, and we will send you the machine. This price does not include freight.

We allow purchaser to test the machine for ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

TO AGENTS:

We will send this machine free to any preacher or other person who will send us twenty new subscribers with the cash—$40. Address

CASES OF POISONING IN INDIANA.

Dr. Souder was summoned by telegraph last Sunday night to attend the family of Braden Harper, living southwest of Logansport. Four of the family were poisoned from eating dumplings. The father and one child, who had not partaken of the dumplings, were well, while the mother and three children were in a serious condition. It is probable that had not vomiting ensued, emptying the stomach, the four would have died from the effects. It is supposed the poison was caused from the baking powder used in making the dumplings. The wife probably added a larger amount than she usually did, which in the greater quantity proved a noxious poison. The baking powder used was branded the * * * *, manufactured by the * * * * This should be a warning in using cheap baking powders, which flood the country. People buy them because they are cheap, and the merchant buys them because he can sell them for a profit. In many stores one can not purchase a standard brand. You have to purchase the cheap stuff or do without. We are of the opinion that most of the prize baking powders belong to this class.

Alum baking powders likewise coagulate the blood rapidly, interfering with its ready course through the arteries and valves of the heart, predisposing to heart-failure.

The laws of Minnesota and Wisconsin prohibit the sale of alum baking powders, unless they are branded as a warning to the public.

By the laws of England it is a crime to put alum in bread in any form.

NOTE. The Royal Baking Powder Co. publish the above facts because they are facts of great importance, and to say that while alum baking powders are sold cheap they have little strength, and are dear at half price, to say nothing of their effect upon the health, and the bitter taste they impart to the food.

The Royal Baking Powder is far above question as regards its quality and healthfulness, because it is made of cream of tartar derived only from grapes. No other article has ever received such high praise for its quality.

Consumers may use the Royal with full assurance that they not only get the worth of their money, but that they also get the best cream of tartar baking powder that can be had.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Secretary Alger and Major-General Miles are now turning their entire attention to Porto Rico. Profiting by the experience of embarking the army to Santiago de Cuba, army officials fully expect that there will be no unnecessary delay in getting the troops off to Porto Rico. They are universally of the opinion that before ten days have elapsed an American army will be en route to San Juan.

Admiral Sampson is determined that the work for which Hobson staked his life shall not be undone, and at the first suspicion that the Spaniards are endeavoring to raise or blow up the "Merrimac," which now bars the entrance to the prison of the Spanish fleet, the batteries and the forts will be bombarded and reduced to ruins. Neither will he permit any more guns to be mounted in the batteries which command the entrance.

Admiral Sampson is confident that in addition to the great damage done to the forts and earthworks at the entrance of Santiago harbor more than one-half of the Spanish guns were actually dismantled. Perhaps even this estimate may be found too low when the full effect of that terrible rain of shot and shell becomes fully known. The extent to which the enemy was crippled is further shown by the eagerness with which they are attempting to repair their disabled batteries and put them in a condition to resist further punishment by our warships. These efforts have so far not been attended with success.

The first fight on the soil of Cuba, between Spanish land forces and our own troops, took place Sunday according to the accounts received. The American force engaged was the battalion of marines landed on Friday at Guantanamo. The attack made by the Spaniards was at night, and it was persistent and daring. Owing to the darkness, it was not ascertained how great the Spanish loss was; but owing to the heavy fire kept up by the American forces and the bold attacks made by the Spaniards, it could not have been other than serious. The American loss amounted to four killed and one wounded. Among the killed was one officer, the surgeon of the force engaged. The marines, to the number of 800, behaved with the greatest steadiness and gallantry and sustained the repeated attacks of the Spaniards without flinching.

Major General Shafter, with his army, 20,000 strong, is at last en route to Santiago de Cuba. This is now officially admitted by the authorities. Twenty-nine transports, laden with the best material of the United States army, were on Sunday nearing Key West, where they met additional convoys from Rear Admiral Sampson's fleet. Authorities all insist that there will be no further delay in the Santiago expedition. They are no longer concerned about the quartette of Spanish gunboats reported to be astray awaiting a favorable opportunity to pounce down upon the army transports. With the strong fleet of naval vessels convoying the transports no fear is entertained for the safety of the expedition. Its arrival at Santiago is expected by Thursday. Thus it seems reasonable to predict that the present week will see the American flag flying over Santiago de Cuba. The army now on its way to Santiago comprises the best troops mobilized in the South. It is equipped and armed better than any body of troops the United States has ever sent into the field. Our infantry is furnished nearly exclusively with the Krag-Jorgensen rifle, which is considered by ordnance experts as the most destructive rifle now in use.

The summer lake steamship lines of Chicago carried 1,000,000 passengers last year to resorts on Lakes Michigan and Superior.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Pooleville, Miss.
EDITOR.

This department is to prove a medium of communication between the leaguers within the States of Louisiana and Mississippi.

The resolutions called for an editor from Mississippi and an associate editor from Louisiana for one year.

We have been waiting to hear from the associate editor. We need his assistance. Louisiana must be represented. Two columns ought to be filled from two States every week.

To the State president of the Louisiana Leagues belongs the power for appointment of the associate editor.

If these lines fail to meet the eye of the State president, will some leaguer kindly call his attention to this very important matter?

The amount pledged by the Leagues at Meridian for missions and the orphanage need not conflict in the least with the regular collections.

Without bazaars or suppers, or anything of that kind, the amount can easily be paid by the leaguers themselves.

Let your next literary or social meeting of the League be held at the home of one of the leaguers. Arrange solos, duets, choruses from the Young People's Hymnal; take up regular subject for the evening, and serve light refreshments, if practicable. Let each leaguer place a dime on the table upon entering. In places where you have a good League you will have fifty or sixty present, and thus in one evening over half the amount pledged will be raised.

We have seen the above method tried. Freely was the money paid, and right heartily did all present enter into the programme of the evening, which was helpful and entertaining.

This is after the method of the good women who, in their monthly missionary meetings, assemble to take part in the regular programme, always remembering to carry their offering.

Let the purpose for which the offering is brought be fully explained, and thus the meeting will be educative in a large degree.

Other States have done nobly in the direction of missions through the channel of the Epworth League. Let not the Mississippi Leaguers lose step in this forward march.

District secretaries have been appointed for each presiding elder's district in Mississippi. We hope that, in conjunction with the presiding elder, these secretaries will arrange for a district League meeting during the year.

Miss Vic Thompson, corresponding secretary and treasurer of the Mississippi Leagues, writes that she has ordered a sample copy of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE sent to each of the district secretaries, and has asked them to endeavor to circulate the ADVOCATE among the leaguers.

If the leaguers everywhere will assist, we will endeavor to make this department interesting and instructive. Suppose each League appoint a correspondent to send in occasional items of interest. Send to Booneville, Miss.

The Tupelo League recently held a missionary mass meeting, and issued nicely printed cards worded as follows:

WANTED.

To borrow one hour of your time. Interest will be paid in a stirring missionary address.

GOOD MUSIC AND RECITATIONS.

Apply to the Epworth Leaguers, Sunday, the fifth, at the M. E. Church, South, 8 P. M.

DON'T FORGET THE TIME AND PLACE.

Use printer's ink; it pays. We have been many times impressed by notices in hotels, depots, and private houses, calling attention to hours of service for preaching, Epworth League, Sunday-school, etc.

LEAGUE RALLY.

The Leagues and Christian workers of the Arcadia district will hold a rally, at Arcadia, June 24, 25 and 26. A large delegation is expected, and much interest seems already manifested.

These are some of the subjects to be discussed: "How May the League Extend Itself in Our District?"—1st. Among Church Members—Miss Peabody. 2nd. Among Non-Church Members—G. L. Wren. "How May the League Help the Pastor?"—Rev. H. W. May. "How May the Pastor Help the League?"—Rev. A. D. McVey. "How May the League Help the Sunday-school?"—W. H. Leslie, A. T. Holstead. "The League and Temperance"—Rev. P. O. Lowry. "The League at Work," will be discussed in the several departments by R. B. Miller, Miss Gussie Tooke, C. E. Moores, Mrs. M. R. Gladney, and Miss Gertrude Hearn.

Every pastoral charge in the district will be represented, and we hope to create such a fire of enthusiasm as will stir up a League on every work. Pray for the success of the rally, and may much good be the result!

Yours "All for Christ,"
IONE SMITH, Chair'n,
For Program Committee.

GRAYBEARD

WE make 200 bottles of our GRAYBEARD every week. No more—no less. If 200 bottles don't fill all orders, some customer must wait until the next week. We mention this as some do not understand the delay. We have earned a reputation for making a clean, fresh, sure remedy for Cancer—Eczema, Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and we cannot make GRAYBEARD faster, and make it good.

"A few years ago Cancer appeared on my face in form of a scab—not a sore, but a scab that dropped off, and soon reappeared, some worse. Finally it annoyed me to shave. Darting pains set in, affecting my sight. People said I had Cancer—I was miserable. About that time a planter name Jordan, down the State, once similarly afflicted, sent me a bottle of GRAYBEARD advising me to take it. I did so and to my great joy got better. Skin cleared, appetite improved, I got stouter and Cancer left me. And it has not returned. GRAYBEARD saved my life.

Joseph Barnes, Taylor County, Ga."

BRIGHT'S DISEASE

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

Dr. G. A. Foote, of Warrenton, N. C., ex-President State Medical Society, formerly Member of the State Board of Medical Examiners, and also of the State Board of Health:

"I had, in January, 1893, a violent attack of 'grip,' which was soon followed by the complications of ascites, cardiac trouble, etc., and rapidly developed into severe nephritis or Bright's. My physicians, Drs. King and Jerman, upon examination of my urine, found by volume fifty-five per cent albumen, which test was frequently corroborated by subsequent examinations showing also casts and low specific gravity. My nephritic trouble gradually grew worse, and I declined in weight from one hundred and ninety-five to one hundred and thirty-five pounds. In this condition, with little if any hope of relief from any remedy, I visited the BUFFALO LITHIA SPRINGS of Virginia, making free use of the Waters for some eight weeks. Analysis of the urine soon after reaching the Springs, by Dr. R. C. Laird, resident physician, confirmed the examinations previously made. Other analyses, however, by Dr. Laird from time to time showed a gradual diminution, and finally a total disappearance, of both albumen and casts and the urine in a normal condition. Leaving the Springs, I continued the use of the Waters several months at home. At the expiration of some two years there has been no return of any unpleasant symptom, and I am now as well as I ever was in my life, and a living monument to the virtues of BUFFALO LITHIA WATER"

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER is for sale by Grocers and Druggists generally. Pamphlets on application.

27th ANNUAL CAMP MEETING

—AT—

SEASHORE CAMP GROUNDS,

Located on the Gulf Shore, with a frontage of 1400 feet.

WILL OPEN (D. V.) ON WEDNESDAY, JULY 13, NEXT, AND CONTINUE FOR 8 OR 10 DAYS.

The Grounds are opened April 1, and closed Nov. 1, for occupying cottages and reception of visitors. Modern and ample accommodation have been provided for the multitudes that annually visit this refreshing and delightfully cool and bracing place of rest, free from malaria and contagious diseases.

The sea bathing is unsurpassed by any resort on the Mississippi Sound, while the supply of pure, sparkling drinking water is furnished by one of the finest of artesian wells, whose waters possess rare virtues.

The Grounds represent a beautiful grove of rare attractiveness, with its abundance of 20-odd varieties of shade trees, which afford shelter from the Summer heat.

The exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued, and act as a tonic to the debilitated visitors from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns. Boats for sailing and fishing always on hand. The drives along the seashore present magnificent views, and are over ten miles in length. Visitors are not expected to arrive or depart on the Sabbath day.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 5 to 23, inclusive, and be good to return on until Aug. 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. All trains will stop at the camp grounds from July 5 to 24, inclusive.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge.

The services during camp meeting are in charge of the presiding elders of the New Orleans, Seashore and Mobile District Conferences.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before and during camp meeting, or rent cottages for the season, will please communicate with W. L. Via, superintendent Camp Ground (Biloxi, P. O. 42, Miss.), or any of the following officers:

W. W. SUTCLIFFE, President, New Orleans, La.
J. H. LAKIN, Vice-President, Montgomery, Ala.

SAVE THAT SOUL.

BY W. C. MARTIN.

Some father's boy, who left the peaceful harbor of his childhood's home
To brave the perils of the sea, and sport with waves and flying foam,
Had made sad shipwreck of his life, and now is stranded on a shoal,
O, save that boy for God and heaven; save that never-dying soul.

Some mother's darling, in the spring-time of her life's bright fragrant bloom,
Put out to sea in waters under which there lurked the rocks of doom;
And now her wretched soul is breaking on the reefs of sin and shame,
O, save that girl for God and heaven; save that soul in Jesus' name.

Away from father's home and watch-care, far from mother's counsel true,
A host of precious youths are drifting into perils hid from view.
O, warn them what they hazard with no compass, pilot safe, or chart,
O, save those souls for God and heaven; save by every sacred art.

COMMENCEMENT OF WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

MR. EDITOR: Feeling sure that the readers of the ADVOCATE will take pleasure in hearing of the proceedings of our recent very delightful commencement occasion, I give below some cullings from what one of our town papers has expressed regarding it.

Benjamin Franklin has said, "An investment in knowledge always pays the best interest." That this is true is too well known to need argument, and that Whitworth is the best place in the South for a young woman to make that investment is also becoming admitted as an indisputable fact. The commencement of '98 has shown that these investments are already paying interest, for it was one of the most brilliant in years.

MISS JOHNSON'S RECITAL.

Softly and gently her fingers caressed the keys, and the sweetest melody stole forth to delight the ears of the large audience assembled last Thursday evening to hear Miss Johnson's recital for graduation. She is a fine pianist, and her recital confirmed with the audience the opinion of her instructor, who, we understand, considers her one of the most satisfactory pupils he has ever graduated.

Miss Johnson was assisted in her recital by a number of young ladies, who delighted the audience with vocal selections. Among these were solos by Miss Chambers and Mrs. Anna R. Bowen, a duet by Misses E. Priebatsch and Kennard, and a sextette by Misses Brister, L. Jones, Chambers, Rayner, Moore, and Wolfe.

PRIMARY ENTERTAINMENT.

The audience which assembled Friday evening to witness the exercises of the Primary and Preparatory Departments was one of the largest which has assembled in Calisthenic Hall for years. The people were well repaid for their attendance, for the program, though long, was a splendid one. From the chorus and well-turned address of welcome down to the "good-night" drill, it was a good performance.

THE SERMONS.

Sunday morning the baccalaureate sermon was preached in the absence of Rev. R. J. Bigham by Rev. Chas. Oberschmidt, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Brookhaven, from the text, "I shall be satisfied" (Psalm xvii, 15). As usual, his effort was polished and scholarly, and delighted the large audience.

At night Rev. Robt. H. Wynn, of New Orleans, preached the sermon before the Epworth League, delivering a fine discourse.

ELOCUTION CONTEST.

On Monday morning a large crowd assembled to listen to the contest in elocution for a gold medal, in which five young ladies took part. A number of musical selections were given. But the interest centered in the elocution contest, in which the following young women took part: Miss Carmichael, who recited "The Penalty Was Paid;" Miss Marshall, "The Going of the White Swan;" Miss Lampton, "How Burlington Was Saved;" Miss Norgress, "Mandy: A Story of the South;" and Miss Howard, "The Prodigal Son." Excellently as each did, it was no doubt a difficult matter for the judges to render a decision. However, this was simplified by taking the average made in this contest and combining it with the average of the year's work. The winner was not announced till Wednesday.

The elocutionary art is a most delightful one, both to its master and to its hearers, and Whitworth is making a fine record in turning out finished artists.

THE STUDIO

was not slighted Monday by the large crowds, and all day long the spacious room was filled with visitors who found much to admire in the many pictures hung upon its walls. The display of decorated china was also very attractive, some beautiful and delicate pieces being shown.

LITERARY SOCIETIES EVENING.

Monday night the Philolathean Literary Society, organized in 1894, and the Harvey Johnson Literary Society, founded in 1896, held their anniversary. After a most impressive entry to the music of a march played by Misses Esther and Adele Priebatsch, the entertainment was opened with prayer by the chaplain of the Harvey Johnsons, Miss Lela McNemar. A battle royal was fought in debate between the societies upon the subject, "Resolved, That education should be compulsory." The Philolatheans took the affirmative side, and presented Misses Birdie Norgress and Lelia Jones as their champions. Misses Margaret McCord and Annie Lee upheld the banner of the Harvey Johnson Society on the negative side. The arguments were brilliant, and presented most beautifully, and when the judges announced that Misses McCord and Lee had again carried the banners of the Harvey Johnsons to victory, the applause was tremendous.

Rev. J. M. Weems, who made the annual address, took for his subject "Education," and for his principal theme, "Be not ministered to, but minister." Forcefully and logically he presented the idea of self-help and earnestness in one's life-work and deplored the pursuit of dollars and cents, which now largely prevails to the exclusion of higher aims. He touched upon the changing condition of our country, saying that the statesmen of the old school have passed away, and another generation, changed to meet existing conditions, has arisen. He spoke feelingly of our present and preceding wars, and closed by pronouncing a beautiful eulogium upon Dr. Johnson, and words of commendation for President Chambers, who is following so closely in the broad lines planned and dreamed of by his illustrious predecessor.

of Whitworth made a splendid showing for their alma mater on Tuesday morning, presenting a brilliant program, bringing back fond memories of other days and other classes just passing the milestone of commencement day.

The meeting was presided over by Mrs. Lily Wilkinson Thompson, '84, of Crystal Springs, who, after the reading of the Minutes and record of marriages and deaths by the secretary, Miss Addie V. Marshall, '73, gracefully welcomed the class of '98.

Mrs. Mattie Hudson Wiley, A. M., '68, of McKinney, Texas, was present for the first time in twenty-seven years, and read a paper on the "Emancipation of Woman," in which she urged that woman should be freed from a number of modern ideas and ways, leave running the government to men, and make home happy.

Mrs. Ella Thornton Brooke, '85, of Meridian, who was to have read a historical paper, but was prevented from coming, sent the manuscript, which was read by Mrs. Mignonne Howell, '73, of Crystal Springs.

Mrs. Annie Coleman Peyton, '71, of Columbus, delivered an address, taking for her principal theme the improvement of our school system. Mrs. Peyton is well known as a splendid thinker and writer, and a noble woman; so her words were listened to with marked attention.

The following are the officers of the association for the coming year: President, Mrs. Lily W. Thompson, '84; vice-presidents: Miss Miriam Crutcher, '88; Mrs. Catherine Covington, '90, and Mrs. Hattie Sherman, '75. Recording secretary, Miss Josie Pfeifer, '94; corresponding secretary, Miss Addie V. Marshall, '73; treasurer, Miss Eva Kohlman, '94.

During the afternoon the Alumnæ Association held a pleasant reception in the college parlors.

THE CONCERT.

An audience which packed Calisthenic Hall to the doors enjoyed the magnificent entertainment presented Tuesday night. It was throughout an entertainment worthy of Whitworth, and the performers and their instructors are to be congratulated on the way in which those who took part acquitted themselves.

The great event of the evening was the contest upon the piano for a gold medal. Miss Bessie Crosby played Schubert's "Impromptu" in B flat; Miss Fannie Kennard, "Erl King," by Schubert-Liszt, and Miss Esther Priebatsch, Raff's "Galop Caprice." All showed great skill and expression, delighting the audience with their masterly handling of the instrument, and demonstrating that they are all exquisite pianists.

Many visitors were present from other places, and Whitworth may well feel that she sent them away amply repaid for their attendance.

GRADUATION DAY.

To the strains of the inspiring march from Tannhauser, the graduating class of 1898 marched in, accompanied by the faculty and trustees, and after a beautiful prayer by Rev. E. H. Monnger, D. D., of Vicksburg, the ever-interesting exercises began. Three members of the graduating class read essays, Miss Sue Noble choosing as her subject, "The Capabilities of the Human Mind," and treating it in a forceful manner; Miss Lily Carmichael presented a most eloquent and pleasing dissertation on woman's beauty—mentally and physically—entitled, "The Daughters of the Rose;" Miss Gideon Frilick discussed most ably "Some Phases of the Metropolitan Newspaper," in which she found space for words of praise for that vast majority of papers which sets its standard high and looks to the ennobling of the human race. Miss Fannie Kennard sweetly sang Donizetti's 'O Mio Fernando," and after a piano duet by Misses Crisler and Lewis, President Chambers made a charming address to the graduating class. Diplomas were presented as follows: Conferring the degree of Artium Baccalaurea upon Gideon Vardaman Frilick, of Utica; Mamie Alva McGowan, of Quitman; Dalton Fazette Moore, of Oak Ridge, La., and Sue Williams Noble, of Charleyville, La. Conferring the degree of Mistress of English Literature upon Josephine Crisler, of Edwards; Mary Eugenia De Marco, of Natchez; Lily Gertrude Carmichael, of Bear Creek; Maud Olivia Gunn, of Wesson, and Alice Wimberly Lewis, of Crystal Springs. Conferring the degree of Bachelor of Music upon Mrs. Anna Rutledge Bowen, of Mt. Carmel, and Mary Osborn Johnson, of Harriston. Miss Frilick carried off first honors, and Miss Crisler was a close second, there being only two points difference. After a chorus—"The Crimson Glow of Sunset Fades"—President Chambers delivered the three medals offered. The silver medal in elocution was won by Miss Fannie Dennett; the gold medal in elocution was awarded to Miss Mattie Howard, who was the winner of the silver medal last year; and the gold medal for excellence in piano was won by Miss Fannie Kennard, who was a close second in the contest for this medal last year.

Announcement was made by Rev. E. H. Monnger, D. D., acting president of the Board of Trustees, that the Board had adopted resolutions of endorsement for the college under the present management, and that in view of the fact that the alumnæ had shown such an interest in the upbuilding of the school, two of their number—Miss Addie V. Marshall, of Brookhaven, and Mrs. W. F. Love, of Gloster—had been elected to membership on the Board of Trustees. This is a graceful act which will redound to the good of the school. President Chambers then announced the five changes to be made in the faculty for the coming year, and, with the benediction by Rev. B. F. Jones, the commencement of 1898 passed into history.—Lincoln County Times.

The above is a faithful presentation of our commencement work, with the omission of some details of the numbers presented on each program, for which we forbore to claim so much of your valuable space.

In the providence of God we have been signally blessed in our school work during the session just closed, and I believe we have sent to their homes as happy a set of girls as ever spent a year off at school. Old Whitworth is again ascending the heights; it begins to look like the good old days of the seventies, and, with the vim and energy which President Chambers is bringing to bear at the helm, we may hope some day to see her reach and even surpass the highest pinnacle of glory ever hoped and longed for by her friends of the past and of the present.

With a hope for better things for the coming session, both as to the patronage of our friends and our own work for the cause of education, we are looking forward and expecting to labor for a prosperous opening of the next Fall term.

Pray for us, Mr. Editor, and for our land, that pestilence and war may not stay the tide of our prosperity, if such be the will of our Father in heaven.

Yours for the cause of Christian education,

ADDIE V. MARSHALL.

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Brookhaven District Conference convened in Summit, Miss., on the twenty-sixth day of May, 1898, and concluded its minute work on the afternoon of the twenty-eighth, with the following day, Sunday, devoted especially to preaching, Sunday-school mass meeting, and experience meeting. All the pastors in the district, except two, were present, and there was a large attendance of the laymen. This was considered by many as being the most profitable Conference held in the district for many years.

Rev. W. B. Lewis preached the first sermon of the session on Wednesday evening to a small congregation.

The first day, Thursday, was devoted to discussing missionary subjects and preaching two sermons on missions—one at 11 o'clock, by Rev. T. L. Mellen, and the other at 8 o'clock by the writer.

Revs. W. B. Lewis, B. F. Jones, T. W. Adams, and others, led in the discussion of various subjects on missionary work, and most of the preachers and some of the laymen entered into the discussion. The presiding elder, Dr. Weems, added much to the interest of these topics by speaking with interest upon the same.

This being the only day that Bro. Chambers could be present, he was allowed the privilege of representing the interests of Whitworth College, which he declared to be in a very prosperous condition, with an enrollment of 116 in the Boarding Department. Whitworth is rapidly gaining ground under the presidency of Rev. J. W. Chambers, whose eye is open to every interest of the college, and whose heart is in touch with everyone under his supervision. The church will certainly rally more and more to this very worthy and growing institution of many years' care under the immortal Johnson; also President Fitzhugh; and last, but not least in any respect, J. W. Chambers.

The District Conference proper convened on the morning of the twenty-seventh, with Rev. J. M. Weems, D. D, presiding elder, in the chair. The writer was elected secretary for both the Missionary Day and Conference. The reports of the preachers in some respects were good, and the prospect is that we will have a prosperous year. Some revivals were reported, with additions on profession of faith as a result. There were developments made which, if carried out, will result in great prosperity to the cause of Christ throughout the district.

Sermons were preached by Revs. B. F. Jones, C. McDonald, H. D. Howell, J. A. Moore, J. M. Weems, and T. W. Adams. These brethren preached the Word with demonstration of the Spirit and in power.

Revs. A. B. Nicholson and W. B. Hines, superannuates, were present during the Conference.

One young man, William James Wood, was licensed to preach.

A. C. McNair, I. M. Eagan, E. J. Carruth and W. C. Vaught were elected delegates to the Annual Conference.

Resolutions of thanks to the people of Summit were adopted by a rising vote. The kindness of the I. C. R. R. and the Times-Democrat were also recognized by resolutions of appreciation by the Conference.

Brookhaven was elected as the next place of holding the Conference.

It is hardly necessary for me to say that Dr. Weems magnified his office in all its phases, since he does this in every capacity as presiding elder. ROBT. SELBY, Sec'y.

Hazlehurst, Miss., June 14, 1898.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

Last Wednesday, June 8, was spent by me at Whitworth College, where I had the pleasure of witnessing the closing exercises. Every friend of this great school (which was secured to us by the wisdom of Benj. Jones and the liberality of M. J. Whitworth, and into which the very heart and life of H. F. Johnson were builded) will be glad to know that under the presidency of the Rev. Jno. W. Chambers, A. M., Whitworth College is rapidly regaining lost ground. Bro. Chambers is doing a fine work, and deserves the success he has achieved. He has wrought marvels in repairing and improving the buildings and the grounds. He is planning wisely for the future. The curriculum has been raised to correspond with that of Millsaps College. More graduates received the A. B. degree than ever before in the history of the college. The hygienic conditions are excellent. Of course, the fare is good. The president's person indicates that.

With East Mississippi at Meridian, Whitworth at Brookhaven, and Grenada College in the northern part of our State, our three great schools for girls and young women are admirably correlated as to situation; and it only remains for them to "provoke one another to love and good works." There is room in the hearts of Mississippi Methodists for all three, and there is also patronage enough. We can not get along very well without any one of them. But we do not need another. T. L. MELLEN.

THE FACULTY OF CENTENARY COLLEGE.

We congratulate the Methodists of Louisiana on the continuance of a first-class faculty at Centenary College. Prof. W. H. Carter, A. M. (University of Mississippi), will continue to teach mathematics. Prof. J. M. Sullivan, A. M. (Vanderbilt), will remain as professor of chemistry. Prof. W. B. Griffin, A. M. (Emory College), Latin and Greek. Prof. Marion G. Evans, A. M. (University of Mississippi), English. Prof. Charles W. Crisler, headmaster Preparatory Department.

We are glad to state that we expect to announce our agent in another week. He will be a minister of great energy and adaptability, and will give unusual satisfaction.

Special attention will be given to the pupils in the Preparatory Department. Will every preacher and friend of the college send a list of young men who expect to attend college? Let the answer be, Yes! Now for a forward movement.

I. W. COOPER.

TREASURER OF BOARD OF MISSIONS.

The Board of Missions, at its session held in Baltimore during General Conference, elected J. D. Hamilton treasurer for the ensuing quadrennium. For years a member of the Board and of its Auditing Committee, Mr. Hamilton is thoroughly acquainted with the policy of the Board and the business of the office. We bespeak for him all the courtesies extended his predecessors.

All correspondence relative to financial matters, hitherto directed to G. W. Cain, should now be addressed to J. D. Hamilton, treasurer, 346 Public Square, Nashville, Tenn.

CHRISTIAN INDIVIDUALITY.

When a man becomes a Christian his individuality is not taken away. The Christian is not something distinct from the man. He is the man filled with Christ. Of course, the regenerating power of the Holy Spirit changes the purpose of the life, turns it from self to God. Every renewed man in this respect is like every other. Each child of God is bound to overcome that which remains of evil in him, and to foster that which is good. Thus, regenerated men are alike, as elm trees are alike, or crystals or ocean billows or human faces. But the Christian man whose nature is emotional will be an emotional Christian; he who is business-like and matter-of-fact will have that coloring in his Christian life; he who is thoughtful and contemplative will exhibit that phase of Christian experience—"As every man has received a gift," says the apostle.—Golden Censer.

HELPING THE PASTOR.

The following incident in the life of Dr. William Taylor is related by a writer in the Observer: Dr. William M. Taylor said to his people at a prayer meeting: "Brethren, I am tired, tired out, and I want you to carry on this service and thus rest me." The request was promptly and heartily complied with. Unexpectedly, however, those who participated thus, took occasion to refer to some word or deed of their pastor which had helped somebody, either the speaker himself or some one of whom he personally knew. The tired look on the minister's face faded as he heard one after another of these testimonies. There were tears in his eyes when he closed the service, which told even more than his words how his brethren had helped him by making it plain that he had helped others. Everyone got a blessing at that meeting.—Exchange.

HE KNOWS.

BY MISS VIRGIE CASPARI.

The sweetest thought that on me dawns,
Through all life's cruel strife,
Is this: the dear Christ understands
Each act of my poor life.

The friends who dearly love me now
Misjudge the things they see,
But Christ from out my inmost heart
Unveils the mystery.

For, stooping low, I know he sees
The poor attempts I make
To shield some little one from harm,
Only for Jesus' sake.

His pitying smile falls sweet on me,
Though all my efforts fail;
His strength is his, and weakness mine,
While bitter griefs assail.

He knows full well. I need not fear.
The crooked will come straight.
To scorn the wrong—to do the right.
This done, and then—to wait.

WAR CORRESPONDENCE.

The First Regiment of Mississippi Volunteers of Infantry, in obedience to orders from the War Department, left Jackson, Miss., May 30, via Illinois Central and the Queen and Crescent railroads, for Chickamauga National Park. Those of us who came via the Queen and Crescent were appropriately received by the patriotic people of Meridian, Miss. The colonel and staff were served with an elegant luncheon at the Grand Avenue Hotel, and all the rest were treated to sandwiches and cure-enough coffee, which was quite a treat to the boys. As the two sections pulled out a vast throng, many with tearful eyes and saddened hearts, and yet with enthusiasm unbounded, bade the soldier boys God-speed. Those who came via the Illinois Central also report having had a delightful trip. Both parts of the regiment reached here safely Tuesday, May 31, and "struck" camp. The regiment is camping where Johnson's Division of Longstreet's Corps passed on that memorable Friday and Saturday of September, 1863. While sitting in my tent I can look out and count quite a number of battle-scarred oaks which, after these thirty-odd years, show plainly the evidence of the fierce conflict which was waged. Several of the boys have found a number of the missiles of death that flew thick and fast, and one can easily distinguish the factory-made balls of the Federals from the hand-carved ones of our troops. One of the boys of another regiment found a human skull transfixed with a bayonet, but the bayonet was so rust-eaten that it was impossible to tell to which side it belonged.

The Chickamanga National Park contains about 6,000 acres, and 50 miles of improved drive-way, and is about 8 miles from Chattanooga, just across the Tennessee line in the State of Georgia. The land cost the government on an average of $29 per acre. Nearly 400 monuments have been erected to date, and three observation towers 70 feet in height. About 300 mounted guns, placed where they rendered the most conspicuous service, are on the field. A pyramidal monument of eight-inch shells, erected by the government, mark the spot where those exercising the command of general officers were killed or mortally wounded. There were four on each side at Chickamanga, all commanding brigades—Brig.-Gen. W. H. Lylle, Colonels P. P. Baldwin, H. C. Heg, and E. A. King, on the Union side, and Brig.-Gens. Jas. Deshler, B. H. Helm, and Preston Smith, and Col. P. H. Colquitt, on the Confederate. The losses of Rosecrans in the two days' battle here were 16,176; of Bragg, 17,804. Union troops engaged, as near as can be learned, 58,700; Confederate, 63,557. The per cent. of losses on both sides about 33. These figures show Chickamauga to rank, for the number engaged and the time of their fighting, among the most noted battles of the modern world. On account of the extensive area, striking object-lessons, beautiful situation, healthy locality, shaded slopes and abundant water supply, Chickamauga is peculiarly adapted to the purpose for which it is now being used—a camping place for upwards of 40,000 troops.

Col. Govan, who played a conspicuous part as inspector general on the staff of Gen. Walthall, appears to be in his element as he points out to the boys the places of interest on Lookout, Missionary Ridge, and Chickamanga. His face lights up, his eyes flash, and he appears to be living amid those stirring scenes again.

I shall not attempt to describe Lookout Mountain further than to say that it belongs to the Cumberland range; is 2,200 feet above sea level, and 1,700 feet above Chattanooga; is about 85 miles in length, in some places four miles wide, and terminates as abruptly at Gadsen, Ala., as it commences at Chattanooga. Henry M. Stanley, the African explorer, standing on Point Lookout, said: "The view from Lookout Mountain is one of the most magnificent to be seen in the world."

We have been placed in the same brigade with Fifty-second Iowa and First Maine. The chaplain of the Fifty-second Iowa is a Methodist, and is secretary of the Iowa Conference.

We had two very satisfactory services last Sunday in the open air. Hope to be able to do more effective work when our big regimental Y. M. C. A. tent arrives, which has already been shipped from New Orleans.

We have gained the victory over the "canteen." The "canteen" is nothing more nor less than a beer saloon which the War Department allows in each regiment, if the commander of the same is in favor of it. Scarcely had we struck camp before the agent of the breweries was on hand urging their claims. Col. Govan assured me that he would not hastily decide the matter. This, about as near as I can learn, is the plan: The brewers furnish the outfit to the regiment free, and sells them all the beer the regiment will consume at wholesale price. The colonel then appoints what is called an exchangeman to run it, and it is claimed that the profits arising therefrom are divided equally among the companies for the purpose of buying such articles for the companies as are not furnished them by the government. Oh, what a charitable set the brewers are! All honor to Col. Govan! After carefully examining into the matter for several days, considering the benefits to be derived therefrom, and the evils incident thereto, he called me to his tent last Sunday morning, and told me that he had decided to shut out the canteen. Major Porter, and some of the captains, and many of the minor officers and privates, were very pronounced in their opposition to the proposition from the start. Others were as equally pronounced in favor of it. But the question is settled, and the First Mississippi is set down with a very small minority of the regiments here which have shut out the beer saloon. Our nearest neighbor, the Third Tennessee, has a canteen.

The health of our boys has been fairly good, considering the fact that they had to sleep on the bare ground for several nights before they were furnished with blankets, when the nights were so cool that I had to sleep under a double blanket and heavy quilt in order to keep warm. Our regimental hospitals are not equipped by the government, only the division hospitals, but for many reasons we ought to keep our sick boys in the regimental hospitals as long as possible. To do this we must have help from home, and I hereby make an appeal to the Mississippians, and others who are interested in the First Regiment, to send us relief. The sick boys ought to have cots, pillows, clean linen, ice, milk, beef-tea, etc. None of these are supplied by the government. By the boys draining themselves, who ought not to be drained, and by using my own limited means, I have been able to get straw for the sick boys to sleep on, and furnish them with a meagre supply of ice and sweet milk. Some of the companies have furnished their sick with cots, and bought such things as they were able; but our funds have about run out, and unless help comes soon, the sick will suffer, and needlessly so. I am sorry to say it, but Mississippi has done less for her soldier-boys than any of the States represented here. Anything contributed will be conscientiously used in behalf of the sick boys.

Address me in care of the First Regiment Mississippi Volunteers, Chickamanga National Park, Ga.; or if you have the time and room, you might direct your letters to the Chaplain First Regiment Mississippi Volunteer Infantry, Third Brigade, Second Division, Third Army Corps, Department of the Gulf, Camp Geo. H. Thomas, Chickamanga National Park, Lylle, Ga.

The above is our full address at present. FRANK M. KEEN,
Chaplain 1st Reg. Miss. Vol.

Chickamauga National Park, June 9, 1898.

"CONGREGATIONAL SINGING—ITS DECLINE, ITS RESTORATION."

(A paper read before the Grenada District Conference of the North Mississippi Conference by the Rev. W. M. Young, and asked to be published in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE by a vote of the Conference.)

That there has been decline in congregational singing in our church will hardly be questioned. The early Methodists were a singing people, both the ministry and laity; so much so they impressed the outside world with their spirit of song and praise. Pioneer Methodism was largely recognized by their spirit of song. But we must confess to a serious decline in congregational singing. Upon this point we need not say much except to find the cause, that we may properly apply the remedy, for restoration is the end desired.

Now, it has been charged that the cause of this decline was the introduction of organs into our churches, and thereby substituting the organ for singing. To this charge we answer that the organ is only an instrument of music, and came to meet a demand which the taste and culture of the times had created for it. The organ neither creates nor diminishes the spirit of singing, but simply meets a demand for instrumental music. We shall see, by a careful survey of a few facts, that the organ has nothing to do with this question, for many churches had seriously declined in congregational singing before they introduced the organ. Others have seriously declined in singing that never had an organ. On the other hand, some churches that have the organ have the best congregational singing we know of anywhere. So we are constrained to say, and with a sense of humiliation, that the real cause of this decline is to be found in the loss of the devotional spirit among our people, for a worshipful and devotional spirit will naturally produce songs of praise to God. There must be expression for the spirit; so, if the spirit is devotional, nothing is more natural than to express itself in songs of praise to God. If this is true, you can see at once how the church suffers in a two-fold sense. First, as the church loses in the spirit of devotion, it loses in reverence and genuine piety; then naturally follows a decline in the spirit of song, because wherever there is a deep feeling of devotion and love to God, the most natural way of expressing this feeling is by singing praises to God. That we have lost in reverence and devotion to God as a church needs only a few facts stated to convince every thoughtful mind. Our people do not kneel in prayer now as they once did, and the habit (so commendable) of kneeling or bowing the head in a few words of prayer at the seat on entering the church is almost extinct among us, and the boisterous conversation in many of our churches immediately after the benediction is evidence of growing irreverence; but, without exception, where you find the devotional spirit pervading the congregation, there you will find the spirit of song maintained.

In seeking the remedy for this evil we must first remove the cause. Oh, for a spirit of devotion and reverence to God that will be vital and living! This is of first importance.

Brethren, if we can have a genuine revival of reverence to God and his house, we will have largely settled the question of congregational singing. It will only remain, then, for us to correct some prevailing errors and offer some suggestions for the future policy of our church. The effort to restore congregational singing by means of a multiplication of new song books to take the place of the old, and thereby stimulate and perpetuate the spirit of singing, is a false and pernicious method. First, because it does not restore congregational singing; second, because many of the old songs are superior to many of the new; and, finally, the making of new song books has become a profitable business, so that they are multiplied to suit the sentimental taste which demands them. Mainly, they are innocent and harmless, but wanting often in one essential for religious songs—i. e., in great gospel truths. We recognize that the revision of song books and the making of new ones must have a proper place in a great church, and be looked after as carefully as any other department of worship. Here we take occasion to say that "The Young People's Hymnal" stands at the head of the list for the uses to which it was intended. As to our "Hymn and Tune Book," our hymns are the best, and come down to us pure from the fathers, but we deplore the fact that there is often a serious want of a proper adjustment of tunes to hymns. We will hail a revision of the tunes in our Hymn and Tune Book with joy. In restoring congregational singing we assume that there must be a genuine revival of reverence and devotion to God, first of all. Then we preachers need to sing and learn to sing. The pioneer preacher was a great singer. Whether with time or without it, he had the spirit, and here is where the power is to be found. He sang the old hymns and chorus songs mainly, and the people learned them readily. Thus the preacher was a leader and builder in congregational singing. Here we may find the secret of much of the success of the pioneer preacher as a revivalist and soul-winner to Christ; that, after preaching the gospel, he would lead the people in singing it, and often, while they sang, the Holy Ghost fell on them.

Finally, we insist that vocal music should be taught in all our public schools, for the best time to learn to sing is while we are children. I have not a doubt that thousands who never learned to sing might have sung well if they had been taught in childhood to sing as they were taught mathematics and other studies. The prevailing notion that you must have some special talent for music before you can learn to sing is as erroneous as to say you must have special talents for mathematics before you can learn arithmetic. Vocal music is a science, and by all means should have a place in our public-school system. I suppose I should never have felt this truth so forcibly but for my visit to Toronto, Canada; and while there I was deeply impressed with the devotional spirit, religiously, and the national spirit of the Canadian people, and in both instances this impression came through song. In church the old men and women, as well as the young people, all sung, and they sang with the spirit; and if on a sea-vessel or public highway, they were constantly singing their national airs. On investigation I learned that vocal music was taught in their public schools.

This brings us face to face with a great fact: that just in proportion as we decline in our convictions on any great question of religion or politics, will we cease to express our convictions in song; and in proportion as we are stirred to deep feelings and convictions on either religious or national principles, will we express same in song. This was illustrated the other day while I stood in City Hall Park, New York, reading war dispatches. Thousands were gathered there singing our national airs and applauding. This goes to show that our educational system is the measure of our convictions, and just so long as we neglect vocal music in our educational system will we manifest weakness of convictions in religion and patriotism. As a church and nation, we are becoming to be more extensive than intensive. Oh, for such intensive convictions as will keep us true to God, and in the spirit and practice of singing songs of praise to his name, and, as a great church, maintain our reputation for congregational singing!

WOMAN'S HOME MISSION SOCIETY.

The Woman's Home Mission Society of the New Orleans district held its quarterly meeting Sunday evening, June 12, in Algiers, and there was a very good representative attendance from the various societies in the city. In the absence of Mrs. W. W. Carre, the meeting was presided over by Mrs. T. H. Holmes. Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. R. H. Wynn, the pastor. A message of greeting from Mrs. R. K. Hargrove, General Secretary, was read by Mrs. Hobbs, of Carondelet. Reports of auxiliaries were given as follows: Carondelet, through Mrs. E. Simon; Felicity, through Mrs. G. D. Holmes; Parker Memorial, through Mrs. J. W. Wilkinson; Rayne Memorial, through Mrs. F. A. Lyons; Rayne Memorial Juniors, through Miss Phala Lyons; Algiers, through Miss L. Haskebring, and Tchonpitoulas, through Mrs. L. Meekins; Dryades being the only one unrepresented.

Special reports of missionary labor were given by Miss Mabel Fuller and Mrs. L. Meekins, the former of whom has recently resigned her position after having labored successfully for about two years in Gretna and Gonldsboro.

Mrs F. A. Lyons read an explanation by Miss Mary Helm, editor of Our Homes, of the revision of the Constitution by the recent General Conference, the principal changes being the simplifying of the name of the society and the provision for the sending of all the dues of the society to the General Treasurer, who will hereafter pay out both the local and connectional appropriations.

An able address was delivered by Prof. Thomas Carter, of Tulane University, in which he clearly outlined the various branches of work in which the society is engaged, and based some suggestive words of exhortation and encouragement on the account of the woman of Shunem, in Second Kings, who provided the prophet's chamber for Elisha.

The next meeting, three months hence, will be held at Parker Memorial.

(Concluded.)

In our society's growth we realize a broadening and increasing demand for earnest and prayerful effort. Home mission has a broad significance. The Sue Bennett Memorial School at London, Ky.; our Cuban Mission School at Cuba City, Tampa, and Ybor City, Fla., are doing great good, and increasing in value and usefulness every day.

Our city missions are also proving efficient agencies for helping weak and erring humanity to a higher and better life. We have city missionaries in Nashville, Dallas, Atlanta, St. Louis, and other cities.

As a source of revenue for all of these departments of work, we have the Loan Funds. Dr. H. C. Morrison, in writing of these, says: "It never wearies in well-doing; ever giving, yet never exhausted; toiling ever, yet never tired; a sort of everlasting benediction; an immortal Good Samaritan, with wine, oil, and bandages for the bleeding and helpless parsonages of our land. Going to the West, it fortifies a point; returning to the East, it repairs a breach in the wall. It leaves joy and gladness in its pathway; it is a sort of financial agent flying through mid-heaven preaching the everlasting gospel. It lives for all time and lives for God."

This fund lends money to churches that are weak, both numerically and financially, to be paid back on easy terms. By paying $5 any society can make their preacher's wife a member of the "Preachers' Wives Loan Fund." By paying $20 we may place the name of some sainted friend or loved one on "The Angel Band Fund."

Some one may question, How can one be a member who is dead? But are they dead? Are we not assured that they live evermore? They are valued members, whose influence shall be felt by all. Our loved ones, being thus associated with us in our work continually, will help us to realize that they are not dead, though unseen.

Our district has only one name on this roll, that of Bro. T. B. Hargrove, a preacher and a man that we all loved, and are glad to pay this tribute to his memory.

The P. and H. M. Society of the North Mississippi Conference has a scholarship in the Scarritt Training-School. This fund has been completed, and from now on our society can send any girl she may choose, free of charge, to learn home mission work.

In our district we have 130 members, and only 20 subscribers to Our Homes, the official organ of our society. We would urge every member to take this paper, for through it we are kept in touch with every department of our work.

This year we have been bereft of our editor, as well as the founder of this society—Miss Lucinda B. Helm. Our society has sustained a serious loss. In several of our churches memorial services have been held. Collections were taken that a Lucinda B. Helm Loan Fund might be established. Sonatobia leads in this, having contributed $10. Several societies have been organized and reorganized. We believe they will be earnest in their efforts and do good work.

Will not every auxiliary president try to keep banded together, study the annual reports, take the monthly paper, and keep abreast with the work? A few earnest words spoken by the president with regard to the work in general will frequently arouse interest and carry our thoughts out of their narrow spheres.

Like Napoleon, when he drew up his troops before the Mamelukes under the shadow of the great pyramids, pointing to the latter, he said to his soldiers, "Remember that from yonder heights forty centuries look down upon you." Let us remember, my sisters, that from the pyramid top of opportunity on which God has set us we look down on forty centuries. Miss Bennett says: "If everyone of the 800,000 women of Southern Methodism were an active member of this Home Mission Society, not only America, but the uttermost parts of the earth, would see a great light in darkness, and we might well look for the speedy coming of a new heaven and earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness. We pray God's blessings upon our work everywhere, and beg our women to remember the Master's injunction, 'Inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these, ye did it unto me.'"

"I may not do much with all my care,
But I surely may bless a few;
The loving Jesus will give to me
Some work of love to do;

I may wipe the tears from some weeping eye,
I may bring the smile again
To a face that is weary and worn with care,
To a heart that is full of pain.

I may speak His name to the sorrowful,
As I journey by their sides;
To the sinful and despairing ones
I may preach of the crucified.

I may drop some little gentle word
In the midst of some scene of strife;
I may comfort the sick and dying
With a thought of eternal life."

SYMPATHY FOR THE FALLEN.

The average man or woman does not care, at least as far as can be seen by outward appearances, to have it known that he or she really sympathizes with the fallen, the outcast. It does not seem quite the thing. Or, if one really does have this feeling strong in the heart, it does not seem quite proper to express it. It is still harder to put it in practice. How many of us would be willing to take the hands of those steeped in sin and welcome them to the foot of the cross, and urge them to go there and believe they would find help, comfort, strength, and salvation? Talk of principles! Theory is one thing, and constant practice another. Without question, many of us would be surprised at ourselves, at our feelings, if we should come in contact with the lower classes. We would not believe that there was such a difference between what we profess, what our theory has been, and what we are really ready to practice. Only by looking at the life of a loving Christ, and trying in every possible manner to walk in his footsteps, can we realize what we would do were he on earth; how his hand would go out quickly to the outcast, no matter how dirty—no matter how low and degraded the character. Nor should we find him doubting whether such a one could be saved or not. There are opportunities to see exactly where we stand on this question, and every Christian ought to be in the right position, where not only in theory, but in actual practice, he can work for the outcast with a loving, tender, sympathetic heart, glad to do it for Christ's sake, believing that for and in and through Christ all can find pardon, help, and safety.—Gospel News.

Be not anxious about to-morrow. Do to day's duty, fight to-day's temptation; and do not weaken and distract yourself by looking forward to things which you can not see, and could not understand if you saw them. Enough for you that the God for whom you fight is just and merciful; for he rewardeth every man according to his work.—Charles Kingsley.

We often distress ourselves greatly in the apprehension of misfortune which after all never happens at all. We should do our best and wait calmly the result. We often hear of people breaking down from overwork; but in nine cases out of ten they are really suffering from worry or anxiety.—Sir John Lubbock.

Every successful work means sacrifice somewhere. For success is purchased by love, and the cost of love is always sacrifice.

GRENADA COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

Grenada Collegiate Institute has just closed a very successful scholastic year. President Malone and his faithful assistants have reason to be gratified at the good results of their labors, and the patrons have in these good results the best evidences of the high order and thorough work of the school.

The commencement exercises embraced the last three days of May, and called out at each appointed hour large audiences of interested people.

On Sunday morning, at eleven o'clock, the Methodist Church was packed to hear the preacher selected for the occasion, the Rev. H. M. DuBose, D. D., the new editor of the Era and General Secretary of the Epworth League. The Doctor was happy in the selection and the treatment of his subject. With apt illustration and strong statement, he unfolded and enforced the need and potency of the Christ-life in the soul and in the world. Not less eloquent and effective was the Doctor in his address to the League on Sunday afternoon. The sermon at night, by another brother, was to an attentive and kindly disposed audience. On the whole, that was a good day, worthy of remembrance for its rich enjoyments and solid influence. It was a day that drew the school nearer to the heart of the church in the great throbbing life of organized spiritual Methodism. I may say the same thing of the other days of this occasion in their measure.

Monday was taken for rest and the meetings of the trustees. At night there was a delightful entertainment—not too long—well executed, by the Junior Department. The programme had this entertainment designated: "An Evening with the Little Folks." Evidently this was intended to be the popular event of the occasion, and did not fail of its purpose. "The Little Folks" drew a full house of all ages. The community turned out. Everything was in elegant taste and order. The training was complete, and reflected high credit on Mrs. Payne, who has so long had charge of this department, and Miss Coney, who is the accomplished vocalist of this faculty.

Tuesday was "Commencement Day," although everything done proclaimed the end of the session. There was no long list of essays by the graduating class. At ten A. M., after a piano solo excellently rendered by Miss Lillie Wyatt, and a vocal solo—"Alpine Valley"—executed with charming effect by Miss Donie Sykes, of Aberdeen, Dr. H. M. DuBose, in his own facile and eloquent style, delivered an admirable address to the graduating class. He made an earnest and impressive plea for the continuance of intellectual labor in the post-graduate life of woman. A pleased audience responded heartily to his sentiments. The service which Dr. DuBose rendered on this occasion by his preaching and addresses, to Christian education and a high conception of Christian life, will bear good fruit, and was an excellent initial to the great work he has to do for the young people of the church. This address was followed by a "violin duet" by Misses Neblett, rendered with marked skill and ease. President Malone then presented eight young ladies with their diplomas of graduation, conferring on two of them the degree of Master of Arts, and on six the degree of Mistress of English Literature. His parting words of reminiscence and advice were at once tender and wise, and revealed the strength of that parental feeling that springs up in the heart of the true teacher. The presentation to one of the young ladies of a neat gold medal, offered by Mrs. Malone to the best housekeeper, closed these delightful and gratifying exercises and the current session of this noble school.

A rich and tempting musical entertainment was provided and announced for that evening; but this writer could not remain to enjoy it. The three accomplished lady instructors in music—Mrs. Neblett on piano, Miss Neblett on violin, etc., and Miss Coney as vocalist—were a warranty for a programme of choice selections and trained renderings. President Malone has put strong emphasis on the musical department of this school, and given his patrons superior advantages in the high qualities of the instructors.

On the walls of the great hall were displayed many specimens of attractive work done by the art class, showing that competent attention is given to this refining and ennobling study.

While there was no special display of scholastic work, there were ample evidences of the high grade and thorough work of this school. The examinations are conducted in writing, and are open to inspection by all who care to see the true tests of thorough class work. I went through some of the papers of the Senior Class in mathematics, philosophy, etc., and can bear witness to the neat and orderly condition of the papers, and to the evident knowledge the students had of their subjects. Besides this, there is an air of refinement and culture in the appointments of the school and in the intercourse of the school family. The domestic and social life there, under the direct supervision of Mrs. Malone herself, aided by a number of accomplished lady teachers, with the guiding hand of the president, affords as much of home to these pupils as is reasonable to find away from the parental roof.

The attendance during the year was gratifying, notwithstanding the interference of the fear of yellow fever. Thorough organization, vigorous labor, and buoyant cheerfulness—or shall I say, trust in God—won a victory. Sixty-seven young ladies boarded in the school; seventy-six pupils came from Grenada. The true religious character and tone of that school is one of its marked features. Christian work and worship go together there. The true end of education is a constant lesson and practice. I must leave some things to be said at other times, and by those who can say them to better end. This school appeals to the North Mississippi Conference as our own enterprise, and to our patronage by the merit of its work.

DELHI DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The District Conference of the Delhi district, Louisiana Annual Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met in the Mer Rouge Church, Mer Rouge, La., Thursday, May 26, 1898, at 9:30 A. M.; Rev. B. F. White, P. E., in the chair. All the ministers comprising the district answered to their names except three, two of whom sent in written reports of their work. There was also a fair representation on the part of the laity.

The morning session was consumed in hearing pastoral reports, which show, in the main, marked improvement in spirituality as well as along the line of liberality and due attendance upon the ordinances of the church. The afternoon session was devoted to the assignment of the various committees, all of which in due course of time made exhaustive reports to the entire satisfaction and gratification of the Conference.

The Conference remained in session three days, during which time the various questions pertinent to the progress of church work were asked and elaborately as well as profitably discussed.

The following brethren were elected to attend the Annual Conference at Mansfield: Delegates—T. Whited, J. B. Riley, A. T. Helmick, Geo. D. Sanders. Alternates—D. T. Chapman, A. W. Riggs.

The next meeting of the District Conference will be held with the Rayville Church, Rayville, La.

A resolution duly setting forth the appreciation of the members of the Conference to the good people of Mer Rouge for the generous and sumptuous hospitality extended was introduced and ordered spread on the minutes.

The following resolution was also introduced and carried by unanimous rising vote:

That we, the members of Delhi district, Louisiana Annual Conference, in session at Mer Rouge assembled, desire to express, "feeble though it may," our heartfelt appreciation of the very valuable and faithful service rendered to this district by our venerable presiding elder, the Rev. B. F. White, who has so faithfully, earnestly and zealously served us in this capacity during the four years now drawing to a close, and we hereby covenant together, and in the presence of Him who doeth all things well, to pray God's blessing upon this father in the church, that he may yet be spared many years to mingle with us and encourage us in that beautiful Christian life of which he is so worthy an exemplar.

There being no other business, and the work of the Conference accomplished, the same adjourned to meet when called, as above stated.

GEO. D. SANDERS, Sec.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. H. Armstrong, P. C., Natchitoches, June 15, 1898: "I have just closed a good meeting at Ragan's Chapel. Rev. J. S. Sanders, of Many, did all the preaching, until called home by telegram to a sick wife. His preaching was highly satisfactory to all. Results: Nine clear, bright professions of conversion, about an equal number of sanctifications, and fourteen accessions. The available timber has about all been utilized here. Two years and a half ago there were only three members here, and now there are one hundred and six. I have taken in twenty-one this year."

Rev. R. W. Burton, P. C.: "We are moving on very well on Fuller circuit, Seashore district. Our congregations are improving, and the masses are becoming more interested in the preaching, and we have some very sweet services and some rejoicing among God's people. We are expecting a grand revival at each church, and are planning, preaching and praying for it, and we know that we will not be disappointed. Our collections are coming in very well. We have a good, big-hearted people, and are expecting everything in the way. Finance up in full. I am working for the ADVOCATE as I go along. God bless and prosper it. Pray for us."

Rev. J. S. Sanders, Many, La., June 14, 1898: "We have just returned from a meeting with Bro. H. Armstrong, held at Ragan's Chapel, six miles east of Natchitoches, La. We had good attendance, and the meeting grew in interest and power daily. Many of the services were real pentecostal; people shouting all over the house, and there are shouting Baptists there, too. It is hard to estimate the meeting. There were ten or fifteen conversions, five or six reclaimed, and eight or ten sanctified, and eleven accessions to the church. And Bro. Armstrong was to continue the meeting after I left, and others will probably join. This church is a live one. The most of the membership, I believe, are in the experience of entire sanctification, and the Spirit of the Lord abides with them. Bro. Armstrong is greatly beloved by his people there, and is doing a fine work. We were with Bro. J. B. Williams ten days at Pleasant Hill, and had a good meeting, but needed to have held on longer. The meeting was growing in interest, two or three were converted, and two or three restored to the experience of entire sanctification, and a number seeking; one accession to the church. Bro. Williams is greatly beloved by his people, and is doing a faithful work."

A Subscriber: "Please allow me to express the pleasure 'Children's Day' afforded us at Harrisonburg, La., June 5. What lovelier, grander sight have we on earth than lovely, happy children in the Sabbath-school, lifting their sweet voices in song and praise to the throne of God! The church was made beautiful with flowers and banners with mottoes—'God is Love;' 'Suffer little children to come unto Me;' 'Faith, Hope and Charity,' etc.—and more beautiful with fifty bright girls and boys, from four to sixteen years of age, in holiday attire; some bearing banners, all marching and singing, arranged themselves in order in front of the altar, and with beautiful songs and recitations made glad the large congregation. The services were opened and closed with prayer by Bro. McClendon. He has faithfully labored among us many years, and we know not in vain. He is deeply loved by the entire community. Children's Day collection, $8.50. The efforts of our loved superintendent, in his noble work, have been blessed. There is no grander work than carefully tending the beautiful buds of life, lent us from heaven.

"'Screen the flower unfolding
From the blight of sin;
Watch the rich fruit growing
Lest the worm creeps in.'"

WESLEY CHAPEL, NATCHEZ, MISS.

Since receiving my appointment to Wesley Chapel we have had many things to rejoice over and many that caused grief. Among the many things that caused joy is the result of a meeting held, beginning April 7, and continuing till May 15. Rev. E. E. Riggs, of Vidalia, did most of the preaching for two weeks, and his work was very effective. Rev. T. B. Holloman, of Jefferson Street Church, was with us several times during the meeting, but held services once. Rev. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, our presiding elder, came in and was with us four services. He held Quarterly Conference Saturday night; preached and administered the sacrament Sunday night. Rev. G. M. Hull, of Washington circuit, was with us during one service.

On Wednesday night, May 11, Rev. M. L. Burton, manager of Orphans' Home, Water Valley, Miss., made his appearance, and remained until Sunday, doing the preaching, which was with power.

To say the least of it, we had a good meeting. The Lord was with us with power to save. As many as fifty professed to have been brought into the light of God and saved from their sins. The church was greatly revived, and much good done every way. We had only a few accessions to the church, however, but expect several to become members soon. As proof of the good done, congregations are better at regular services, the Sunday-school has been numerically strengthened, the prayer meetings well attended, and seemingly a better feeling exists among the people generally. To God be all the praise for his blessings to us.

J. T. AUNEY, P. C.

P. S.—Bro. Burton's trip to Natchez was by no means a failure, so far as the interest of the Orphans' Home is concerned. While Natchez has a Protestants Orphans' Home to support—the Methodists assisting, of course—the collection from the Methodists of Natchez amounted to $100. Of this amount $70 was given by Jefferson Street Church, $30 by Wesley Chapel. The Lord bless Bro. Burton as he works in the interest of orphan children. The Lord bless the Home.

A desperate looking man, with two drawn revolvers, is not a pleasant person to meet at a lonely cross-road. Most men will go a long way out of their road to avoid such an encounter. The same men will recklessly neglect their health and court death in the guise of consumption or some other equally fatal disease. One-sixth of all the deaths each year are due to this most fatal of maladies.

Until very recent years, consumption was considered absolutely incurable. It is now known to be curable. During the past thirty years it has been demonstrated that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption, if taken in the earlier stages of the disease before the lungs are too much wasted, also bronchitis, asthma, laryngitis and all diseases of all the air-passages. It acts directly on the lungs, driving out all impurities and disease germs. It soothes the cough, facilitates expectoration, thus thoroughly clearing the lungs. It purifies and enriches the blood and tears down, carries off and excretes old, inert, half dead tissues, replacing them with the new, firm, muscular tissues of health. It is the great appetite sharpener, blood-maker, flesh-builder, nerve-tonic and restorative. Thousands who had been given up to die have been restored to complete, robust health by this marvelous medicine. Do not buy from unscrupulous dealers who try to force upon you something beside what you ask for. There is nothing to take the place of it, or, which is "just as good" as "Golden Medical Discovery."

"I had the grip, which left me feeling miserable—no strength and a cough," writes Mrs. C. Maynard, of East Lyme, New London Co., Conn. "As some of my family died with consumption, I was frightened. I began taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. After taking the second bottle I felt much better, and am now well."

Best Edition of the World's Best Book,
—THE—
"COMBINATION" BIBLE.
A SUPERB EDITION
of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers. New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full:

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$5.00. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to June, '99. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Send for circular. Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

SELF-PRONOUNCING
S. S. Teachers' Reference Bible.
Text Conforms Exactly to the Oxford Teachers' Edition.

The self-pronouncing text enables the reader to pronounce all proper names at a glance.

This Bible is printed from Large, Beautiful and Clear New Type. All Proper Names are Divided into Syllables and Every Vowel is Marked and the Syllables Inflected, showing the Sounds and Accents as they are given in a Dictionary, thus enabling the reader to properly pronounce every word. This feature is a great improvement and a strong recommendation for this Bible over others.

This Bible contains the celebrated Oxford Teachers' Helps together with a complete series of New Maps illustrating the geography of Palestine and the surrounding countries from the earliest times, and embodying the most recent discoveries renders this Bible especially desirable to teachers and students of the Holy Scriptures.

Imperial Seal Binding, Tuck Edges, known as "Divinity Circuit," Linen Lined, Round Corners, Red under Gold Edges, Price, $4.00.

This book in Bourgeois type will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price ($4) to any address; but to that select class who read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, we furnish it on the following terms: Pay your subscription one full year in advance, viz., to June, '99, and we will send it to you, postpaid, for $4.75. (A little later you will have to pay to July, '99.) We will also send this book as a premium for two new subscribers at the regular rate—$2 per annum. We will also send this Bible with index for 50 cents additional.

For fifty cents additional we will send Bible with index. For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved on the outside in gilt letters.

P. S.—We are still handling the Minion type and the Emerald type Bible; but will not continue to do so long. Those who wish to order should do so at once.

A miser is like a hog—of no use till he is dead

God means us to be useful, no matter where he puts us.—Selected.

Faith, patience, resignation, prayerfulness—all may and should be cultivated.

Make those about you happy to-day; to-morrow your opportunity may be gone.

If your hands are left empty, it is only that they may seek and hold better gifts.—R. W. Emerson.

The greatest battles are fought within the domain of the human heart. Our most inveterate foes are within.

Some persons have friends wherever they go for the reason that they are always thoughtful of the pleasure and interest of others.

The true calling of a Christian is not to do extraordinary things, but to do ordinary things in an extraordinary way. The most trivial tasks can be accomplished in a noble, gentle, regal spirit, which overrides and puts aside all petty, paltry feelings, and which elevates all little things.—Dean Stanley.

Do not complain that your sphere is narrow and circumscribed. If your opportunities for doing good are few, it is because you do not improve those you now possess. You touch one life surely. Has it been lifted and exalted by yours? Has your influence made it better and truer and holier?—Rev. Paul M. Strayer.

If there is anything on earth that will mildew a man and make him good for nothing, it is the habit of moping. If he can not work, or thinks he can't, let him go out and take a walk and start his circulation. It is surprising what a little fresh air and exercise will do for a man. Keep moving. The first thing you know, you will find yourself whistling or humming a tune; then you will laugh to yourself and go back to work, refreshed and vigorated. The fresh air, exercise and sunshine have taken the stupidity out of you.—Success.

What is your forte, your "specialty," your "best hold," as men phrase it? Be sure of one thing at the outset: the great Artificer, in putting together your individual nature, did not forget this crowning gift any more than he forgets to add its own peculiar odor to the arbutus, or its own song to the lark. It may not lie upon the surface, this choicest of your treasures—diamonds seldom do. Miners lift a great deal of mere dust before the sparkling jewel they are seeking gladdens the eye. Genius has been often and variously defined. I would call it an intuition of one's own best gift. . . . Sometimes we come upon our heritage unwittingly, as Diana found Endymion, but always it is there, be sure of that, and "let no man take thy crown" As iron filings fall into line around a magnet, so make your opportunities cluster about your magic gift.—Frances E. Willard.

THAT WAR CLAIM.

Concerning the ugly charges made against our Book Agents in connection with the recent congressional appropriation of $288,000 for damages done to our Publishing House during the war, we have hitherto said nothing, for the reason that we knew the Book Committee would soon meet and consider the matter, and we thought it wise to await their action. Now, that the committee has met and done exactly what we had good reason to believe they would do, we will state a few facts in regard to the matter. Some time since the Book Agents, with the concurrence of the Book Committee, placed this claim in the hands of Mr. Stallman, an able attorney of Nashville, making with him a contract whereby he was to receive, as a compensation for his services, a commission of thirty-five per cent. of the amount collected, he bearing all expenses and running all risks. When the money was collected, the amount due him per contract was promptly paid. The Book Agents and the Book Committee stated the facts in the case in their quadrennial report to the General Conference, which was published in pamphlet form, and a copy of it given to every member of the General Conference.

This transaction was entirely legitimate. However it may be accounted for, it is a well known fact that claims of this character rarely get through Congress, except through the instrumentality of some agent who devotes to them much time and labor. It is said that the commission usually paid in such cases is fifty per cent. Individuals who have claims of this sort are glad to get one-half of what is justly due them by "the best government the world ever saw." The Publishing House has had this claim in the hands of several agents before Mr. Stallman, and has paid out thousands of dollars for their services, all to no purpose. Our Book Agents, therefore, did a wise thing when they engaged the services of Mr. Stallman. The church is about $187,000 better off than it would have been, and it is money which has been justly due a long while. While the commission paid is a large one, we believe this to be a case in which it is a great deal better to get a half-loaf than no loaf at all.

In our judgment the amount of compensation paid to the attorney who pushed this claim to a successful termination is a matter about which congressmen need not concern themselves. The claim was a just one, or it was not. If it was not just, it was the sworn duty of every congressman to vote against it, even though every dollar of the money was going into the coffers of the church. If the claim was a just one, then it was the duty of every congressman to vote for it, leaving the matter of agent's commissions to be settled by the church. If the Book Agents had thrown the whole amount into the ocean, or had absconded with it in their pockets, that would have been a matter for the church to look into—not Congress. This is the course which Congress has been pursuing for many years. Claims of this sort have been allowed at every session of Congress since the war without any inquiry as to what use was to be made of the money after it should be paid. If this is done with individual claims, why should a different course be pursued in regard to a legitimate church claim?

So far there is no just ground for criticism of the Book Agents. Their action was taken with the full and hearty consent of the Book Committee, and it is exactly such action as would have been taken by any sensible business man.

Since the claim was paid, however, certain United States senators have stated on the floor of the Senate that if they had known that so large a commission was to go to Mr. Stallman, they would have voted against the appropriation, and that they were misled by letters and telegrams received from Barbee & Smith; wherefore they favored an investigation of the matter. Thereupon Barbee & Smith sent a telegram to Washington asking for the appointment of an Investigating Committee. The Book Committee, at its meeting on Tuesday, the fourteenth, after careful investigation, gave to the press the following official statement:

On June 14 the Book Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met for the first time since its appointment by the General Conference. The Book Agents, Messrs. Barbee & Smith, presented a formal request for a thorough and complete investigation of the whole matter of their relation to the prosecution of the claim recently paid by the United States government in the use, occupancy and damage of our Publishing House. In accordance with this request the Book Committee instituted a careful and minute inquiry. All the facts and documents bearing on the case were before them, and were duly and fully considered. The Book Committee is unanimously of the opinion that the Book Agents have not intended to deceive or mislead any of the senators of the United States. But since the Senate has ordered an investigation of all the circumstances connected with this transaction, the Book Committee do not deem it wise to make any detailed statement to the public till that investigation shall have been concluded. A Committee of Five of their number has been appointed to appear before the Senate Committee for the purpose of presenting the facts as far as the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is concerned, and the Vice-President of the United States has been informed by telegraph of this action, and has been requested to arrange for a hearing at the earliest possible day. The Book Committee asks the church to await the result of these proceedings, and promises that as early as possible thereafter they will submit a full and explicit account of the relation of the Book Agents to this whole affair.

COLLINS DENNY, Chairman.
J. D. HAMILTON, Secretary.

All fair-minded persons will suspend judgment as to the matter involved until the Book Committee makes its promised "full and explicit" report. The personelle of this committee is such as to justify the amplest confidence in any statement it makes. We have no men among us more trustworthy than those who compose our Book Committee.

PROHIBITION IN NORTH DAKOTA.

Though one of the youngest States of our great Republic, North Dakota ranks among the foremost in the matter of temperance reform. It will be remembered that when she entered upon statehood in 1889, a clause was incorporated in her Constitution providing for the enactment of a prohibitory law. This law was placed upon the statute books by the first Legislature, and went into effect in July, 1890. It has been well enforced in most sections of the State, and has borne substantial fruit in the way of temperance, morality and prosperity.

When the law became operative, it is stated that there were in the State 390 open saloons, the population at that time being about 175,000. Only two years later the Brewers' Journal, in giving a summary of the liquor business of the United States for 1891, stated that while the consumption of liquor in the country, as a whole, had increased considerably, in North Dakota there had been a decrease of over 70 per cent. Evidence like this gives the lie to the oft-repeated claim that prohibition has but little effect in checking the drink evil.

It is reliably estimated that since prohibition has been in force in North Dakota, there has been saved to the people of the State not less than $23,000,000.00, which would otherwise have been worse than wasted in the purchase of intoxicating liquors.

In the eastern portion of the State, where the foreign population is composed largely of Canadians and Scandinavians, the prohibitory law is admirably enforced, and there is the greatest enthusiasm over its benefits. The law is least respected where there is a large per cent. of Russian and other foreign elements among the population.

Taking the State as a whole, those who are in a position to know say that the laws against the sale of liquor are as thoroughly enforced as any other laws on the statute books, and that prohibition in that commonwealth is a grand success. Again and again the whiskyites did their utmost to induce the Logislature to resubmit the question to the people, but each time they have met with signal defeat, nor is there the slightest prospect of their being able to make much headway in this direction. The fact is unquestioned that after being on trial for about eight years, prohibition was never so popular in North Dakota as it is to-day. In the two leading cities, Fargo and Grand Forks, the law has been well enforced, it is said, from the very beginning. A majority of the strongest papers in the State are on the side of prohibition, and give it their constant and cordial support.

A correspondent of the New York Christian Advocate, as a result of personal observation and investigation, thus certifies to the influence of prohibition in North Dakota: "The towns which I have visited on the west side of the Red river are outstripping in all kinds of substantial growth the neighboring towns on the east side of the river in Minnesota, where license prevails. I have examined the official and other statements concerning some of these rival towns on the opposite banks of the river, and in every case the development under prohibition in the Dakota towns has been greater than their own former development under the open saloon, and greater than the corresponding development since prohibition, when compared during the same period with the towns on the opposite side of the river."

SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY COMMENCEMENT.

On Tuesday, the fourteenth, we had the pleasure of attending the commencement exercises of Southern University, Greensboro, Ala. A large audience assembled in spite of the rain. The alumni address was delivered by Rev. J. H. McCoy, of the North Alabama Conference, an alumnus of the class of '89. The subject was, "A Man's a Man for a' That." It was one of the very best commencement addresses we have ever heard. Both from the standpoint of rhetoric and oratory it was a veritable masterpiece. Moreover, the subject-matter was exceedingly appropriate. It was most excellent pabulum for young manhood to feed upon. The principles enunciated, if acted upon, will certainly result in true nobility of character.

The next item on the programme was a talk from the editor of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, after which the president, Dr. J. O. Keener, addressed the Alumni Association in a very practical way in behalf of the institution.

Under the efficient presidency of Dr. Keener, Southern University is enjoying great prosperity. It has a well-equipped faculty. The enrollment for the session is 176. The spirit of the student-body is admirable. Most excellent work has been done during the session. Repairs and improvements to the amount of about $2,500 have recently been put upon the building, and still other improvements will be made during the Summer. Greensboro is an admirable site for a college. It is a refined, cultivated community, and its moral tone is excellent. It is also a beautiful place. Its stately residences, with their ample grounds and beautiful groves—we might almost say forests—are indeed lovely.

In accordance with time-honored custom, quite a number of preachers from both the Alabama Conferences were in attendance.

Much to our regret, we were compelled to leave Tuesday afternoon. We are sure we should very much have enjoyed the exercises of Commencement Day, as well as those of Tuesday night; but having already been absent nearly a week, duty called us home.

During our stay in Greensboro we were domiciled in the delightful home of Dr. and Sister Keener, to whom we are under lasting obligations for their cordial hospitalities and kind attentions.

An object of interest in Greensboro just now is the residence of Judge Hobson, the father of the young marine who woke up a few mornings since to find that his fame had spread throughout the civilized world. It is a stately two-story mansion of the ante-bellum type, with a large, well-shaded yard. Its appearance would be improved by a new coat of paint. Richmond P. Hobson was a pupil of Southern University, and it goes without saying that the faculty and students of the institution are much gratified on account of the fame which he has achieved.

A FUTILE ATTEMPT AT BRIBERY.

A short time since the Spanish general, Blanco, through an intermediary, attempted to bribe the Cuban patriot, Gomez, to turn traitor to his country. Gomez replied in writing as follows:

I have received your strange intimation of the desire to meet me for the purpose of formally notifying me of the following offer: "That you are ready to place a steamer at my disposal, at any coast I should deem best, to transport me to any port outside of Cuba, to which I may desire to go, and at the same time you offer me all the monetary resources I may ask for the expenses of my trip, and the maintenance of myself and family in a foreign land."

I have felt so much astonnded when I learned of this, I felt so ashamed—more for you, General Blanco, than for myself—that in the first moments I was bonnmbed, knowing not whether such heinous proposals could be a reality or nightmare.

Have I reached my present age, fighting, as I have done, for thirteen years for the independence of Cuba, only that you should believe at the end of my journey I would cover myself with ignominy by accepting the base reward of money from a Spanish captain-general for the cowardly abandonment of my army? Are you sane, General Blanco? Do you remember that blow of the machete which the hand of a Spanish assassin inflicted at Punta Brava, near the spot where Maceo died, upon that soul of my soul, young and brave Francesco Gomez? Do you think I can forgive that? Have you ever been a father?

I am not in a position, General Blanco, which requires that I should be looking for a steamer to take me from the island. You would better look for the steamer yourself, for of the two you need it more. Up to the present day I am on the winner's side. I represent a revolution stronger than ever, after three years of war.

NEW BOOKS.

YETTA SEGAL. By Horace J. Rollin, author of "Studio, Field, and Gallery." New York: G. W. Dillingham Co., publishers. 1898.

The above-named work of fiction lies upon our table by courtesy of F. F. Hansell & Bro., of this city. Yetta Segal, the heroine of the story, a cultured and attractive young woman, having fallen in love with a young man, afterwards learns that he is not a pure Caucasian, but has negro blood in his veins. Nevertheless, she marries him. The purpose of the book seems to be the advocacy of miscegenation. Those of our readers who desire literature of this sort can get the work from F. F. Hansell & Bro., 126 Canal street, New Orleans. As for ourselves, if we could have seen the end from the beginning, we would have found more profitable employment for the time devoted to its perusal.

THE LAW OF SANCTIFICATION. By W. M. Leftwich, D. D., Nashville, Tenn. Paper. 64 pages. 10 cents. Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn.

This is a very clear, timely, and helpful treatise on the principles which must regulate the Christian life, in order that it may be a truly sanctified life. In the onset the author asks the question, "Is spiritual life a lawless life?" and then proceeds to show by the Scriptures that it is not. He makes it plain that scriptural sanctification signifies constant self abnegation and unreserved consecration; holiness in life and heart as well as holiness in profession. The fact is brought out that, in its best sense, sanctification is not merely an experience, but a life set apart and fully devoted to God. The chief concern of the gospel, the author points out, is not how we feel, but how we live. "Experience," he says with truth, "is not the measure of sanctification, but sanctification is the measure of experience."

This pamphlet discusses a phase of sanctification that has hitherto received little attention, and is eminently worthy of a wide circulation. Whatever be the differences of opinion among believers in sanctification, all, we think, will agree with the author that self-renunciation is the fundamental and ever-operative law of the spiritual life. Truths of transcendent importance are forcefully and fairly presented. We commend it to our people as worthy of their careful attention.

NOTES.

Our new church at Gloster, Miss., has been supplied with new and handsome pews.

E. B. Craighead, president of Central College, Mo., has received the degree of LL.D. from the University of Missouri.

We invite special attention to the communication of Bro. D. F. Turner. The cause he represents is a most worthy one, and his appeal should meet a hearty response from the Methodists of Louisiana.

Wofford College, S. C., has thrown its doors open to women, giving them equal facilities in every respect with male students.

Rev. C. E. Dowman, of the South Georgia Conference, has been elected president of Emory College in place of Dr. W. A. Candler, recently elected Bishop.

Rev. J. B. Kent, of the Louisiana Conference, was a welcome caller at the ADVOCATE office on Tuesday last. We are sorry to learn that Sister Kent is not in good health.

The commencement sermon of East Mississippi Female College will be preached, June 26, by Dr. W. B. Murrah. The Y. M. C. A. sermon will be preached at night by Dr. C. G. Andrews.

Rev. S. N. Barker has accepted the presidency of Sullins College, Bristol, Va. The presidency of Martin College, Pulaski, Tenn., thus made vacant, has been filled by the election of B. W. Dobson.

Our church at Knoxville, Miss., built during the present year by the untiring energy of the pastor, Rev. R. A. Breland, will be dedicated on Sunday, July 3, by the editor of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

Dr. W. B. Murrah having resigned the educational secretaryship, the vacancy has been filled by the election of Dr. J. D. Hammond, president of Wesleyan Female College, Macon, Ga. Who will succeed Hammond?

Dr. H. M. DuBose makes his bow to the Leaguers in last week's issue of the Era. He has made a good beginning, and will, we are sure, make the Era better and better as the time rolls on. He possesses the amplest equipments for the position to which the church has called him.

Miss Lizzie May Sligh, daughter of Prof. and Mrs. T. S. Sligh, of Mansfield College, will be married Wednesday, June 22, to Dr. James Graham Calhoun, of St. Louis, Mo. We extend our heartiest congratulations. May their fondest hopes of matrimonial felicity be more than realized!

From a private letter from Rev. J. W. Honnoll we quote as follows: "The district is in good condition. We are improving on all lines. Our collections are in advance of what they usually are at this time of the year. The preachers are doing faithful work, and are expecting a good year."

By an oversight we failed to state in last week's issue that Dr. Murrah complied with the request of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College to withdraw his resignation as president. He has resigned the secretaryship of education, and will remain at the head of the institution over which he has presided so successfully for the last six years.

Nothing we have ever written has called forth so many expressions of hearty appreciation as our notes anent Washington, Arlington and Mount Vernon. We would give them more of the same sort; but it takes money to travel, and in this part of the world publishers of religious newspapers have never fallen into the fashion of becoming millionaires.

We are deeply pained to learn of the death of Mrs. Ada Wynne, of Macon, Ga., which occurred a short time since. She was one of the purest and noblest of earth. Deeply do we sympathize with the grief stricken mother and husband in their irreparable loss. But they sorrow not as those who have no hope. They have a well-grounded hope of a blissful reunion beyond the grave.

We clip the following from the Memphis Commercial, of recent date: "A new Methodist Church costing $5,500 is nearing completion at Clarksdale, Miss. The church is a handsome frame building about 50 by 70 feet, and spire 70 feet tall, and has a seating capacity for 275 people. Rev. J. T. Murrah, the pastor, is deserving of much credit for pushing to completion an enterprise that has been under way for seven or eight years. Undaunted by overflows, quarantine or hard times, which in former years have delayed the letting of the contract, Mr. Murrah made up his mind the church must be built, and the result is the congregation will occupy it early next month."

NATIONAL EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION.

Dallas News—

The National Educational Association meeting this year in the national capital, July 6 to 12, will be the greatest gathering of the nation's greatest educators since the inauguration of the same in 1864, with that veteran teacher, Zalmon Richardson, as president.

I write to try to bring before the teachers of Texas in this part of the State the many advantages offered by this association to them, and, if possible, to induce some of them to avail themselves of this, an opportunity of a life-time. There are to the close student, the enquiring teacher, presented fifteen distinct departments, viz.: School superintendence, Normal Schools, Elementary Schools, higher instruction, industrial education, art education, kindergarten instruction, music education, secondary education, business education, child study, physical education, natural science instruction, school administration. All these departments rest upon the Council of Education.

These departments have their separate halls for meetings; hence each teacher or visitor can select that study or subject upon which he wishes enlightenment—instruction—and apply his time to it.

Aside from and in addition to all these advantages for gaining literary or book knowledge, Washington City is a great study of itself. Whether we turn our attention to its natural features, its streets, its parks and its water fronts, or to the one thousand and one collections of art, its galleries, its universities, its theatres, its hotels, and its numerous costly public buildings, Washington City, to the student, the sight-seer, or the pleasure-seeker, is the most wonderful city of our wonderful western world.

The hotels have made reasonable rates, and there are more than twenty hotels, all good enough for anybody. The railroads have extended favorable rates—one fare plus $2 for the round trip, with the usual lay-over privileges. Once in Washington City, and you are in a short ride of the great Atlantic cities, the mountain and seaboard resorts.

These reduced rates are not restricted to teachers, but are open to all persons; hence it will be a good opportunity for many going east, whether on pleasure or business, to avail themselves of these liberal rates. It is suggested that those intending to attend this meeting should at once set about making their preparations, and not to wait till after the State Teachers' Association meeting in Galveston, June 27, 28, and 29. An act worthy of imitation was performed by the Tarrant County Teachers' Association. They sent at their own expense two of their number as delegates to the department superintendents' meeting at Chattanooga, Feb. 22, 23, and 24. This liberal action is commended to other teachers, not only of our counties, but of our cities. ALEX HOGG.

NOTICE.

MR. EDITOR: Please announce through the ADVOCATE that I am in a position to devote two or three Sundays and weeks each month to revival work, and to the interest of the Indian Mission. All invitations from my brethren will be duly considered, and, if practicable, will be accepted by me. I am now engaged for the second and third Sundays in July, first and second Sundays in August, second Sunday in September. All other weeks are open.

INDIAN MISSION.

MR. EDITOR: I have let the people rest a long time with regard to the Indian Mission. I do not want them to think, however, that we do not need money. We need it very, very much. We have only received a small amount this year. Some promised at Conference, and have not sent it.

Brethren and sisters, please help now. Send to Hermanville, Miss., as before. A. D. MILLER.

EPWORTH LEAGUERS.

We are endeavoring to establish a Reading Room in Centenary College for the benefit of our young men. We need your assistance. It is unnecessary for me to explain how important it is that our young men should come in touch with the leading writers and thinkers of the world, but sufficient to say that if they are educated in the highest sense of the word, such must be the case. We wish to place within reach of the student of Centenary College the leading magazines and periodicals of the world. To do this, we need money. There is where we need your assistance. We want $200. What League will be the first to send us a contribution, or what person will be the first to send us a subscription? Any amount will be gratefully received.

Yours fraternally,

D. F. TURNER.

NOTICE.

The Corinth District Conference will convene in Kossuth, Thursday, June 30, at 9 o'clock A. M. All who expect to come by rail will please meet at the Methodist Church at Corinth, Wednesday, June 29, at 2 P. M. We kindly invite you, Mr. Editor, to be with us. Sermon, Wednesday night, by Rev. D. C. Fonst, of Guntown.

M. H. HONNOLL, P. C.

NOTICE.

To the Preachers of the Opelousas District, Louisiana Conference—

DEAR BRETHREN: Those of you intending to bring your wives to the District Conference, to convene on July 5 at Lafayette, La., please inform me of same at once. Those coming by train, or otherwise, will please report at the church on arrival.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Booneville, Miss., EDITOR.

A letter received from Bro. Robert H. Wynn, of New Orleans, is much appreciated. He is the first Louisiana Leaguer to encourage the editor and contribute to the column.

The Louisiana Leagues are hereby urged to make some pledge to the special missionary work undertaken at the last Conference at Alexandria. Send notice of pledge and also forward cash to Rev. P. O. Lowrey, treasurer, Farmerville, La.

A picture of Bishop Warren Aiken Candler adorns the first page of the Epworth Era, of June 9. He is the youngest member of the College of Bishops, and is the newly elected chairman of the Epworth League Board.

We are sorry that in giving the list (in the Epworth Era, of June 9) of delegates to the General Conference (among the younger clergy) who were specially interested in the League, the writer of the notes omitted the name of Rev. Thomas Wiley Lewis, of Grenada. He was a member of the North Mississippi delegation, and is one of the livest Leaguers in the connection.

The Memphis District Conference, recently presided over by Bishop Morrison, gave one day and night to the work of the Epworth League. The particular phases of the work discussed by pastors and laymen present will doubtless prove a lasting benefit to all who participated, and will result in more efficient work among the young men and women in the bounds of the district.

Dr. W. C. Johnson, the venerable presiding elder, expressed it as his opinion that the League was the most important branch of the church, and thought that the failure of success was due largely to lack of knowledge concerning its workings.

We acknowledge receipt of a copy of the Midland Methodist—the organ of the Holston and Tennessee Annual Conferences. Rev. J. W. Perry is the League editor, and we observe that over five columns are filled with Epworth League matter.

Many of the students in Wesley Hall, Vanderbilt University, are during vacation assisting the Missionary Secretaries in disseminating literature and otherwise increasing missionary enthusiasm among the Leaguers of the Southern States.

The Epworth League stands for the support of all the institutions of the church. In this connection we ask the Leaguers and young people generally in Mississippi and Louisiana to rally to the support of our own institutions of learning.

State institutions are well equipped and are doubtless good places to attend, but as for us, we are bound to stand by the schools and colleges which belong to our own church. Herein we propose to prepare for the future by the present training of our boys and girls that they may go out "rooted and grounded" as workmen that need not to be ashamed.

The Leaguers can do a good work for Methodism during the vacation by securing boys and girls for our own schools and colleges. Talk up our own schools, work for them, pray for them, and thus help build up a strong type of manhood and womanhood.

Old Centenary, at Jackson, La., ought to resound next Fall with the echo of the voices of over 200 boys from all parts of Louisiana. Millsaps, the pride of Mississippi Methodists, ought to be filled to overflowing. And then the girls in scores ought to flock to Grenada and Whitworth, East Mississippi and Port Gibson and Mansfield, and literally crowd the halls and dormitories of these excellent institutions.

The Epworth League stands for the training and proper direction of young life in the church. The above-named institutions stand for precisely the same things. Let the Leaguers everywhere stand by our own church schools. Have a college day, hold special services, invite the president or agent of one of our colleges to visit and address you. They will gladly come.

"But ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you." Let us not forget these words of the risen Lord. All our machinery and plans will avail nothing unless we have power from heaven to stimulate and inspire us.

Bishop Hendrix once said in our hearing that the young people in our church represented a mighty Niagara unharnessed. Let us call the roll and organize them for God and for home and for every land.

Why is it that the Leagues do not heed our call for reports, items of interest, notes of progress, etc.? Echo answers, Why! Which League will be the first to respond?

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD.

OF INTEREST TO STOCKHOLDERS.

FREE TRANSPORTATION TO ATTEND THE ANNUAL MEETING AT CHICAGO. SOME INTERESTING FACTS.

In order that stockholders of the Illinois Central Railroad Company may more readily attend in person the annual meetings, there has been posted in each station of the Company a notice to the effect that, in accordance with a resolve of the Board of Directors, there may be issued to each holder of one or more shares of the capital stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, as registered on the books of the Company, a ticket enabling him or her to travel free over the Company's lines from the station of the Illinois Central Railroad nearest to his or her registered address, to Chicago and return, for the purpose of attending, in person, the next Annual Stockholders' Meeting of the Company, which will be held at its General Office in Chicago on Wednesday, September 28, 1898, at noon. Details as to the necessary procedure to obtain such ticket, the date of its issue and its limit, are fully set forth on the posted notices referred to. In this connection, it will be interesting to note that since, in 1852, the capital stock of the Company became full paid, a cash dividend, ranging from 4 per cent. to 10 per cent. per annum has been paid semi-annually to every holder of stock, and that it is now twenty years since the Company, in any year, paid less than 5 per cent., the present rate of distribution.

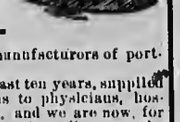
Niagara Vapor.. Baths..



We are the original manufacturers of portable Vapor Baths.
We have, during the last ten years, supplied thousands of our Baths to physicians, hospitals, sanitariums, etc., and we are now, for the first time, advertising them direct to the general public.
IN BUYING A VAPOR BATH
Get one with a steel frame that stands on the floor. If a manufacturer does not show you a cut of the frame without the covering, you may take it for granted that his "Steel Frame" is a wire loop that rests on the shoulders of the bather.
Get one that is covered with proper material. Insist on seeing a sample of material before ordering. We make our own covering material and print it with a handsome "all over" pattern of Niagara Falls.
Get one with a thermometer attachment. Don't go it blind—a bath that is too hot or not hot enough will be of no benefit to you.
Get one that you can return and have your money back if not satisfactory in every way.
Send for sample of material and interesting booklet that will tell you all about Vapor Baths.
Vapor Baths are an acknowledged household necessity. Turkish, Hot Air, Vapor, Sulphur or Medicated Baths at Home Etc. Purifies system, produces cleanliness, health, strength. Prevents disease, obesity. Cures Colds, Rheumatism; Neuralgia, La Grippe, Malaria, Eczema, Catarrh, Female Ills, Blood, Skin, Nerve and Kidney Troubles. Beautifies Complexion.

THE RECONCILIATION.

As through the land at eve we went,
And plucked the ripened ears,
We fell out, my wife and I—
Oh, we fell out, I know not why,
And kissed again with tears.

For when we came where lies the child
We lost in other years,
There above the little grave,
Oh, there above the little grave,
We kissed again with tears.

THE ART OF LIVING TOGETHER.

The peace and happiness of the home depend almost wholly on how well its members master the art of living together. It is an art considerably complex and decidedly difficult; so that when one contemplates all that goes to make it up, he ceases to wonder at the comparatively few homes where complete harmony can be said to reign. It implies the giving up of one's own will at a thousand little points, and this is harder than to give up in two or three great matters very rarely occurring. It means the surrender of individual rights in the interest of the domestic community; and, as in the case of all such personal sacrifices for general good, it requires no common intelligence to perceive clearly at all times their importance and necessity. It includes the long and by no means simple process or processes by which dissimilar temperaments, trained in somewhat dissimilar surroundings, are gradually assimilated.

How, in any special case, two or more persons can live pleasantly together, is a matter for careful study as well as constant practice, and hence may well be called an art. It may fitly be classed both among the fine arts and the useful arts, for nothing can be more useful; and yet the exercise of much taste and imagination is demanded. To put one's self in the place of another and see how things look from his point of view, certainly requires imagination; and to live with people happily, this must often be done. We must not insist that there is only one way of doing things; we must avoid unnecessary criticism of others' methods, and we must freely allow large liberty in all personal details of management.

How foolish to have some stock subject of disputation, about which there is always friction and irritation, amounting, perhaps, in the course of years, to positive alienation. Equally unwise is it to forget that it is the little pebbles that hurt the feet, and that a sufficiently sharp tack, however small, may make a shoe quite unendurable. It is not well to expect too much of others, being mindful of the fact that we ourselves make large demands upon their patience or toleration.

There is always danger that familiarity will swallow up courtesy; that the sweet attentions so common before marriage will cease after marriage. We need constant reminders to keep watch for little opportunities to praise, to show sympathy, to rejoice with the glad and weep with the sorrowful.

It is in this way, by giving heed to matters of this sort, that peace will be promoted and love diffused in family life. Very beautiful is it when two people, after some trifling experimental knocks and jars, have settled down in mutual adaptation and adjustment, having thoroughly learned the art of living together in close accord.

"Two birds within one nest;
Two hearts within one breast;
Two souls within one fair
Firm league of love and prayer
Together bound for aye, together blest.

"An ear that waits to catch
A hand upon the latch;
A step that hastens its sweet rest to win;
A world of care without,
A world of strife shut out,
A world of love shut in."

—Zion's Herald.

"WHO HAS SEEN CHRIST IN YOU TO-DAY?"

"The parson asked a strange question this evening," said John Sewell to his wife, Ann, on his return from church on Sunday.

CAUSE FOR ALARM.

How baldness begins.

How to prevent it.

Every person, male or female, shrinks from baldness. It adds to the appearance of age and is a serious discomfort. The cases are rare when the falling out of the hair may not be stopped, and a new and healthy growth of the hair promoted. The hair grows in the scalp like a plant in the soil. If a plant flourishes, it must have constant attention; it must be watered regularly and find its food in the soil where it is rooted. It's so with the hair. Neglect is usually the beginning of baldness. Dandruff is allowed to thicken on the scalp. The hair begins to loosen. The scalp loses its vitality. The hair, insufficiently nourished, begins to fade and to fall. The instant need in such a case is some practical preparation which, supplying the needed nourishment to the scalp, will feed the hair, give it strength, and so produce a strong and healthy growth. All this is done by Dr. Ayer's Hair Vigor, the most practical and valuable preparation for the hair that can be obtained. It tones up the scalp, does away with dandruff, stops the hair from falling, restores the original color to gray or faded hair, and gives an abundant and glossy growth. Those who are threatened with approaching baldness will be interested in the following voluntary statement, made by Alderman S. J. Green, of Spencer, Iowa. He writes:

"About four months ago, my hair commenced falling out so rapidly that I became alarmed, and being recommended Dr. Ayer's Hair Vigor by a druggist, I resolved to try this preparation. I have been now using it for three months, and am much gratified to find that my hair has ceased falling out and also that hair which had been turning gray for the past five years has been restored to its original color, dark brown. It gives me much pleasure to recommend this dressing."—S. J. GREEN, Alderman, Spencer, Iowa.

Those who are interested in preserving and beautifying the hair will do well to send for Dr. Ayer's Curebook, "A story of cures told by the cured. This book of 100 pages is sent free, on request, by the J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

"What was it, John?"

"Who has seen Christ in you to-day? I wish you had been there to hear him, Ann; he made it pretty plain that all who love Christ ought to show by their conduct that they are in earnest."

"That's true, John. I know that I often fall short of what a Christian should be."

"I'm sure that you and the children have not seen Christ to-day. If I'd remember to be like my Master, I should not have been so cross with you because you wanted to take your turn this morning."

"And I shouldn't have snapped you up and been so vexed," interrupted Ann.

"Then I used Tom roughly, because he worried me, and when he cried I boxed his ears, when a kind word would have made him all right. There are plenty of things I should have done, even to-day, if I had acted up to the parson's question."

"We'll try to begin afresh, John. You're quick, and I get vexed. We've both a deal to learn. We must just pray that the children and our friends may see Christ in us."

Monday morning came. John was up early, and before he went to work he asked that Christ might be seen in him that day. Ann did not forget that she, too, wished that Christ might be seen in her; and at breakfast time the children were told how Christ might be seen in them, and they were cautioned to be kind and loving toward one another and toward their companions.—Ex.

OUTSIDE YOUR BUSINESS.

Your business is an education, in a certain way; but unless you read, study, travel, and observe, outside of the store, and utilize every means of broadening and improving yourself, you will become narrow and superficial. You may be a master in your vocation; but outside you will constantly be embarrassed if you are not a man of general culture.

Few young men realize that the time spent in good reading, study, and general observation, will probably be worth more to them in the long run, and will give them infinitely more satisfaction, than the same time spent in trying to increase business.

It is mortifying for an uncultivated man (no matter how prominent he may be in business) to be thrown into the company of broad-minded and cultivated people. If young folks only realized what great strides they could make in self-culture by the wise use of even one hour a day in study, they would not fail to improve so great an opportunity.

It is painful to think of the thousands of young men and women in this land of opportunity who go to their places of business year in and year out, and plod along in a humdrum manner, without even attempting to keep posted upon the wonderful history which is being made day by day. They rarely glance over the leading magazines and periodicals, and seldom read a book, except, perhaps, some flashy novel.

How can they expect to build up broad foundations, to become strong, intelligent citizens, without making an effort to enlighten themselves?

One would think that the example of a Lincoln, scouring the country to borrow a book, or a Douglass, striving to learn to read from scraps of paper on the plantation or a poster on a fence, would stir every youth of the present day to make use of opportunities offered by evening schools, town libraries with their reading-rooms, the Home Study Clubs, or other means of education now so widely available, many of them without expense to the student.

Business develops one only along a certain line—on a single side. Unless supplemented by self-culture, the character is without symmetry and strength. Many men who have become wealthy and influential, are sadly hampered and cramped all their lives because they did not make the most of their leisure, for self-improvement, when young.—Success.

THE ONLY SAFE WAY.

Two boys stopped in front of a saloon, and an old man standing near, listened to what they said.

"Let's go in and take a drink," said one of them.

"I—I don't think we'd better," said his companion; "my father's terribly opposed to saloons. I don't know what he'd say if he knew I had been in one, and drank liquor there."

"Just for the fun of the thing, you know," urged his friend; "of course, we'll stop with one drink. There can't be any harm in that."

"My boys," said the old man, coming up to them, "you don't know what you're talking about. If you go in and take one drink, you're not sure of stopping there. The chances are that you won't, for I tell you—and I know what I'm talking about by a bitter experience—there's a fascination about liquor that it takes a strong will to resist after the first taste of it, sometimes. Take the first drink, and the way of the drunkard is open before you. Only those who let liquor entirely alone are safe. I know, for I've been a drunkard a good many years. I expect to be one till I die. I began by taking a drink just as you propose to—'for fun'—but I didn't stop there, you see. Take the advice of a poor old wreck—and that is, never take the first drink."—New York Observer.

GOOD MAN-TIMBER.

"I have made as much out of myself as could be made of the stuff, and no man should require more," said Jean Paul Richter.

Man is the only great thing in the universe. All the ages have been trying to produce a perfect model. Only one complete man has yet been evolved. The best of us are but prophecies of what is to come.

Apelles hunted over Greece for many years, studying the fairest points of beautiful women, getting here an eye, there a forehead and there a nose, here a grace and there a turn of beauty, for his famous portrait of a perfect woman, which enchanted the world. So the coming man will be composite, many in one. He will absorb into himself not the weakness, not the follies, but the strength and the virtues of other types of men. He will be a man raised to the highest power. He will be self-centered, equipoised, and ever master of himself. His sensibility will not be deadened or blunted by violation of nature's laws. His whole character will be impressible, and will respond to the most delicate touches of nature.

The first requisite of all education and discipline should be man-timber. Tough timber must come from well-grown, sturdy trees. Such wood can be turned into a mast, can be fashioned into a piano or an exquisite carving. But it must become timber first. Time and growth develop the sapling into the tree. So through discipline, education, experience, the sapling child is developed into hardy mental, moral, physical timber.

One great need of the world to-day is for men and women who are good animals. To endure the strain of our concentrated civilization, the coming man and woman must have an excess of animal spirits. They must have a robustness of health. Mere absence of disease is not health. It is the overflowing fountain, not the one half full, that gives life and beauty to the valley below. Only he is healthy who exults in mere animal existence; whose very life is a luxury; who feels a bounding pulse throughout his body; who feels life in every limb, as dogs do when scouring over the field, or as boys do when gliding over fields of ice.—Success.

Take notice that we are now selling two different Bibles. The difference between the two is that the one called the "Combination" Bible has all the advantages of the other Bible, and also has all the changes made by the revisers. These changes are given, however, brief notes at the bottom of each page, reference to them being facilitated by a very convenient system of notation. Thus you have all the benefits of the two versions in parallel columns without the bulkiness of such an arrangement. In ordering this edition be sure to say "Combination" Bible.

BISHOP WILSON

in speaking of the "Combination Bible says:" "In all respects it seems to me the best for use of teachers and students, ever published." Similar testimonials have been given by Bishop Hendrix, and by Bishops Hurst, Fowler, Ninde, Foss, Vincent and Warren, of the M. E. Church, by a number of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and by hundreds of the leading ministers of all Protestant denominations. Let it be noted that this Bible can be procured by sending us three new subscribers with the cash—$6.

FACTS THAT SHOULD BE CONSIDERED.

There is no work concerning which the average man really knows so little, and yet thinks he knows so much, as the editing of a paper. We often find ourselves misapprehended and subjected to unfavorable criticism simply because our critic does not understand the situation. He sees one side of an octagon, while we are compelled to look upon eight sides. He expects and asks to have us do certain things in our columns that he would instantly see was practically impossible if at our side an hour in this office. The demands of voluntary contributors are ceaseless, urgent, and in most cases wholly unreasonable. We are flooded with manuscripts that we have never solicited and can not use, but our would-be contributor is seldom, if ever, satisfied with the reasons given for returning his article. The demand is often made that we publish this unsolicited copy at once, and we are frequently advised as to the page of the paper upon which the article ought to appear. An editorial in The Outlook shows us that we are not alone in these delectable experiences. In a recent issue that paper is constrained to "relieve its feelings" in the following forceful editorial upon "Volunteer Editors:"

The editors of such a journal as The Outlook have, as a rule, very delightful relations with contributors, and find no small pleasure, by the way, in an experience of uniform courtesy and good feeling. There is, however, a class of contributors, with whom all editors are at times brought into contact, few in numbers, but aggressive in action, who combine the functions of contributors and editors. They not only prepare their manuscripts, but they pass upon them as well; in fact, they direct the publication, at an early date, of the articles they inclose. If for any reason the article is not available, they decline to accept the decision, and promptly point out the reasons why it should appear. The fact that the same subject may have been discussed in a series of six articles within two months, that there are in the manuscript-case six articles on the same subject awaiting publication, that the subject itself has been discussed until there is nothing left for discussion, that it is of no interest to the constituency of the journal in question, has no weight with the contributor who insists upon being an editor as well. If it is mildly suggested that the unavailable article lacks freshness, coherence, literary quality, this judgment, courteously expressed, is resented as a personal affront, and the editor is reminded that he does not understand his business. This discourages a man whose chief interest professionally is to make the best possible use of his opportunities, and whose attitude towards all new contributors is one of wistful expectancy. Instead of being a morose and surly person, whose aim in life is to return all the good articles and print all the bad ones, he is often an overworked man because he is eager to let nothing that has excellence slip through his fingers, and to see the promise in the work of new hands, and secure that work. His greatest reward is to discover a new note, a fresh touch, an original idea in prose or verse. So great is his eagerness and his catholicity that he is in much greater danger of publishing inferior than of rejecting superior matter. The fault of the contemporary editor is his easy-going catholicity; he does not guard the doors enough; he publishes too many commonplace articles. But it must be remembered that he prints the best matter he can get. If he prints a good deal of commonplace, it is because a good deal of commonplace is written.

All this the volunteer editor ignores. To him it is the easiest thing in the world to edit a newspaper or a magazine; the whole secret lies in the acceptance of his article. A note recently received from a man who knows, as few men can, both the inside and the outside of the editorial office, puts the whole matter forcibly. This versatile and perennially fresh thinker and writer contributed to The Outlook not long ago a report which the editors were compelled to condense, and word sent him to that effect promptly brought the following reply:

What I know is that an editor is omnipotent, and ought to be, and that nobody but a fool complains of what he does.
Truly yours, EDW. E. HALE.

MINISTERS NEED PRAYERS, NOT CRITICISM.

The Holy Spirit brings liberty, for "where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty." Many Christian people wonder why it is that their minister hasn't more power, and why he doesn't do more. He may be well trained for his post and eminently fitted for the building up of God's people, but he hasn't perfect liberty in his service either in the community or in the pulpit. Now the trouble may be in the pulpit, but it has been my experience that, in almost all the cases, you need not go beyond the church vestibule to find the cause of the minister's bondage. Listen to the criticisms of the average congregation as it leaves a church. Before it reaches the sidewalk the message and the messenger have often been disposed of, and topics of greater interest occupy the conversation. The Holy Spirit will not work in an atmosphere of criticism.

Supposing that on the day of Pentecost the apostles had been criticising Peter, do you think the Holy Spirit would have worked so miraculously? Imagine John whispering to James, "It doesn't seem to me that Peter is quite up to himself this morning," and James replying: "I am disappointed myself. This is a representative audience, and he lacks polish and finish." Suppose Andrew had turned to Matthew and said: "Really, that is too bad for Peter to be so harsh on the Pharisees and rulers. There are so many other things upon which we can agree. I do wish he would avoid all controverted subjects." Do you think that, if that had been the attitude of the apostles, there would have been any conversions? I believe that, had we been present at that notable meeting, we would have heard the prayers of many of the disciples on behalf of Peter at that moment, and, although the words were plain and simple, they were borne home to the conviction of thousands because the Holy Spirit could work freely. What the minister needs, my friends, is your prayers, your sympathy, your confidence, and not your criticism.—D. L. Moody.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address

TALKATIVENESS.

The American people have the reputation of being the most talkative in the world. Our public men, as a rule, run to mouth as naturally as a weed runs to seed. In all our legislative bodies, from the National Congress to the humblest village council, there is a disposition upon the part of the representatives of the people to consume precious time in expressing their views. Our congressional and legislative records from year to year form unwieldy volumes, of little interest to anyone but the old paper dealer. Here are embalmed the prolonged talks of the servants of the people, some of whom had a speech for nearly every subject which happened to come under consideration. It is the same thing with conventions of all sorts. They sometimes accomplish good, but often enough are mere "go-as-you-please" talking matches, in which a few grains of honest wheat are deeply buried beneath great heaps of intellectual chaff. It usually happens, too, that those who know the least have the most to say. Generally, when you find a man who is always trying to make himself conspicuous in a deliberative body, offering resolutions, making speeches, reminding one of a jack-in-the-box, over and anon popping up in sight of the public, you find one whose vanity is only inferior to his shallowness.

How to provide a remedy for this disease would be a difficult task, perhaps a hopeless one. Nevertheless it remains true that it is not the babblers who do the world's work. Some there are, indeed, who have the seal of inspiration upon their lips. They have a message for the race, and men will listen as it is delivered. But it is often the silent man, the man of methodical business habits, of good judgment and sound common sense, who sees the end of a thing from the beginning, who does the things which stand. Many of the heroes of the world, and its great leaders and teachers, have been silent men. They learned in quiet communion with nature and their own heart wisdom's way. They had no fondness for the idle babble of the multitude; nor were they babblers themselves. Slow of speech, but swift of action, doing rather than talking, they have brought things to pass.—Central Advocate.

Resolve to see the world on the sunny side, and you have almost won the battle of life at the outset.

Many are hoping he will cut up well. Our societies could do very well with a side of such bacon.—Spurgeon.

OBITUARIES.

Obituaries of 200 words published free. For all words in excess of that number send one cent per word.

PRIDGEN—LEVANA PRIDGEN, eldest daughter of H. C. and Augusta Pridgen, was born Dec. 14, 1883, and departed this life May 15, 1898. In July, 1893, she gave her heart to God and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Hebron Church under the ministry of Rev. W. G. Backus.

Vada had just entered her teens, and was a sprightly, promising girl. She was the object of fond affections, and the pride of parents and grandparents. She was kind and gentle in spirit, and had won many hearts to her. Her sickness was brief; she was sick only a few minutes. She did her work about the house, and went to the lot and was milking when the summons came. She fell, and was carried to the house by her father in an unconscious state, and soon passed away.

Funeral service was held by the writer in the presence of a large gathering of friends and relatives, and we laid the little body to rest in the Hebron Cemetery.

How strange the Providence that brings this sad bereavement to this happy home; but it is well with the child. All things work together for good to them who love God.

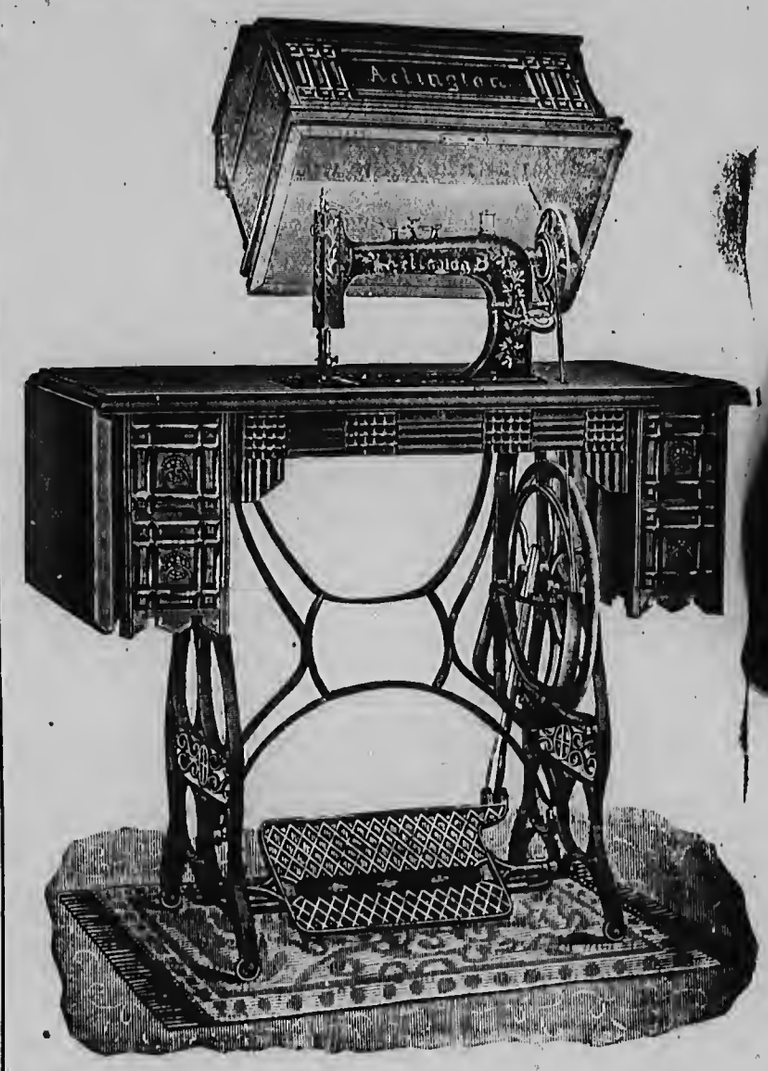
Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one guage, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless and are very durable.

The Staff of Life in Danger.

Extreme care is neeessary in purchasing baking powders to avoid those made from burnt alum, phosphatic or other harsh acids, of which there are innumerable brands in the market.

Great efforts are made to foist these inferior powders upon consumers by the inducement of a lower price and by grossly false representations as to their ingredients and comparative value.

Alum baking powders have been declared by the most competent authorities injurious to health. Therefore every precaution must be taken to keep them out of the food. They are sold under many names, and new brands are continually appearing.

It is safe to avoid the use of any new or doubtful brand until you have had it analyzed. The purity of any powder sold at a lower price than Royal may be suspected.

Royal is a pure cream of tartar baking powder and its exclusive use is the practical and positive safeguard against alum and the various adulterations found in other brands. It has been analyzed and recommended by the U. S. Government chemists, by the health officers of New York, Chicago, San Francisco, London, etc., and by eminent physicians and scientists generally, who give it the greatest praise for its marvelous purity and leavening strength.

The Royal powder costs only a fair price per pound, and is cheaper and better at its price than any similar article in the world.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Philippine insurgents now surround the city of Manila.

No effort to capture Manila will be made until the United States troops arrive.

Louisiana is to furnish three batteries of light artillery to the United States army.

Harassed by rebel soldiers, and almost starving, more than 1000 Spanish troops in the Philippines have surrendered.

Unless Santiago and Porto Rico are taken with less trouble than now expected, the President will probably call for 100,000 more volunteers.

As soon as Major-General Shafter has landed near Santiago de Cuba a vessel will leave the United States with 500,000 pounds of fresh dressed beef to supply the army and the Cubans.

After quite a long lease of power in comparison with the average life of a French Cabinet, the ministry of M. Meline has finally fallen, and a ministerial crisis now exists in France.

The blockade of Havana by a big fleet of warships seems to be a sort of farce, when it is known that, although so much trouble has been taken to close the front door of that city, the back door is wide open—so open, in fact, that a theatrical company from Europe has been able to get into the supposed beleaguered city.

After careful consideration the President and his advisors have decided to postpone the main Cuban invasion and the attack on Havana until after the rainy season. The danger from disease that the army would have to encounter if it should invade Cuba during the Summer would be very great, and the President came to the conclusion that it would be a useless waste of human life to send the American troops into Cuba before Fall. It is not the intention, however, to let the fearful suffering of the Cubans continue for any length of time.

The refusal of the Spanish authorities at Havana to consent to the exchange of the gallant Hobson and his brave companions, who were captured when they sank the collier "Merrimac" in the mouth of the harbor of Santiago, has created a great deal of anxiety and dissatisfaction at Washington. It is feared that the prisoners are confined in the Morro Castle fortress at Santiago to prevent the Americans from bombarding it, and this fact adds to the anxiety to such a degree that Admiral Sampson has forborne to fire at the castle, although its guns have not ceased to thunder away at his ships.

Advices received announce the arrival at Santiago of the first division of the American army of invasion, under command of Major-General William R. Shafter. No attempt was made during the day, according to the report, to land the American troops. General Shafter soon after his arrival had a conference with Admiral Sampson. They discussed at length the information obtained by Admiral Sampson's scouts as to the most available landing-places in the vicinity of Santiago, and sent further scouting parties along the coast. They inspected the points considered by Admiral Sampson to be most advantageous, and the commanders of the army and navy will decide where to land the troops.

In the very near future the United States will seize some place on the northern cost of Cuba and form a junction with the army of General Gomez. Through this channel of communication the government will supply the starving Cubans with abundance of food. While Major-General Miles was in the South he was in constant communication with General Garcia. The insurgent general was informed that the American army would be sent to Santiago de Cuba, and that his troops would be plentifully supplied by the United States with food, clothing and munitions of war. By forming a junction with General Gomez it will be possible for the United States government to relieve the sufferings of the Cubans in all parts of the island. General Garcia will distribute food in his section of Cuba, and General Gomez in his territory.

GRAYBEARD

WE make 200 bottles of our GRAYBEARD every week. No more—no less. If 200 bottles don't fill all orders, some customer must wait until the next week. We mention this as some do not understand the delay. We have earned a reputation for making a clean, fresh, sure remedy for Cancer—Eczema, Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and we cannot make GRAYBEARD faster, and make it good.

"A few years ago Cancer appeared on my face in form of a scab—not a sore, but a scab that dropped off, and soon reappeared, some worse. Finally it annoyed me to shave. Darting pains set in, affecting my sight. People said I had Cancer—I was miserable. About that time a planter name Jordan, down the State, once similarly afflicted, sent me a bottle of GRAYBEARD advising me to take it. I did so and to my great joy got better. Skin cleared, appetite improved, I got stouter and Cancer left me. And it has not returned. GRAYBEARD saved my life.

27th ANNUAL CAMP MEETING

—AT—

SEASHORE CAMP GROUNDS.

Located on the Gulf Shore, with a frontage of 1400 feet.

WILL OPEN (D. V.) ON WEDNESDAY, JULY 13, NEXT, AND CONTINUE FOR 8 OR 10 DAYS.

The Grounds are opened April 1, and closed Nov. 1, for occupying cottages and reception of visitors. Modern and ample accommodation have been provided for the multitudes that annually visit this refreshing and delightfully cool and bracing place of rest, free from malaria and contagious diseases.

The sea bathing is unsurpassed by any resort on the Mississippi Sound, while the supply of pure, sparkling drinking water is furnished by one of the finest artesian wells, whose waters possess rare virtues.

The Grounds represent a beautiful grove of rare attractiveness, with an abundance of 20-odd varieties of shade trees, which afford shelter from the Summer heat.

The exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued, and act as a tonic to the debilitated visitors from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns. Boats for sailing and fishing always on hand. The drives along the seashore present magnificent views, and are over ten miles in length. Visitors are not expected to arrive or depart on the Sabbath day.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 5 to 23, inclusive, and be good to return on until Aug. 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. All trains will stop at the camp grounds from July 5 to 24, inclusive.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge.

The services during camp meeting are in charge of the presiding elders of the New Orleans, Seashore and Mobile District Conferences.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before and during camp meeting, or rent cottages for the season, will please communicate with W. L. Via, superintendent Camp Ground (Biloxi, P. O. 42, Miss.), or any of the following officers.

GOD'S PLANS.

Some time, when all life's lessons have been learned,
And sun and stars forevermore have set,
The things which our weak judgment here have spurned,
The things o'er which we grieved with lashes wet,
Will flash before us out of life's dark night
As stars shine most in deeper tints of blue;
And we shall see how all God's plans were right,
And how what seemed reproof was love most true.

And we shall see how, while we frown and sigh,
God's plans go on as best for you and me;
How, when we called, he heeded not our cry,
Because his wisdom to the end could see.
And e'en as prudent parents disallow
Too much of sweet to craving babyhood,
So God, perhaps, is keeping from us now
Life's sweetest things, because it seemeth good.

COMMENCEMENT OF MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

The closing exercises of the last session of this institution began with the concert of the Primary Department on Thursday night, June 2, and the enthusiasm and proficiency which the children manifested made this one of the most enjoyable and interesting parts of the exercises. The little folks gave evidence of careful training, and reflected much credit on their teachers. The success of this department the past session has been especially gratifying.

Friday night was the art reception, and patrons and visitors were shown quite a variety of drawings and paintings, from the child's first rude figures to the more skillful specimens from life—the bird, the fish, the rabbit, fruits and flowers and faces of friends, from casts, etc., to the delicate tints of the beautiful china, pretty enough to grace the table of a queen, making a display that gave evidence of the earnest application of the pupils, and the fidelity and skill of the teacher.

The commencement sermon was preached by the editor of the ADVOCATE, and to the large, attentive audience it was "a feast of fat things," a clear statement of divine truth, and enforced by an earnest exhortation to holier living.

The Epworth League held a special meeting Sunday afternoon, and Rev. P. M. Brown gave them a fine, practical sermon Sunday night.

Monday night there was a contest in elocution between four young ladies for a medal offered by Hon. E. W. Sutherlin. The medal was awarded to Miss Minnie Sligh.

The Alumnæ Society held a meeting Tuesday. The secretary read an interesting paper written by an absent member, which contained some pithy points and pleasing reminiscences, and breathed a spirit of devotion to the alma mater. Rev. E. N. Evans, of Monroe, delivered an address that was clear, pointed, practical, and appropriate to the occasion.

Tuesday night there was a debate between six young ladies; subject, "Resolved, That woman should be better educated than man." The speeches gave evidence of research in seeming facts, and skill in weaving them into arguments. A play, rendered in such a manner as to reflect credit on the teachers and scholars, was much enjoyed by the audience. One young lady—Miss Gay McCasland, of Lisbon, La.—received the degree of A. B., and read an essay that, in purity of diction, clearness of thought, and as an expression of the modest worth and religious character of cultured Christian womanhood, was a real gem. The post graduate degree of A. M. was also conferred upon Misses Lizzie May and Ruth Sligh. Hon. A. J. Murff delivered the annual address, which was worthy of the occasion, and sustained the high character of the speaker. He paid a noble tribute to woman, and made an earnest appeal in behalf of her higher culture, and insisted that she should have the same opportunities for thorough scholastic training as the other sex.

The concert on Wednesday night was a rare musical treat, and an honor to the pupils and teachers in this department.

Thus closed, with the sweet strains of music, one of the best commencements the college has had for many years. The attendance on the exercises, the attention given, the interest manifested, the respectful behavior of the audience, were about all that could be desired. The courtesy shown, and the expressions of approval by the large number of persons in attendance, were very gratifying to the patrons and friends of the college.

The Board of Trustees planned for improvement and enlargement. President Sligh was appointed financial agent, and we commend him to the patrons of the college and friends of Christian education throughout the State. The Board proposed to put a metal roof on the main building, repair the chimneys, retouch the plastering, and make such other improvements as may be needed to put the building in thorough repair, and adapt it to meet the demands of comfort and modern taste.

The faculty for the next session are the same as last, except Miss L. M. Sligh, who resigns, and Mrs. Jules Caro Penn takes her place.

Now, a few words to the Methodists and friends throughout the Conference: Give us your sympathy, help us with your influence and your money, send us your daughters, and, with the divine help, we will furnish you an institution where they may receive careful, thorough training in a truly Christian school. The discipline is firm, but kind, and the life home-like. The building is brick, the rooms are comfortable, the halls are large and airy, the campus is fine, embowered with shade trees, and there is an abundance of cold cistern water. The point is considered the highest in the State; but little sickness, and all the conditions meet here for happy, successful student life.

The Board of Trustees, the faculty, the Alumnæ Association, and a large number of people in Mansfield and vicinity, united in a petition to the Legislature of the State to enact a law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors within eight miles of the college, and we earnestly ask our friends everywhere to aid us in securing this legislation, and we trust this law-making body of our State will give us this law.

J. D. HARPER.

EAST MISSISSIPPI FEMALE COLLEGE, MERIDIAN, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Many of your readers will be interested in a report of the work done by this excellent institution this year. Truly, God has greatly honored and blessed it beyond all expectation. It stands as another proof that if we honor God and are true to him, he will honor and prosper his own. The president of this school, Prof. J. W. Beeson, is running it in the name of, and to the honor and glory of God. He places the religious above everything else in the institution. And yet the intellectual and physical is in no way neglected. In fact, the curriculum is higher than that of most female colleges in the South, and equal to most of our colleges for young men.

The institution is the most thorough and conscientious in every particular. Most of the faculty are deeply spiritual men and women, and all are highly educated, being graduates of some fine female college, and most of them having taken a post-graduate course in some university. They have for next year graduates of Wellesley, University of South Carolina, Trinity College, Peabody Normal, and those who have taken post-graduate courses in the Chicago University, Cook County Normal, of Chicago, and other post-graduate schools.

The talent in the Conservatory of Music can hardly be excelled in the South. A native of Berlin, Germany, graduate of Kullak's Conservatory, is director, who ranks with the first in this country.

The professor of violin and orchestra is a native of France, and a very fine artist. In short, it is doubtful if a better faculty is gathered together in the Southern States.

But best of all is the spiritual atmosphere that pervades the institution. One can not remain long within its walls without feeling the presence of God. Students have remarked that it would be difficult to remain a year in this college without being a Christian. When school opened about half of the students were Christians. When it closed every girl but three or four were converted, and among them are some of the finest Christian characters and noble workers that we have ever seen. This seems to be a training-school for Christian workers—a place where they can go and learn of the deep things of God, and prepare for his work here on earth in a spiritual way as well as in an intellectual and physical way. Nearly every boarding student belongs to some Workers' Bible Training Class, and are in training to do work for the Master during the Summer.

The millionaire evangelist, C. N. Crittenton, of New York, spent two weeks in Meridian this Spring holding a meeting, and was thrown with the college girls daily, and almost constantly. They attended his services regularly, he holding as many as three services in the college. After having visited a great many colleges in the last fifteen years of his labors as an evangelist, he remarked that he never saw a college where the spiritual atmosphere was so good, and the religious influence so fine, as at this place. There are many pupils in attendance this session who were at other female colleges last year—some at other church schools—and they all say that they never saw such a religious atmosphere in a college, and did not think such a thing possible. The president does not pose as a reformer, and does not bid for bad girls, and says that he is not running a reformatory school, but is trying to do the Master's will. That the Lord is honoring his efforts can be readily seen when we learn that the enrollment of students this session is 326; boarding students, 120; music students, 178; elocution, 53; dressmaking, 14, etc. This is nearly three times the enrollment under former administrations. There are twenty-six teachers and officers—as fine a set as can easily be found. Their aim is to do the highest work, physically, intellectually, and spiritually. We are glad to have such an institution in our midst. The course of study has been raised again, and many other improvements made for next session. The buildings were filled to their capacity, and great good done this year in the name of the Master. We predict and pray for greater things in the future.

As the Lord has prospered President Beeson, he proposes to give more scholarships of free tuition to worthy girls who are able to pay board, but who need help in tuition. He has helped many who were recommended principally by pastors and presiding elders. If brethren know of others needing a little help, notify the president. They must be good students, and in every way worthy.

WOMAN'S BIBLE AND INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.

We are indebted to Rev. W. E. Towson, Kobe, Japan, for an interesting description of the closing exercises of Mrs. M. I. Lambuth's school.

For some reason—we know not what—the Japanese school year has been changed to end in the early Spring, and so the commencements are held at that time. Recently the different mission schools have changed the date of their commencement exercises, and are now in line with the government schools.

Yesterday morning the Fugin Shuge Gakko (Woman's Industrial School) held its fifth annual commencement in the native church of the Southern Methodist mission in Kobe. This school was organized eight years ago by Dr. and Mrs. Lambuth for the purpose of giving young women a training in those lines which would especially fit them for their future place as the wives and mothers of Japan. It has been contended—and not without good reason—that with the home life as it is today in Japan, the average Japanese girl, who is soon to enter upon the marriage relation, has more use for a training in the ordinary practical lines of every-day life, such as relate to the home and its needs, the kitchen, the nursery, the sick-room, and sewing—in a word, everything that relates to her duty as wife and mother—than she has for literature, music, science, and art; not that the latter are not good and helpful, but that the former are more important, and are better adapted to the needs as they are found to-day in this land. Where only the one can be had, by all means let it be the former. It was to meet this need that the Shuge Gakko was founded, and its history shows that it has met a felt and recognized want. Its students and graduates are numbered among the wives and daughters of some of Kobe's best citizens, and its roll is constantly increasing. The past year has been the most successful one that the school has had, the attendance having reached its highest number. The curriculum covers a three years' course, and consists of training in all branches of domestic work—e. g., plain and fancy sewing, cooking, etiquette, household hygiene, care of the sick, etc. Along with these is given a course in Chinese characters and arithmetic, with organ lessons and English when desired. The teachers are Mrs. Lambuth, Miss Ida M. Worth, and Mrs. Sato Oka, with a corps of native specialists.

The graduating exercises were of the usual pleasant character, consisting of songs, both in English and Japanese, instrumental music, presentation of diplomas, with responses from pupils and friends. Five young women received diplomas, having completed the three years' course in industrial training. Rev. S. H. Wainright, M. D., principal of the Kwansei Gakuin, delivered the commencement address, which was listened to with close attention by his auditors. The Doctor speaks Japanese fluently, and is an interesting and vigorous speaker. He pointed out the Christian idea of woman's sphere. She is not to be a mere cultured and ornamental creature, ashamed to put her hands in dish-water, nor is she simply to assume the burden of household drudgery. Work is honorable, and should be avoided by no one, and the refinements of dress and home are not to be despised. In this school, Dr. Walnright went on to say, the foundations of intelligent housekeeping are laid. He exhorted the pupils to continue to build on this foundation, reading magazines and books, and giving thoughtful attention to the subject. Thereby they would become more economical, make home more congenial and life more pleasant. Art culture had an important place in life. The pattern of the tabernacle received on the Mount required embroidery work in blue, purple, and scarlet. It should encourage his hearers to know, the speaker added, that God approved of efforts to make the useful more beautiful. All these delicate refinements elevate the mind above the utilitarian views of life and increase our joy. But religion is necessary. The largest cherry blossoms are on trees with little fruit, and birds of the brightest plumage do not sing. Without a close relation to God their lives would be unfruitful. Woman had it in her power to exert great influence either for good or for bad. She was the mother of sin, and she was chosen to be the mother of the Savior from sin. There were opportunities in Japan for women who desired to do good. It is not pleasant to see women smoking cigarettes, with smoke rolling out of their months and noses as though their heads were on fire. The geisha dancing-girl, as a class, had no legitimate place in society. They brought evil influences into the home, and should be replaced by daughters sufficiently cultivated to afford entertainment for guests.

The speaker congratulated Mrs. Lambuth and Mrs. Oka on the success of their work, the fruit of which could already be seen.

After the presentation of diplomas to the five graduates by Mrs. Lambuth, who addressed a few appropriate words to each, the audience was invited to the school-building to examine the annual display of needle-work. The exhibit was quite creditable, and well worth a visit.

CUBA AND THE CUBANS FOR CHRIST.

That wars and rumors of wars have not interfered with work in behalf of the Cubans is evident from the following letter. Existing conditions seem only to make the people more accessible. Let us be ready to seize the opportunities that will be open to us in Cuba at no distant day. Rev. H. B. Someillan writes from Tampa, Fla.:

With a heart filled with gratitude to God, I report the Tampa Cuban mission work in a most excellent and healthy condition. The quarter began under many discouraging circumstances. Dark clouds seemed to gather thickly upon our sky. The almost total suspension of work in many of the factories, causing poverty and distress among our people; the high degree of political excitement prevailing—all seemed to combine against the possibilities of success in the work of the church. But, thank God for a firm and unshaken faith in his promises as well as for a deep consciousness of our weakness and utter helplessness. "The battle is the Lord's," has been our motto, and "I can do all things through Christ, who strengtheneth me," the safe harbor into which we have cast the anchor of our faith.

We have received ten members on profession of faith during the quarter, eight of whom have given sufficient evidence of a change of heart. There are twenty-two candidates for membership, some of whom are now ready to be received into full connection; twelve infants have been baptized. The attendance on public worship has increased fifty per cent. With but few exceptions, every male member of our church will pray in public, testify, or conduct a meeting, when called upon.

We have commenced holding preaching services on Sunday nights in San Mateo, West Tampa. The outlook here is very bright and promising. About forty-five persons were present at our last service.

I now have in my possession the long-desired copies in Spanish of the Constitution and By-laws of the Epworth League, and am taking proper steps to organize a League in our church. We think the time most propitious for this move, and it is our purpose to effect such organization during present month. Let us hope and pray for a successful and aggressive Epworth League under the auspices of our Cuban Church in Tampa.

The number of our Sunday-school pupils has increased to 216. The attendance in San Marcos, Ybor City, has been larger and more regular than heretofore. The attendance in San Mateo, West Tampa, has also increased very much since the completion of the new building. It is with a profound sense of gratitude to God that we report the Sunday-school department of our Tampa Cuban mission in a most excellent condition. The pastoral instruction of children receives all the attention that is possible.

Our finances this quarter have been 100 per cent. better than ever before. Let us praise the Lord with our whole heart. The light begins to shine upon Cuba. The day is breaking; the hour of our political—and, best of all, of our spiritual—redemption draweth nigh. Let us be ready to work for the Master. "The night cometh when no man can work."

FROM REV. D. E. KELLY.

MR. EDITOR: I have just read with much pleasure and profit your two articles in the ADVOCATE entitled, "At the Nation's Capital." Your articles are instructive and full of valuable information that every lover of our country appreciates. In fact, all your editorials are read with much interest. The ADVOCATE is indispensable in our home. My wife says that your paper has been the greatest blessing to her of any reading material that she has ever read. And I can say the same for myself.

We will leave in about four weeks for Gloster, Miss.

It is my intention now to join the Louisiana Conference this Fall, and I shall take great pleasure in putting the ADVOCATE into every home that I possibly can, for I know the ADVOCATE visiting a family every week full of choice religious thought, selected or original, is an educating and Christianizing agency. It is profitable for the older members. My father writes me every week, and he so often speaks of the comfort and blessing the ADVOCATE is to him. He says that it keeps him in touch with what is transpiring in Christ's kingdom in the world, and current religious thought in general. So I conclude that the ADVOCATE is good for the older people. It is good for the younger members, forming in them a taste for profitable reading, and giving them many thoughts, suggestions and facts respecting a right life and work for God. No family can afford to be without such a paper. And a pastor, who desires to increase culture, piety, and a general acquaintance with the progress of the kingdom of Christ on earth, can do much to accomplish this by securing the taking of the ADVOCATE by all the families in his charge. I never knew a family who took and were readers of a religious newspaper for any length of time that did not give clear evidence of greater intelligence and breadth as the result; and, on the other hand, I have never known a professed Christian family that read no religious paper that did not show in the clearest way that they were suffering loss from the lack of this cultivating agency.

I was reared in South Mississippi. Have been attending school in the North for four years. I have come to the conclusion, taking all in all, that the South is "the" country, and I am anxious to get back to "Dixie."

The good Lord continue to bless the ADVOCATE and its editor.

Fraternally yours,

D. E. KELLY.

THE BIBLE.

We search the world for truth; we cull
The good, the pure, the beautiful,
From graven stone and written scroll,
From all old flower-fields of the soul;
And, weary seekers of the best,
We come back laden from our quest,
To find that all the sages said
Is in the Book our mothers read,
And all our treasure of old thought
In His harmonious fullness wrought
Who gathers in one sheaf complete
The scattered blades of God's sown wheat,
The common growth that maketh good
His all-embracing Fatherhood.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

MR. EDITOR: This subject has been so fully and ably discussed in the columns of the ADVOCATE for the last few months, it may be out of place for me to write; but, with your permission, we will add our mite, and give a reason for the faith that is in us. Some of your correspondents said wisely, but they did not exactly say what we think ought to be said. We are not sure if Bro. Honnoll did not get nearer the "switch in the crack" than any of them. But the "unrighteous taxation" to furnish higher education by the State to a few is not the greatest difficulty in our way. We are opposed to the State having anything to do with higher education, not because of the unjust tax only, but for the greater injustice to a large majority of children who get no benefit and are hindered in the use of the little they do get. Every dime of the money given by the State for education should go into the common-school fund, and then every child would have a like advantage. As it now is, the educational and other qualifications for higher education by the State is more than ninety per cent. of her children ever get. And this is not all. These poor children are taxed to pay for the education of those who are able to pay for it anywhere. But another and far more serious objection is that the State divorces moral training from the training of the mind. This, to me, is dangerous in the extreme. The stupidity of Protestantism in this God-favored country is alarming. We have to sit quietly still and allowed the State, either directly or indirectly, to repudiate Christianity by divorcing the Bible from her schools, thus saying to our children that its teachings form no part of an education, and this, to my mind, saps the foundation of the great aim of education.

If the Bible is the foundation of true citizenship, and the highest civilization is developed under its teachings (and this is the history of ages past), by what authority does the State propose to put it out of her educational system?

And this brings us to another objection to higher education by the State—that is, her inability to enforce moral discipline. How can she, since she has ostracized the only Book of authority on the subject? Imagine an institution of learning proposing to teach any of the branches of science, but excluding the text-books. But it is claimed these professors are believers in the Bible, and their influence is all that is necessary. The sad effect of this system is seen in the wreck and ruin of thousands of our boys and girls, ruined, soul and body, for time and eternity. Let the State try this system of teaching Latin or Greek, and see the results. But it may be said: It is not the business of these institutions to teach morals. Then they ought not teach anything. If moral character is the foundation of success, we can more easily leave out anything else than this. And here lies our trouble. It is not taxation, upon the one hand, or endowment on the other. The thing we need above everything else on this great subject is a higher conception of the meaning of education. Its common use to-day divorces it from everything except mind-culture. This may be learning, but it is not education. Education is the training of human beings to meet the design of their creation. Before we can hope to mold a human being to artfully meet the ends designed in its creation, its nature must be understood, and the right use of means to the end used. Man's nature is usually comprehended under three divisions—physical, mental, and moral. To educate or train his body to the neglect of his mind and morals is to degrade him to the level of a brute. To educate his mind to the neglect of his morals is to make him an atheist, and thus defeat the design of his creation. The truth is, there is nothing worthy to be called education that does not comprehend moral training. There are two main points upon which all true education turns. The first is the aim. Now, if the Bible idea of man is true, the aim evidently should be a preparation to meet our responsibility to God ourselves, our fellows, and our country. An education that does not seriously consider these things is dangerous in the extreme. The highest aim of an education today among nine-tenths of the men and women is to make money, or that mental culture is the remedy for all the evils in the land and the road to success.

Be it remembered that mental culture will not restrain the passions and develop the principles of virtue upon which to build an ideal society and civilization. This was the defect in the systems of ancient Greece and Rome. If a trained mind is all that is needed to meet responsibilities of life, why did not Socrates and Plato, with their profound philosophy, rescue themselves and their people from the abominations of their times?

Look at the Augustian age. Look at the inhuman and fiendish brutality that blackened and debauched the history of the twelve Czars, and this was in the land of Virgil and Cicero, and an host of others renowned in literature and art. A Christian education is our only hope.

The second point upon which true education turns is the means used. In the first place, we want men and women born of God in the school-room. No man or woman is fit to go into the school-room who is not a thorough Christian. We want astronomers that can find the "Son of Righteousness," geologists that can find "the Rock of Ages," anatomists that can find "that God made us," and do this as they teach mathematics.

In the second place, we need a conscience on this subject. What is the use to talk of a Christian education for his child to a man whose conscience is in his pocket-book? Anything will do such a man as this, so it saves money. The mental and religious training, if considered, is secondary with too many of our people to make education of any sort a success. Wake up our people on the subject of Christian education, and you will have solved the problem of all the difficulties in the way. Instead of having one man in Mississippi with a conscience on this subject, you will have hundreds. Instead of our young men and women leaving us, never to come back again, we keep them in sympathy and service forever. God only knows what we are losing. W. S. LAGRONE.

WINONA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The District Conference for Winona district, North Mississippi Conference, closed on June 18, at Winona, Miss., its twenty-ninth annual session. By request, I give you a brief synopsis of the proceedings.

The presiding elder, Rev. J. B. Stone, who is closing out his fourth year on the district, was in the chair. The election of secretary resulted, as usual, in the choice of J. R. Bingham, who named as his assistant W. L. Duren. All the pastors, except two, and a number of lay delegates were present. Doubtless the laity would have been better represented were it not that our farmers are now in the midst of the busiest season of the year.

On Wednesday preceding the Conference the district meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary and Home Mission Societies was held. The former occupying the forenoon and the latter the afternoon, were presided over respectively by Mrs. Ben Jones, district secretary, and Mrs. Rowan Thayer (in the absence of the secretary, Miss Sweatman). The good women declare it was one of the very best meetings ever held in the district.

The first day, Thursday, was given to the Sunday-school Conference. A program previously arranged by the presiding elder, and bearing upon the various phases of Sunday-school work, was discussed. The Sunday-school sermon was preached at 11 A. M. by the writer.

The District Conference proper opened on Friday morning, and the Conference sermon was preached at 11 A. M. by G. W. Gordon. The usual committees were appointed, and inquiry into, and discussion of, the several departments of church work followed. Reports from the charges indicated progress, and were full of hope and promise. Winona and Greenwood both have new church enterprises in hand, and expect to erect handsome buildings within the next few months. Carrollton still contemplates a new parsonage. Several other charges report substantial improvements in churches and parsonages. The most cheering feature of these reports, however, was that which looked beyond material things and emphasized the thought of spiritual enlargement. Several revivals have already been held, others are now in progress, but the great revival campaign is before us. Let every soul fervently pray, "O Lord, revive thy work."

We deplore the fact that out of twelve charges, there are only six Epworth Leagues. We must push this work in the Winona district. The writer is acting district League secretary, and would be glad to do anything in his power to help forward the local League work during the Summer.

Among our visiting brethren were Rev. G. W. Bachman, colporter and Sunday-school agent; Rev. M. L. Burton, manager of our Orphans' Home; Rev. J. W. Malone, president of Grenada College; Rev. R. M. Standifer, pastor of our church at Oxford, and Bro. R. A. Clark, local preacher, and student in Millsaps College. Bro. Clark addressed the Conference in the interest of the Y. M. C. A. Hall at Millsaps, and secured a nice little sum for that purpose. Dr. Malone represented Grenada College, and preached a sermon on Christian education. Bro. Burton plead for the orphans, and also preached an excellent sermon. Resolutions were passed pledging him our sympathy and co-operation. Resolutions were also passed commending the splendid work of President Murrah, of Millsaps College, and congratulating the church in that he will remain at the head of this institution. Besides these were resolutions of appreciation regarding the faithful work of Bro. Stone, the presiding elder, during the past quadrennium, and resolutions of thanks to the people of Winona for their hospitable entertainment.

Wm. H. Hargrove and Wm. L. Duren were licensed to preach. The former is a recent graduate of the State University and a son of the lamented Rev. T. B. Hargrove, of our Conference. The latter has been for several years a teacher in Carroll county, and a member of the County Board of Examiners. Both young men will go to school again next year.

Besides the brethren already mentioned, the following preached during the Conference: T. G. Freeman, W. T. Browning, J. H. Mitchell, W. H. Sanders.

Delegates elect to the Annual Conference are: J. R. Bingham, J. B. Streater, A. H. George, W. R. Witty, with R. Thayer and F. A. Howell as alternates.

The next session of the District Conference will be held at Carrollton. Mr. Editor, we give you a cordial invitation one year in advance.

H. T. CUNNINGHAM.

SOUTH CAROLINA LETTER.

The subject of paramount interest in "the old Palmetto State" at present is the war. The old and the young, the rich and the poor, the great and small, the males and the females, the fathers and the mothers, the wives and the sweethearts—all are taking a live interest in the subject. The authorities had some trouble in getting South Carolina's quota of troops enlisted. Our people did not seem to be so very anxious to enter the fracas—got enough, I suppose, during the little bout that they had a few years ago with the North. Some of our preachers, however, seem to be anxious to go to the front. I have heard of two members of our Conference having been to see the governor in the interest of a chaplainoy. The chaplaincy of the South Carolina Regiment fell to a Baptist brother. Very appropriate appointment, I think, as so much of the fighting—if any is done—is to be done around the water. The general sentiment in the State seems to be that the war could have been averted, and the difficulties satisfactorily adjusted, had President McKinley been permitted to have his way and time.

For some time we have been passing through the commencement season. Wofford College is closing her commencement while I write this letter. A splendid bill of fare was served this time. Dr. E E. Hoss preached the sermon. The Doctor is a great favorite in South Carolina, and we are always glad to see him. We were not surprised to see that he received so large a vote for Bishop at Baltimore. He will go in on the first ballot four years hence.

The Columbia Female College had a splendid commencement this year. Bishop C. B. Galloway was the preacher. That is sufficient to indicate the character of the preaching. No man among our Bishops has ever produced a profounder impression upon our Conference than this great man has. While in Columbia the Bishop addressed the students of the South Carolina College. The papers state that he made a fine impression upon the boys and the faculty. The other schools and colleges throughout the State are having their usual good commencements.

Methodism in the State is moving on about as usual. At our last Annual Conference, by a mistake on the part of the statistical secretary, we reported a tremendous increase in membership; but, alas! it was only a mistake. Would to God it had been true.

The political pot is beginning to simmer. Several candidates for governor have already enlisted, and are trying to persuade "the dear people" that it will be to the interest of the public to put them in office. The Prohibitionists are going to have a hand in the fight this time. A few years ago we gave a majority of ten thousand in favor of prohibition, and our weak-kneed law-makers gave us the dispensary system instead. We do not propose to trust them this time, but are going to make a desperate effort to elect a straight prohibition ticket.

Our present governor—who, by the way, is a Methodist—has had a hard road to travel. He came into office at an unfortunate time, but he has gone forward doing what he believed to be his duty, and many think his chances for re-election are good.

As you editors are always crying, "Condense, condense," I shall close for the present, and send you another condensed letter soon.

WATSON B. DUNCAN.

Allendale, S. C.

TO MISS FANNIE MINOR MONTGOMERY.

SISTER: I said not one word against patriotism, not one word. I did not intimate that patriotism and religion were incompatible. I understand that preachers are called and sent of God to preach the gospel of the Son of God. There is enough of this to keep them busy. This is all I said. In a considerable city not far away a prominent divine, on Sunday at eleven A. M., denounced the President and Congress for declaring war His words, as printed, looked ugly, indicated temper, and were calculated to do harm. The next Sunday another prominent divine replied, approving the war, and justifying the President and Congress. I think this wrong. The pulpit is not the place for wrangles of this kind. I have some views about this war. Many of my members view the matter quite differently. My views, I think, are purely patriotic, and my members think their views quite as patriotic. I was sent here to preach the gospel, to teach the Word of God, and not to win people over to my way of thinking on public questions. I think it is my duty to pray for the President, for Congress, for the generals, for the army, and not to criticise them—specially not to denounce them. The Master did not say, "Go ye into all the world and preach patriotism to every creature." I am for sticking to the commission. There are many good things about which I have very decided views that I never once name in the pulpit. The pulpit is not an omnibus to carry every matter that comes before the public mind. There is a growing tendency to prostitute the sacred desk in this way. The annexation of newly acquired territory is not a proper theme for discussion in God's house on Sunday by a minister of the gospel. I have some views on that subject, but I do not feel moved by the Holy Ghost to proclaim them from the pulpit. As a citizen, I think and act for myself; but as a preacher, I try to go by the commission my Lord gave me. If he had not told me specifically what to preach and teach, then I would feel myself at liberty to touch on many things

So, my sister, I am a patriotic citizen of Mississippi and of the United States, and an humble minister of the gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Your brother, GILDEROY.

The Aberdeen District Foreign Missionary Society met in Verona, June 8. It was called and presided over by Mrs. Shell, district secretary, and Mrs. Thames, vice-president. The meeting was well attended; the district well represented by adults and juveniles. In the main, fine reports in regard to work undertaken and accomplished. This was the first district meeting ever held in this district, and being so satisfactory in its results, it is surely but the beginning of many others to follow. Reports, recitations and songs by delegates from the juvenile societies, which evinced talent and zeal, and was much enjoyed by the older members, and by the young ones as well. Papers on "Ways of Extending Our Borders," by Mrs. Morgan Shell, of Houston, which gave us some new outlooks. "Work Conducted and Supported by Prayer," by Mrs. E. Robins, of Tupelo, which was forceful and uplifting. Also an interesting paper by Mrs. Thames. Paper by Mrs. S. Fannie Clark, of Shannon, on "Shall Woman Work for the Extension of the Gospel? If So, Why?" Mrs. Shell, of Aberdeen, gave us a very comprehensive and encouraging report of the entire Conference district work. There are some fine working organizations in this district. Tupelo, Okolona, Aberdeen, and many others, doing as much in proportion to their numbers.

The meeting throughout seemed thrilled with the missionary spirit, which was not surprising when we consider the enthusiasm and zeal of the leaders, Mrs. Shell and Mrs. Thames. We would be glad that every report could be given in full. Altogether, we had a most delightful and helpful time; enjoyed the hospitality of the Verona people, for which they have been so long noted.

Miss Sallie Kilpatrick made a cordial "address of welcome," which was responded to on behalf of the "meeting" by Mrs. Kate Finley, of Tupelo.

We separated reluctantly, but each resolved to be a Committee of One to arouse the missionary spirit in one other, and enlist them in the great work of saving souls.

The next meeting will be held in Tupelo.

THE NEW CONSTITUTION OF THE WOMAN'S HOME MISSION SOCIETY, M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

The new Constitution has been the subject of some solicitude among the friends of the Society, and a few words of explanation may not be amiss. The new Constitution is simple, clear, concise, and leaves the object and work of the Society identically what they have been from the beginning. It proposes only a different method of doing the same work. The change from the old is in only three particulars: 1st: It's name is shortened. 2nd: The number who constitute the "executive power" of the body is enlarged. 3rd: The method of disbursing the half of the membership dues, reserved to the Conference Societies, is changed.

Perhaps it would be well to explain these three items more fully, and also the duties of the Conference and General Treasurer; the only officers whose duties have in any particular been changed.

(1) The old name was long, and often miscalled. The second Article of the new Constitution insures parsonage work to be carried on even more certainly than before.

(2) The "executive power," under the old Constitution, was vested in a Central Committee of twelve women, appointed by the Board of Church Extension; under the new Constitution it is vested in a body of women, one from each Conference Society, and the officers they elect, called the Woman's Board of Home Missions.

(3) The entire annual membership dues, formerly divided, are now sent by the Conference treasurer to the General Treasurer. The one-half which has in the past been under the control of the Conference Society still remains under their control. The dues are passed through the general treasury in order to secure the benefit and protection of the refunding bond, and all other legal securities obtained through the administration of our funds by the Board of Church Extension, subject still to the check of the Conference Society, and only for those parsonages they shall determine.

The only change in the duties of the Conference treasurer is to send all the annual dues to the General Treasurer, who will open an account with each Conference Society by placing to the credit of each one-half of all the annual membership dues they send. When the Conference officers, as heretofore, decide to help any parsonage or parsonages, they will notify the General Treasurer of the place, or places, to be helped, and the amounts to be given each. The General Treasurer will send the money as directed through the Board of Church Extension.

The Conference Society, before donating to parsonages, should reserve enough to its credit to meet Conference expenses, and should always see to it that they do not overdraw their account.

Moneys raised for local work can, as heretofore, be expended in the locality, and for the purpose for which it is raised; but in all such cases vouchers or receipts therefor should be forwarded to the General Treasurer, in order that a full record of our work may appear on the books of the Society, and every locality may have due credit for work it has done.

All the other Articles of the new Constitution are the natural and necessary adjustment of the workers to the work.

The new Constitution is more like the Constitution of the Woman's Foreign Mission Society. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, now has two similarly constituted Societies—a Foreign Missionary Society and a Home Mission Society, each commissioned to do a great work in the saving of the world.

MRS. R. K. HARGROVE,
General Secretary.

GOD KNOWS.

God knows me better than I know myself. He knows my weakness—what I can do, and can not do. So I desire to be led, to follow him, and I am quite sure that he will thus enable me to do a great deal more in ways which seem to me almost a waste in life, advancing his cause, than I could in any other way. I am sure of that. Intellectually I am weak, in scholarship, nothing; in a thousand things, a baby. He knows this, and so he has led me and greatly blessed me, who am nobody, to be of some use to my church and fellowmen. How kind, how good, how compassionate, art thou, O God! O my Father, keep me humble! Help me to have respect to my fellow-men; to recognize these several gifts as from thee. Deliver me from the diabolical sins of malice, envy or jealousy, and give me hearty joy in my brother's good, in his work, in his gifts and talents; and may I be truly glad in his superiority to myself, if God be glorified. Root out weak vanity, all devilish pride, all that is abhorrent to the mind of Christ. God hear my prayer. Grant me the wondrous joy of humiliation, which is seeing thee as all in all.—Norman Macicod's Diary.

The present life is the seed-plot of the future state, and the harvest which we reap in eternity is the same in character and quality as that which now we sow. Every thought we think, every word we speak, every action we perform, every opportunity of service neglected or improved, is a seed sown by us, the fruit of which shall multiply either untold miseries or myriad blessings in the eternity into which we go.—William M. Taylor.

THE TWENTIETH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE W. B OF F. MISSIONS, M. E. C., S.

It was an understanding with Miss Smylie (corresponding secretary of the Mississippi Conference) and myself that, instead of each writing a report of the Board meeting, I was to give account of the proceedings up to Monday; she for the remaining sessions. My part is late on account of a "stop-over" at my old home, Atlanta, Ga.

The twentieth annual meeting of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions met at Greensboro, N. C., June 2-8. West Market Street Church, where our meetings were held, is a new brick edifice, and a marvel of beauty, elegance, and convenience. Of the opening service, Thursday evening, I send the enclosed paragraph, clipped from the North Carolina Christian Advocate:

The Board opened its exercises with an experience meeting on Thursday evening. This was conducted by Mrs. Wightman, and attended by the delegates and a large number of visitors. It was an occasion of great joy and spiritual power. For many years we have been attending meetings of a similar character, and we have often realized the blessedness of the fellowship of the saints and of communion with the Holy Ghost, but we have never so greatly enjoyed an experience meeting before. The testimonies were all intelligent, scriptural, deeply spiritual, and exceedingly interesting. Surely these good women have found the secret of the Lord, and live on a very high plane spiritually, and have fellowship with the Father and the Son. This first meeting produced a profound impression, and all who attended felt that they were sitting under the droppings of the sanctuary in heavenly places in Christ Jesus.

We were given a right royal welcome, and the hospitality characteristic of "the Old North State" bestowed from the time of our arrival to our departure. Not only was it manifest in the splendid addresses delivered by Mr. Robinson, of Greensboro, and Dr. Weaver, pastor of Market Street Church, but by visiting pastors and presiding elders, editors, the Sunday-school superintendent, and official members, notable among them Bro. O'Dell, who attended each service, rendered assistance in railroad matters, and at his own expense gave the members of the Board and visitors a drive over the city, taking us through the Greensboro Female College, of historic renown; the splendid Normal College, where four hundred students matriculated the past session; then to the cemetery, where we gathered around the grave of "Aunt Bumpass," who went to heaven two weeks before the Board met. It will be remembered that "Aunt Bumpass" invited the Board to Greensboro because she felt that she would not be strong enough to go elsewhere again. It was a source of regret that she was absent, but, after hearing of her suffering and desire to go, we could but be submissive, knowing that our loss was her gain. As Mrs. Wightman, Mrs. Park, and Mrs. Hendrix (who had known and loved her for years) offered prayers, and spoke of her many virtues, tears of love and sympathy flowed freely. We covered the mound with flowers, and, as we joined hands and sang, "Blest be the tie that binds," we could but feel that we were standing on holy ground.

Friday morning the business of the Board was begun. Mrs. Wightman led the devotional service. After the roll-call the different committees were appointed. Bishop Galloway was introduced, and made a fine talk on Brazil, making us feel quite proud of our work there. Bro. Tucker, a missionary of the Parent Board, was introduced. His personal experience and observation during years of labor and travel, noting the marked improvement in South America within the last decade, was interesting and instructive.

Mrs. Tuneheart, secretary of Home and Foreign Affairs, read her report, a synopsis of which would require more space than I could ask. It will be given in full in the Minutes of the Board, and is well worth reading and study. I will give one item of her report. South Carolina gives the name to our school in Korea, having raised $663.56. South Georgia names the chapel, raising the next largest amount—$650.28.

Friday evening exercises consisted in the addresses of welcome, responded to in a charming manner by Mrs. J. B. Malone, of the Missouri Conference, after which Mrs. Wightman called for Bishop Galloway, and requested one of his best and longest talks. His subject, "The Observations of a Church Optimist in Our Mission Fields." He held the large audience in rapt attention as he told in his own graphic style of the different mission fields, having visited everyone established by our church.

Saturday was given entirely to business, the order being the consideration and discussion of the report of Home Affairs. A number of spirited speeches were made. The afternoon was devoted to committee work.

Sunday was a continual feast of good things, beginning with the Sunday-school. Our own Mrs. Hargrove conducted the Bible class, of between 150 and 200 listeners. Of Dr. Palmore's sermon I enclose the account given in the North Carolina Advocate:

Dr. W. B. Palmore, of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, on last Sunday preached the annual sermon to the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions, now in session in West Market Street Church, Greensboro. His text was, "Bid her, therefore, that she help me." (John x, 20.) His subject was, "The Christian Home." This he treated elaborately and practically. He has spent much of his life in foreign travel, and has amassed a fund of knowledge that furnishes ample material upon which to draw in the discussion of almost every subject. He deals in facts and uses them to the best advantage. His sermon was unique, fresh, and full of fine thought and wholesome instruction. It made a profound impression upon the large congregation present.

Sunday afternoon a mass meeting for children (though many adults attended) was conducted by Mrs. Hargrove, Miss Barnes, editor of the "Little Worker," and Miss Helen Richardson, returned missionary from China. I wish there was space for an account of this unique and interesting meeting.

Sunday evening Dr. Y. J. Allen preached. Dr. Allen stands to-day at the head of the list as a missionary, reformer, writer, and educator—our St. John of the nineteenth century. Forty years he has labored in China, often misunderstood, not appreciated, but, with his vision to see down the ages, he laid the foundation broad and deep. To-day he sees "China made willing," aspiring to enter the "comedy of nations." The tide is come. He said he never saw the day when he was discouraged, and his favorite song is, "The crowning day is coming." May he live long to carry on his loved work!

Of the last three days, and results of the work of different committees, Miss Smylie will write.

MRS. W. M. McINTOSH.

THE HONNOLL AND SRIGLEY CONTROVERSY.

Bro. M. H. Honnell, of the North Mississippi Conference, and one Bro. Srigley, who claims to be a member of the Church of God and the Disciples, but employed by our Campbellite brethren to defend their cause, met in Marietta, June 1, 1898, and debated upon scriptural subjects for six days.

Proposition 1st. The Scriptures teach that the immersion in water of a proper subject in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost is scriptural water baptism. Srigley affirmed; Honnoll denied. Srigley laid his foundation broad and deep by quoting these texts: Matt. iii, 5, 16; Acts viii, 38, 39; Romans v, 4. But, unfortunately for Bro. Srigley, he never could show where any person was immersed in water—all supposition. After using many very hard expressions in regard to the Methodist Church and Methodist preachers, he took his seat, and Bro. Honnoll took the stand and reminded the people that Bro. Srigley had made out no case. Bro. Honnoll talked for one hour, and adjourned for dinner.

Bro. Srigley came on the stand at 2 o'clock P. M., and rehearsed his morning speech, after which Bro. Honnoll took the stand and declared that no case had yet been made out, and stated that if Bro. Srigley was unable to make out a case of scriptural water baptism, that he, Honnoll, would on next day make out a case for him.

At 8 o'clock, second day, Srigley went on stand and stated that he had already made his speech, and would sit around and mind it. Honnoll went on stand and proved that the introduction of water into the church was in the days of the Lord and the prophets, and that it was always used by sprinkling or pouring, and that John and Christ were under the Lord and were governed by the Lord, and that Philip preached from the Prophets, and that John baptized with water, and that every case of baptism was done by applying the water to the subject, and not the subject to the water.

So ended the first proposition, and it has been claimed by many strong immersionists that Honnoll gained a great victory over his opponent.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. T. Woodward, P. C., Simesport, La., June 17, 1898: "We have just closed a good meeting at Woodside Church, on this charge. I was assisted by Rev. P. A. Johnston, one of our superannuates. He did faithful work; was very acceptable to my people. Had three accessions to the church—two by certificate and one by profession. We have had 21 additions this year—15 by profession and 6 by certificate. Our mission in Point Coupee parish is moving along all right. We expect to build a church at two points on the mission."

Rev. S. B. Beall, P. C., Morgan City, La.: "We are steadily advancing along the several lines of Christian activity. There are marked evidences of spiritual, intellectual and financial life and growth daily manifest among the people of our community. We have just closed a series of services at Morgan City Church with gratifying results. Bro. W. G. Evans, Dr. W. T. Beall and J. J. Smylie rendered efficient service during the progress of this meeting. The church was aroused and quickened, and evidently grasped a higher conception of Christian duty. Many attained a richer and more delightful experience in the Christian life. A number found peace with God and enjoyed the gracious favor of sins forgiven. There were 20 accessions to the church, 7 of whom were formerly members of the Catholic Church. May 1 marked an epoch in the history of this church long to be cherished in the memories of the citizens of Berwick and vicinity. The generous and much-loved Capt. J. N. Pharr, out of the largeness of his heart, presented to the M. E. Church, South, a beautiful and handsomely furnished building, erected after modern style at a cost of $3,500. A great crowd assembled to witness and enjoy the dedication service; Bro. H. O. White officiating. I am glad to state that, after earnest and energetic effort, I have secured all claims apportioned to us. I have used the card system with telling effect. By adopting and using systematic measures we may easily secure these claims. The sum total collected and expended on this charge since Conference for all purposes is $4,196. We have two Sunday-schools, of which we have many reasons to be proud—each doing effective work. Every indication is that God is richly blessing us here. To the Father, Son and Holy Spirit be all the praise eternally."

Rev. W. A. Terry, Tranquil charge, Free Run, Miss., June 11, 1898: "It affords me much pleasure to say that we are moving on very peaceably and successfully with our work on Tranquil charge. We have every reason to be encouraged with our success so far this year. Since Conference we have built and furnished a real nice parsonage on the above-named circuit. Mrs. Terry and I are living in it. We anticipate going to the Annual Conference not owing a dollar on the home, nor for the furniture. The people have responded very liberally to my calls for money. We have also rewhitened Tranquil Church on the outside, and repaired the benches in the same. We have the money about made up to paint Pleasant Hill Church, which we expect to do soon. I am taking my collections now, and am succeeding very well in getting pledges. We have recently observed Children's Day at Tranquil and Zeiglerville Churches, and the exercises at both places far surpassed our most sanguine expectations. Large crowds assembled at each place, really more than could be accommodated (except at the tables), for at each place a sumptuous dinner was spread, and those who were present partook of the refreshments until their hunger vanished. The children performed their parts to the utter satisfaction of the audience. The collection for both places amounted to twelve dollars and seventy cents. The Sabbath-schools on Tranquil charge are more flourishing than they have been since I have been pastor of the work. I think, brethren, that we ought to give more attention to the Sabbath-school work than we do, or, at least, more than some of us do. Children appreciate our attention. Success to the ADVOCATE."

MONTROSE, MISS.

The Children's Day service was a perfect success. The church was decorated with beautiful flowers and evergreens. The program furnished by the Southern Methodist Publishing House was carried out. The children were well trained in the singing and recitations, which made the program very interesting and instructive. The lecture by Rev. I. B. Robertson, "Children, Obey Your Parents," was all that could be expected, notwithstanding we always expect a great deal when Bro. Robertson gets up. Collection amounted to $3.65.

June 5, 1898.

A halting, hesitating disciple is no disciple. There stands the plow. Either leave it alone, or, if you take hold of it at all, put your eye on the line before you and give your whole heart and thought to the furrow you are about to plow. Your choice of Christ, your love for Christ, your consecration to Christ, must settle all questions, or it is no choice, no love, no consecration at all. There are crises in life in which a hesitating, wavering, irresolute love is none at all. This is one of them.—Lyman Abbott, D. D.

Death Loves a Shining Mark.

"She is an only daughter and only seventeen," writes Mrs. H. H. Conklin, of Morten Avenue, Batavia, N. Y., in a recent letter addressed to Doctor R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y. "We began your medicine in May (the 'Favorite Prescription'). My daughter then was very wasted, in fact we did not think she could live long. She had profuse menstruation which was of long standing; also a bad cough. We had spent a great deal of money and worried a great deal. When she began taking your medicine her weight was only eighty-seven pounds. She now weighs from ninety-eight to one hundred all the time and is well. Is cured entirely of her difficulty, has no cough at all, and all for eight or ten dollars. It had gotten to be a serious question with us. We had done all we could for her. We are truly grateful to you for all your kind advice and sympathy in the matter. We feel that you are a personal friend."

No living physician has a wider practical experience or enjoys a higher reputation in the treatment of diseases peculiar to women than Dr. Pierce. In cases of this nature he will send by mail careful professional advice without charge, and instructions whereby the most obstinate ailments may be entirely overcome. His "Favorite Prescription" is the only proprietary remedy ever designed by an educated, authorized physician specifically to cure women's diseases. It is the only medicine which makes motherhood perfectly safe and comparatively easy and painless.

Say "No" and stick to it when urged to accept a substitute.

of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$5.00. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to July, '99. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Send for circular. Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

SELF-PRONOUNCING

S. S. Teachers' Reference Bible.

Text Conforms Exactly to the Oxford Teachers' Edition.

The self-pronouncing text enables the reader to pronounce all proper names at a glance.

This Bible is printed from Large, Beautiful and Clear New Type. All Proper Names are Divided into Syllables and Every Vowel is Marked and the Syllables Inflected, showing the Sounds and Accents as they are given in a Dictionary, thus enabling the reader to properly pronounce every word. This feature is a great improvement and a strong recommendation for this Bible over others.

This Bible contains the celebrated Oxford Teachers' Helps together with a complete series of New Maps illustrating the geography of Palestine and the surrounding countries from the earliest times, and embodying the most recent discoveries renders this Bible especially desirable to teachers and students of the Holy Scriptures.

Imperial Seal Binding, Tuck Edges, known as "Divinity Circuit," Linen Lined, Round Corners, Red under Gold Edges, Price, $4.00.

This book in Bourgeois type will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price ($4) to any address; but to that select class who read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, we furnish it on the following terms: Pay your subscription one full year in advance, viz., to July, '99, and we will send it to you, postpaid, for $4.75. (A little later you will have to pay to August, '99.) We will also send this book as a premium for two new subscribers at the regular rate—$2 per annum. We will also send this Bible with index for 50 cents additional.

For fifty cents additional we will send Bible with index. For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved on the outside in gilt letters.

P. S.—We are still handling the Minion type and the Emerald type Bible; but will not continue to do so long. Those who wish to order should do so at once.

GLADSTONE.

When, on the morning of May 19, the news flashed over the wires that Gladstone, the "Great Commoner," had peacefully passed away at Hawarden, the whole civilized world was plunged into grief, for not alone by his countrymen, but by the people of every nation, was this great Christian statesman loved and honored. His splendid genius, incorruptible integrity, sublime faith, lofty achievements, and still loftier endeavors, have long challenged the admiration of the world, and have left behind him a trail of glory that will not soon grow dim. Unquestionably, he was the greatest statesman of the century, and we doubt if he has had a superior in the annals of the world. In strength of intellect, depth of conviction, breadth of view, tenacity of purpose, unselfishness of life, and loyalty to truth, he had few rivals and no superior. In length, usefulness and eventfulness, his career is almost without a parallel in history. Not soon will the world look upon his like again. Like Cæsar's, his was many-sided greatness; but, unlike Cæsar, he never sacrificed principle for self-interest, or greedily coveted public honors and rewards. Place meant to him simply the opportunity to promote the good of the people, to extend and exalt righteousness even at the cost of his own preferment. In statecraft, in finance, in oratory, in letters, and in religion, he was a prince among men. Truly his is "One of the few, the immortal names,

That were not born to die."

Thus, at the ripe old age of eighty-nine years, after having witnessed the success of many noble undertakings, having repeatedly enjoyed the highest honors within the gift of the nation, having emerged unsullied from the field of political strife, this grand old man sank sweetly to rest in calm expectation of a glorious immortality. To the last his faith in God and a future life was vigorous and triumphant.

Gladstone, though born in England, was of almost unmixed Scottish ancestry—a fact of which he never ceased to be proud. He first saw the light in Liverpool, Dec. 29, 1809. His father was a leading merchant of that city, a member of Parliament, and wore the honor of baronet. His mother was a Highland girl of noble family. From the very beginning he was favored with the best of influences and advantages, and wondrously well did he use them. His father and mother, it is said, were accustomed to argue with their children on all sorts of topics—a practice which undoubtedly did much to develop in the lad a love for debate and a proper appreciation of logic.

At the age of eleven he went to Eton, College, a historic preparatory school, where he remained six years. In 1829 he entered Christ Church College, Oxford, from which he was graduated two years later with the distinction of being first in both the classics and mathematics. One incident reported of his school days at Eton shows that though he usually held aloof from athletic sports, he was no milk-sop. It seems to have been the custom of the Eton boys, during the annual fair, to indulge in a sport resembling bear-baiting or bull-fighting, some unfortunate boys being the animals tortured. Young Gladstone espoused their cause and denounced the sport as barbarous. When sneered at for his so-called effeminacy, he boldly stepped out and declared himself ready to back up his remarks by the use of muscle, if necessary; wherenpon he was promptly let alone.

While at Oxford he belonged to the famous "Union Debating Society," in which he soon distinguished himself by his brilliant oratory. After listening to the most celebrated of his university speeches, Bishop Charles Wentworth expressed the decided conviction that Gladstone would one day be Prime Minister of England. Though intemperance was quite common during his career at the university, he set an example of moderation which, it is said, has ever since been quite potential for good. A college friend of his testifies that "no man in Oxford habitually read his Bible more, or knew it better."

At the time of his graduation Gladstone had some thought of becoming a minister of the Church of England; but as his father was strongly opposed to this, and as he felt no impulse which he regarded as a divine call, he changed his programme.

His remarkable and changeful political career dates from his election in 1832, at the age of twenty-three, to a seat in the House of Commons, his university reputation as a debater and as a fiery champion of Tory principles being the cause of his securing this honor. Strangely enough, he was elected a member of Parliament by means of what was then known in England as the "pocket-borough," a system which he afterwards labored with all his might to abolish. His course in this matter brings out a striking and commendable trait in his character, viz.: his loyalty to his convictions. The beginning of his public life was in singular contrast with the principles afterwards espoused and advocated. As one writer justly remarks, "He reversed the usual order of things in his life; for while we look for liberal views and a liberal spirit in a young man, and are not surprised when an old man clings to the past, and is reluctant to make radical changes, Mr. Gladstone's liberalism and boldest ideas came with his later years." The atmosphere of Oxford was just such as to develop in him those aristocratic feelings and claims, and the ardent Toryism which his father believed in. Consequently, at first he overvalued the privileges of the aristocracy, displayed excessive reverence for existing institutions, and expressed distrust of the common people. But from a Tory of the Tories, a Conservative of the Conservatives he developed into a radical reformer, a statesman of the broadest type. About a year after entering Parliament he was appointed Junior Lord of the Treasury under Sir Robert Peel. His party soon afterward having gone out of power, he devoted his leisure to reading and study, but still gave close attention to his duties as a member of Parliament. At this time he wrote and published his remarkable book, "The Relation of the State to the Church," a work that created no small stir, and brought him under the notice of Lord McCauley.

At the age of thirty-three Gladstone was appointed vice-president of the Board of Trade, in which office he gave unmistakable proof of signal ability as a financier. For more than twenty years England's financial policy was guided almost solely by his wisdom. Though he abolished, or largely reduced, the tariff on twelve hundred articles of commerce, greatly to the benefit of the poor and the middle classes, he at the same time succeeded in increasing the revenues of the government, and diminished the national debt. He had the very rare power of investing statistics—the facts and figures of finance—with an irresistible charm, so that while discussing financial questions with nothing before him but a single scrap of paper, he could hold the rapt attention of the House of Commons from three to five hours.

Gladstone's first great speech in Parliament was made in 1852 in answer to a masterly effort by Benjamin Disraeli, then Chancellor of the Exchequer. It was two o'clock in the morning when Disraeli sat down, and so stupendous was the impression made that no one save Gladstone believed it possible for it ever to be answered. But Gladstone at once sprang to his feet to deliver an extempore reply, and when he had concluded, the unanimous verdict was that "Disraeli's speech had been outdone and outshone."

Then began a parliamentary struggle between these two intellectual giants that lasted for twenty-four years, first one, and then the other, scoring a triumph.

In 1868 Gladstone became Prime Minister—an honor conferred upon him twice afterwards. Almost immediately he proposed the disestablishment of the State Church in Ireland—a measure which he had vigorously opposed in the earlier years of his public career. After a long and bitter fight success crowned his efforts. He also secured, not long afterwards, a bill for the relief of Irish tenants, which gives promise of measureless benefits to this oppressed class.

The closing years of his career were devoted to the heroic advocacy of "Home Rule for Ireland," in the support of which he was twice defeated, the second time in 1894, when he retired finally from public life. Though he failed apparently in achieving this great reform which he championed with all his might, he prepared the way for its final triumph, which is one of the inevitable things of the future. No less an authority than Justin McCarthy testifies that "there will be no reaction in English legislation against any of the great movements which Mr. Gladstone inspired and directed."

Seldom in the history of any country has so distinguished a leader been forced to change his constituency so often; but to Mr. Gladstone principle was dearer than party or place, and the approval of conscience sweeter than the plaudits of the multitudes. Regardless of his political fortunes, he followed the light of new, but genuine convictions, and on account thereof he was time and again retired from office only to be returned by a new constituency and a larger majority.

The last four years of his life, though spent in peaceful retirement, were not years of sloth. Numerous articles from his pen have appeared in the magazines, reviews and newspapers, all showing that his mental force had not abated, and that his interest in public affairs had not declined!

Gladstone was eminent in letters as well as in statecraft. His thorough acquaintance with science and classical lore was astonishing. His Homeric studies, in which he took such delight, would alone have made him famous. He once addressed ten thousand people in Athens in modern Greek. He could converse in French with the greatest ease. Altogether, his publications number over sixty volumes. Eight years ago he wrote, as the result of ripe experience and careful study, a strong defense of the Bible, which he termed, "The Impregnable Rock of Holy Scripture."

His home life may be characterized as ideal. In 1839 he was married to Miss Catharine Glynne, an heiress of a large estate and a woman of lovely character, who still survives.

Through his whole life Gladstone was a devout and faithful Christian. His courage never faltered, nor did his faith weaken amid the trying scenes and duties of political life. Not a great while before his death he gave forth this ringing testimony: "All I think, all I hope, all I write, all I live for, is based upon the divinity of Jesus Christ."

One Sunday, when a visitor to Hawarden, who had been admitted to the library, asked Mr. Gladstone the secret of his being so young, he pointed to an inscription on the mantel, which read: "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee." So regular was he in church attendance that men could set their time-pieces by his movements. So pleasing was his elocution that people from Chester and Liverpool used to travel many miles to hear him read the lessons on Sunday at Hawarden Church. The editor of the New York Advocate says: "His career demonstrates the compatibility of the most intense activity and absorbing interest in science, literature, and art, and the bearing of great personal and public burdens with systematic religious life and work, and stamps as forever fallacious the plea which statesmen, politicians and men in great business glibly make, that they are too busy to give attention to religion."

Says Prof. Jacob Cooper, of Rutgers College: "In religion he had that charity which, according to the apostle, is greater than all other virtues, and will endure when they pass away. A churchman of churchmen all his life, yet often, when in the Highlands, he worshiped in the humblest Scotch kirk, and led the Psalm with his melodious voice. A vigorous opponent of the unwarranted pretensions of the Papacy, he sought for such co-operation between Protestants and Catholics that a united front might be presented by the whole body of Christ. By this attitude he neither compromised the truth, nor showed any leanings toward Rome, as has been charged, but a sincere desire to do battle by united effort against all forms of unbelief!"

Our church in Shreveport has sustained a severe loss in the death of Capt. C. J. Foster. He was a thoroughly consistent Christian, an ardent Methodist, and a man of great influence. The funeral services took place on Saturday last, and were conducted by Rev. W. H. LaPrade and Rev. J. L. Pierce.

TO SUBSCRIBERS.

According to a recent act of Congress, every check, draft, post-office money order and express order must, after July 1, bear a United States revenue stamp. A two cents' stamp is required on sums of $100 or less. Let all our subscribers take note of this and govern themselves accordingly. Those who desire to save the two cents can do so by remitting by registered letter.

WHOM DO THEY REPRESENT?

It has been so freely stated before legislative committees at Baton Rouge, and even in the General Assembly itself, that a great majority of the people of New Orleans favor the repeal of the Sunday closing law, that such a declaration demands some examination.

The Sunday law was enacted in 1886. Every two years since that time the General Assembly has been told that the people of New Orleans are opposed to the law, and with almost one voice eagerly ask for its repeal; but the fact remains that the only persons who have appeared at Baton Rouge to express what they pretend is the universal popular hostility to the law have been a few liquor dealers, their agents, and some politicians under their influence. The people directly or indirectly concerned in the sale of liquors are the only persons who have sought the repeal of the Sunday law.

The pretense of a few liquor dealers to represent the 300,000 people of New Orleans has its parallel for impudence and absurdity in the exploit of the Three Tailors of Tooley street, told by Canning, who, in a petition addressed to Parliament, set out with the words, "We, the people of England," etc. When a half-score of liquor dealers and their agents and dependents attempt to present themselves in the General Assembly of Louisiana as entitled to speak for a majority of the people of New Orleans, they are entitled to no more consideration on that score than were the three ridiculous tailors of Tooley street.

It is an exhibition of extreme impudence and absurdity for a few parties who want to open their barrooms on Sundays to go before the State Legislature and declare that they are sent to speak the sentiments and wishes of the great body of the people of New Orleans.

If those liquor sellers would confine themselves to speaking only for their own business interests, nobody would complain, for plenty of people lobby in the Legislature for various private concerns; but when they assume to speak for the whole people of New Orleans, they are guilty of gross misrepresentation.

It is far from true that the liquor men who have been lobbying at Baton Rouge speak for the whole of the liquor trade. Many of the retail grocers in New Orleans have bars attached to their establishments, and pay licenses for retailing liquors. They do this in order to meet competition, which might otherwise draw away some of their customers. Within a few days past one of the largest dealers in this line in the city, a man who employs quite fifty assistants in his business, wrote to a country member of the Legislature, urging that no change be made in the law that would rob him and his numerous employees of their Sunday rest. If the grog-shops attached to the corner groceries be allowed to open on Sunday, every such place will have to take advantage of the situation, because the keenness of business competition will not permit any to remain closed.

There are not a few liquor dealers in this situation. They do not wish to open their places on Sundays, unless forced to it by competition, and this fact remains, that a few barkeepers of Tooley or any other street in New Orleans not only do not represent the 300,000 people of New Orleans, but they do not represent all the barkeepers in the city. Therefore their pretense about representing anybody but the few concerned with them is impudent and ridiculous in the extreme.—Picayune.

Our esteemed contemporary describes the situation exactly. It is not "the people of New Orleans" who are raising all this racket at Baton Rouge, but a handful of New Orleans liquor dealers and their tools and allies. Such a gang ought to have no influence with our Solons.

PUBLISHER'S NOTES.

Our readers who are in any way interested in the cause of female education should not fail to read the advertisement of Grenada College. This institution, the property of the North Mississippi Conference, is admirably equipped for the work which it proposes to do. Its buildings are spacious and well constructed; its grounds are large and beautiful. In the matter of healthfulness of location it challenges comparison with any institution in the land. It has a strong faculty and an admirably managed boarding department. The president, Dr. J. W. Malone, has proved himself to be "the right man in the right place." Let those who have daughters to educate send to Dr. Malone for a catalogue.

We invite special attention to the advertisement of Millwood Institute in this issue. The principal, Miss A. M. E. Pearce, is a daughter of the late Rev. Levi Pearce, of the Mississippi Conference. She is a woman of fine culture and excellent administrative ability and has had considerable experience in her chosen field. She is admirably fitted to the position which she fills. She has a fine faculty. The teachers in the literary department were all educated at the I. I. and C. at Columbus, Miss.

A QUERY.

MR. EDITOR: All of your readers must have been very much delighted with your eloquent description of that marvelous work of art—the Congressional Library at Washington. If you will not construe me as an intruder and inharmonious, I want to ask you the same question that I propounded to Bishop Galloway while standing beneath one of those lofty domes. The Bishop, of course, like every one else, was enraptured; his eye, face and lips alike gave utterance to his admiration. At the close of an exclamation, indicative of delighted appreciation on his part, I asked this question, "Why among all these inscriptions along walls and domes, selected from the world's greatest characters, is there not one utterance from Jesus of Nazareth?" At the time this question was asked I could not be sure that there might not have been one which had escaped observation, but I have verified the correctness of my observation since by looking carefully through the Library Hand-book. There are inscriptions which are quotations from Young, Novallis, Milton, Carlyle, Lowell, Ovid, Shakespeare, Cicero, Chrysostom, Longfellow, Bacon, Petrarch, Emerson, John, Micah, Hooker, Psalms, Washington, Webster, Jefferson, U. S. Grant, Proverbs, Adelaide Proctor, Herbert Spencer, and others, but found no quotation from the lips of Him who was greater than them all. Why? The writer has felt a pain, both acute and deep, as he has pondered this question over and over again.

Yours truly, D. C. KELLEY.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Booneville, Miss., EDITOR.

We are informed that Rev. Thomas Carter, formerly of Centenary College, and now professor of Greek in Tulane University, has been recommended for associate editor to represent Louisiana Leagues.

The Leagues of New Orleans certainly made no mistake in asking the State Executive Committee to appoint the above-named brother. His work at Centenary will abide. We congratulate Tulane upon their good fortune in securing him.

After July 1 it is proposed by many of the Leaguers to begin a course of missionary study. Bro. Carter has agreed to outline the study for each week in League Department of the ADVOCATE.

The New Orleans Union Epworth League held an interesting meeting on Tuesday evening, June 14, at Louisiana Avenue Church. The League at this particular church has pledged $20 for missions.

The following Leagues also report pledges on missionary specials: Dryades Street, $20; Carrollton Avenue, $10; Algiers, $10.

Many of the Leagues in Louisiana have recently been visited by Bro. C. D. Atkinson, of Vanderbilt University, a representative of the Student Missionary Campaign, sent out by the Mission Board—and the result was a forward movement in missionary study.

Nearly all the Leagues in New Orleans, and some outside the city, have ordered missionary libraries, and expect soon to begin a regular course of study.

If all of the Leaguers would assist the editor as Bro. Robert H. Wynn, of Algiers, has done, it would be an easy matter to make the Epworth League Department interesting.

Rev. Inman Williams Cooper, A. M., D. D., the friend of the young people, has recently been elected president of Centenary College, Jackson, La. It goes without saying that every Leaguer in Louisiana will rally to his support and help him fill old Centenary with boys next September.

Rev. William Belton Murrah, D. D., has yielded to the wishes of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College, and will remain at the head of that institution, although he had been elected by the General Conference as Secretary of the Board of Education.

Question: Why did the Mississippi Leaguers vote for the establishment of this department in the ADVOCATE?

Answer: That it might prove a medium of communication among them.

The above is a statement of fact, and yet they have forgotten to send in their reports, furnish information, or ask questions relative to the work. This makes it hard upon the editor, who has many other things to do besides fill this column.

We want to hear from Grenada, Water Valley, McComb City, Greenville, Meridian, Vicksburg, Natchez, and fifty other places we could mention where the League flourishes. Let the postal card reports come in thick and fast. Who will be the first to drop a line?

Don't be discouraged because yours is not a model League. We are cognizant of the fact that it is hard work in some places, but you will nearly always find a few who are loyal and want to learn how to do more and better work for Jesus. Sow the good seed; it will spring up somewhere some day.

STUDIES IN MISSIONS.

PRELIMINARY NOTICE.

With a view to bringing themselves into more direct touch with the missionary movements of our day, and thus becoming stimulated to more earnest and intelligent effort in this all-important branch of the church's work, the Leaguers of New Orleans have adopted a plan for the systematic study of missions. The general idea of this movement is in accordance with a plan recently adopted with great enthusiasm by the Epworth League Union of Nashville.

The watchwords are: Pray, Study, Give. The second of these is the true source of the other two. Study of the various fields shows the urgent need of the prayer that the Lord of the harvest should send forth laborers, and, at the same time, must ever be the incentive to all intelligent giving—looking to the support of these men and women in the field. Facts constitute the only fuel that will keep our ardor continually ablaze.

It may be well to state that nearly all of the Leagues have formed study classes ranging from 6 to 25. The outlines of the course will appear in the ADVOCATE from week to week, and it is hoped that a great number of the Leaguers in the country, as well as in the smaller towns and cities, will join their brothers and sisters in New Orleans in this movement towards a fuller appreciation of what God is doing among the nations of the earth. This will lead not only to a broadening of our mental horizon, but also to a deepening of the spiritual life of our young people, which must necessarily be the ultimate aim of all our efforts as Leaguers.

The text-book chosen by those who have the course in hand is, "The Miracles of Missions," by Arthur T. Pierson. It is expected that every member of the various classes will secure at once a copy of the book. Get for the present course the first series, paper edition. It may be had from Barbee and Smith, Nashville, Tenn., for 25 cents.

In conclusion, it is requested that any question in regard to different points, or suggestions with reference to the work in hand, be forwarded the undersigned, where they will receive prompt attention.

REV. H. MELLARD ALMOST LOSES AN EYE.

Six weeks ago Rev. Hervy Mellard, pastor of Daleville charge, Mississippi Conference, was mending a fence on the parsonage premises, when a nail flew into his left eye, piercing the ball a little way. It was feared that his whole eye would have to be extracted, but Dr. Barber, of Meridian, says now that his eye will be saved, though there will be but little, if any, sight through it. The wound has been very painful, and our brother has not been able to preach since the unfortunate occurrence.

HOW TO GET TEACHERS.

Write to J. M. Dewberry, Manager of "The School Agency," Birmingham, Ala., stating kind of teacher desired and the pay. He recommends efficient teachers to Schools, Colleges and Families free of charge throughout the South and Southwest. Sells and rents school property. Efficient teachers desiring information should write for circulars.

THEEP WORTH ERA.

The Epworth Era, as soon as the agents can perfect arrangements, will be enlarged to a twelve page paper. Its circulation is all important to the success of our work. Our best energies, and all the means at our command, will be employed to make a paper such as our young people need and demand. We confidently appeal to our constituency, the leaguers and their friends, to push the circulation of their organ everywhere and without delay. We should have ten thousand new subscribers at once. Let every State, Conference, district union, and chapter president move promptly with us in this matter. Let every leaguer become an agent. The paper is yours; the work is yours. Take single subscriptions at $1.00; clubs of ten for 75 cents each.

NOTICE.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Meridian district, Mississippi Conference, will convene at West End Church, Meridian, Miss., July 8, 1898. MRS. S. B. WATTS, District Secretary.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL YEAR BOOK OF MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Pastors of Mississippi Conference:

In the booklet which our Sunday-school Board proposes to issue and place in your hands by Aug. 1, there will be published a list of those Sunday schools that have observed Children's Day and forwarded the collections to our treasurer, Rev. H. P. Lewis, Carthage, Miss. Those of you who have not already attended to this matter will please do so by July 15, in order that your schools may appear in the report. The Board hopes to do better work in the future, and to make its work better understood. We earnestly desire that all the Children's Day money be in the treasury by July 15, so that we can plan our work. Attend to this.

The booklet will be annual; it will give the Minutes of the Sunday-school Conference, a directory of superintendents and workers, the work of the Sunday school Board since the Annual Conference at Jackson, the policy of the Board for the future, and some other matters looking to the advancement of the Sunday school cause. Respectfully,

HENRY G. HAWKINS,
Sec. S. S. Board, Miss. Conf.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD.

OF INTEREST TO STOCKHOLDERS.

FREE TRANSPORTATION TO ATTEND THE ANNUAL MEETING AT CHICAGO. SOME INTERESTING FACTS.

In order that stockholders of the Illinois Central Railroad Company may more readily attend in person the annual meetings, there has been posted in each station of the Company a notice to the effect that, in accordance with a resolve of the Board of Directors, there may be issued to each holder of one or more shares of the capital stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, as registered on the books of the Company, a ticket enabling him or her to travel free over the Company's lines from the station of the Illinois Central Railroad nearest to his or her registered address, to Chicago and return, for the purpose of attending, in person, the next Annual Stockholders' Meeting of the Company, which will be held at its General Office in Chicago on Wednesday, September 28, 1898, at noon. Details as to the necessary procedure to obtain such ticket, the date of its issue and its limit, are fully set forth on the posted notices referred to. In this connection, it will be interesting to note that since, in 1862, the capital stock of the Company became full paid, a cash dividend, ranging from 4 per cent. to 10 per cent. per annum has been paid semi-annually to every holder of stock, and that it is now twenty years since the Company, in any year, paid less than 5 per cent., the present rate of distribution.

Niagara Vapor Baths

We are the original manufacturers of portable Vapor Baths.

We have, during the last ten years, supplied thousands of our Baths to physicians, hospitals, sanitariums, etc., and we are now, for the first time, advertising them direct to the general public.

IN BUYING A VAPOR BATH

Get one with a steel frame that stands on the floor. If a manufacturer does not show you one cut of the frame without the covering, you may take it for granted that his "Steel Frame" is a wire hoop that rests on the shoulders of the bather.

Get one that is covered with proper material. Insist on seeing a sample of material before ordering. We make our own covering material and print it with a handsome "all-over" pattern of Niagara Falls.

Get one with a thermometer attachment. Don't go it blind—a bath that is too hot or not hot enough will be of no benefit to you.

Get one that you can return and have your money back if not satisfactory in every way.

Send for sample of material and interesting booklet that will tell you all about Vapor Baths.

Vapor Baths are an acknowledged household necessity. Turkish, Hot Air, Vapor, Sulphur or Medicated Baths at Home, &c. Purifies system, produces cleanliness, health, strength. Prevents disease, obesity. Cures Colds, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, La Grippe, Malaria, Eczema, Catarrh, Female Ills, Blood, Skin, Nerve and Kidney Troubles. Beautifies Complexion.

"LUCK."

The boy who's always wishing
That this or that might be,
But never tries his mettle,
Is the boy that's bound to see
His plans all come to failure,
His hopes end in defeat,
For that's what comes when wishing
And working fail to meet.

The boy who wishes this thing
Or that thing with a will
That spurs him on to action,
And keeps him trying still
When effort meets with failure,
Will some day surely win,
For he works out what he wishes,
And that's where "luck" comes in!

The "luck" that I believe in
Is that which comes with work,
And no one ever finds it
Who's content to wish and shirk.
The men the world calls "lucky"
Will tell you, every one,
That success comes not by wishing,
But by hard work, bravely done.

THE INFLUENCE OF A SINGLE BOOK.

"Books are strange things. Although untongued and dumb,
Yet with their eloquence they sway the world;
And, powerless and impassive as they seem,
Move o'er the impressive minds and hearts of men
Like fire across a prairie. Mind sparks,
They star the elee dark firmament."

"When I went into the street, after reading that book," said a man who had been perusing Homer, "men seemed to be ten feet high."

It is said that Voltaire, at the age of five years, read a skeptical poem, the impression of which made him the arch-scoffer of his century. A lad once showed to another a book full of words and pictures of impurity. He only had it in his hands a few moments. Later in life he held high office in the church, and, years afterwards, told a friend that he would have given half he possessed had he never seen it, for its impure images at the most holy times would sometimes rise unbidden in his mind.

A book that starts a young person on a life career is a great power. The inspiration of a single book has made teachers, preachers, philosophers, authors, statesmen. On the other hand, the demoralizing effect of one book has made infidels, profligates, criminals.

Ossian's poems had a marked impression on Napoleon's life, and he was never weary of singing the praises of Homer. Cotton Mather's "Essay to Do Good" helped to shape Franklin's whole career. Tyndall was greatly influenced by Emerson's book on Nature. Beecher declares that Ruskin's books taught him the secret of seeing, and that no man can ever again be quite the same man or look at the world in the same way after reading him.

Madame Roland would take a copy of Plutarch to church, and read a sentence at every pause in the devotional exercises. The book was also a favorite with Napoleon. Plutarch pictures with a masterly hand little peculiarities in his heroes unnoticed by other writers. He said he would leave descriptions of great battles to others, and confine himself to scenes indicating the souls of men. Shakespeare copied many things from Plutarch, sometimes repeating his language word for word. Curran used to read Homer through once a year.

The sight of an engraving representing Troy in flames, its battlements clearly defined, stimulated Dr. Schlieman to attempt those explorations and excavations which have resulted in such wonderful discoveries. Luther was encouraged by the life and writings of John Huss.

Samuel Drew said that Locke's "Essay on the Understanding" awakened him from stupor, and induced him to form a resolution to abandon the groveling views he had been accustomed to maintain.

Abbott's "Life of Napoleon," read at the age of seven years, sent one boy I knew to the army before he was fourteen.

An English tanner, whose leather gained a great reputation, said he should not have made it so good if he had not read Carlyle.

In the parlor window of the old mossy vicarage, where Coleridge spent his dreamy childhood, lay a well-thumbed copy of that Oriental fancy, the "Arabian Nights," and he has told us with what mingled desire and apprehension he was wont to look at the precious book, until the morning sunshine had touched and illuminated it, when, seizing it hastily, he would carry it off in triumph to some leafy nook in the vicarage garden, and plunge delightedly into its maze of marvels and enchantments.

Who can not trace in the poet's writings the influence of this book?

Hundreds of similar instances might be cited, and the moral is not far to seek. The carefulness with which books for youth should be written and selected can not be overestimated.—Success.

THE FIDGETS.

The habit of fidgeting and worrying over little annoyances is wasteful of much nerve-force. As we sat in a street car the other day, delayed for two or three minutes at a crossing, we noted two nervous young women who continued through the slight detention to ejaculate: "I wonder what is the matter! Why don't we go on? I am so tired of waiting. I wish the car would start! O dear, how tedious this is!"—and other like expressions of impatience, while their frowning foreheads and fidgety hands, as well as their querulous tones, revealed the waste of nerve-tissue and emotional force that was going on in their frames. Meanwhile other passengers, whose work was probably just as urgent as that which awaited these fretful girls, sat still, possessing their souls in patience, considering possibly that no amount of complaining or wriggling would remove the obstruction or hasten the starting signal. In due time the car started, and the nervous strain was relieved for the hour, to be resumed on slight provocations, probably, on various occasions during the day.

The fact that this habit gives annoyance to all who are brought in contact with it is the smallest feature in the harm which it works. Apart from the fretful temper and ill-regulated moral character which it discovers, it exerts physical and mental effects which are deplorable. The life of the nerves is eaten out by this habit; brain-power and heart-power, which ought to be used to good purpose, are devoured, gradually gnawed away, by the fretting corrosions of these spells of fidgeting. The victim of this habit ought, for the sake of himself, as well as for the sake of others, resist and overcome it. Especially where the impatient habit of speech betokens a nervous breakdown, in its incipient stages, it should be remembered that no surer way can be found to hasten the prostration and make it chronic, than through an intemperate and fretful tongue. Time, strength, patience, nerve-force and moral character are all wasted by the fidgets.—Central Christian Advocate.

STREET-CAR POLITENESS.

A friend of mine was in an electric car the other day. After taking his seat he presently began to be very uncomfortable, for everybody seemed amused at him. Glances were leveled in his direction, girls giggled, elderly ladies drew their faces into a pucker, and the atmosphere of the place was as electric as the fluid which sent the car through space. After a short interval the puzzled gentleman discovered that it was not he who was the object of mirth to his comrades on the road, but a poor, shy, blushing, tearful, trembling, frightened girl who was sitting by his side. She, poor child, was dressed in an outre fashion, which did not please the set of people in that conveyance, and, evidently, she had met with an accident, for her clothing was tumbled and torn, her face bruised and cut, and one hand had been wrenched and seemed to be paining her very much. I can imagine nothing more brutally ill-bred and rudely ignorant and unfeeling than the behavior of those silly girls and boys, and still more silly-grown up people, in the car. Can you? They were laughing at a child who had met with an accident on her wheel! One of the first rules to be adopted by a thoroughly polite person is this: Never show surprise, except of the genuinely gracious kind—the kind that expresses cordial interest and pleasure. Never laugh at an awkward predicament, as, for example, a fall or a mistake made by another. Be careful never to pain any one, friend or stranger, by ridicule or by thoughtlessly plain speaking.—Harper's Round Table.

DISCIPLINE OF THE WOOD-PILE.

Every human male man, who possesses even a lingering taint of temper, should keep an axe and a wood-pile handy, that he may rush out and work off his wrath when it waxes fierce. There is nothing in this vain old world that will send a man back to his appointed work with a more wilted collar and truer comprehension of himself than thirty minutes' wrestling with a full-flavored axe. He can use it so fiercely in the wood. All the fury of his nature, all the hate he feels for his enemy, he can infuse into the axe handle; and how the chips will fly! Not very artistically, probably, but they will fly. And presently it begins to dawn upon the man that he is feeling more calm. Evidently, he is experiencing a change of heart. He does not hate his enemy at all. He changes his stroke, and begins to chop on the Italian system of penmanship—the up strokes heavy and the down strokes light. He rather loves his enemy now. At last he puts his failing strength in one terrific blow. He misses the tip with the axe and smites the chopping-block with the handle. A tingle as though he had swallowed an alarm clock goes from elbow to hip and back again, the axe drops from his powerful hands, and a weak, limp, nerveless, perspiring, trembling, gasping thing, he staggers to the house, lies down on the first thing that looks like a lounge, and is ready to die. There isn't a fear or a fault in his heart. Death has no terrors, and life has no temptations for him. He has chopped out all his baser nature, and he is just as ethereal and spiritual as he can be on this side of Jordan. It is a great medicine. —Burdette.

Hygiene.

HEALTH AS CAPITAL.

Sydney Smith said, "I am convinced that digestion is the great secret of life, and that character, virtue, talents, and other qualities are powerfully affected by beef, mutton, pie-crust, and rich soups. I have often thought I could feed or starve men into virtues or vices, and affect them more powerfully with my instruments of torture than Timotheus could do formerly with his lyre."

What is more glorious than a magnificent manhood, animated with the bounding spirits of overflowing health?

It is a sad sight to see thousands of students graduated every year from our grand institutions, whose object is to make stalwart, independent, self-supporting men, turned out into the world saplings instead of stalwart oaks, "memory glands" instead of brainy men, helpless instead of self-supporting, sickly instead of robust, weak instead of strong, leaning instead of erect. — "So many promising youths, and never a finished man!"

The character sympathizes with and unconsciously takes on the nature of the body. A peevish, snarling, ailing man can not develop the vigor and strength of character which is possible to a healthy, robust, jolly man. There is an inherent love in the human mind for wholeness, a demand that man shall come up to the highest standard; and there is an inherent protest or contempt for preventable deficiency. Nature, too, demands that man be ever at the top of his condition. The giant's strength with an imbecile's brain will not be characteristic of the coming man.

As we stand upon the seashore while the tide is coming in, one wave reaches up the beach far higher than any previous one, then recedes, and for some time none that follows comes up to its mark, but after a while the whole sea is there and beyond it; so now and then there comes a man head and shoulders above his fellow-men, showing that Nature has not lost her ideal, and, after a while, even the average man will overtop the highest wave of manhood yet given to the world.—Success.

Take notice that we are now handling two different Bibles. The difference between the two is that the one called the "Combination" Bible has all the advantages of the other Bible, and also has all the changes made by the revisers. These changes are given, however, brief notes at the bottom of each page, reference to them being facilitated by a very convenient system of notation. Thus you have all the benefits of the two versions in parallel columns without the bulkiness of such an arrangement. In ordering this edition be sure to say "Combination" Bible.

BISHOP WILSON

in speaking of the "Combination Bible says:" "In all respects it seems to me the best for use of teachers and students, ever published." Similar testimonials have been given by Bishop Hendrix, and by Bishops Hurst, Fowler, Ninde, Foss, Vincent and Warren, of the M. E. Church, by a number of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and by hundreds of the leading ministers of all Protestant denominations. Let it be noted that this Bible can be procured by sending us three new subscribers with the cash—$6.

DR. W. B. SMITH'S ADDRESS AT MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

It was the highly esteemed privilege of a select audience to hear an able commencement address in Millsaps College Chapel, June 13, at 11 A. M., from Dr. W. B. Smith, professor of mathematics in Tulane University. His subject was, "The Twilight of the Century," and he handled his theme with rare ability. He avoided the error into which too many have fallen of giving our century indiscriminate praise. He strove to set his colter deep, to see and speak of things as they are, knowing that a blind optimism is necessarily shallow, and, moreover, entails shallowness and sterility.

It is my purpose in this communication to give a brief review of portions of his address. After depicting the rapid progress made in many directions during our century, the speaker claimed that, on the other hand, the unrest and disappointment of our time have a deep-seated and potent cause. The glorious promise of enlarged political liberty and of gratifying literary and scientific progress given at the beginning of the century had not been realized.

Going into particulars, he showed that, under the name of democracy, we often had a government very different from that which the name implied. Here he paid his respects to such municipal governments as are those of New York City and Philadelphia, and he claimed further that some despotic national governments were forging ahead of some free governments. Russia, for instance, is gaining ground, and is successfully carrying forward a vigorous political policy. In short, the weak and unprogressive nations must be dismembered and ruled by the strong and progressive; hence those who had cherished strong hopes of political freedom for the race were doomed to disappointment.

Again, while science was not bankrupt, as a distinguished French critic had claimed, still scientific progress was more rapid at the beginning than at the end of the century. From this judgment he excepted mathematical science, and electrical arts and appliances. Literary glory had, in like measure, waned.

In the moral and spiritual realm the picture of the close of our century was equally gloomy. Indeed, here, in view of the much greater importance of the matter, the description, if acknowledged to be according to fact and truth, was but little short of overwhelming—more especially as the speaker seemed to claim that the educative and reformative forces at work, the school, the press, and the pulpit, were inadequate to the demands made upon them. Even religion, while it had vindicated its claim to vast regenerative resources, was unable to cope with the moral and spiritual difficulties now confronting us.

When the explanation of such conditions is asked for, the appeal now is not to absolute fate, nor yet to divine decree, but rather to the ongoings of nature under her laws. Natural causes control not political and intellectual conditions only, but, through heredity and environment, even the moral status of the individual and of the race; so that our most diligent and persistent efforts can go no further than to fill in minor details of a schema of progress and life imposed from without. Hence a sort of stoical indifference ought, in some measure at least, to relieve the pang of our disappointed hope.

The conclusion of the address was devoted to the pointing out of remedies for the evils recounted, and to the holding out of encouragements for the future. He claimed that, in spite of all, hope need not be abandoned. No matter how often philosophical theories and skeptical views may say that man's will is not free, that it can never throw off the despotism of heredity and environment, still common sense and consciousness vindicate the claim that the will is free, and it is yet sure to be acknowledged that where the spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom.

Our attitude towards the views above given must depend upon the interpretation placed upon them. It is doubtless true that only one legitimate interpretation can be put upon the discussion as a whole. I will first, however, assume an interpretation which was doubtless foreign from the speaker's purpose. I give it in one sentence. Our philosophy, philanthropy and religion have, in the court of human progress, been convicted of incompetency to stem the current of evil and deterioration, and some more potent reformative power must be found to bring us out of our distresses. Christianity, of course, stands immovably against such a conclusion. Under this interpretation the matter under review would have to be regarded as one of many futile attempts to make philosophy explain matters beyond the reach of her profoundest investigations. Some questions are to be answered by faith, not by philosophy.

But I proceed to state what I consider to be the legitimate interpretation of the address. The speaker gave us the historical status of matters, and did not claim that these actual conditions must determine our philosophic views or philanthropic hopes. Much less did he mean to use the temporary failures, which he described as a cruel staff to break the wings of a sublime Christian faith.

Evidently the views given above from the address could not be harmonized under any other interpretation, and much less could the entire address be so harmonized; hence the conclusion of the address was not inconsistent with what had gone before, but was a challenge to those who would use the unrest and partial sterility of our times as a means of unnotting our faith in social, scientific, and religious progress.

While, then, the picture which the speaker drew of the closing years of our century was, perhaps, more highly colored in some of its parts than the facts warrant, that should not be allowed to withdraw our attention from the main purpose of the address. If so, he showed us the battle of human progress is not won if a reverse in certain directions has come. Let us, then, act the part of wisdom, discover the causes of our partial defeat, and thus be ready for the dawn of the new century.

J. A. MOORE.

The love of Christ is not an absorbing, but a radiating, love. The more we love Him, the more we shall certainly love others.—Exchange.

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS
MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

If Christ seems no greater to us now than when we first became his follower, it is a bad sign. If he has not grown in our estimation, it only shows that we have been living at a distance from him and have not been growing in our knowledge of him. A mountain never seems to grow any higher to one who never approaches any nearer to it, and the heavens never grow in depth, wonder or glory to one who never studies them or seeks to peer into them. And so, if Christ is no greater in our eyes now than he was years ago, it only proves that we have not been living up to our privileges. If the indwelling Christ who was formed within us at conversion has not grown into a larger Christ, it only shows that there has been something wrong in us. He is an increasing Christ. He is a growing Christ. And if he has not been allowed to develop within us, the fault is in us. For it is his very nature to grow.—J. R. Mitchell, D. D.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address

There is One who can not be deceived. He sees through our prayers and under our broad phylacteries. He "cometh upon the heart;" he "trieth the reins." Though we make our own nest in the highest clefts, yet will he bring us down. At the sounding of the resurrection trump there will be a shaking off of gold dust and tinsel; men will come out of their graves, and blush when they read their own epitaphs. Then shall we see "face to face," and know as we are known. The play will be over, the foot-lights out, the costumes laid away, the play-house shut. No more acting! We shall stand forevermore in the clear light of God.—David J. Burrell, D. D.

STREATER—Mrs. ELIZABETH STREATER, wife of F. R. Streater, of Black Hawk, Miss., was born in North Carolina, Nov. 17, 1835, and died Feb. 25, 1898.

Her youngest daughter writes from Scarritt Training-school: "It was only in keeping with her whole life that her last act was one of thoughtfulness for her children."

From 1877 to 1881 I traveled the Black Hawk circuit. No member of that delightful charge was more thoughtful of the wants of the pastor and his family, or more devoted to the interests of the church, than was Sister Streater. She was one of those quiet, devout, unassuming Christians who do a great deal of good that is never paraded before the world. The law of kindness was in her heart. She fed upon God's Word, and lived out its truths in her daily life. Her death was very sudden. There was no dying testimony—none was needed. The calm consistency of her life, her intelligent faith in Christ, and her labors of love, were evidence sufficient that henceforth she was to be "forever with the Lord."

She was the mother of a large family. Two lovely daughters and a son preceded her to the better land. The surviving children are all consistent Christians, and are filling useful and honorable positions in society. She was gentle, cheerful, serene, "steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord."

As a wife, she did her husband good, and not evil, all her days; as a mother, she was tender and affectionate. "Whatsoever things were true, honest, just, pure, lovely, or of good report," she not only thought on, but diligently practiced.

May her surviving partner, her children, and all who read this memoir, follow her as she followed Christ!

GRAYBEARD

WE make 200 bottles of our GRAYBEARD every week. No more—no less. If 200 bottles don't fill all orders, some customer must wait until the next week. We mention this as some do not understand the delay. We have earned a reputation for making a clean, fresh, sure remedy for Cancer—Eczema, Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and we cannot make GRAYBEARD faster, and make it good.

"A few years ago Cancer appeared on my face in form of a scab—not a sore, but a scab that dropped off, and soon reappeared, some worse. Finally it annoyed me to shave. Darting pains set in, affecting my sight. People said I had Cancer—I was miserable. About that time a planter named Jordan, down the State, once similarly afflicted, sent me a bottle of GRAYBEARD advising me to take it. I did so and to my great joy got better. Skin cleared, appetite improved, I got stouter and Cancer left me. And it has not returned. GRAYBEARD saved my life.

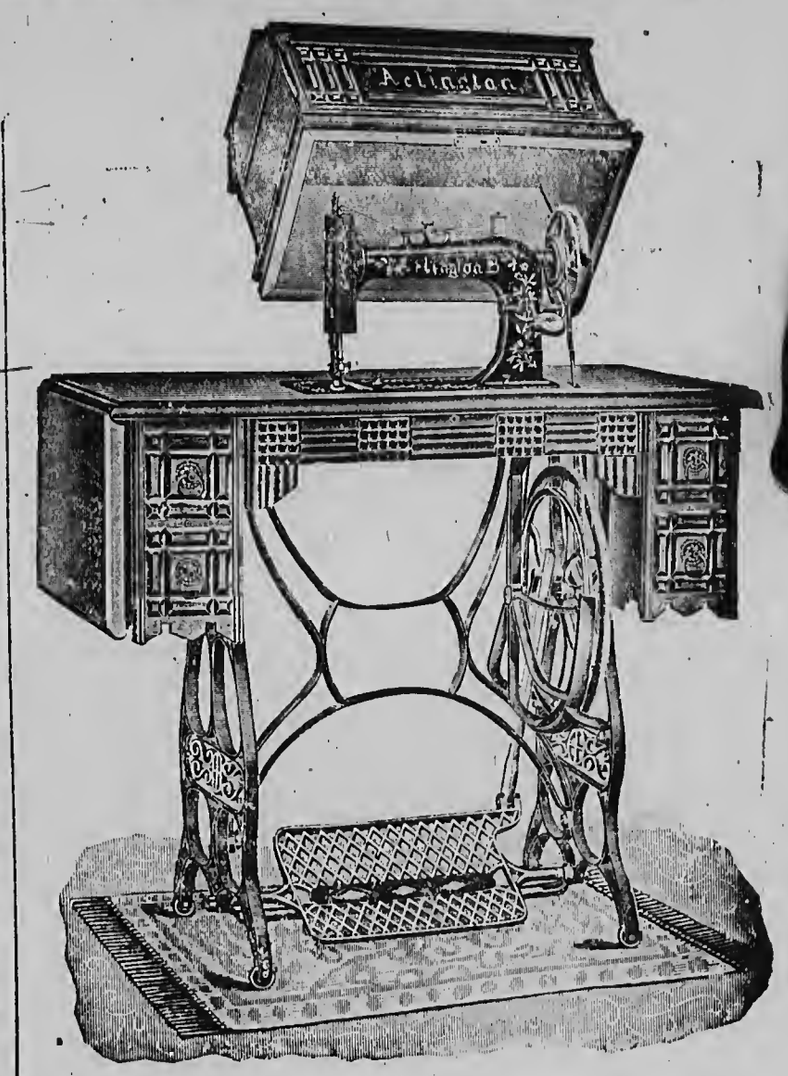
Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $19, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Major-General Miles leaves this week for Santiago with 11,000 troops to reenforce General Shafter.

The Red Cross ship "State of Texas," with Miss Clara Barton on board, has arrived in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

President McKinley sent a message to Congress recommending suitable rewards for Hobson, Newcomb, Hodgson and Powell for bravery in action.

Twenty thousand troops under Generals Shafter and Garcia have fought their way to within a few miles of Santiago, and are pushing forward to capture the city.

President Dwight, of Yale, announces that he would be pleased to have the alumni and friends of the institution to furnish it with $4,000,000, and he would like to have it all before 1902.

The Methodist and Baptist Churches of Muncie, Ind., have passed resolutions requesting women to remove their hats while attending divine worship, and the usual protests have arisen from the feminine portion of the congregations. It is probable that the action of the church authorities will meet with defiance on the part of these affected.

General Castillo, with 2000 Cubans, reports having defeated the Spaniards at Guasime with heavy loss. The Cuban losses were less than fifty. The insurgents captured two railroad trains laden with food supplies and 100 tons of coal. Further re-enforcements of Cubans are expected shortly. Transports are now en route to Cerra to get General Garcia and his forces, who will be brought here as quickly as possible.

A serious engagement occurred on June 24, at 8 P. M., five miles from Santiago, on land. Loss than 1000 American cavalrymen and Rough Riders fought 2000 Spaniards in the thickets, driving them into the city. The American loss was twelve or thirteen killed, and at least fifty wounded, including six officers. Several of the wounded will die. Twelve Spaniards were found dead in the brush. Their loss is doubtless greater. The Spaniards had every advantage both in numbers and position.

The government, having realized that there is to be stubborn fighting in Cuba, has decided to heavily re-enforce General Shafter. Accordingly, eighteen thousand men are to be sent to Cuba at once, and a sufficient fleet of transports has been secured to move that force of men with their supplies. When the re-enforcements arrive, General Shafter will have a force of more than 35,000 men. It is the announced intention that, as soon as Santiago falls, a large proportion of these troops will be sent to Porto Rico.

There is now no doubt whatever that the destination of the squadron of Admiral Camara is the Philippine Islands. Monday the fleet, consisting of fifteen ships, arrived at Port Said, at the Mediterranean entrance to the Suez Canal. After coaling, this fleet will proceed through the canal, and then to Manila. It will take between three and four weeks steaming to reach Manila, hence it is hoped that by the time Admiral Camara arrives within striking distance, Admiral Dewey will have captured Manila, established a strong garrison and thoroughly mined the entrance to Manila Bay.

The announcement that the reserve fleet of Spain, known as the Cadiz fleet, had arrived at the entrance to the Suez Canal has undoubtedly been a surprise to the authorities at Washington. Although it was know that Admiral Camara had sailed eastward, it was not believed that he would go as far as the Suez Canal, much less undertake a journey to Manila. Now that it is known that the Philippines are the destination of the Spanish fleet, the military authorities recognize that the presence of a fresh Spanish fleet in the Pacific is an element of danger which is not to be disregarded. While prompt steps are to be taken to further reenforce Admiral Dewey, the Navy Department has decided to profit by the action of Spain in denuding her own coast of warships by sending a squadron to Spanish waters to prey upon commerce and even attack the most vulnerable points on the Spanish coast. It is announced that this squadron will include at least two battle-ships, one armored cruiser and several of the fast, protected cruisers.

27th ANNUAL CAMP MEETING

—AT—

SEASHORE CAMP GROUNDS,

Located on the Gulf Shore, with a frontage of 1400 feet.

WILL OPEN (D. V.) ON WEDNESDAY, JULY 13, NEXT, AND CONTINUE FOR 8 OR 10 DAYS.

The Grounds are opened April 1, and closed Nov. 1, for occupying cottages and reception of visitors. Modern and ample accommodation have been provided for the multitudes that annually visit this refreshing and delightfully cool and bracing place of rest, free from malaria and contagious diseases.

The sea bathing is unsurpassed by any resort on the Mississippi Sound, while the supply of pure, sparkling drinking water is furnished by one of the finest of artesian wells, whose waters possess rare virtues.

The Grounds represent a beautiful grove of rare attractiveness, with its abundance of 20-odd varieties of shade trees, which afford shelter from the Summer heat.

The exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued, and act as a tonic to the debilitated visitors from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns. Boats for sailing and fishing always on hand. The drives along the seashore present magnificent views, and are over ten miles in length. Visitors are not expected to arrive or depart on the Sabbath day.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 5 to 23, inclusive, and be good to return on until Aug. 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. All trains will stop at the camp grounds from July 5 to 24, inclusive.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge.

The services during camp meeting are in charge of the presiding elders of the New Orleans, Seashore and Mobile District Conferences.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before and during camp meeting, or rent cottages for the season, will please communicate with W. L. Via, superintendent Camp Ground (Biloxi, P. O. 42, Miss.), or any of the following officers:

W. W. SUTCLIFFE, President, New Orleans, La.

DARK IS THE NIGHT.

Dark is the night, and cold the wind is blowing;
Nearer and nearer comes the breaker's roar;
Where shall I go, or whither fly for refuge?
Hide me, my Father, till the storm is o'er.

CHORUS.

With his loving hand to guide,
Let the clouds above me roll,
And the billows in their fury dash around me;
I can brave the wildest storm;
With his glory in my soul,
I can sing amidst the tempest—praise the Lord!

Dark is the night, but cheering is the promise;
He will go with me o'er the troubled wave.
Safe he will lead me through the pathless water—
Jesus the mighty and strong to save.

Dark is the night, but, lo! the day is breaking;
Onward my bark, unfurl thy every sail!
Now at the helm, I see my Father standing;
Soon will my anchor drop within the vail.

REV. HESLEP R. TUCKER.

When the itinerant laborers of the North Mississippi Conference dispersed from Oxford, last December, to their respective charges, no one marked another as a speedy victim of fatal disease. Each went with high hopes and full purpose, if not with cheerful satisfaction, to the chosen field, to do what he might in the Master's holy service. Our beloved brother, H. R. Tucker, was in the front line, and moved with knightly spirit and earnest zeal to the work he loved and did so well. It was his fourth year on Corinth district, and to complete his mission there in still greater development of its spiritual and material resources engaged all his consecrated powers. Without delay he began his round of Conferences—preaching, advising, exhorting, adjusting, marshaling his forces. While thus engaged he was called suddenly to Memphis by the unexpected death of his aged mother. There he remained some days, ministering comfort and consolation to the bereaved family, receiving into the church his youngest brother and that brother's little son. This event gave him the deepest satisfaction, and filled his heart with profound thanksgiving.

From this scene of new and richer experience, taking his venerable father with him, he returned to his home in Booneville. The three following days of hallowed life were spent in that restful home. Then the itinerant is in his saddle for a long ride on a chill day in February to be at his appointment next morning—Saturday. On Sunday morning his text was Rev. ii, 10, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life"—a fitting close to a faithful ministry.

That afternoon he rode a few miles to a brother's house to be nearer his next quarterly meeting, which he was to hold on an adjacent circuit the following Tuesday. Monday morning found him with a distressing headache, which increased through the day, and culminated in rigor and prostration. Pneumonia set in. Physicians were called; faithful nurses were at his side. The loving wife was there ministering with her service and prayers. The nearest preachers came to offer sympathy, watching, and prayer. With the sick man all was well. He knew his Foundation, whom he trusted. In this last battle he had the mighty victory. On Friday, when his beloved J. H. Shumaker came in, the shouting man of God, filled with the Holy Spirit, embraced him just outside the gate of heaven. Then came that scene of ineffable beauty and glory, when those three—the patient, his heart-stricken wife, and Bro. Shumaker—joined in song and prayer and praise, and the Lord came to them in the power of another transfiguration. But nothing could stay the march of disease. Seven days' struggle brought the fatal end, and at eight o'clock on the morning of March 7 he left his "house of clay", to enter that "not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

His body was tenderly borne back to Booneville, and, with suitable and solemn service conducted by his brother preachers of the district in the new church, and attended by the whole people in sorrow for a brother, was laid to rest in hope of the resurrection of the just. We knew not what we had possessed until we were suddenly bereft of his presence and service.

The Rev. Heslep Riley Tucker was born Sept. 2, 1851, near Red Sulphur Springs, in Hardin county, Tenn. He was the son of Riley W. and Laura Abell Tucker, who lived several years in Hardin county; then moved to the vicinity of Corinth, where their children grew up. Heslep received his academic training at Corinth and at Lagrange, Tenn., where he acquired a fair English education, and the strong habit of thorough and patient investigation. In these qualities he grew to the end.

In September of 1870, under the ministry of the Rev. J. W. Honnoll, he was soundly converted and joined the Methodist Church in Corinth, Miss. The change was radical, complete—a new birth, a new life. He embraced that life with all his soul, and made it permanent. Four years' experience brought him the conviction that he was moved by the Holy Spirit to preach the gospel of Christ, and in October of 1874 he was licensed by the Quarterly Conference of Kossuth circuit, Dr. J. D. Cameron presiding. Four years later he was admitted on trial into the traveling connection of the M. E. Church, South, and was ordained deacon by Bishop Robert Paine. At the Conference held in Corinth, in December of 1882, he was ordained elder by Bishop H. N. McTyeire. For sixteen consecutive years he faithfully served the Master as a true under-shepherd in circuit and station. His last pastoral charge was Booneville station. At the end of his first year there he was made presiding elder of Corinth district, with his home still in Booneville. During this five years' residence among that people he steadily grew in their confidence and esteem, and bore his part in securing the beautiful new church there, in whose dedication he had expected to participate on the thirteenth of March. But the Lord took him.

The limits of this memorial notice are too narrow for an adequate estimate of Bro. Tucker's character and work. The central and controlling element in his life is properly named by the one word—true. A deep sense of obligation was the abiding tone of his being. He was true to his own conscious intelligence, giving careful thought to every matter that claimed his responsible action, keeping his inner self under his own eye and subject to the divine will. In "the secret place of the Most High," with what aids he could command, all questions of belief and duty were solved.

Such a man could not be frivolous, or wavering, or "wise in his own conceit," but humble, constant, strong, trustworthy. Out of that patient study and his deep communion with the Holy Spirit came the wisdom, prudence, and cautious care which made him a safe man in counsel and in the administration of his office.

In the doctrines of our Methodism he found the clearest and fullest statement of his own understanding of the Word of God. To preach these doctrines, and witness to them from his own experience, was the joyful aspiration and work of his life. He laid no strange fire on the altar of his service. His preaching was plain, direct, scriptural; his aim to instruct, comfort, and save. His allegiance to the Word of God and to his vows of ordination carried his loyalty to the polity and discipline of his church, and bound his fidelity to her sacred trust. He was in full sympathy with every movement of the church forward to develop her resources and fulfill her great mission.

To his brethren of the North Mississippi Conference he was ardently attached. They were his beloved, his own, his fellow-laborers and sufferers in "the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ." We shall share with him the eternal home.

On the eighteenth of September, 1873, Bro. Tucker was united in marriage with Miss Abigail J. Deloach in Alcorn county, Miss., by the Rev. D. W. Babb, of the North Mississippi Conference. Their home was his sanctuary, his joy and crown; the object of his loving care and his diligent husbandry. To them were born four sons and three daughters; brought up "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." One son preceded the father by several years to paradise; two others had entered the itinerant ranks, following in his steps. They could render no higher honor, no truer response, to the parental training with which they had been blessed. The eldest daughter, in her opening womanhood, has caught the spirit of her father, and will show by her life how that "he, being dead, yet speaketh." The widowed mother and these six children remain in their great sorrow with us, committed to our loving sympathy and care. May the shield of faith defend them, and the Word of the Lord comfort and guide them till the day of glorious meeting and revelation! There shall be no more death.

"WHITWORTH COLLEGE," ET AL.

Bro. Mellen, on first page of last week's issue of the ADVOCATE, without intention surely, goes out of his way to strike at those who have given no offense. In justice to them, his statement must receive revision.

"Secured by the wisdom of Benj. Jones" to a remarkable degree, Port Gibson Female College has for fifty years been a modest, useful and perfectly worthy ward of Mississippi Methodism.

"Secured by the wisdom of" another great son of our Methodism, Judge McGehee, the Edward McGehee Female College has, with dignity and perfect loyalty, flung for years her banner of invitation to the Methodist young women of Mississippi.

"Admirably correlated" should be every member of the family, every item of the church estate. So, also, should there be "provoking to love and good works." "To provoke" is possible without the balance of the principle enough developed. The eager hunt for patronage is, or may be, followed without either "love or good works." "We can not get along without either of two," exclaims Bro. Mellen. "But we do not need another." This is "to provoke," at least.

Alas! there are two others, equally the property of the church, patiently running their course, doubtless doing faithful and efficient work, and striving modestly. Their teachers are willing servants and loyal friends.

Besides Whitworth Female College and East Mississippi Female College, there are Port Gibson Female College and Edward McGehee Female College. Honoring two, let us honor four. Let these sisters' name all go upon the register of our educational family. Let no one offer indignity by innuendo or omission to one more than another. And indignity without cause is what Bro. Mellen has, surely without intention, put upon these stainless members of our family of educational institutions.

JUVENILE CRIMES AND CURFEW CHIMES.

The parents of more than three hundred towns and cities of the United States, moved by more than three hundred tragedies of juvenile crimes, have recently ordained—acting co-operatively through their town and city councils—that their children shall come home at night at the signal of a so-called curfew bell, which usually rings at eight o'clock in Winter, at nine in Summer.

Those who argue against the revival of the "curfew" as a return to mediævalism show ignorance of history or lack of poetry. The ancient curfew applied to old and young alike. The modern curfew has only the poetic resemblance of being an evening bell. As well object to modern uses of the word "chivalry" and "crusade" because the words in mediæval times meant war.

Those who argue that parents should regulate this matter forget that government is but the co-operative act of parents, who need to act together in cities and villages. Nowhere can curfew be established except at the request of parents, expressed in ballots and petitions. The law no more interferes with parental rights and personal liberty than the kindred laws on compulsory education and child labor, now fully established in the most enlightened commonwealths. The school and the curfew bell are equally justified as necessary safeguards of public morals and prospective citizenship. Laws forbidding the sale of liquors and tobacco and corrupt literature to minors have long since illustrated the duty of the State to protect immature youth. Gladstone's great saying, that it is the chief purpose of law to make it as hard as possible to do wrong and as easy as possible to do right, applies permanently to laws for the protection of minors. No intelligent view of personal liberty justifies turning infants loose to play with poisons and razors. The most inspiring watchword of reform is, "Give the boys a chance!" They have no chance if left upon the streets at night.

All the doleful prophecies of what the law could or could not do have been answered by ten years of history. The testimony of the cities which have rejected these shallow objections and tried the curfew is uniformly favorable. The law has not destroyed civil liberty or promoted communism. It has not proved to be incapable, not even difficult of enforcement, but has been well observed. It has decreased juvenile crime and vice. It has checked the alarming growth of hoodlumism. A chief of police who opposed the ordinance at first repented as he heard the steady patter of little feet, homeward bound, passing his office door at each ringing of the bell.

The following are specimens of many testimonials from the cities that have given the law the fullest trial:

When the city of Lincoln, Neb., had been under a curfew law two years, Mayor Graham wrote: "The results of the ordinance in reducing crime was a complete surprise. There has been a decided improvement, socially and morally, of the youth, and a pecuniary saving from the falling off in the number of arrests. This seems to be the strictly proper way of reducing crime among youths of the cities of the country."

The chief of police of Omaha, after a similar trial, said: "We have no occasion to make any arrests under its provision since it has been in force. When nine o'clock comes the children make it a point to go home. It is now an easy matter for parents to enforce home rules."

Mayor MacVicker, of Des Moines, writes: "We consider the curfew ordinance a very wise law, and wonder how we ever got along without such a regulating ordinance. . . . The signal is respected by all classes."

Similar testimonials might be quoted from Yankton, South Dakota, Denver, Kansas City, Leavenworth, and many smaller towns. The only further question is the best form of ordinance. The danger is in too many exceptions. Some slight and occasional inconvenience must be borne in the case of any efficient law. No child under sixteen ought to be allowed on the streets after the curfew bell, who is not attended by parent or guardian, unless bearing as a password a newly written and dated statement of parent or guardian that it is on an emergency errand. The best curfew law the writer has seen is the Ontario act. The matter comes fully within local police powers in American towns and cities, though suitable also for State legislation.

Finally, I suggest that wherever there is a chime of bells, they should be used to ring out as the curfew call:

"Home, home, sweet, sweet home;
Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home."

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Booneville, Miss., EDITOR.

The president of the local League is now a member of the Quarterly Conference when eligible; that is to say, when the president is of the masculine gender.

The ten cent assessment formerly sent to the central office at Nashville is now abolished, and the League sustains the same relation to the church as the Sunday school.

An amount sufficient to build a house for a training school in Korea was pledged by the Leagues of the Memphis Conference at their recent annual meeting in Jackson, Tenn. The school will be directed by Dr. C. F. Reid.

For over two years the church at Shreveport, La., has paid the salary of Rev. W. B. Nance, who at present is a professor in Buffington College, Soochow, China. Rev. W. H. La Prade, D. D., is the efficient pastor at Shreveport.

The seventh State Conference of Epworth Leagues in Alabama recently met in First Church, Anniston. It is reported as being the best Conference yet held in Alabama, and was more largely attended than any heretofore. They voted to continue the support of Miss Ida Worth as missionary in Japan. This will make the fourth year that the Leagues of this State have paid her salary.

Rev. Frank P. Culver, of Birmingham, was elected editor of League Department in Alabama Christian Advocate.

Presiding Elder Wier has arranged for an Epworth League Conference, to be held in his (Sardis) district, beginning July 12, at 8 P. M. The place of meeting is Sardis, Miss., and the published programme is a good one.

We beg to call attention of those who arrange programmes for District Epworth League Conferences throughout Mississippi to the resolution passed at Meridian, which directed that "the railroad Sunday be the subject of a paper or an address at every League Conference to be held between now and the next session of the State Legislature."

The League at South Side, Meridian, flourishes. Bro. Henry G. Hawkins sends notes of progress and items of interest. After each business meeting the League is entertained with magic-lantern views, such as Stanley in Africa, Dante's Inferno, Views of London and Japan, and Stanley's Emin Pasha Relief Expedition. Last year this League gave provisions (amounting to about $2 50) to a family then destitute. The family, now in better circumstances, has voluntarily returned to the League a portion of the amount, and insist that they intend to pay more than they received.

The regular dues and voluntary contributions of foregoing League are divided as follows: One-half to the Conference collections, one fourth for charity and help, and the remaining fourth is applied to enlargement of the League library.

Rev. R. D. Norsworthy, P. E., of the Jackson district, Mississippi Conference, has arranged for the discussion of the work of the Epworth League during session of his District Conference, which convenes in Canton, Miss., July 27 31.

The Epworth League promises much to the church in that it proposes, through the different departments, to train the young men and women of the church for active service. Let us join hands and hearts in this forward movement, and bring the world to Christ.

LESSON I.

AN INTRODUCTORY STUDY OF FIRST PRINCIPLES.

THEME—THE TITLE OF OUR BOOK. THE MIRACLES OF MISSIONS.

This title graphically suggests the two sides—divine and human—of missions. In no other phase of Christian effort is there a more significant application of the Apostle's words, "We are workers together with God." The gospel and modern civilization—the one the outcome of the grace of God, the other the product of the wisdom and energy of man—are the two avenues through which the world is being blessed.

I.—The word "miracle" suggests all the divine impulse of that mighty movement of which "missions" is the human effect. To this work there is brought all the equipment of heaven. Christ said, "All power in heaven and earth is mine," and he has never withdrawn the statement. This was the necessary antecedent to any commission that the Lord had to give. A gospel—a church—means nothing unless backed by the power of God. A power not of earth—i. e, a miraculous power—has accordingly been the perpetual characteristic of Christianity. Why make an exception of our own century the most marvelous in all the annals of time?

In this connection, read the preface of our book, and pay special attention to the remarks quoted from Christlieb. Here the divine side of missions is emphasized, and it is clearly indicated that in the modern movement of the church there have been "signs and wonders" even more marvelous than those which served as credentials to the original heralds of the cross.

II.—The word "missions" suggests the human element. The divine miraculous power must have some medium of expression. This energy must move something, and that something is the apostle or missionary—i. e., the one sent. Here the human body recognizes its truest and highest use, and becomes the temple of the Holy Ghost, from which radiates the life of Christ, and through which is transmitted the grace of salvation to them that sit in the valley of the shadow. Man is here at his highest, when he thus devotes himself. He is taking up the primal work of the Son of man; he becomes a channel, if not a source, of revelation. And a church is most thriving in spiritual power when she is working in line with the purpose of her Lord.

References for I.—The Great Command (Matt. xxviii, 18-20); The Great Promise (John xiv, 12); The Great Encouragement; The Great Reward (Luke xviii, 29). For II.—The Eunuch's Question (Acts viii, 31); The Response of the Holy Ghost (Acts xiii, 2); Paul's Missionary Debt (Rom. i, 14).

For I. and II., in conjunction, read carefully the records of the missionary journeys in the Acts. Suggestions: 1. Have a Bible reading. Appoint a member of the class to read Romans, and call all the passages that have any reference to this subject. 2. Select some one to read a brief paper on any topic suggested by the passages referred to—i. e., Acts viii, 31: "The value of human instrumentality," etc.

MY WORK TO DAY.

To shun the world's allurements,
To bear my cross therein,
To turn from all temptation
To conquer every sin
To linger, calm and patient,
Where duty bids me stay,
To go where God may lead me—
This is my work to-day.

I think not of to-morrow,
Its trials or its task,
But still, with child-like spirit,
For present mercies ask
With each returning morning
I cast old things away,
Life's journey lies before me,
My prayer is for to-day.

A NEW BISHOP—EMORY COLLEGE—CLASS OF 1875.

At the opening of the session of 1873 the writer, a healthy boy mid way in his teens, entered the Junior Class. Oxford had been a household word in my family, maternal uncles and townsmen having been there before and when the war began. Traditions have ever profoundly affected the succeeding generations, and I naturally wanted to go to Oxford, too. Memorable to this day is the first walk through the great oak grove of the campus with my father; perfect oaks, running high their stems before spreading to the point of mingling their green masses of leaves. Here and there a substantial structure, red and penciled brick on stone base, reared in irregular outline its slate roof amidst the forest foliage. The sun shot through in gilded siftings down upon the brown surface of the campus.

The first walk included the gauntlet of the professors, from whose analyses the recruit was to take form and rating as to class. The reception of the president, Dr. O. L. Smith, whose shrewd and kindly glance pierced readily, reaching the marrow, whose welcome was more than perfunctory; the greeting from Dr. Morgan Calloway—always great, I think—whom we had known before as president of the LaGrange Female College—now vice-president and professor of Latin at Oxford—from him to Professor Doggett, son of the Bishop, crisp and strong-looking and quite young, who soon plumbed and dredged the deeps and shallows of what Greek bottom I had, the line engraving was deep and lasting that day.

The new boy mustered before Prof. Stone—dear, good old gentleman—in whom surely was no guile, and preponderance of mathematical quality; neither has memory let this lapse, nor yet the quizzical remarks of Dr. Hopkins in physics, reducing the physical, moral and mental equivalents of the trembling applicant to a mass chaotic. It was over, finally, that awful day, dies iræ, after which, locality in class established, the matter of room, books, etc., was soon arranged, and the evening found a lonely initiate prowling the woody campus and wishing he could see his mother. He had been drained of his knowledge, strained in his effort to deliver it on demand, and now, the father departed, he was chained to an anchorage of strange circumstance. "Heimway"—home-sickness—threw darker shadows that evening than came through the sun's withdrawal of his long bright beams in favor of night's dusky plumes through the fronds and lacing fingers of the massive grove.

The roll of the class was not a long one. I can run it easily now, not omitting a name. The second was Candler (W. A.). It did not take long to know and like him. A large head upon a rather short, burly body. Suggestive of aggression was the expression which the manner increased. A great laugh came from a mouth of generous dimension; came often, for the hearty nature rejoiced within; caught the humors as they distilled crudely from many boys of many minds, and saw the fun always, hide it ever so shrewdly. The habit of intently gazing at the person speaking; the corners of the mouth dropping at the spirit of the recital; the large lips trembling with sympathetic grasp of the joke; then the sudden explosion of laughter which drew into it like a maelstrom the laughter of every by-stander, whether seeing the joke or not—this comes with happy distinctness, filling in the outlines of the college boy, Candler, in 1873 and '74.

He was a member of the Few Literary Society. Its two-storied brick structure, raised years before, named in honor of the great founder and President Few, was the theatre of extraordinary energy always. Here the ambition and polemic power of the young man was marked and prominent. As a debater, he struck hard, going directly to the matter of the subject, shivering the lance of many a foeman, and rushing on [illegible] the last of battle plainly showing. Defeat was always chafing; the panting lips, the expanded discontent at decision enlarging visibly the whole person. Still there is nowhere in memory the record of a hostile sentence concerning decisions coming from him. The fight was over when the lists were closed; he carried no private grudge away, to rankle sourly.

The traditions of the Few were rich and ample. Many yet remember the early effort—floundering, first, as the efforts of beginning swimmers; growing more assured with exercise—of young men learning to speak. The heart never afterwards has to adjust to such swift gamuting as in those first appearances upon the floor. How the neophyte worshiped before the self-poised and eloquent! How to this day memory of master debaters is treasured in mind.

A tradition of the Few Society will abide. During the war the educational channels ran nearly dry. Scarce a trickle evidenced vitality at Emory in those days. But it was told us that the Few Society did not close its doors, though there was but one member. Lane was the member—one in body, but compound and complex and compute in parts.

Saturday morning, at the hour of opening the building, came Lane, the janitor, who opened house and library. He ascended the stairway which led to the great hall. At its far end was the platform bearing the tables and seats of president, critic and secretary, silent, empty. But, we liked to hear it told, past the long side of the chamber, lined with empty chairs, and up to the president's chair went this redoubtable Few. Gavel in hand, he called the society to order, gravely directing reading of Minutes of last meeting. As secretary, he read the Minutes; as audience, he corrected, or essayed to correct; and, as chairman, finally declared them approved. Now, as secretary, the question for debate was read, and the house was opened to this business. Descending from the dais, he thundered first upon the affirmative side of the question; then, going solemnly across to the other side, he fulminated upon the side of the negative. Through it all, omitting nothing, rejoinder, reply, he was dual, multiple, composite. If in the heat of debate he forgot himself in courtesy to his invisible opponent, he promptly apologized, or was fined if obdurate. There was applause at appropriate periods, repartee and point and tierce; he rounded the circle. Then, the debate closed, he reascended the throne of president; gravely went over the ground of the speakers, learnedly discussed the speeches, then decided in favor of affirmative or negative, according to merit, for he is said to have been an impartial judge. As secretary, he recorded the work done; as president, he called for and decided any miscellaneous business of moment, and finally dismissed himself until the next meeting of the society. His motto might have been "E nno plures," and no violation to the proprieties.

The Spring session of 1874 found the future Bishop and the writer rooming together at the historic mansion house of "Uncle Billy" Parks. "Aunt Dolly," his widow, kept its ample rooms always at premium with the students. She was all she could have been in hearty, motherly ways; and was there not besides, in every plentitude of charm, her daughter, fair Mistress Sadie? And could anyone have dwelt there, so near to such perfection, and not have fallen, fallen under delightful, perfect vassalage? How the votive, or vocative, chaplets hung about that shrine! Warren recollects, and Don and George, whose eyes, alas! were not in the body, but were surely deep of spirit-view. Vocative—that was the case with us all—wanting, for a great and gallant gentleman had made pre-emption before our day. He came at due time and forth with him to itinerant fields went his lovely bride, our loved and lovely lady.

Years after to Greenville he came, James D. Gray; appointed to serve as pastor where I taught. And he fought well. I have not forgotten his ministry there, though not long in the service, falling on sleep a few years later, nobly serving at his post, as served and fell many more of the alumni of venerable Emory since her founding; and Madame Sadie I've always thought her; I've wondered often where and how she fares. Noble lives were his and hers together. "Amongst us at Aunt Dolly's" was Robert McDonnell. Being freshman, he was "Bob;" but we held him very kindly, despite that class disability. We relished that light, free spirit of the fair haired boy, and wondered constantly at his appetite. Biscuits such as were brought to our table—I began to write, "such as were ours;" but the titles were uncertain things with demand in unison, and none of us were sure until the meal was over. And afterwards, when in our room, we made indignant protest against Bob for eating beyond his right—8 to 12; and higher sometimes ran our amazed and horrible count of the "unicuits" charged to him. We would break out into downright mobs at his serene and smiling denial of all beyond 2, sometimes 3, and maybe, under severe pressure, 4. Did we not count every blessed one of them, and watch their rapid disappearance? we said. But his admissions to more than 2 were rare, I think.

During a future session, after the class of '75 was gone, that sunny spirit sobered into action, owning the call to gospel service, and, serving, went in the strength of spirit to Mexico a missionary. Ten years ago he sent account of a session of that Conference to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, himself the secretary. Then he was presiding elder of Durango district, and a short while afterwards word came to his friends that he was dead; some said poisoned through the rage of those who held not to the Protestant faith. God rest him; he is fair to view now, sitting upon one of our trunks, and welcoming all comers with word of wit and happy laugh.

It was during 1894, I think, that Candler's father died. The son went home for a time, and when he returned it was in another spirit. He had been sincerely attached, and grief for his father was deep. More quiet, reserved, more studious. Grief had shaken the happy, half-noted elements of character together, and now discovered more the man to view. Diligent in study, strong in class-room, we began to say that Warren would be the standard-bearer of the class. And we were willing, for the class had never a heart-burning rivalry in it. It was homogeneous in much, requiring each member of it to make its body complete.

Dr. Haygood came to Oxford that Summer of '74, to rest a season. He quickly captured the class of '75. We loved him beyond easy expression. Some of us will wonder on, how he could take one of us into his room, and sit and converse in his easy, fascinating way, as though it were a meeting of equals. I count many hours of such pleasure for my share. And I account the man, perhaps, the most potent influence of my life. During one of his services a conversion came, and the new purpose through the first hearing of the voice calling to service with the ambassadors for Christ.

Candler, too, dates new life and similar purpose to that time, I think. The year ran on. His spirit recovered its buoyancy, and we went swiftly on toward the close of the Senior year. The surface would ruffle now and then. I recall a Senior oration, to which task we were set, performing two each evening before the college just prior to prayers. The smart of some critic's sting still rankled, or a general grudge against the general critic family was housed and fed by Candler. The incense burned at the shrine of his antipathy upon this remembered occasion was full of caloric, if not a fragrance. At the close of his speech the general impression remained that of the critic family the preponderant feature consisted of ears, very long and flapping, analogous with those of the beast beneath the lion's skin in the fable.

But to the visible disgust of the worm which so energetically turned, three or four evenings later an ovation based upon his pilloried him as of the family of critics the very arch-critic; inasmuch as by his arraignment of critics he had certainly allied himself with the despised family.

The matter of sweethearts swerved us at one time from extra book diligence. We entered under this tuition of the inexorable old master without resistance, and studied duly for a season. And we did not lose by it, beyond the item of the girls; we did not get them. But we sighed and tried, we two, for those two charming sisters. In furtherance of design contrivance moved one of us to catch the rudiments of guitar music, to the extent of learning the chords. Half assured about these, and knowing the first line to several ballads which are perennial and perpetual about a college, we would sally forth of moonlit nights to serenade. With the little known was this which was well known, to-wit: the desire for a glimpse of flitting forms and low laughter, light footsteps scarcely sounding in and out the thick box hedges. It resurrects a smile to review how we sat and strummed and hummed what we did not know of the songs; watched now the lifting moon, now the flitting girls, and dreamt vain things. Boyhood! And it comes once—just once.

The session closed. The valedictorian was W. A. Candler; vigorous, strong-set, extraordinary mental grasp promising rugged and royal power of further development. Self contained, aggressive, with heart of singular purity and of girl-like tenderness, the young man went from college. It was said once in my hearing that Dr. Haygood and Bishop Pierce held reins of loving guidance over the ambitions young spirit. Happy the roadster in such hands! What other goal were probable except that under which last month the mettled charger passed, a winner?

Leaving Oxford, the paths diverged. Mine led me further than I knew. Candler's wound here and there through bounding lines of North Georgia itinerancy. Growth in ministerial life belongs to history, and needs no chronicling in this writing.

In 1877 or '8, while gathering laurels with a strong commencement address before the LaGrange Female College, my friend gathered the tender interest of winsome, dark-eyed Miss Nettie Curtright. The young theolog surrendered with as well as at discretion as it was right to do, and unavoidable.

During the Spring following, in the glow of rising power and the vigor of splendid manhood, he came with wedding company to LaGrange, spent his last bachelor evening at my home with me, and next morning claimed and received his beautiful mate from the home of her mother. And forth they flew, these mated ones, upon strengthening wings and in widening flights. Already the word was running before him of great sermons which he made. They were remembered and related by hearers long after he was gone. The college-time self-reliance remained, securing him; but the armature was indeed secure now with the strong self-surrendered to the Holy Spirit.

We have not been surprised to learn that this husbandman was being set to till wide fields. We would have wondered had it not been so. And when recently, by suffrage of the Church, South, Methodism has ordered him to assume, not stole and mitre external, but the great, deep office of superintendent, shepherd of pastors and Bishop of souls, the word is received by comrades of the college days without surprise, but not without great gladness of heart. We shall gather about this Bishop and mark yet greater expansion as surely as we live, for this new circumference is a great one, and he will fill it greatly. Here the office will magnify the man, for its burden well borne develops magnitude; and the man will magnify the office, fitting easily to its harness, and not forgetful of the treasure he is bearing.

A LOUISIANA DAY-DREAM.

BY QULQUESHOUA.

In my study on a pleasant June morning. A gentle breeze plays in at the window; the thunder heads lie lazily around the horizon; the birds are holding a missionary anniversary in the cotton-wood at the gate; old glory floats gracefully from the school-houses on either side, and sweet little Gladys, six months old, is playing at my feet under the table, her favorite spot. Along comes a boy; throws papers in the yard announcing big horse-races and excursion next Sunday; also theater at opera house Sunday night for the benefit of the Catholic Church. I glance at ADVOCATES on the table, read notices urging the prompt collecting and forwarding of foreign missionary moneys, and fall a-dreaming.

I hear the generals give the command, "On to the Orient;" the regimental officers repeat it down the line, and then from station and circuit and mission the patriotic hosts of the saddle-bag brigade sound it far and wide, "On to the Orient!" The rank and file catch the enthusiasm of the officers, and quickly begin to drill, marching and countermarching across the wide-extended plain, making ready for the embarkation and glorious charge. I note them carefully as to the front they move, proudly keeping step to the martial airs of the everlasting kingdom, while triumphant banners float in the breezes from off the elysian fields.

The first to pass are the companies from the cities, whose uniforms gayly flash in the light of Liberty's golden rays, and whose well-salaried captains go "leading on." They are a noble band, and patriotic to the core, not only contributing a large part of the necessary revenue in the general way, but in some instances supporting at their own expense the captain of an insurgent band within the fields of the enemy.

Following close to these are the companies from the smaller stations and circuits. Their uniforms are not so flashy, and many of their officers are poorly clad. Among the latter especially there are captains whose yearly salary does not amount to more than two hundred dollars—many times not so much—a few barrels of corn for his horse, and some sweet potatoes and sorghum molasses for his family. But men and officers are fired with a holy zeal, and desire to be numbered among the glory-covered victors upon the gory heights, and so, paying their war taxes, they take their places and are off. Many of the noble heroes in these companies really feel that their officers ought to be better provided for, and that it would be nothing more than right to supplement their meager salaries out of the general funds; but there is a strong disposition to put one out of the ranks who manifests any such conviction; so there usually is but little said about it.

The next to pass is a brigade that I do not think, except in rare cases, should be enlisted for service so far from home, but should be reserved for duties nearer by. There are some good strong companies in it, 'tis true, but many of them are poor and spindling—almost bow-legged now under the weight of this foreign campaign. I refer to the Epworth Leagues. Evidently the struggle is a desperate one, and the victory doubtful, for they have actually levied tribute upon the children, in some cases even including the babies. In fact, it seems that the whole country is on the verge of being reduced to the necessity of raising children for revenue purposes.

But the vision is inspiring, glorious, as the mighty throng advances in unbroken column with waving banners and exulting song. The blood goes bounding through the veins, and the heart throbs in quick responses to the beating of the drums. Even now in beatific vision can I see "heathen nations bending" before the over-onward march of Emmanuel's all-conquering hosts.

I awake from dreaming, and, looking round, I see the papers the boy left in the yard, which remind me that I am still in fair, sunny, sin-cursed and priest-ridden Louisiana. Her magnificent cane and cotton plantations spread out over thousands of acres of the richest land in the world, while upon the bosom of her far-reaching prairies, like stars in a cloudless sky, are the homes of thousand of loyal and industrious people—homes into which no ray of gospel light has ever flashed. Within her borders are whole parishes without a Protestant Church of any kind. But in vain does the Macedonian cry go up from her billowy fields and fertile plains. Notwithstanding the vast amount of her own missionary territory, the Board continues to require more of her for foreign work than it does of many others in better circumstances. And she is loyal to their demands. Last year, though beset by drouth and flood and epidemic, she gave more per capita for foreign missions than did any of the adjacent Conferences, and, so far as I know, more than any in Southern Methodism, save about three or four.

But we are infatuated with the foreign idea (ourselves), and neglect our own fields. Our best church must support a foreign missionary; our Epworth Leagues, many of which are hardly able to take care of themselves, must send out a foreign missionary; our Sunday schools must be organized into foreign missionary bands; in fact, about everything we touch must bear the inspiring stamp, Foreign.

What has Louisiana done!—Louisiana the fair and beautiful, under whose sunny skies we first saw the light, and beneath whose waving sod our fathers sleep—what has she done that she must be thus deserted to Romanism and the devil!

"A PINE-KNOT" FIRED.

MR. EDITOR: In letting down my hook, baited with the "Committees under Fire," in order to catch a leviathan, I drew it up, and, to my astonishment, there was hanging thereto a big wiggle tail from the motionless waters of Plaquemine Bayou. I listened, and it murmured something about a "pop-gun fusilade." Catching its breath, it went below for a specimen copy of "Questions on Wesley's Sermons." Only these geniuses who don't study can expect to pass examinations they have never fully considered. A modern Isaiah might say of these extraordinary specimens of presumptuous egotism, "The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib;" but these "pine knot fire" and "pommel" readers do not know my "honest young fellows" doth not consider that the examinations are strict.

God never gave any man intuition enough to understand "Pope's Compendium" or "McTyeire's Manual" by an external gaze as they innocently enough recline upon a shelf. The victim must give his days and nights, not to Addison, but to the Conference course. If some of the "beloved" spent less time in bed, they could get more into their heads. The five wise lads neither slumber nor sleep until they get their examination lamps trimmed and burning. The "no-beaten oil" fellows growl at the Conference door keepers for shutting the door in their faces, because they have no oil, and the lamps of their intellect are gone out. It is as much a man's duty to get up his Conference course as it is to preach, pray, visit, or talk war news.

If what Bro. Kent says be true about a certain committee, their characters should be arrested next Conference, and they be tried upon the basis of Ques. 3, ¶ 274, "1894." I demand positive proof that these men have so unfairly, partially and invidiously made discriminating distinctions against "two honest young fellows," and in favor of "a certain professor in Centenary College." It is a grave charge to bring against the characters of these examiners, and Bro. Kent should substantiate these charges, or publicly retract them. He owes this much in all common fairness to all parties cast under the shadow of this dark suspicion of criminality.

Bro. Kent's intimation that country circuit riders, as a class, are so mentally impoverished that it takes "a lot of hard working young fellows" three years to pass one examination, I will leave him to defend and prove. I am not surprised that our esteemed Bishops did not applaud young men who will get through after twelve years of corn-raising on their brains, unperinduced by too diligent study from the high and lifted up "pommel," or the flickering "pine knot fire" lighting up a still harder knot tied at the end of somebody's spinal column. This aspersion on circuit riders I denounce as derogatory to the noblest figures in Southern Methodism.

I suggest the mere going to college never put any more brains into a man's head than God gave him to start out with. There are men who never attended college who have done God's cause honor, and shed a glory upon their church; but they never thought the Holy Ghost endorsed ignorance, nor put a premium upon the presumptuous neglect of books. It startles me to think that any man will advance the idea, by way of illustration, that soul-saving depends upon failing to pass, whilst meagre results hinge upon putting up too-strict examinations. If that be God's way of taking vengeance upon committeemen, then, by the logic of his illustrations, he had better turn the committees over to God. He declares: "Four members of that class reported 268 members received during the year on profession of faith, while the committeeman who turned them down reported five." I won't debate this point, but will say God rewards the "turned down." I would like to be a "turn down" myself on such terms.

Bro. Kent propounds a veritable Socratic question, "For what do we value men—for what they know, or for what they do?" Mr. Editor, if a man does not know anything, the State has reserved a place for such cases of arrested development; but it is not Centenary College. Will the earnest brother kindly inform us what use has God ever made of an ignoramus; or if there is any doing in the world that counts, when was it divorced from judicious knowledge? It seems to me that a man who does not know anything can not do anything. He is like Lazarus; bound hand or foot, and the napkin is about his mouth. If the brother repudiates the saying, "Knowledge is power," then show me the men who are a power in the land who are devoid of knowledge. Knowledge of men, nature, books, and God, is the throne of power to the winner of souls and the rescuer of the perishing.

While I totally differ with Bro. Kent's premises, I entertain nothing but respect and love for him as a man.

The Best Means of Averting the Immoral Influences That Are Overwhelming the Children of the Church, and Producing a Higher Appreciation of a Religious Life.

MR. EDITOR: The Sunday-school Conference held in connection with the District Conference at Amory, Miss., on June 16, requested me to send a piece to your most excellent paper for publication on the above-mentioned subject. I can not reproduce this speech just as I delivered it, but will give its substance. Good government in the families that constitute our churches will do much to avert the evils of the day among our young people; hence we see the necessity of the parents being right in the sight of God and before the children. It is very difficult to deceive the little fellows; they know more of us, as parents, than we sometimes imagine. For instance: If I say to Johnnie and Mary on Sunday morning, "Get ready now, and run along to Sunday-school," they will naturally conclude, from their childish reasoning, that there's but little, if any, good in Sunday-school, since they see no reason why I remain at home and send them alone. But if I say to the little ones, "Get ready, and let's go," their little hearts leap for joy, their eyes sparkle with bright anticipations of a happy day in the house of God. They're impressed with good, and thereby learn to hate evil. Let me say to the parents of the church, if they attempt to play this trick of staying at home on the children, they'll soon find the children playing tricks on them of loitering around the street corners with foul-mouthed swearers, robbing birds, running rabbits, or catching fish on Sunday. Again: If parents play cards with the children in the parlor for pastime, or allow it done, the young people thus impressed would ridicule and scorn the preacher that would cry out against card-playing, and would continue the pernicious practice. Let me say to the parents of the church, the card-table in the parlor-room makes it the ante-chamber to the gambling-hell. The cards used in such games are the devil's books. I once talked with a mother who was a member of the church on this subject, and she said she "played cards" with her "boys at home" to "prevent them from playing with others away." I asked her why she didn't take a round of swearing, and practice stealing and the like at home, lest the boys should get off and practice it with others. She was dumb-founded, and didn't answer. If I dance with my daughter in the parlor, or allow some special friend to do so, the next thing will be the german with some other man in the ball-room. The modern dance is detrimental to health, damaging to morals, and will prove the death of the soul at last. The parlor dance is the entering wedge to the german and the ball-room. The parents who keep strong drink in their homes, and make a practice of dram-drinking, need not be surprised if their children grow up to be drunkards. If they frequent the saloon, their footsteps are likely to be followed by the boys; if they sign whisky petitions and vote for the open saloon, why need we be surprised if their boys die to fill a drunkard's grave and land at last in a drunkard's hell? If a father casts a vote for the saloon, and his son is debauched and damned thereby, how can that father face his son at the last great day? The above-mentioned evils are practiced by many of our church members. They ought to quit these evil practices, or be turned out of the church. If all who profess to be Christians would turn their influence against the open saloon, they would close the last one, sweep the blind-tigers from the land, and rule out the punch bowls from every social party that gathers in the parlor homes of Christian parents. If the evils were shut out of Christian homes, frowned down by Christian parents, thrust out of our Christian land, we would do much to avert the great tide of immorality that is overwhelming our young people in the church. Then let us pore over the golden pages of God's inspired truths, gather our families around the home altar, and pray God to direct in their training. Then live higher, holier lives of practical godliness; teach our children strict obedience to parental authority from their infancy up; train them up in the way they should go, and God's Word for it, "When they are old they will not depart from it." This gives us happy homes, high-toned morals in the church, a pure ballot cast for God-loving men to rule us in State and Church, the result of which is peace and prosperity, thus giving our children a higher appreciation of a religious life.

REVIVALS.

If the churches were in their normal condition, which is one of life and spirituality, there would be no need of revivals and revivalists. But, alas! how few churches continue in this condition the year round! Spurgeon's Church in London, perhaps, came nearer being the ideal in this respect, during the great preacher's life, than any other of modern times. The Savior said, "Ye are the salt of the earth," and to be this in any community there is need of special services, with the end in view of the restoration of life and spirituality, and thereby power to save the lost in the community. But the trouble (or, at least, one trouble) is, that our revival meetings do not continue long enough. About the time the meeting gets under good way, and the church begins to get right, the meeting is brought to a close with sinners awakened, but unsaved. We need to return to the old-time Methodist way of holding meetings—three, four, five, and sometimes six weeks. It was a common thing for Bishop Kavanagh to protract his meetings four and five weeks in his early ministry, and even after he became a Bishop he would hold lengthy revival services.

What a pity to close a good meeting where the Lord is manifestly at work by his Holy Spirit in the hearts of his people and in the hearts of sinners, working mightily to bring about their salvation! Who can tell of the number of those in eternal despair who might have been saved if the meeting had continued a few days longer? There is a great responsibility just here, and woe will be to the man who stands in the way of the work of the Lord. It were better for him if he had never been born.

E. B. PARTIN, M. D.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. H. P. Crowe, Arcola, Miss., June 27, 1898: "The Lord is wonderfully blessing us in the district this year. We have already had some fine revivals in the district. The health of the preachers comparatively good. The sentiment is growing rapidly to put the saloons out of Washington county. I think in the near future we will put it to a test. I long to see this county free from this awful curse that is debauching so many noble men and boys of this county. It is enough to make one's blood curdle in his veins to witness what I have since coming to Arcola, caused by the saloons."

Ione Smith, Arcadia, La., June 28, 1898: "I send you a program of our rally which has just closed. It was a success, and we think is going to result in much good to this district. Mr. Atkinson was with us. He organized a study-class, and we bought the missionary library. We organized a permanent District Epworth League Conference, with Prof. C. A. Moeers, Calhoun, La., as president; W. W. Nicholsen, of Arizona, first vice-president; Miss Anna Peabody, Minden, second vice-president; Mrs. M. R. Gladney, third vice-president, and Miss Gussie Tooke (two last from Arcadia), secretary and treasurer. We are to publish a paper called 'The Epworth Leaguer,' with Miss Ione Smith, editor; Mrs. M. R. Gladney, associate editor; Rev. P. O. Lowry, business manager. I suppose Bro. Lowry will send you the proceedings of the meeting for publishing."

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, Courtland, Miss.: "We came to this place in December last and entered upon our duties and responsibilities. We are not able to say how much has been done on this charge in a spiritual way; how much the thoughts of the people have deepened and broadened under the light and glow of the gospel and grace of God; how far they have moved out toward the real and ideal life of the Christian; what degree of warmth and stimulus has been given by the efforts and experiences of the year to work out the fuller and greater salvation. These are invisible things, and can not be reported in figures, or compassed and expressed in the terms and limits of human speech. We have done something in a material way. In the first place, we have done some much-needed improvement on the parsonage. About $40 have been expended on repairs. This is not all that is needed, by any means, but the house now, as compared with what it was before, is a neat, nice cottage to a poor cabin (Uncle Tom's). We have seated our church at Courtland from pulpit to vestibule with handsome oak pews at a cost of $250. We have the heavy folding-doors between the vestibule and auditorium; a beautiful altar rail encircles the chancel. The ladies have $100 in hand to carpet the floor, and this will be done in a few days. We have raised a debt of $55, which had never been paid, incurred in the building; and also a deficit of $35 on the organ has been paid. In the little town of Courtland, and out of fourteen individuals, we have raised $425, paid all old debts, and furnished the church from carpet to the handsome swinging pulpit lamp. And now, Mr. Editor, we are ready to dedicate our church, and want the editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE to do it. What say ye? In all this work which has been done I claim no credit. It is true I have worked all I could, but I wish to thank those who have been willing and ready, and have done this great work freely and readily."

Rev. Wm. B. Van Valkenburgh, Welsh, La.: "On last Sunday night we closed a series of very remarkable meetings. For sixteen days, day and night, we laid siege, and during this time (from the twenty-seventh of May) the town of Welsh was visited as never before by crowds of people, all eager to hear the gospel preached. All services were held under the tent except the last two, when, on account of rain, we adjourned to the Congregational Church, and that night we had a crowded house and many could not get inside. Almost the entire audience responded on this night to Bro. Manly's proposition 'to live for God and heaven.' The work was carried on under the 'South Louisiana Holiness Association's' gospel tent, with Revs. 'Bob' Howell, M. C. Manly, Martin Hebert, Daniel Hayes and myself, of the Church, South, and Rev. Asbury Wilkinson, of the M. E. Church, as preachers. On Sunday morning, Feb. 6, 1898, we preached in the public school-house at this place to an audience gathered mostly out of curiosity to hear a 'Southern Methodist preacher,' and as many there then expressed themselves, 'They did not know that there was such a church as the M. E. Church, South.' Welsh is a town of considerable importance on the Southern Pacific railway, some twenty-three miles east from Lake Charles. It has a reasonable prospect of becoming the parish seat if Calcasieu is divided. This place was once in our work, and was abandoned by the Rev. R. P. Howell in the year of '88, and has since then been occupied by others. The churches already here, the Congregational and the M. E. Church, were much revived. We had good behavior and attention from the beginning of the services, and closed with these results, viz.: Seven new members, five by profession and two by letter; also two new members to the M. E. Church; organized a church, and left with much better conditions prevailing than when we first came. The altar services were represented by young and old from seven to ninety-two years of age. A remarkable incident was the happy conversion of two old people, one ninety-two and the other eighty years of age, a gentleman and wife, both of whom united with our church. The Wesleyan doctrine of Christian perfection, as a second work of grace subsequent to regeneration, and received instantaneously and by faith, was preached throughout the meetings, and many bright testimonies were given in as an evidence to the truth of the experience wrought."

"Save the women and children first!" is the instinctive cry of every brave man in a moment of peril, but in the every-day concerns of life men who are ordinarily brave and kind forget the perils of trouble and disease that overhang their families. A man engrossed with his own affairs seldom realizes how hard his wife is working and that perhaps she is breaking down under the strain, and becoming weak and sickly; incapable of doing the family work or of looking after the children.

It is just as much a man's duty to look after the health of his family from day to day as it would be to give them the first thought in a moment of shipwreck or peril.

It does not cost anything more than a few minutes of time to write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute of Buffalo, N. Y., who will give the best professional advice free of charge with suggestions for inexpensive home-treatment whereby any of the family who are weak and ill may be put on their feet again well and strong and hearty.

For thirty years Dr. Pierce has successfully treated many of the most obstinate and apparently hopeless cases of severe chronic disease. His medicines are known throughout the whole world for their astonishing efficacy. His "Golden Medical Discovery" is the most perfect remedy for all weak and debilitated conditions of the system. It gives power to the digestive organism to transmute the food into muscular flesh and active energy. His "Favorite Prescription" is the most successful medicine ever devised for the delicate ailments peculiar to women.

Best Edition of the World's Best Book,

—THE—

"COMBINATION" BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers. New Type. All Proper Names, Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$5.00. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to July, '99. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Send for circular. Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

SELF-PRONOUNCING

S. S. Teachers' Reference Bible.

Text Conforms Exactly to the Oxford Teachers' Edition.

The self-pronouncing text enables the reader to pronounce all proper names at a glance.

This Bible is printed from Large, Beautiful and Clear New Type. All Proper Names are Divided into Syllables and Every Vowel is Marked and the Syllables Inflected, showing the Sounds and Accents as they are given in a Dictionary, thus enabling the reader to properly pronounce every word. This feature is a great improvement and a strong recommendation for this Bible over others.

This Bible contains the celebrated Oxford Teachers' Helps together with a complete series of New Maps illustrating the geography of Palestine and the surrounding countries from the earliest times, and embodying the most recent discoveries renders this Bible especially desirable to teachers and students of the Holy Scriptures.

Imperial Seal Binding, Tuck Edges, known as "Divinity Circuit," Linen Lined, Round Corners, Red under Gold Edges, Price, $4.00.

This book in Bourgeois type will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price ($4) to any address; but to that select class who read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, we furnish it on the following terms: Pay your subscription one full year in advance, viz., to July, '99, and we will send it to you, postpaid, for $1.75. (A little later you will have to pay to August, '99.) We will also send this book as a premium for two new subscribers at the regular rate—$2 per annum. We will also send this Bible with index for 50 cents additional.

For fifty cents additional we will send Bible with index. For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved on the outside in gilt letters.

Good name in man and woman
Is the immediate jewel of their souls.
Who steals my purse steals trash;
But he that filches from me my good name
Robs me of that which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed.

A Christian, when he makes a good profession, should be sure to make his profession good. It is sad to see many walk in the dark themselves who carry a lantern for others.—Thomas Secker.

Do not let ten thousand failures cause you to lower your ideal of a religious life. The best that is still beautiful and attractive in your thought is possible in your experience.—Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.

While a healthy body helps to make a healthy soul, the reverse is yet more true. Mind lifts up, purifies, sustains the body. Mental and moral activity keeps the body healthy, strong and young, preserves from decay, and renews life.—James Freeman Clarke.

It matters not whether you are twenty-five or seventy-five, if you sit down on the record of your achievements of the past, and do not try to keep looking for newer ones, you may be sure that you have reached your dead-line.—Rev. L. A. Banks, Cleveland, Ohio.

There are some church members who, if stroked by their pastor and fellow church members the smooth way of their prejudices and preferences and pride, will respond by purring most musically. But let happen only one opposite or unguarded stroke, and by it is blotted out the memory of all former kindnesses, and they will uncover their claws and arch their backs, or make haste to find the door. Better open the door wide and let them pass out, if they can not endure an occasional or accidental stroke the wrong way of their fur. They are not safe pets to coddle or occupy the best place in the chimney corner of any well-regulated church household.—Record.

A NOTABLE BOOK.

During the year 1897 Rev. W. F. Quillian, of the North Georgia Conference, founded a lectureship at Emory College, which has been named in honor of the founder, "The Quillian Lectureship." The first series of lectures, five in number, was given by Bishop Charles B. Galloway, March 22 to 27, 1898. In accordance with stipulations made by the founder, these lectures have been published by our Book Agents at Nashville. The title of the work is, "Christianity and the American Commonwealth; or, the Influence of Christianity in Making This Nation." The work is well printed and well bound, and contains 213 pages. As to its literary merits, it is scarcely necessary that we should speak. The name of the author is a sufficient guarantee at this point. Suffice it to say, that the same charming style which the reading public has learned to expect from the distinguished author is found here in its fullness. The subject-matter is, in our estimation, of vast importance. As to the scope and design of the work, we will let the author speak for himself.

"This is to be in no sense a study of church history. . . . The object of this discussion is to ascertain how far the type of religion embraced by the American colonists affected and determined the character of our civil institutions and the course of our social progress. It is not personal, but civic righteousness with which we are immediately concerned; not religion as it achieves the salvation of the soul, but religion as it exalts the nation; not so much spiritual as social and civil redemption. I shall have little to do with the statistics of churches, and more with the constitutions of commonwealths, the statutes of States, and the history of jurisprudence. Our investigation will be along the line of that approved statement of Kidd, in his 'Social Evolution:' 'After all, Christianity was intended to save not only men, but man, and its mission should be to teach us not only how to die as individuals, but how to live as members of society.' The Christian design for the world is not 'an anarchy of good individuals.' They fatally undervalue the mighty mission of Christianity who limit it to 'the assertion of moral principle,' without any care for its social and political results. It contemplates the sanctity of the home, the redemption of the nation, the purification of commerce, and the exaltation of civic virtue. When our Lord announced that his kingdom is not of this world, he meant not to say that it had nothing to do with the things of this world. His mission was to adjust human relations; and the enthronement of his gospel in the life of society will right all social wrongs, and bring in a new heaven and a new earth. The teachings of Christ are the perfect solution of all the problems of society. Mr. Gladstone, at once a statesman and a seer, spoke words of truth and soberness, though with spiritual energy, when he said: 'Talk about the questions of the day; there is but one question, and that is the gospel. It can and will correct everything that needs correction.' . . . To the study of this subject I have been impelled by the evident tendency of some modern historians to minify, if not almost entirely eliminate, religion from the formative forces of our American institutions. Books on the making of our nation have been written, and are the texts in our colleges, in which the Christian religion, as a social and civil factor, has only scant or apologetic mention. . . . With the growth of a subtle materialistic spirit which invades every department of life, however sacred and secret, we are threatened with an undervaluing or ignoring of the great moral and spiritual forces that constructed the massive frame-work of this mighty nation. . . .

"Now, with the hope of contributing somewhat to the arrest of that tendency, . . . I have timidly ventured upon the theme of these lectures. My purpose shall be, if possible, to demonstrate that Protestant Christianity has been the dominant influence in our nation's construction and continuation. For I hesitate not to affirm that the temple at Jerusalem was built by a no more sacred patriotism, or under the benedictions of a no more favoring Providence, than were the colonial governments of this New World. Christian teachings were the seed-thoughts of our political constitutions, and Christian evangelism was the inspiration of American colonization. If we eliminate from our national history the direct and all-powerful influence of the Christian religion, we have nothing left but a set of disjointed facts without significance, dry and dreary annals without parentage or posterity. But, on the other hand, a right apprehension of all the formative forces in our national life will vindicate the matured judgment of Emerson, that our whole history appears like a last effort of Divine Providence in behalf of the human race.

"The governments and civilizations of all people are determined by the character of their religions. And this proposition will hold good, whether the religion be true or false. The deepest and mightiest thing in any nation's heart is its religion; therefore, as is its religion, so is the nation. . . . The State is a true reflex of the Church; the civil law is a faithful rescript of the canon law. And, as in the days of the Hebrew theocracy, so in all lands and under all religions, there is a close connection between the sanctuary and the seat of judgment. The altar shapes the throne; the character of the crozier measures the strength of the scepter. Out of religious doctrines are developed political principles; and, therefore, the purer the religion, the broader a nation's constitution and the wiser its civil polity. Religion is a political force as well as a spiritual influence; both a social dynamic and a celestial inspiration. . . . All the civil institutions of the ancient world were the outgrowth of religious belief, the social expressions of a spiritual faith. . . . Heathen and Christian alike, in all ages of the world, have regarded religion as the basis of the commonwealth, as the very condition of national existence. . . . All history attests the fact that religion is not only a helpful influence, but that it is the most potential factor in a nation's life. Governments could not exist without its cohesive and undergirding power. . . . Political atheism will inevitably produce political anarchy." . . . The author then institutes a comparison between the Christian religion and the other religions of our day as to their social and political effects. He calls attention to the fact that, "The governments of all non-Christian countries are despotic," that "only in Christian countries do we find liberal and representative government." The effects of the several religions upon individual character are considered, the author quoting Humboldt's famous saying that "governments, religion, property, books, are nothing but the scaffolding to build up man. Earth holds up to her Maker no fruit like the finished man."

The effects of the great non-Christian religions are thus summarized: "A paralyzed personality is the legitimate and necessary product of the Buddhist creed." "From Confucianism we have an impoverished personality." "The contribution of Hinduism to society is a degraded personality." "Mohammedanism has produced an enslaved personality."

In marvelous contrast with these Christianity is considered with reference to its effects upon individual character, upon home life, and upon jurisprudence. A similar comparison is also instituted between Protestantism and Romanism. This striking contrast is summarized in the weighty words of Wendell Phillips: "The answer to the Shastas is India; the answer to Confucianism is China; the answer to the Koran is Turkey; the answer to the Bible is the Christian civilization of Protestant Europe and America."

The above is an outline of the contents of the first chapter. The other chapters are: "The Christian Coming and Character of the Early Colonists;" "The Christian Institutions and Laws of the Colonists;" "Christianity and the Nation;" "Christian Education in the American Commonwealth." Each of these themes is treated with the author's characteristic learning and vigor.

They are replete with valuable information concerning the origin of our institutions. Without depreciating in the least other parts of the work, we desire to invite special attention to the last chapter, entitled, "Christian Education in the American Commonwealth." We quote as follows: "The fathers were wise enough to see the certain peril of divorcing learning from religion. . . . They provided that the schools they established should be the homes of serious and sanctified learning. They insisted that intellectual culture and spiritual principle must be bound together in immortal wedlock. . . . The common school system of the United States, now so highly prized and so distinguishing a feature of the educational scheme of the nation, owes its origin to the church." This proposition the author establishes by numerous citations of authorities. He next shows that all the academies and colleges of colonial times had their origin in the church. Almost every professor's chair was filled for many years by a minister of the gospel. He also gives statistics which show that up to the present day a very large percentage of the colleges in the United States have been founded and are maintained by the various churches. The concluding sentences of the work are as follows: That man, therefore, is innocent of the elementary facts of history who declaims against or seeks to undervalue education by the church; and that legislative assembly evidences a lamentable lack of acquaintance with the sacred spirit by which our early government was baptized which discriminates against the educational institutions of the church—the nurseries of our purest patriotism, the guardians of our dearest rights, the strongholds of our nation's destiny. Whatever may be one's opinion as to the sphere of public education, the State can not ignore or deny its educational indebtedness to the Church without peril and scandal. The more friendly the attitude of the State to the institutions of the Church, and the more liberal her policy in fostering the same, the more perfectly will she safeguard the forces that insure her increasing prosperity. The State has no worse enemy than the small politician, who, under the plea of guarding the institutions of the commonwealth, would embarrass, by hostile legislation, the schools of learning fostered by the Christian Church.

"The cry of liberalism in education is really the first note of the Commune. It is the spirit which, if left to grow, will pull down the Vendome column and lay ruthless hands upon the ark of the Lord. Christian education is not narrow. It does not fetter thought, but emancipates mind. It does not impede investigation, but flings wide the doors of the largest mental hospitality, and gives the broadest commission to 'intermeddle with all knowledge.' . . . Our school and college systems are the creations of Christianity. It was not until the Christian Church fought and won the battle for education that the world discovered its vast excellence, and counted its institutions worthy of munificent endowment.

"Victor Hugo has said that 'he who opens the door of the school-house, closes the door of the jail.' That depends on who keeps the school, and what is taught there. The school-house may become a place for polishing fiends and graduating outlaws. It is not the number, but the character of our schools; not how many children attend, but who teaches them, and what they are taught, that type and measure their influence for good.

"I do not think it extravagant to insist that the right education of American childhood is to determine the destiny of this great republic. There is profound philosophy and historic truth in that old proverb which says, 'What you sow in the school you reap in the nation.' Correct principles sown in the soil of the young mind, cultivated by wise, well-equipped teachers, and ripened by the sun of a gracious Providence, will produce a manhood and a womanhood that will sacredly preserve the past and guarantee the glory of the future."

This work is destined to take high rank in the standard literature of Methodism. It ought to have and, we do not doubt, will have a large circulation at once.

THE I. I. AND C. REDIVIVUS.

For some time past the friends of the Industrial Institute and College at Columbus, Miss., have been in a state of trepidation as to its future. It has been feared that it would have to suspend for two years for want of the funds necessary for its maintenance. As all our readers may not be informed as to the recent history of the institution, we will give a brief resume thereof.

The Legislature, at its session beginning in January of the present year, made the usual appropriation for its maintenance, but embodied in the appropriation bill certain conditions. The governor approved the appropriation, but vetoed some of the conditions. After the adjournment of the Legislature the auditor refused to issue warrants in payment of any part of the appropriation, on the ground that the governor's approval of the appropriation was null and void, because of his veto of the conditions. Thereupon the executive sought a mandamus compelling the issuance of the warrants; but the Circuit Court refused the mandamus, and the Supreme Court sustained this action. Subsequently the governor negotiated for a loan from the Board of Control of the penitentiary, but a tax payer of the State sued out an injunction stopping the payment of the money by the Board of Control. Just at this juncture the Board of Trustees of the I. I. and C., through Bishop C. B. Galloway, negotiated a loan of $25,000 from Maj. R. W. Millsaps. This ensures the maintenance of the college until the next session of the Legislature, two years hence. This is a most praiseworthy act on the part of Maj. Millsaps. If the personelle of the next Legislature were the same as that of the present Legislature, there would be no risk involved in the loan. The present Legislature having once voted the appropriation, would unquestionably do so again. But the next Legislature is not yet elected, and will not be for more than a year to come. The loan of money to be paid by a legislative body yet to be constituted is a performance a little out of the ordinary run of the doings of capitalists. In making this loan Major Millsaps has shown implicit faith in the integrity of the people of Mississippi, and in their interest in the cause of higher female education. Major Millsaps has done more by far for the cause of Christian education than any other citizen of the State of Mississippi, having given about $90,000 to Millsaps College. He now comes forward and shows himself broad enough to invest a large sum of money for the maintenance of a State institution, trusting the people of the State, through their representatives in the Legislature, to reimburse him. Capitalists of this sort are a treasure to any church or any commonwealth. May his tribe increase!

Hon. A. A. Kincannon, State Superintendent of Education, has been elected to the presidency of the institution, and has accepted the position. He will resign the State superintendency before the opening of the school in the Fall.

AT KNOXVILLE.

On Sunday, July 3, we had the privilege of dedicating a new church at Knoxville, Miss. The congregation far surpassed the capacity of the building. Quite a number stood during the entire service, and it is estimated that at least a hundred persons failed to get in. After we had committed an attempt at preaching, the pastor, Bro. R. A. Breland, took a collection, which was followed by the dedicatory service. The church is a very neat, tasteful edifice of ample dimensions to meet the wants of the community on ordinary occasions. It was erected chiefly through the liberality of one man. The cost, including seats, chandelier, refrigerator, and all necessary furniture, is about $1,100. Of this amount $100 was donated by the Church Extension Board. About the same amount was raised from the congregation on Sunday. The remainder of the cost—nearly $900—has been paid out by Mr. Horace G. Butler, the leading layman in the community. Such an act of liberality is eminently praiseworthy. Our church at Knoxville is weak, numerically and financially. We had been for some years dependent upon the generosity of our Baptist brethren for a place of worship. Bro. Butler felt that this state of things ought not to continue, and so, without soliciting aid from any source except from the Church Extension Board, he built the church, footing all the bills himself. He allowed a collection to be taken at the dedicatory service for his partial reimbursement, but had it understood, with the pastor, that however small the collection might be, the church was to be dedicated free of debt.

Bro. Breland has a meeting in progress. The first sermon of the meeting was preached on Saturday night by Rev. E. T. Breland—a strong and spiritual discourse. On Sunday there were three services. The afternoon service was conducted by Miss Lena Garrett, of Union Church, Miss., and was a very profitable one. Her elocution is fine. Many of our preachers might well covet her gift of reading the Scriptures impressively. Her talk made a deep impression for good. She is so evidently sincere, earnest and consecrated that her gentle, winning words go straight to the heart. The service closed with a very enjoyable testimony meeting. At night the audience was favored with a very striking and thoughtful sermon from Bro. E. T. Breland. The meeting will continue during the week. Bro. E. T. Breland and Miss Garrett will remain during the meetings, as will also Rev. — Gray. The pastor anticipates a successful meeting. Bro. Breland is in high favor with his flock, and, in keeping with his previous record, is doing good work along all lines.

During our stay in Knoxville we enjoyed the cordial hospitalities of Bro. and Sister H. G. Butler.

SHORT STOPS.

En route to Knoxville we stopped several hours at Baker, La. Rev. W. H. Benton met us at the depot and escorted us to his parsonage home, where we dined and had a pleasant time socially for several hours with Bro. Benton and family and with the family of Rev. P. Howard. Bro. Howard also arrived just before our departure. Bro. Benton is now putting the finishing touches on the new church which he has erected at Baker. This church will be dedicated on the fourth Sunday in September by the editor of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

We stopped a night and a part of a day at Gloster. We found Rev. M. M. Black on his feet after a ten days' attack of fever. We found Sister Hunnicutt somewhat ill, though not seriously so. Dr. Hunnicutt seems in good health and spirits, and, in keeping with his record, he is devoting himself assiduously to the duties of his position as presiding elder.

Several of the brethren who attended the Southern University commencement have given us glowing accounts of the occasion. The exercises were of unusual interest, the attendance was large and the institution in better condition than ever before in its history. Every financial obligation had been met and there were several thousand dollars in the treasury, with which to make the contemplated improvements on the chapel. The Alumni Association resolved to raise the amount necessary to endow a chair. This is all gratifying news to the friends of the institution. Dr. Kenner has proven himself the right man and vindicated the wisdom of the Trustees in his selection. Prof. Louis Massey resigned and Prof. Turner, who has had charge of the preparatory department, was elected to fill the vacancy. A wise selection.—Alabama Advocate.

NOTES.

The contract has been let for the erection of a handsome new church at Greenwood, Miss. The cost will be $16,000. We congratulate the wide-awake pastor and his flock.

Bishop H. C. Morrison has promised Dr. Sawyer to preach for him at 11 A. M., next Sunday, July 10. He will be greeted by a large congregation at Rayne Memorial, we feel sure.

En route to Knoxville we had the good fortune to travel as far as Baker with our genial friend, Rev. R. H. Wynn, who was on his way to Blairstown to assist his father, Rev. J. F. Wynn, in a meeting of a week's duration at Blairstown. We also had the company of Rev. H. W. Rickey from Baton Rouge on, he being also en route to Blairstown.

ABOUT THE DIFFICULTY.

MR. EDITOR: You doubtless noticed an account in the Times-Democrat, of June 27, of a difficulty on the streets of Covington, in which Rev. D. C. Rawls is mentioned as one of the parties. Fearing that a false impression might grow out of the statement made, I wish to state that Rev. D. C. Rawls has the hearty endorsement of the best element in Covington for the part he took in the difficulty. M. G. JENKINS, P. C.

HOW SOME OF OUR READERS CAN MAKE MONEY.

Last month I cleared, after paying all expenses, $355.85; the month previous $260, and have at same time attended to other duties. I believe any energetic person can do equally as well, as I have had very little experience. The Dish Washer is just lovely, and every family wants one, which makes selling very easy. I do no canvassing. People hear about the Dish Washer, and come or send for one. It is strange that a good, cheap washer has never before been put on the market. The Iron City Dish Washer fills this bill. With it you can wash and dry the dishes for a family of ten in two minutes without wetting the hands. As soon as people see the washer work they want one. You can make more money and make it quicker than with any other household article on the market. I feel convinced that any lady or gentleman can make from $10 to $14 per day around home. My sister and brother have started in the business and are doing splendid. You can get full particulars by addressing the Iron City Dish Washer Company, Station A, Pittsburg, Pa. They help you get started, then you can make money awfully fast.

WAR ON YELLOW FEVER.

The "Austell" Lithia Springs Hotel, at Austell, Ga., eighteen miles from Atlanta, Ga., in the Blue Ridge range of Mountains, is the place to spend the Summer and escape yellow fever. Rates $7.00 per week, $25 to $30 per month. The famous water served in hotel free to guests. This hotel is cool, comfortable and homelike. With plenty spring chickens, Chicago meats and other like appetizers. Good amusements. Our rates are low because times are hard and we want to fill up early. Address W. A. Camp, Manager, Austell, Ga.

Anything that will make and keep one well should be hailed with eager interest by every member of the human race. And unless ten thousand honest men and women are mistaken, that is just what the Electropoise will do. If it wasn't for skeptics and unbelievers, one would be found in each family throughout the world. It won't cure everything, and no miracles are claimed for it; but in nine cases out of ten it will either cure or afford so much benefit that the user would not knowingly be without it.

The Electropoise is an instrument; not a battery or belt. It is attached for an hour or more a day or night to the wrist or ankle. It simply enables the body to take on all the oxygen necessary to health, and the result is, that Nature purifies the system and works her own cure. No drugs, no doping, no expense but the first cost of the instrument.

The Electropoise is a Southern invention, promoted by Southerners and pushed by Southern capital. The president of the company gave up a lucrative business to push it because it had cured him of rheumatism, and he believed in it, and knew it would do as much for others. His faith was justified, as their book of 250 testimonials from doctors, lawyers, ministers and people in the ordinary walks of life who have been cured or benefited will attest.

We believe this little booklet will interest all our readers, and trust they will avail themselves of this opportunity to write the Electropoise Co., 1122 Broadway, New York, for one, which they will mail free upon request. Having investigated the merits of the Electropoise thoroughly, we are prepared to say without hesitation that it is a remedy of remarkable merit.

According to a recent act of Congress, every check, draft, post-office money order and express order must, after July 1, bear a United States revenue stamp. A two cents' stamp is required on sums of $100 or less. Let all our subscribers take note of this and govern themselves accordingly.

A NEW CHURCH.

Our Building Committee for the M. E. Church, South, of Greenwood, Miss., have just closed a contract with Lindawood and Puckett, of Aberdeen and Kosciusko, to build a new church at a cost of $16,000 when finished, work to begin in thirty days. In addition to this, our lot just bought cost us $2,000 in cash. We think we will have the most complete church in the State as to its arrangement. R. H. Hunt, of Chattanooga, Tenn., is the architect.

Methodism has a bright future in Greenwood, if we will be faithful to God and the church. We are receiving new members all the while, and our band is as faithful as you will find anywhere.

TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Hereafter we will give in each issue a list of all important letters received during the week. Watch the list and see whether Uncle Sam's postal operatives have been faithful.

We invite attention to the advertisement of Centenary College in this issue. During the Summer thousands of dollars will be expended in repairs and improvements on the buildings and grounds. The chapel and the dormitories will be thoroughly renovated, and new buildings will be erected as homes for members of the faculty. Board, including everything except washing, costs only $12 per month. Meals can be had at $7. President Cooper is much encouraged with the prospect. He hopes to open with 200 pupils. The institution has a well-equipped faculty.

HED-RIDDEN.

MANSFIELD, LA.

I have been affected with rheumatism and general prostration for 14 months, being bedridden the most of the time and not able to dress myself. A lump formed on my liver that showed externally the size of an egg and was treated by several physicians during the time without any relief being obtained. At last I was told it was necessary to have an operation performed to save my life. Several physicians had pronounced my case hopeless. I was reduced to a mere skeleton. I met a friend who had an Electropoise who prevailed on me to wear it. I did so. The second day I was able to get up and dress myself. I sent and bought a Poise; have used it now six weeks and have increased in weight over 30 pounds. All pains and enlargements have disappeared. MRS. S. T. POTTS.

SPINAL TROUBLE.

SHREVEPORT, LA., April 9, 1894.

Dear Sirs: I bought a pocket Electropoise the 1st of February for my little boy, who had spinal trouble caused by a fall about three years ago. When I got the Electropoise my son could not walk; in fact, he was paralyzed from his hips down. He had not put his foot on the floor since last October. He was badly drawn, and could not even sit in a chair. We kept him in bed most of the time, and when he wanted to get up had to make him a pallet on the floor. His legs were so stiff we could hardly bend them, and after bending had to straighten them out again. His little body was in the shape of a half moon, and he could not even turn over in bed. I applied the instrument, and when reaction set in he could stand up by the bed by holding on. This was the first time his feet had touched the floor for seven months. I have not used any medicine or even rubbed my little boy while using the Electropoise. There are many skeptics, and I am one myself, but will have to give way in regard to the Electropoise and proclaim it the grandest invention of the age. Yours gratefully,

R. A. CALHOUN.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD.

OF INTEREST TO STOCKHOLDERS.

FREE TRANSPORTATION TO ATTEND THE ANNUAL MEETING AT CHICAGO. SOME INTERESTING FACTS.

In order that stockholders of the Illinois Central Railroad Company may more readily attend in person the annual meetings, there has been posted in each station of the Company a notice to the effect that, in accordance with a resolve of the Board of Directors, there may be issued to each holder of one or more shares of the capital stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, as registered on the books of the Company, a ticket enabling him or her to travel free over the Company's lines from the station of the Illinois Central Railroad nearest to his or her registered address, to Chicago and return, for the purpose of attending, in person, the next Annual Stockholders' Meeting of the Company, which will be held at its General Office in Chicago on Wednesday, September 28, 1898, at noon. Details as to the necessary procedure to obtain such ticket, the date of its issue and its limit, are fully set forth on the posted notices referred to. In this connection, it will be interesting to note that since, in 1862, the capital stock of the Company became full paid, a cash dividend, ranging from 4 per cent. to 10 per cent. per annum has been paid semi-annually to every holder of stock, and that it is now twenty years since the Company, in any year, paid less than 5 per cent., the present rate of distribution.

Niagara Vapor.. Baths..

We are the original manufacturers of portable Vapor Baths.

We have, during the last ten years, supplied thousands of our Baths to physicians, hospitals, sanitariums, etc., and we are now, for the first time, advertising them direct to the general public.

IN BUYING A VAPOR BATH Get one with a steel frame that stands on the floor. If a manufacturer does not show you a cut of the frame without the covering, you may take it for granted that his "Steel Frame" is a wire hoop that rests on the shoulders of the bather.

Get one that is covered with proper material. Insist on seeing a sample of material before ordering. We make our own covering material and print it with a handsome "all over" pattern of Niagara Falls.

Get one with a thermometer attachment. Don't go it blind—a bath that is too hot or not hot enough will be of no benefit to you.

Get one that you can return and have your money back if not satisfactory in every way.

Send for sample of material and interesting booklet that will tell you all about Vapor Baths.

Vapor Baths are an acknowledged household necessity. Turkish, Hot Air, Vapor, Sulphur or Medicated Baths at Home, 3c. Purifies system; produces cleanliness, health, strength. Prevents disease, obesity. Cures Colds, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, La Grippe, Malaria, Eczema, Catarrh, Female Ills, Blood, Skin, Nerve and Kidney Troubles. Beautifies Complexion.

A QUALITY MOST DESIRED.

Among the qualities most to be desired in a young girl's character is a high sense of honor. I wish I could impress on every reader the need of being always above everything petty or small, so that one would not for a single moment ever be tempted to do a mean or underhand thing, to speak unkindly of a friend, or to repeat a conversation which was confidential.

It may happen to you, for instance, to be visiting in the home of a relative or friend, where there may be a little friction at the table, or where some anxiety arises about the course of a member of the family. No matter what you see or hear, in such circumstances, you are bound, if you are an honorable person, to be silent about it, neither making comments nor looking as if you could tell something if you choose, nor in any way alluding to what is unpleasant, at any future time. A guest in a home can not be too careful to guard the good name of those under its roof, for it is an honor to be a guest in the first place, and honor is demanded in return.

Again, a nice sense of honor in matters connected with money is very important. Polly is treasurer of a society, and has the care of the funds. She must never for an instant or in an emergency lend these funds to other people, or borrow them for her own use. I knew a girl—Polly was her name, by the way—who was induced, being treasurer of a certain guild, to lend her brother, for one day, the money she had in her care. The brother was older than Polly, and a very persuasive person. He said: "Why should you hesitate? I'll bring it back to you to-night, and it will oblige me very much if I can take that fifty dollars and pay a bill I owe before noon to-day." Foolish Polly permitted her scruples to be overruled. The money was not brought back, and but for her father's kindness in making it good she would have been disgraced as a dishonest treasurer. She told me long afterwards that the lesson had been burned on her mind never to take liberties with money which she held in trust.—Harper's Round Table.

THE SUCCESSFUL MAN.

"I have carried the following in my pocket-book for some time," writes a well-known business man. "I think it will bear reproducing."

"A successful man," says Ella Wheeler Wilcox, "is one who has made a happy home for his wife and children. No matter what he has not done in the way of achieving wealth and honor, if he has done that, he is a grand success. If he has not done that, and it is his own fault, though he be the highest in the land, he is a most pitiable failure. I wonder how many men in the mad pursuit of gold which characterizes the age, realize that there is no fortune which can be left to their families as great as the memory of a happy home."

"HOW DO YOU DO?"

The ordinary polite inquiry, 'How do you do?" calls for nothing but a conventionally polite response; but if a man is past "the allotted age," and a philosopher besides, it may elicit a reply full of meaning and worthy of record.

When John Quincy Adams was eighty years old he met in the streets of Boston an old friend who shook his trembling hand and said:

"Good morning! And how is John Quincy Adams to-day?"

"Thank you," was the ex-President's answer. "John Quincy Adams himself is well, sir; quite well, I thank you. But the house in which he lives at present is becoming dilapidated. It is tottering upon its foundation. Time and the seasons have nearly destroyed it. Its roof is pretty well worn out. Its walls are much shattered, and it trembles with every wind. The old tenement is becoming almost uninhabitable, and I think John Quincy Adams will have to move out of it soon; but he himself is quite well, sir; quite well."

With that the venerable sixth President of the United States moved on with the aid of his staff.

It was not long afterward that he had his second and fatal stroke of paralysis in the Capitol at Washington.

"This is the last of earth," he said. "I am content."—Youth's Companion.

WHAT TO TEACH BOYS.

A philosopher has said that true education to boys is to "teach them what they ought to know when they become men."

(1) To be true and to be genuine. No education is worth anything that does not include this. A man had better not know how to read—he had better never learn a letter in the alphabet, and be true, genuine in intention and in action—rather than be learned in all sciences and in all languages, to be at the same time false in heart and counterfeit in life. Above all things, teach boys that truth is more than riches, more than earthly power or possessions.

(2) To be pure in thought, language and life—pure in mind and in body.

(3) To be unselfish. To care for the feelings and comforts of others. To be generous, noble and manly. This will include a genuine reverence for the aged and for things sacred.

(4) To be self-reliant and self-helpful, even from childhood. To be industrious always, and self-supporting at the earliest proper age. Teach them that all honest work is honorable, that an idle life of dependence on others is disgraceful.

When a boy has learned these four things, when he has made these ideas a part of his being—however poor, or however rich—he has learned the most important things he ought to know when he becomes a man.—Parish Visitor.

THE INFLUENCE OF A TRUE HOME.

A young man recently, at a religious meeting, told the story of his conversion. He said:

"On my way to and from my business, I pass a certain home. I am generally on my way about their breakfast time. As I passed one day I saw the head of the house, a man only a few years older than myself, sit down to the table. He had a Bible in his hand, and in the passing glance I saw his wife and little girl with heads bowed, waiting for him to read. It was only a glance, but it haunted me all day. It had a purifying influence. The next morning, as I passed, I found myself looking into the window with curiosity, mingled with more respect than I ever had had for religion. Morning after morning it was the same.

"I had never been a church-goer, but one Sabbath morning I resolved to go to a church near by. I was ignorant of the time, and so dressed leisurely and sauntered in. The Sabbath-school was in session. I glanced over the classes, and was pleased to see my unknown friend teaching a class of young men about my own age. Before the year was over I had made the good confession. That was twelve years ago, and my faith is stronger to-day than ever; but somehow I always feel that the picture I saw through the open window had more to do with my conversion than anything else."—The Knapsack.

An amusing story is told in the Churchman of a rebuke administered to a hard bargainer, who sent the following advertisement to a paper: "A lady in delicate health wishes to meet with a useful companion. She must be domestic, musical, an early riser, amiable, of good appearance, and have some experience in nursing. A total abstainer preferred. Comfortable home. No salary." A few days afterward the advertiser received by express a basket, labeled: "This side up, with care; perishable." On opening it, she found a tabby cat with a letter tied to its tail. It ran thus: "Madame, in response to your advertisement, I am happy to furnish you with a very useful companion, which you will find exactly suited to your requirements. She is domestic, a good vocalist, an early riser, possesses an amiable disposition, and is considered handsome. She has had great experience as a nurse, having brought up a large family. I need scarcely add that she is a total abstainer. As salary is no object to her, she will serve you faithfully in return for a comfortable home."

THE AIR OF BED-ROOMS.

When there is too much water in the atmosphere, the person who breathes it is, to a certain extent, deprived of his due supply of oxygen, and an elementary beginning of suffocation is perceived in the chest, says the Hospital. Most of the middle-aged and all old persons have felt this; and all persons who have weak hearts or impaired lungs. Now, the air of bed-rooms is exceedingly liable to be overcharged with watery vapor. The most obvious reasons for this are that many bed-rooms are never warmed with fires, and that their windows are often left open all day until dusk, and sometimes to the very hour of going to bed. Let us think of some of the consequences of going to bed in very damp air. A delicate or an aged person leaves a warm drawing-room, say, at half-past eleven, a drawing-room in which there was a temperature of sixty-eight degrees; he enters a cold, damp bed-room, say at a temperature of thirty degrees. The air in the drawing-room was dry, perhaps a little too dry. The air in the bed-room is saturated with cold, watery vapor. The person we are thinking of, so soon as he enters the bed-room, chokes and gasps and coughs for an hour at least, and sometimes brings on such an attack of asthma, or, as he calls it, "stuffiness" of the chest, that he can hardly breathe at all. He may even lose his night's sleep, and be ill for some days after such an exposure. Now, common sense says: "Make an effort to bring the atmosphere of the bed-room nearer in point both of dryness and warmth to the atmosphere of the drawing-room, and then not only will a man feel as comfortable in the bed-room as in the drawing-room, but even more comfortable."

HOT MILK AS NUTRIMENT.

If any one doubts the nourishing properties of milk, let a test be made of the following preparation of it. When very weary or weak from exhaustion, heat some milk to the scalding point until a thin skin begins to wrinkle upon the surface, and then drink it as hot as possible. It refreshes almost instantly, and restores the exhausted vitality to a surprising extent as soon as it is taken. It is more nutritious than any of the beef teas made from meat extracts or even from fresh beef.—Exchange.

A LOW STANDARD.

That is but a low standard of greatness which measures a man by his employment, or what he can buy, rather than by what he is. A hod-carrier may be infinitely superior to the millionaire under whose bricks he staggers. The real world of the laborer may be as far above that of his employer as heaven is above hell. The greatest monetary success here may mean the direst failure hereafter.

"When life is ruined for the sake of money's preciousness, the ruined life cares naught for the money."

"Better a cheap coffin and a plain funeral with a useful, unselfish life, than a grand mausoleum with a loveless, selfish life."

No; money-making is not the highest success. It is a low estimate of an occupation to regard it merely as a means of getting a living. He is the richest man who enriches his country most, in whom his neighbors feel richest and prondest; who gives himself with his money, who opens wider the door of opportunity to those about him. Such a man makes every acre of ground in his community worth more, and enriches every man who lives near him. On the other hand, many a millionaire impoverishes the town in which he dwells, and lessens the value of every foot of land in his vicinity.—Exchange.

Take notice that we are now handling two different Bibles. The difference between the two is that the one called the "Combination" Bible has all the advantages of the other Bible, and also has all the changes made by the revisers. These changes are given, however, brief notes at the bottom of each page, reference to them being facilitated by a very convenient system of notation. Thus you have all the benefits of the two versions in parallel columns without the bulkiness of such an arrangement. In ordering this edition be sure to say "Combination" Bible.

BISHOP WILSON

in speaking of the "Combination Bible says:" "In all respects it seems to me the best for use of teachers and students, ever published." Similar testimonials have been given by Bishop Hendrix, and by Bishops Hurst, Fowler, Ninde, Foss, Vincent and Warren, of the M. E. Church, by a number of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and by hundreds of the leading ministers of all Protestant denominations. Let it be noted that this Bible can be procured by sending us three new subscribers with the cash—$6.

BUFFALO LITHIA SPRINGS.

PILGRIMAGE OF SUFFERERS TO THE WATERING PLACE THAT CURES MADE BY THE WATERS.

The annual pilgrimage of health seekers to Buffalo Lithia Springs, Virginia, has set in, the season at this famous health restorative resort beginning on June 15 and ending Oct. 1. This annual trend of travel to the springs dates back to the discovery of the springs themselves, for in the early days, when the medicinal powers of the Lithia Waters first became known, whole families came from afar and camped in the woods about the springs, and remained while they took a course of the waters.

As the fame of Buffalo Lithia Water spread, and distinguished physicians at home and abroad gave their unqualified endorsement of its use in uric acid poisoning, gout, rheumatism, Bright's disease, inflammation of the bladder, dyspepsia, nervous disorders, malaria, diseases of women, and other ills of mankind—its use became general; and while the number of patients who go to the springs is large, it is small in comparison with the great number that use the bottled waters.

The praise bestowed on these waters by leading members of the medical profession who have prescribed them in their daily practice would seem almost extravagant to one who was unacquainted with their remarkable curative powers. But the reports of cases, made usually before associations of physicians, and surrounded by all the safeguards of medical ethics, leave no doubt that the Buffalo Lithia Waters are entitled to the name—"Nature's Materia Medica"—used so often in describing them.

A study of this carefully written and carefully illustrated book published by the proprietor of the springs, Thomas F. Goode, will prove of great benefit to anyone who is suffering from any of the many diseases for which Buffalo Lithia Water is a cure. The book is sent free to anyone addressing Thomas F. Goode, Buffalo Lithia Springs, Va.

How easy it is to tear a piece of paper along the line in which it has originally been folded! How easy it is for a second temptation to overcome when the first has been yielded to! A sin that has once gained the victory over our moral nature has put a fold, as it were, in that nature, and destroyed its straightness and smoothness, so that when the same temptation comes a second time, it seeks the weak point which it had formerly made, and along that line of least resistance we are turned from our righteous principles and strong resolution.—Hugh Macmillan.

THE GREAT CHURCH LIGHT.

CINCINNATI, O., March 31, 1898.

Mr. I. P. Frink, 551 Pearl St., New York:

DEAR SIR—I want to say that the two large reflectors you furnished for our Temple in this city have given universal satisfaction, and everybody is delighted. Without the use of a single skylight, which is always a nuisance, our very large auditorium, or rather two auditoriums (for we use the entire Sunday-school rooms and main auditorium on Sunday nights), is brilliantly lighted. No grumbling because the old people can't see the words of the hymns. There is not a church in this city, with its 250 churches, so handsomely lighted as ours. Everybody speaks in your praise. I shall be delighted at any time to recommend your reflectors, and you are always at liberty to refer to me. G. R. ROBBINS,
Pastor Lincoln Park Institutional Baptist Church.

—Journal and Messenger, April 28, 1898.

The words of Jesus Christ were always new. His sermons on the mountain-top and sea-side transported his hearers into new realms, into fresh scenes of green pastures and living streams. He moulded the ideas which had been uttered before by Hebrew prophets into new forms, and gave them a new and better life. His was tender as well as original. It had that tenderness that could roll the thunders of faithful rebuke as well as breathe the words of soothing sympathy and love. Tenderness is the soul of eloquence. His tears were the exudation of moral force.—Rev. W. Ches. Fant.

MY PASTOR'S VISIT.

I had not been to preaching but once in six months. Sickness in my family had prevented my attending church. It had been so long since I had enjoyed any religious conversation that my heart panted to engage in holy conversation. The other members of my family seemed to have no time or inclination to talk of anything save the affairs of this world. One day my children, who were playing out of doors, ran in, exclaiming joyfully, "O mama, the preacher is coming!" My heart beat with joyful anticipation, for I thought surely that my longing soul would be refreshed and edified in his company. I gave him a hearty welcome, and asked him in. He was hardly seated before he began to ask directions to Bro. So-and-So's house. I tried to engage him in conversation about the interest of the church and the Sunday-school, but he seemed strangely silent and uncommunicative. He showed only too plainly that he took no interest in the drift of my talk. He appeared to be ill at ease, and in a hurry to get away.

He stayed in my house less than half an hour. He read a few verses in the Bible, and prayed a short prayer, but the reading and praying were like his visit—cold and formal. There was no feeling in it. He bade me good-by, and, lo! he was gone. My children stood around me, the very picture of surprise and astonishment.

"Oh, mama," cried one, "he was in such a hurry to go. He didn't talk with us a bit; he didn't even tell us good-by." I had no answer to give them; my own heart was too full for utterance. Why was it so? Was it because my home was plain and humble? Was Jesus so often the guest of Mary and Martha because they could offer him carpeted floors and spacious halls?—Methodist Matron.

Human sympathy is one of the most powerful and consolatory forces of life. He who has it is doubly entrenched and armed. He who lacks it is impoverished and discounted beyond all calculation. A sweet look, a kind word, a gentle touch, the slightest evidence of love, will often brace a man to do his best. The absence of the tokens of love will sometimes lead to despair. If we are bereaved of sympathy, we are bereaved.—Texas Advocate.

REV. W. C. BLACK,
512 Camp St., New Orleans, La.

There is no person in the world of whom a man's estimate is more likely to be mistaken than that which he forms of himself. The record which the phonograph makes of the voices of our friends we at once recognize as true to fact, within the limitations imposed by the imperfection of the apparatus. But no one recognizes his own voice when ground out to him again by the machine. That alone seems unnatural and past recognition. The reason is that we never hear our own voices from the same position as that from which we hear the voices of others. We are, in fact, worse placed for ascertaining the quality of the volume of sound we send forth than is anybody else within hearing. Just so is it with our estimates of what we are, and of what we are capable. We are too near to what is to be weighed, measured and appraised, to take its true dimensions and ascertain its quality. We are associated with others in life that we may learn what we are ourselves.—Sunday-School Times.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. PRIDGEN—Resolved, That we, the members of Hebron Sabbath-school, do, with profound sorrow and deep regret, acknowledge the death of Miss LAVANA PRIDGEN, a member of our Sabbath-school, which sad event occurred May 13, 1898.

Resolved, That in the death of same we, as well as our community at large, lose a loyal and faithful member, and that we, in mourning her loss, feel that the tenderest ties that bind together all humanity are not severed by the grave, or even death; but, as our fondest and esteemed ones are often passing from this world to the realities of the world to come, we humbly bow ourselves in submission to the dispensation of God's providence, and say that our loss is only his eternal gain. She was a faithful, obedient daughter, sister, and friend, and, above all, she possessed those rare traits of character, such as gentleness, meekness, and modesty, and a reverence for things sacred that characterize the true Christian.

Resolved, That we tender our deepest sympathy to her host of relatives and friends, and especially to the bereaved father and mother whom she leaves to mourn her loss; and may kind and gentle words keep us all in the right paths, and the blessed Spirit lead us all to Jesus!

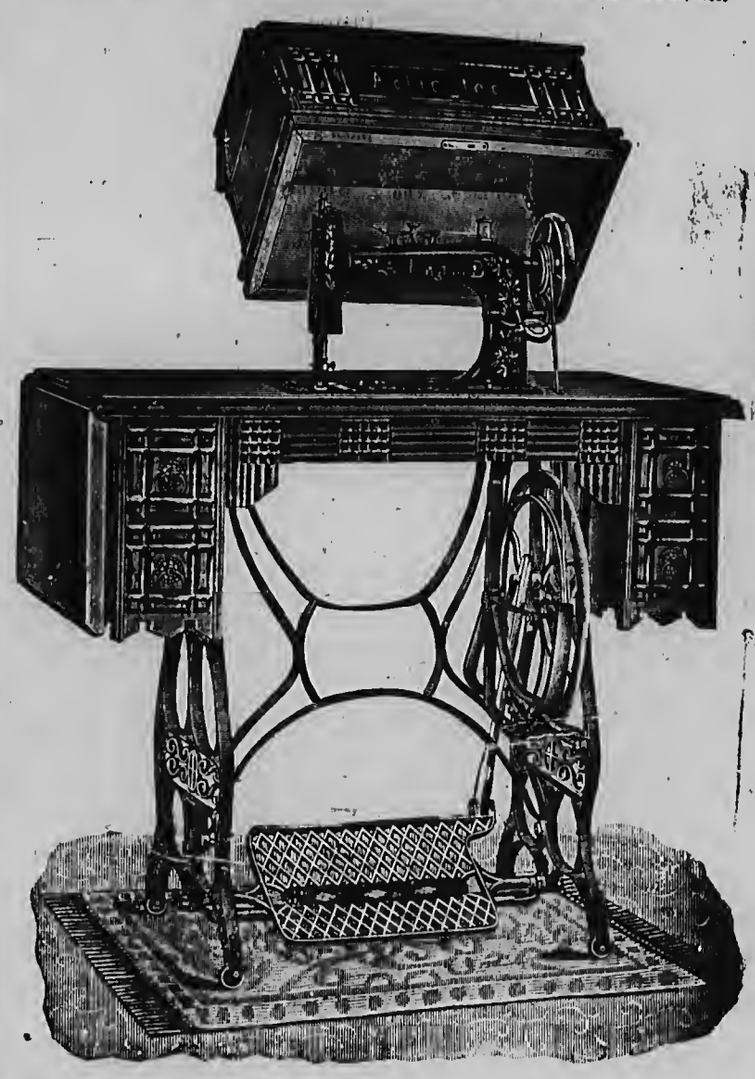
New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless and are very durable.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Now that he has been re-enforced, Admiral Dewey will at once proceed to take Manila. The troops will be landed at Cavite, and the city of Manila will be attacked by land and sea.

As a result of special directions it is confidently expected by the administration that a combined attack on Morro Castle, Santiago, will be made on Wednesday by the forces under command of Major-General Shafter and Rear Admiral Sampson.

To procure proper necessary co-operation of the army and navy in effecting the capture of Santiago with as little loss of life as possible President McKinley has been compelled to give personal instruction to both officers.

After ten days of suspense, the welcome news has at last been received that Admiral Dewey has been re-enforced by the arrival at Cavite of the cruiser "Charleston" and the first installment of troops—2500 men. These troops left San Francisco about May 23, and in the ordinary course of events should have reached Manila ten days ago. It now appears that the cause of delay was the capture of the Guajan Island, the largest of the Ladrone group, a Spanish possession lying in the direct road to Manila.

After days of severe fighting the Americans are before Santiago. The Spanish losses at Santiago are now known to be 3000 killed and wounded, and may run up to 7000 including prisoners. Gen. Linares, Commander-in-Chief of the Spanish forces at Santiago, was seriously wounded. Gen. Vara de Rey, who succeeded him, was killed, leaving Gen. Jose Torral Commander-in-Chief. Gen. Shafter demanded the surrender of Santiago by noon on Monday. The foreign consuls asked the usual twenty-four hours to remove the non-combatants, the women and children, which time was granted. Unless the city surrenders by noon on Tuesday Gen. Shafter will begin the assault. Gen. Torrel has replied to Gen. Shafter that he will defend Santiago to the end.

The American fleet obtained a decisive victory off Santiago Sunday, when it completely destroyed Cervera's fleet, consisting of six vessels, with the loss of only one killed and two wounded. Cervera attempted to escape by running out of the harbor of Santiago, and slipping by Sampson's fleet. He was caught, and his vessels pounded to pieces by the American men-of-war, being set on fire and blown up by the shells of the "Oregon," "Indiana," "Massachusetts" and "Iowa." The Spanish torpedo boat destroyers "Pinton" and "Furor" were blown up near the entrance of the harbor. The "Cristobal Colon," the swiftest in the fleet, got further away and was destroyed sixty miles from Santiago. In this fight the Spanish lost 350 killed and 160 drowned, the Americans one killed and two wounded. Admiral Cervera and from 1300 to 1600 Spaniards were captured.

With Cervera's fleet destroyed, the armorclads of the American navy will now devote exclusive attention to Admiral Camara's command and the coast of Spain. It can be stated on authority that the moment word is received from Admiral Sampson, confirming the war department report of the destruction of Cervera's fleet, instructions will be issued directing an increase of Commodore Watson's eastern squadron, which will at once be sent in pursuit of Camara's, and a second fleet will undoubtedly be formed for operations against the coast of Spain. Spain now has only Camara to depend upon, and it is, therefore, impossible for her to send a squadron to bombard American ports, or to relieve her troops in Cuba and Porto Rico. In view of the destruction of Cervera's fleet, it is a confident prediction of officials that Camara will be ordered to return to the peninsular waters with his command.

MR. STEAD'S SUMMING UP OF GLADSTONE'S POLITICAL SERVICES.

First, he completed the revolution in British finance which Sir Robert Peel had begun. Mr. Gladstone was Cobden in office, establishing free trade and throwing the ports of the empire open to the world.

Secondly, he abolished the paper duties, which rendered a cheap press impossible, reduced the duty of cheap light wines in the interest of temperance, prepared the way for a heavy increase in the death duties, and steadily reduced the national debt.

Thirdly, he was the most potent force in the electoral revolution which democratized first urban and then the rural electorate, and then directed the attack of the democracy upon the House of Lords.

Fourthly, he reintroduced and popularized the policy of Canning as the foreign policy of England. This policy was humanitarian and crusading in its essence. It supported young peoples struggling to be free, championed Bulgaria against the Turk, and defended the principle of the European concert as the germ of the United States of Europe.

Fifthly, in things imperial he conquered Egypt, gave up the Ionian Islands, the Transvaal, evacuated Afghanistan, annexed Fiji and southern New Guinea, and either granted or confirmed the charters granted to the Royal Niger, Borneo, and South African companies.

Sixthly, in the case of the Alabama he established the principle of arbitration as the right way of settling international disputes between kindred English-speaking peoples.

Seventhly, he abolished church rates and university tests and disestablished and disendowed the Irish Church.

Eighthly, he attempted to do justice to the Irish peasant, and closed his career by an unavailing effort to pass a measure of home rule for Ireland.

Ninthly, and perhaps the most important of all, he was ever the embodiment of the sentiment of duty and of the principle of justice. The spirit of the man was more than any series of his acts, and his rule was uniformly lofty and his appeals were ever to the higher nature of man. We shall not speedily look upon his like again.—From "Mr. Gladstone," by W. T. Stead, in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for July.

We make 300 bottles of our GRAYBEARD every week. No more 300 bottles don't fill all orders, some customer must wait until the next week. We guarantee it to do not unless and the delay. We have earned a reputation for making a clean, fresh, sure remedy for Cancer—Eczema, Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and we cannot make GRAYBEARD faster, and make it good.

"A few years ago Cancer appeared on my face in form of a scab—not a sore, but a scab that dropped off, and soon reappeared, some worse. Finally it annoyed me to shave. Darting pains set in, affecting my sight. People said I had Cancer—I was miserable. About that time a planter name Jordan, down the State, once similarly afflicted, sent me a bottle of GRAYBEARD advising me to take it. I did so and to my great joy got better, Skin cleared, appetite improved, I got stouter and Cancer left me. And it has not returned. GRAYBEARD saved my life.

27th ANNUAL CAMP MEETING

—AT—

SEASHORE CAMP GROUNDS.

Located on the Gulf Shore, with a frontage of 1400 feet.

WILL OPEN (D. V.) ON WEDNESDAY, JULY 13, NEXT, AND CONTINUE FOR 8 OR 10 DAYS.

The Grounds are opened April 1, and closed Nov. 1, for occupying cottages and reception of visitors. Modern and ample accommodation have been provided for the multitudes that annually visit this refreshing and delightfully cool and bracing place of rest, free from malaria and contagious diseases.

The sea bathing is unsurpassed by any resort on the Mississippi Sound, while the supply of pure, sparkling drinking water is furnished by one of the finest of artesian wells, whose waters possess rare virtues.

The Grounds represent a beautiful grove of rare attractiveness, with its abundance of 20-odd varieties of shade trees, which afford shelter from the Summer heat.

The exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued, and act as a tonic to the debilitated visitors from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns. Boats for sailing and fishing always on hand. The drives along the seashore present magnificent views, and are over ten miles in length. Visitors are not expected to arrive or depart on the Sabbath day.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 5 to 23, inclusive, and be good to return on until Aug. 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. All trains will stop at the camp grounds from July 5 to 24, inclusive.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge.

The services during camp meeting are in charge of the presiding elders of the New Orleans, Seashore and Mobile District Conferences.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before and during camp meeting, or rent cottages for the season, will please communicate with W. L. Via, superintendent Camp Ground (Biloxi, P. O. 42, Miss.), or any of the following officers:

VOL. 45.—NO. 28 NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, JULY 14, 1898. WHOLE NO. 2186

W. C. BLACK, D. D., EDITOR AND PUBLISHER. } PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH, { ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

EDITORIAL NOTE.

We promised our readers a short time since that at the earliest possible moment we would give them the report of the Book Committee concerning the now famous war claim of the M. E. Church, South, against the United States government. When the report reached us on last Saturday, clipped from the Nashville Advocate, one-half of our paper for this week's issue had already gone to press, viz.: the second, third, sixth and seventh pages. In order to make good our promise, it, therefore, became necessary for us to put the report on the fourth and first pages, thus crowding out several communications which we desired to publish this week and also a considerable amount of editorial matter.

PUBLISHING HOUSE CLAIM.

STATEMENT OF THE BOOK COMMITTEE.

The Publishing House of the M. E. Church, South, was seized by the United States Army in 1863. Not only was the church dispossessed of its property for two years, and deprived of all benefits therefrom, but also that property was used by the United States Army; much of it destroyed, all of it damaged. The testimony of parties well acquainted with the facts, which testimony was submitted to the United States Congress, shows that the claim for use and damage of the property aggregated $458,400.

In the year 1872 (Congress having up to that time taken no steps to reimburse the church for the use, occupation, and injury to its property) Rev. Richard Abbey, D. D, who was in charge of the Publishing House at the time of its seizure by the United States Army, was employed to prosecute the claim against the United States government. He remained in charge of the matter till 1878, spending much of his time in Washington City, and was paid for salary and expenses $11,490, yet he could secure no favorable action on a claim, the justice of which has been admitted by the Congress of the United States.

From 1878 until 1888 nothing whatever was done by Congress, except that during the year 1885 or 1886 a bill to pay $150,000 was introduced in one branch of Congress and referred to a committee, but was not reported on.

In 1888 the claim was placed in the hands of a firm in Washington, on the basis of a contingent fee of 25 per cent. of the amount recovered. Bills were introduced in both Houses of Congress providing for the payment of $288,000, proof of the justice and amount of the claim were submitted, upon which proof the Senate Committee in 1878 has reported as follows: "The sum of $288,000 would be, as we understand the proof, a less sum than was saved to the treasury in the use of material, machinery, horses, and appliances of this great printing house. This sum is much below the lowest estimate of any of the witnesses as to the loss actually sustained by the claimants, and would not be adequate compensation if measured by such a standard." Yet, after four years of work by this Washington firm, Congress would do nothing to reimburse the church. Another contract was then made in which 15 per cent. of the amount collected was to be given to one firm, and $50,000 to another; the collectors to pay all expenses, and to receive no compensation unless the claim was paid; yet Congress was deaf to our cry for justice, or, at least, too apathetic to render us our just dues.

Here the church stood after having paid from 1872 until 1878 $11,490 to one of her most trusted ministers who spent his time trying to induce Congress to pay us our debt; from 1888 until 1893, having promised Washington attorneys 25 per cent. of what they could collect, or $72,000 of the $288 000 then sought; all other contracts having expired, other firms were promised $93 200 if they could succeed in rousing Congress to action.

The record shows that from 1878 until 1896 our attorneys had been unable to secure any report whatever from the Senate Committee, and that the measure for relief had not been called up in the House of Representatives. If the rate of interest prevailing in the South be considered, the church had, during a period of about thirty years, lost over $20,000 per annum, because Congress would not hear our demand for justice.

We are compelled to say, therefore, that we are surprised that Congressmen or Senators, especially Tennesseans, should tell the public that the man who spent his time and paid his own expenses in an effort to cause Congress to do us justice is not entitled to reasonable compensation, when the employment of an attorney is not only customary, but is also recognized by the law as a legitimate business, and is made necessary to meet the conditions imposed by the methods of Congress on all claimants for justice.

After nearly twenty-five years of effort, ultimating only in failure, the Book Committee, in July, 1895, engaged the services of E B. Stahlman, a resident of Nashville, Tenn., an official member for many years of our McKendree Church; a constant contributor to the institutions of the church; a man of large experience, recognized ability, and indomitable perseverance and energy, to take charge of the claim. The committee agreed to pay Mr. Stahlman 35 per cent. of the amount collected from the government, he to bear all expenses, and the church to be at no cost in case he failed. Mr. Stahlman was explicitly instructed that nothing should be done in the prosecution of the claim which would, even in the slightest degree, compromise the good name of the church, and that rather than compromise the church, the Book Committee preferred not to have the claim paid. It took Mr. Stahlman nearly three years to secure favorable action on this claim.

The Book Committee are of the opinion that the agreement with Mr. Stahlman was a perfectly legitimate and reasonable business agreement, in which a less sum was promised to him than is customary in such cases, and, as a matter of fact, the church has by this arrangement secured a larger sum of money than a Senate Committee recommended less than two years ago should be paid in satisfaction of our claim; that recommendation calling for the sum of $150,000, which sum the Book Committee refused to accept.

The amount to be paid to Mr. Stahlman did not seem to the Book Agents to be a fact into which any member of Congress had a right to inquire. What Congress was alone legitimately concerned with was the justice of the claim. What should be done with the money when paid was the business of the proper authorities of the church. No incidental question as to the agreement with any of the firms who represented the Book Committee had anything more to do with the justice of that claim than such an agreement would have in a case before the Supreme Court; and it is unheard of for that court to condition its decisions on an attorney's fee.

To show that the Book Agents took substantially this view of the case, we quote from a letter written January 7, 1898, by said Agents to a member of Congress, in answer to a letter from him, inquiring what interest Mr. Stahlman had in the claim. This letter was written about three weeks before the bill passed the Lower House:

"With reference to the share or interest, if any, Mr. Stahlman may have in this claim, I beg you to talk with him. He is in Washington, and can give you all the information you desire on the subject. Surely, whether he has pecuniary interest in the matter ought not to have a bearing on the merits of our claim, which is admittedly just, and which, as we understand it, you have on all occasions, without qualification, signified your willingness to support. The laborer is worthy of his hire, and if in the final adjustment it shall be deemed proper to pay Mr. Stahlman a reasonable compensation for his services—and his compensation shall be given with the consent of the proper authorities of the church—you, I am sure, will agree that it will not be an improper thing to do. The claim was placed by us originally in the hands of a Washington attorney. For reasons satisfactory to us, and entirely satisfactory to our friends then in the Senate and House, we refused to renew the arrangement when it expired. Surely we ought not to be made to suffer at the hands of our Tennessee representatives because we declined to renew an arrangement with this Washington attorney, and instead accepting the proffered assistance of a resident of Tennessee and a friend and member of the church; one who even as early as 1891, and before the agreement with the Washington attorney had expired, rendered valuable assistance in our endeavor to pass the bill."

As to the charge that Barbee & Smith made false representations to members of the Senate concerning the compensation to be paid to any attorney for the collection of this claim, the following correspondence is given:

CORRESPONDENCE WITH HON. S. PASCO.

After the bill had been adopted by the House of Representatives, January 28, 1898, it went to the Senate, where it was in charge of Hon. S. Pasco, Senator from Florida, upon whom we largely depended for its passage through the Senate.

On March 5, 1898, Mr. Pasco wrote to Barbee & Smith, Book Agents, the following letter:

"Messrs. Barbee & Smith, Nashville, Tenn.—Dear Sirs: Some malicious persons are circulating a slanderous story about the Capitol with the evident purpose to obstruct the passage of our bill. It is to the effect that you have made a contract with Mr. Stahlman to pay him 40 per cent. of the amount recovered. It was not necessary for me to get any contradiction, because I know very well that the Agents of the Publishing House knew better how to conduct their trust than to make such an improvident bargain. I knew also that there was no power to make such a contract, so I did not hesitate to denounce it as a malicious slander; and I am sure also that the Senators who came to me for information upon the subject are thoroughly satisfied with my statement. But, as a matter of caution it will be very well for me to have a positive denial from you, which I can use if it appears necessary, either before the bill comes up for action or on the floor of the Senate, so I suggest that you send me a telegram on Monday as to the facts of the case, and authorizing me, as I am sure you can, to deny this statement. I am glad to say that there is a very fair prospect of getting the bill up for consideration by Tuesday, and everything indicates that our efforts will be successful. I have had a good many conferences with Senators with reference to it, and the many assurances of support that have been given to me and others who have taken an interest in the matter convince me that it has gained strength since it came to the Senate. Senator Bate has been unceasing in his efforts to bring the matter to a successful conclusion, and we shall continue to do all in our power to get a vote as early as is possible.

"Yours very truly, S. PASCO."

This letter, coming from the Senator who had the bill in charge, and asking, as both Dr. Barbee and Mr. Smith assure us they understood, the direct question as to whether or not they were under contract to pay Mr. Stahlman 40 per cent. of the amount secured, was, in accordance with Mr. Pasco's request, answered by telegram on Monday, March 7, as follows:

"Letter of fifth received. The statement is untrue, and you are hereby authorized to deny it.

"BARBEE & SMITH, Agents."

This telegram was delivered in Washington, March 7, at 12:48 P. M, W. Jeffers, a Senate employee, receipting for it. A few minutes later they sent Senator Pasco the following telegram, the purpose of which was to enable Mr. Pasco to inform himself more fully upon the matter if he desired further information:

"Have asked Mr. Stahlman to call at once and see you. He is a gentleman upon whose statements you may implicitly rely. He is our friend and neighbor, and an official member of our church, whose interest in our behalf reaches beyond and above pecuniary consideration.

"BARBEE & SMITH, Agents."

This was delivered at 1:15 P. M., J. B. Lloyd, a Senate employee, receipting for it.

These were the only communications between Barbee & Smith, Book Agents, and Senator Pasco pending the passage of the bill. The first telegram answers categorically the question asked by the Senator, which question was as to the fee of 40 per cent. The second refers him to our attorney, Mr. Stahlman, who was present in Washington, and could have given him any information desired. At the same time a telegram was sent to Mr. Stahlman, telling him to call on Senator Pasco with reference to this matter, and Mr. Stahlman informs us that when he called Senator Pasco said no further information was needed.

The bill authorizing the payment of the claim was passed by the Senate March 8. On March 28 the attention of Barbee & Smith was called to the "Congressional Record," of March 8, containing the debate in the Senate, pending the passage of the bill, in which debate several Senators quoted them as authority for the statement that no part of the claim should be paid to any attorney. Thereupon they wrote to Senator Pasco the letter of which the following is an extract, and all that relates to the matters in issue:

"Nashville, Tenn., March 29, 1898.

"Hon. S. Pasco, U. S. Senate, Washington, D. C.—Dear Sir: On the seventh of March we received a letter from you under date of March 5, in which you stated, among other things: 'Some malicious persons are circulating a slanderous story about the Capitol with the evident purpose to obstruct the passage of our bill. It is to the effect that you have made a contract with Mr. Stahlman to pay him 40 per cent. of any amount recovered.' To this we responded: 'Letter of fifth received. The statement is untrue, and you are hereby authorized to deny it.'

"We also on March 7 received a telegram from Senator Bate on the same subject and repeated to him the telegram we had sent you.

"We should not deem it necessary to say anything further on the subject, but for the fact that during the discussion of our bill in the Senate (as shown by the 'Congressional Record' which we have just read) statements were made by one or two Senators which by inference, at least, were calculated to create the impression that nothing was to be paid by the Publishing House to any attorney or representative of the Book Agents.

"The claim, as you are aware, was pending in Congress for nearly thirty years. During several years of that period we had a Washington attorney (Mr. Moyers) employed on a percentage basis. This arrangement was made with the full knowledge and consent of our Book Committee. (The Book Agents, as very properly stated by you, having no authority to make such contracts without the consent of that committee.) For reasons satisfactory to our friends in the Senate and House we declined to renew the contract when it expired, and instead accepted the proffered assistance of others, some of whom were devoted friends and members of our church, and one of whom even as early as 1891, and before the agreement with the Washington attorney expired, had rendered valuable assistance in our endeavors to pass the bill. This gentleman was as earnest in his endeavor to help us then as he was subsequently, the only difference being that formerly much of his time was occupied in other pursuits, while during the past two and a half years he has had time which he could call his own, and a good portion of which during his extended sojourn in Washington he has seen fit to largely devote to our interests.

"It is hardly to be presumed that this gentleman and others who assisted him should be willing to serve the Publishing House and incur the large expense of staying in Washington without some compensation; and if, therefore, in the final adjustment it was deemed proper to pay these gentlemen a reasonable compensation for their services and expenses, and this compensation was paid with the consent of the proper authorities of the church, you, as well as other Senators, we are sure, will agree that it was not an improper thing to do."

To this letter the following answer was made by Senator Pasco, omitting the closing sentences, which were purely personal and do not relate to the matter in issue:

"United States Senate,
"Washington, D. C., April 6, 1898.

"Messrs. Barbee & Smith, Nashville, Tenn.—

"Dear Sirs: Your letter of March 29 relative to the Methodist Book claim was duly received, and I value highly the kind manner in which you speak of the efforts I have made to secure favorable action in the Senate upon it. I have always felt that the question of compensating the gentlemen who represented the Publishing House here in Washington while this claim was pending before Congress belonged entirely to the Book Agents and the Book Committee of the Methodist Church. Although it was understood from the statements that were made that they were not influenced by a desire to gain large fees, yet it is quite proper that they should be paid their expenses and such other remuneration as the church authorities deem fair and just. I was well satisfied that no such exorbitant and unreasonable contract existed as was alleged, and I did not hesitate to deny it before I received your telegram, which, as you know, I used freely both in the Senate and among the Senators who approached me upon the subject.

"Yours very truly, S. PASCO."

A careful reading of this correspondence fails to reveal to us sufficient ground for the charge that Messrs. Barbee & Smith intended to mislead Mr. Pasco or any other Senator. The fact that they wrote to Mr. Pasco as soon as they learned of the statements that had been made by Senators, and informed him of the incorrectness of these statements, is evidence that they themselves were surprised at the conclusions reached by Senators. Mr. Pasco, in his reply, not only does not charge them with deception, but says: "I have always felt that the question of compensating the gentlemen who represented the Publishing House here in Washington while this claim was pending before Congress belonged entirely to the Book Agents and the Book Committee of the Methodist Church;" and he says again: "It is quite proper that they should be paid their expenses and such other remuneration as the church authorities deem fair and just." This he wrote one month after the bill had passed, showing that he had at that time no feeling of indignation against Messrs. Barbee & Smith for having misled him, and did not believe that they, as the Agents of the Publishing House, in carrying out this contract with their representative, were acting in bad faith toward him or the Senate of the United States.

Mr. Pasco said in the Senate when the bill was under consideration: "It is proper to say that I heard a rumor that was whispered about the Senate chamber during the last few days to the effect that some claim agents would get a very large proportion of this amount. On Saturday last, when I heard that report, I sat down and wrote Messrs. Barbee & Smith. I was thoroughly satisfied that the report had no foundation whatever in fact, but I stated that I wished to have in my possession a statement from them which I could use either in private conversation or on the floor of the Senate, if necessary; and yesterday morning I got this reply to my letter: 'Letter of fifth received. The statement is untrue, and you are hereby authorized to deny it.' I made the statement fully in this letter, which set forth that some agents here would get a very large percentage of the amount."

Senator Pasco was a friend of the bill, and was doing what he could to secure its passage, and his efforts were appreciated by the church. If his letter of March 5 to Messrs. Barbee & Smith had been at hand, and had been read, it would have appeared that his inquiry was with reference to a fee of 40 per cent., and not so broad as the statement from memory made on the floor of the Senate. This might have prevented any misunderstanding as to the meaning of the telegram of Messrs. Barbee & Smith, particularly if the second telegram had also been read.

THE TELEGRAMS TO SENATOR BATE.

On the same day on which Messrs. Barbee & Smith sent the above-mentioned telegrams to Senator Pasco they received the following telegram from Senator Bate:

"Telegraph to-day answer to Senator Pasco's letter to you Saturday as to Stahlman having fee of 40 per cent. or any other fee in case of payment of your claim. I would like to hear from you also. In my judgment, if true, it will endanger the bill."

In order that Senator Bate might know what answer had been made to Senator Pasco's letter of March 5, inquiring about a 40 per cent. contract with Mr. Stahlman, the Book Agents sent him the following telegram: "Wired Senator Pasco early this morning as follows: 'The statement is untrue, and you are hereby authorized to deny it.'"

The Book Agents inform us that they understood this telegram to contain two requests. To the first of these requests Barbee & Smith replied by saying that they had already answered Senator Pasco, and they informed Senator Bate what they had answered, repeating the very words of that answer. To the second they made no reply. Various considerations, as they inform us, restrained them from doing so.

1. It would have been simply impossible for them, on a few moments' notice, at the very time when they supposed the bill was up for its final passage, to frame a telegram sufficiently comprehensive to cover all the facts in the case.

2. They had already sent a second and fuller telegram to Senator Pasco asking him to send for Mr. Stahlman, who could give him any needed information.

SECRET OF LIFE.

BY LUCY LARCOM.

The secret of life—it is giving
To minister and to serve.
Love's law binds the man to the angel,
And ruin befalls if we swerve.
There are breadths of celestial horizons
Overhanging the commonest way,
The clod and the star share the glory,
And to breathe is an ecstacy.

Life dawns on us, wakes up glimpses.
In heaven there is open a door—
That flash lit up vistas eternal.
The dead are the living once more!
To illumine the scroll of creation,
One swift, sudden vision sufficed!
Every riddle of life worth the living
Has found its interpretor—Christ!

SAM JONES CAMP MEETING.

Mr. Editor: Time, with his ceaseless tread, has again brought the hand on the dial near the point for the annual assembling of the people of God at Sam Jones Camp Grounds, and it is the object of this letter to remind our Methodist people, once again, that camp meetings are good places to go to, for more reasons than one. Primarily, of course, it should be the object of every attendant to get good for himself, and advance the interests of the kingdom and glory of God, and I sincerely trust that this thought and purpose will have the right of way in the heart and mind of every preacher and all the people who come to these consecrated grounds this year. If these are the dominant ideas with God's people, and they come praying, in faith, for a remarkable exposition of the power and grace of God in the salvation of sinners, the old-time results of camp meetings will be apparent here, much good will be done, there will be a mighty shout of gladness, and hosannahs will ascend to the Great Head of the church for his blessed presence and work among us. Paul, when going to his churches, determined to know nothing among the people save "Jesus Christ and him crucified;" and if the same spirit actuates the ministry of the Word at the coming meeting, the probabilities are that the results will be flattering and encouraging. If, however, the work of God and the salvation of souls become a secondary matter with the clergy; if they assume that a camp meeting is a theatre for the display of their eloquence and for the practical exhibition of the operation of the prerogatives of the presiding elder, or any other official of church or association, then we need not expect the presence and help of the Divine Master. These things had their share in the apparent failure of the meeting last year, and all unnecessarily, too, for the reason that there was no desire on the part of the "powers" on that occasion to demand for themselves any consideration on account of their positions. It is to be hoped that the sticklers for precedence and pomposity will lay low, and that all will go to work and work hard in the Master's vineyard. If our beloved Bro. Hunnicutt desires anything supremely, it is that the work of the Lord may be done and his name glorified, and to this end he is ready to sacrifice all his prerogatives, traditional and statutory.

The promise is, that eminent and faithful men, successful in winning souls for Christ in a multitude of meetings, will be with us, and will conduct the meeting; men who are in the ministry because God has called them to that work, and because they desire, more than all else, to see the work of the Lord prosper and souls saved, not for the money there is in it, as the manner of some is. Who these consecrated servants of our God are, or will be, I am not as yet informed. That there will be no "evangelists" there who make a money consideration a prerequisite to their coming, unless they come as hearers and seekers after salvation, like any ordinary sinner who knows no difference between the gospel of Christ and a bale of cotton. The outlook is encouraging for a large attendance, as Bro. Cassels writes me that nearly all the renting-tents are already taken, and that several have already moved in This is not surprising when the healthiness of the location, the excellence of the waters, and the delights incident to an outing of this sort, are considered. The sleeping accommodations of the hotel have been overhauled, and rooms made where before was a sort of general sleeping room, thus securing privacy and added comfort. The table will be as before—that is, there will be plenty to eat, of the best to be had, and well cooked. The prices will be as of yore; hence you can come to camp meeting, live well, have a nice time with old friends, and make lots of new ones, and get your spiritual strength renewed, your soul blest, and all for less money than it will cost you to live at home. Thousands on thousands of souls in glory to-day started on their journey to the "heavenly city" at camp meeting, and there has been no change or shadow of turning in our God that inspires a doubt that he will do his part now as he did it in ye olden time; and if we fail to have a gloriously good time and an exceptionally profitable meeting, the fault will be human, not divine. I hope to see every family-tent on the grounds occupied, the hotel full of guests, and the preachers' tent full of preachers full of the spirit and mind of their Master, and with zeal for the salvation of souls for whom he died. With these adjuncts the success of the meeting can be seen from the beginning; without some of them, failure is sure.

It would tend to the betterment of the meeting, and the quantity and excellence of its results, if the choir is furnished with the Standard Hymn Books, in addition to the song book we have used for the past two years. There are hymns and tunes in each that carry the full gospel, and awaken in the saint a longing desire for an entrance into the joys of that "upper and better country," and in the sinner a desire to "Come, thou, and join that holy band,

And on to glory go;
To dwell in that celestial land,
Where joys immortal flow!"

It is just as easy to sing a sinner into the kingdom, in a multitude of cases, as it is to preach him there, and, in many instances, it is less wearing on the congregation.

I hope the preachers will pardon the suggestions which I make as a close to this letter, that long prayers are in contravention of the emphatic command of the Master himself, reminding us, as he does, that the heathen supposes he will be heard for his much speaking, etc. Then it is to be hoped that they will not tell the people that they must believe that they have a thing in order to get it, or, to put it plainly: Being at Sam Jones, and desiring to be in New Orleans, they must believe that they are in New Orleans (when they know absolutely that they are not in New Orleans, or anywhere else, except at Sam Jones), and they will be there! The Master never intended any such literal construction to be placed on his words, because the proposition is a manifest absurdity, and is calculated to befuddle the mind.

It is also proper for me to remark or repeat here what I have said before, that camp meeting is not the place to preach the second-blessing theory, or against that theory. No man who has a proper conception of the eternal fitness of things will get up at camp meeting, or anywhere else, and blow his trumpet about his own purity of heart or life, and the low grade of his neighbor's spiritual condition; nor will he attempt to demonstrate that John Wesley or John Thomas taught the doctrine of a second work of grace after regeneration; that original sin must be eradicated, etc., or the reverse of these propositions, at a camp meeting. That is not what we are there for. What we desire is the conversion of sinners, and after they are converted, you can rush them into holiness at one jump, a la Wesley et als, or let them grow into it like the Master thought was the correct method, when talking to Nicodemus. D. V., I shall build my dam and get my pond ready, and will drown the first preacher that introduces one of these fire-brands into the services at Sam Jones, commencing on the twenty-ninth of July, and continuing ten days.

Looking forward with sincere delight to a reunion with my precious friends on that occasion, yourself among the number, and with an earnest prayer for the most abundant success of the meeting, I remain, Faithfully yours, Rex.

Natchez, Miss., July 4, 1898.

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

The work for the Master is progressing nicely on the Baton Rouge district. The preachers are all faithful, consecrated men of God, and have their heart and soul in the salvation of men. Every interest of the church is being looked after, and we confidently hope to bring to the Annual Conference this year the best report the district has ever made.

But 'tis in behalf of Centenary College that we wanted more especially to write. This grand old institution needs no introduction from my pen. The noble men who have gone out from her walls to do battle for their country and Christianity tells what she is. But Centenary College has been hampered and crippled for a number of years because the church has failed to rally to her support. Why is this the case? Surely it must be for the reason that men do not think. I know some Methodist fathers who have been sending their sons away from their own college to State schools and schools far inferior, and some of them paying more for their sons' education than it cost at Centenary. Brother Methodist, is this right?

Now, I want to appeal to every Methodist father and mother in the State of Louisiana. As you value the future of your boy, send him to your own Centenary College, where he will receive an all-round Christian education. Centenary's next faculty is complete; all thoroughly competent, high-toned Christian gentlemen. The new president, Dr. I. W. Cooper, arrived to-day. In a conversation with him this evening he assured me that he was going to bend all his energies to make the college what it ought and deserves to be. Extensive repairs will be done this Summer, and the grounds are to be beautified. Dr. Cooper assures me also that he is going to inaugurate a plan by which board can be very much cheapened, and so it will be possible for poor young men who are thirsting for an education to get it at Centenary College.

Brethren in the ministry, let us rally to our college, and help Dr. Cooper get not less than one hundred and fifty boys to open with.

Dr. Carter has decided to stay in Jackson till Conference. He says he is ready to help the brethren in revival meetings. Brethren, if you know how to exhort at all, and can get the Doctor to do the preaching, you can't help but have a good meeting. When the Doctor preaches, you have something to exhort from, and the people have something to think about. I have had him to preach for my people, and have exhorted after him, and I know whereof I speak.

And now, my brethren, let us try to have glorious revivals during the Summer, and let us not forget to put in some good work for our college; and such work will tell in eternity for good. R. W. Tucker.

CHICKAMAUGA NATIONAL PARK.

Rev. Frank M. Keen's letter in last issue of New Orleans Advocate, written from Chickamanga National Park, is well calculated to agitate sleeping remembrances in the minds of those who were present at that place, and figured in the great conflict which now makes it so dear to the American people.

Within the range of this Park, where tho four hundred monuments, the three observation towers, and the three hundred mounted guns now stand, the writer of these thoughts once stood as an integer in battle, and engaged in the shouts of the passing victory.

Bro. Keen writes: "While sitting in my tent door, I can look out and count quite a number of battle scarred oaks which, after these thirty odd years, show plainly the evidence of the fierce conflict which was waged."

Perchance his tent occupies a portion of the "dueling-grounds," on which one hundred and eighty of the three hundred mounted guns were engaged in close and deadly conflict from noon on Friday until 3 o'clock P. M., in which the batteries of the South were victorious. Many are the reminiscences of the engagement.

On this field the writer was placed in charge of the "Infirmary Corps" of the brigade, and lasting were the impressions wrought by a terrific charge made on a Federal battery. As we advanced, all fear for the time seemed to be gone, and while death was being witnessed on every hand, the exclamation burst from heart and lips, "God save the brave." Soon a stillness came—a mighty stillness. Every gun in the battery was silenced, and "limbered to the rear." The remark from a "field officer" as he passed into our lines under guard, with many others, "Your victory only prolongs the war," was abundantly shown.

But the present consideration is: The forty thousand troops now gathered at this place are in one common cause. North and South lie down together, and awake under the same flag, and to the same reveille. The fierceness of civil strife is over, and silenced forever are the mounted guns, which now stand only as watchers on the bulwark of peace.

TO "GILDEROY."

Dear Brother: I am sorry you seem to have misunderstood my letter, as I seem to have mistaken your intended meaning in the article which drew it forth. Had you said "politics" instead of "patriotism," and had you confined your warning to your brother preachers, my letter would have been needless, for the warning would have been well given. That any religious body, from the General Conference down, can not afford to ally itself with any political party, or its representatives; that to do so is to depart from the old paths, and to lose power thereby, is my earnest conviction, and that the pulpit can not be kept too pure from political utterances, seems to me to go without the saying. The church, in her mission to the souls of men, should avoid anything extraneous to that mission, or she will both hamper and hinder her work. This was taught me at my mother's knee, and half a century of personal observation and experience has confirmed that teaching. Therefore, you see, we are of the same mind on this point, and, I trust, on many others, for I have a sincere respect both for you and your opinions. That you are thoroughly honest and true in your condemnation of the practice to which you object, your article proves, for you condemn the speakers on both sides, whereas, the custom has heretofore been—so far as this writer's knowledge goes—to condemn one faction and approve the other.

By the way, Brother (but this you could not know), I have not been a "Miss" for nearly thirty years, but am a "mother in Israel," with the gray hairs which should go with wisdom, if they do not.

Most cordially yours,

Fannie Minor Montgomery.

FROM REV. GEO. R. STUART.

Rev. E. N. Evans, Monroe, La.—

Dear Brother: Yours, of June 13, forwarded to me here. Allow me to say that I have never in my life held a meeting anywhere contrary to the wishes of either pastor or presiding elder. Sam Jones and I had an engagement at Selma, Ala., contrary to the wishes of one pastor. We received a petition from the people with about 2,000 signatures, but after the action of the General Conference we cancelled the engagement by telegram. You are at liberty to state for me that I have never violated the laws of my church, and so long as I am a Methodist preacher, I will abide by the laws of my church. I would not hold a meeting contrary to the wishes of a Methodist pastor in any city in the United States, even if I were invited so to do by every man, woman and child in the town, black and white. When I can not hold revivals in harmony with the laws of my church, I shall return to the pastorate or change my church relation. You may use this letter as you please. With kindest wishes, I am,

Yours fraternally,

Geo. R. Stuart.

REV. E. B. FOUST.

Rev. E. B. Foust was born in Lafayette county, Miss., July 19, 1844, and died at his home in Rayne, La., April 26, 1898, of neuralgia of the heart, aged fifty-three years nine months and seven days. His parents were William and Eveline Foust. He joined the Methodist Church as a seeker of religion in his thirteenth year, and was converted the following year. His call to preach was so clear, and his life so exemplary, that the church licensed him to preach, and in 1871 he was admitted on trial in the Mississippi Conference, and appointed to Holly Springs circuit. In 1873 he transferred to Louisiana, where he filled acceptably the following appointments: Big Cane, Lake Charles, Simsport, Abbeville, Mooringsport, South Bossier, North Bossier, Fort Jessup, and Oak Ridge. He was a soldier in the Confederate Army, where he lost a leg, and in 1890, while at Oak Ridge, the other leg had to be amputated. Both were cut off above the knee. On account of his disabled condition (for he spent the remainder of his life in a wheel chair) he was superannuated, which relation he sustained until his death.

Bro. Foust was as brave a man as ever lived. During all his suffering he never murmured, but submitted with Christian fortitude the loss of both legs, and, although confined, as he was, his life was very cheerful.

Bro. Foust was twice married: first to Miss Edith Bihm (April 1, 1875), who lived only a year and a half after being married. On Nov. 3, 1880, he was again happily married to Miss Adelia M. Harkins, of Abbeville, La. Rev. J. M. Johnston performed the marriage rite. There were no children by the first marriage, but by the second there were seven, five of them still living.

Bro. Foust was a good preacher. His last sermon was preached at Indian Bayou about a week before his death. His sickness was short. After family worship he went to bed, and soon clasped his hands on his breast, and made some exclamation, and expired in a very few moments. Thus passed away one that I loved.

May our heavenly Father sustain the brave, loving wife, who fought life's battle by his side through all these years of personal affliction!

NOTICE.

To the President and Members of the Board of Trustees of E. M. F. College:

We, your committee appointed on college property, beg leave to report that we have inspected the buildings and grounds, and find the same in good repair throughout. In fact, we find the property in the best state of repair for many years, and note with satisfaction the many improvements which have been made during the past year, and we call special attention to the bored well on the premises. It is over 300 feet deep, and furnishes an abundant supply of the purest water that can be had in this section of the country. We estimate the value of the college property as follows: New building, $4,000; old, $2,000; middle, $4,000; north wing and wooden extension, $6,500; other building, $500; real estate, $7,500; making a total of $24,500, which we consider a conservative valuation.

Respectfully submitted.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

Rev. Thomas B. Clifford, Booneville, Miss., Editor.

The Virginia League Conference was recently held in Norfolk. Rev. E. H. Rawlings is president. Though only thirty-three years of age, he is prominent as a minister and League worker, and has written a very helpful book entitled, "The Pastor and the League."

The Corinth District (North Mississippi) Conference, at its recent session at Kossuth, Miss., reported the organization of eleven Leagues. A district further south recently reported only six Leagues, and yet it contains better territory, and is far more accessible.

The Arcadia District (Louisiana Conference) recently held a League rally, which was evidently a great success. Elsewhere we publish a report of the Conference as furnished by the secretary, Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

We are receiving many items from the Louisiana Leaguers, and note with pleasure their interest in the work. What is the matter with the Mississippi Leaguers? Surely they have not all taken a vacation at the same time.

We hope Bros. Wier and Norsworthy will see to it that a synopsis of discussions, etc., of League work advertised to take place soon in their respective districts will be furnished to this writer for this department.

THE ARCADIA DISTRICT LEAGUE RALLY.

The Epworth Leagues of the Arcadia district, according to arrangement made at the Preachers' Meeting in March, met at Arcadia on June 24 for a grand rally. Miss Ione Smith, with her committee, the presidents of the several Leagues, had showed such zeal and judgment in forming a program and making needed preparations, that many who had attended various young people's meetings of a similar nature were constrained to say, "We never saw it on this wise before." The local League had the church and town nicely decorated with E. L. colors. They all seemed to say: "Welcome!" "Young Methodists, 'All for Christ;'" "Look up, lift up." For the unbounded hospitality of Arcadia too much could hardly be said. The zeal of the Leaguers increased to the end. It was a decided success, and we take courage.

The missionary influence brought to bear upon the rally through Rev. C. D. Atkinson, missionary campaigner, arranging and conducting various programs during the session, was of inestimable good. A study class was organized in the Arcadia League, and a mission library of sixteen volumes easily secured. Bro. Atkinson will do any church good, and it is a pity the Leagues (and churches, as for that) can not keep him in the field all Summer.

At a proper time the Leagues went into a district organization, with Prof. C. A. Moores as president, and Miss Gussie Tooke, secretary. There were three vice-presidents also elected as per the League Constitution. Plans were discussed for extending the work in the district. Weak Leagues are to be strengthened and new ones organized.

There was inaugurated a district League paper, to be known as The Epworth Leaguer. The District Council was made a Committee of Publication. Miss Ione Smith was elected editor, with Mrs. M. R. Gladney as associate, and Rev. P. O. Lowrey, business manager.

Quite a number of the pastors and the presiding elder, Rev. B. T. Crews, were present to give counsel and encouragement. Their zeal was quite equal to that of the Leaguers. Rev. A. D. McVoy was elected chairman.

I neglected to mention at the proper place that Miss Kelser's character and mission were laudably spoken of, and every League in the district that had not done so before pledged something to her support as our missionary in China as follows: Minden, $10; Calhoun, $5; Homer Juniors, $6; Douglas, $4.

P. O. Lowrey,
Secretary of Rally.

We are glad to make the following financial report of the Louisiana Leagues' mission fund as reported by Rev. P. O. Lowrey, Farmerville, La., who is the regular treasurer, and to whom remittances must be sent: Previously reported, $58.04; E. C. Tait, $5; A. W. Whittington, $2.50; J. H. Edwards, 50 cents.

Judge L. H. Estes, of Memphis, Tenn., the great League worker and lay preacher, is at present conducting a meeting at Booneville, Miss. He is a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost. Oh, that we had more laymen like him all over the land!

LESSON II.

Subject—The Capture of the Cannibals; or, The Miracle of Prophecy.

MATTER.

The first chapter of "Miracles of Missions." The heads of these chapters readily lend themselves to names suggesting specific facts or phases of truth illustrated by their contents.

METHOD.

1. Read carefully the section giving special attention to places and dates. When and where have a good deal to do with our estimate of the power of the gospel.

2. Let each one study up carefully the scene of this first chapter. Get clearly in mind the location of the Society and Hervey Islands, together with Samoa and the New Hebrides. This is most important. Geography and the gospel must never be separated.

3. Deduce from the chapter points illustrating the degradation of the people and the uninviting character of the field—i. e., pages 12 and 13.

4. Study the character of John Williams as preacher, translator, and martyr.

5. Find parallels in Book of Acts to the scene on page 19: the destruction of Or and the public renunciation of heathenism. What Scripture prophecy does this suggest?

6. Note the special reference to Old Testament prophecies, and their fulfillment—i. e., pages 9, 14, and compare page 27.

Suggestion: Appoint some live member of the class to read a few sentences on "The Best Method of Raising Missionary Money," taking as a basis the account given on page 23. Could not we learn a lesson from these zealous converts?

A MISSIONARY'S WIFE

Interesting Letter from India—A Long Summer Season.

The following letter is from the wife of an American Baptist missionary at Nowgong, Assam, India: "After living here for several years I found the climate was weakening me. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla every summer. This I found so beneficial that I now take one dose every morning for nine months in the year, that is, through the hot weather. My general health is excellent and my blood is in good condition. My weight does not vary more than one pound throughout the year. I find Hood's Sarsaparilla indispensable in the summer and recommend it for use in a debilitating climate." MRS. P. H. MOORE.

The above letter is similar to thousands received and constantly coming in.

REPORT OF THE ABERDEEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The District Conference for the Aberdeen district convened at Amory, Miss., June 16, 1898; Rev. S. M. Thames in the chair. All of the pastors in the district were present, and, with scarcely an exception, gave encouraging reports of their work. An average number of lay members were present.

The first day was devoted exclusively to the Sunday-school interests. The program, as previously published, was taken up, and discussed with exceptional ability by both preachers and laymen.

The regular business of the Conference did not begin until the second day, when every interest of the church was carefully looked into.

By request of the Conference our presiding elder made a report of his four years' work on this district, contrasting the reports of past years with the reports of the year preceding his appointment to the district. The report was very gratifying, showing progress along all lines during the past quadrennium.

The following resolutions were adopted by the Conference:

Whereas, Our presiding elder, the Rev. S. M. Thames, is now serving his fourth year on the Aberdeen district, and, according to the economy of Methodism, he will soon have to be assigned to another field of labor; And, whereas, all the interests of the church have greatly prospered under his fostering care and wise administration; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we herewith bear loving testimony to his zeal, fidelity, and efficiency, and express our high appreciation of his work among us.

Resolved, That we pray the blessings of God upon our beloved brother, and commend him to the people to whom he may be sent as a safe counselor, a loyal itinerant, and a faithful minister of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

It was our pleasure to have Rev. M. L. Burton, manager of our Orphans' Home, with us.

Mrs. J. D. Sheli, district secretary of Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, was present. Her report of the work done by this society during the past year was encouraging in its every detail.

The following are the lay delegates to the ensuing Annual Conference: S. T. Barkey, J. A. Mayfield, F. J. McDonnell, and P. W. Shell.

The entertainment of the Conference was all that could be desired. All the people combined with the pastor in providing every comfort and pleasure for those in attendance.

The next Conference goes to Tupelo.

TO THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF E. M. F. COLLEGE.

DEAR BRETHREN: We, your committee appointed to report on the state of the college, beg leave to submit the following:

We have been more than gratified at the progress made by this college during the past year. The enrollment both in the boarding and scholastic departments has exceeded any previous year of its past. We think it worthy of more than passing notice, that this enrollment has been had in spite of the delayed opening and confusion incident to the quarantine last Fall.

We are gratified to note also the gradual raising of the curriculum. We believe our girls should have equal advantages with our boys, and East Mississippi Female College now proposes to offer these advantages to our daughters. Nor can we pass the religious status of the college. In his annual report the president says: "When school opened nearly about half the young ladies claimed not to be converted (now only one or two in the ego claim not to be converted), and many have attained to a high degree of Christian living and experience."

For all this we can but recognize the hand of our heavenly Father, and render gratitude to him alone. In his effort to build up this institution in behalf of Christian education, we pledge our sympathy, prayers and co-operation to President Beesen.

Respectfully submitted.

June 28, 1898.

People who are in earnest are apt to be a little one sided, narrow and fanatical. But the Lord uses such agents to move the world. Do not oppose them, but endeavor to moderate them, and, like Paul, to show, if you can, a more excellent way.

CHEERFULNESS.

Cheerfulness, pleasantness, a bright and sunny temper—these are some of the richest fruits of true religion. If our Christianity is worth anything at all, if it has any potent influence over our lives, if it is anything else but the feeble sentimentalism of a selfish and artificial piety, then it will make us "pleasant." It will brighten our spirits, sweeten our manners, and tame our tempers. Almost the first indication of the new life is the desire to smooth over trivial, but ugly difficulties, to promote a general feeling of kindness and simplicity, and thus to rob life of its dullness and bitterness and monotony. . . . And there is a certain kind of Christian effort which no committee can do, no organization can accomplish, no code of rules can help—it requires human touch. It can only be done by a smile, a welcome, a handshake.—Frederick A. Atkins.

My heart is so full when I think of the anxious hearts in the mission house in New York that I wish I was strong enough to go on a crusade and cry as one did of old, "Go forward!" Never in the history of the world was there so much to cheer Christian hearts; never a time one might be so glad to live. The whole world lies open—fast barred doors are open, barriers are broken down. The wealth of the world is in Christian hands. The ever-blessed Spirit of God is drawing Christian hearts together. These are days when a year of work is worth a lifetime; when to wait may lose a generation.—Bishop Whipple, of Minnesota.

God knows our needs before we ask. Then what is prayer for? Not to inform him, nor to move him, unwillingly, to have mercy, as if like some proud prince he required a certain amount of recognition of his greatness as the price of his favors. But to fit our own hearts by conscious need and true desire and dependence to receive the gifts which he is ever willing to give, but which we are not always fit to receive. As St. Augustine has it, the empty vessel is by prayer carried to the full fountain.—Alexander Maclaren.

FROM THE WORK.

W. B. Rownd, Clio, La., June 28, 1898: "Bro. W. R. Harall began his meeting at Huff's Chapel on Friday night, the seventeenth instant, and closed on the following Friday night, resulting in a glorious revival of the church. Old feuds settled, and eight members received into the church, the most of them coming from the Catholic faith. Bro. Harall expected to have the assistance of Bro. Anders, from Greensburg; but we were disappointed. We all felt bad because Bro. Anders did not come; but God knows best. Bro. Harall and the faithful relied upon the strong arm of 'our God, who is able to deliver,' and the promise of our blessed Savior, viz.: 'Go preach the gospel to every creature.' The revival spirit has reached to the Sunday-school, and three of the eight that joined are Sunday-school scholars. We are working and praying that all may be brought to the saving knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. Pray for us, and especially for our pastor, who is so devoted to his church and people."

THREE MEETINGS.

We have had three fine meetings of late at Dublin, Webb, and Scooba, Miss. The meeting at Dublin was one of great power, during which a number of prominent people were converted and joined the church. The convictions were powerful and the conversions were clear. If Bro. "Gilderoy" had been there, he would have seen strong men weeping at the altar. The meeting at Webb was not one of such visible power, but was far-reaching in its effects. They did not have any Methodist organization at Webb; but the pastor will now be able to organize a church as one of the results of the meeting. Bro. Sullivan, a most faithful pastor, had just finished a most beautiful church in Webb, and we now predict better things for the little city. The meeting at Scooba was one of the best I have ever seen at a small place. I have never seen greater manifestations of the Holy Spirit anywhere. Church members who had grown cold and indifferent were revived. Men who had grown old and hardened in sin melted before the altar, and wept bitter tears of repentance. Old feuds were settled; some prominent men who had not spoken to each other for years met at the altar and shook hands. Bro. Crossly is our pastor at this point, and is a most earnest and consecrated man. He is doing a great work for the church on this circuit. Brethren, this is a great year for revivals; therefore, let us push the work during these times of refreshings.

W. M. MCINTOSH.

Grenada, Miss.

SHAW, MISS.

It is with great pleasure I can report Shaw station in a fine spiritual condition. The meeting held by Bro. McIntosh some weeks ago did our town and community a great deal of good. It was not a spasmodic bubbling up of emotion, but a lasting impression for good. The people are proving their faith by their works. Differences which had long estranged neighbors and friends were laid aside, the spirit of love pervades all hearts, and such a sweet harmony prevails as this community has not seen for years. Nothing but the love of God could do for this people what has been done for them, and for all this we give God thanks. The prayer meetings are more interesting, and the Sunday-school is better attended. Not only did the church feel its gracious benefits, but the entire community is fully alive to the fact that the marvelous change in the town was wrought by God. The church has a stronger footing here than ever before. She is thoroughly entrenched in the hearts of the people.

I had the pleasure of looking in for one day upon the ladies of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference, assembled in their annual meeting at Greenville. Mrs. Geo. H. Lipscomb was in the chair, and Miss Grider at the secretary's table. About seventy-five delegates were present. It was a pleasant and harmonious meeting. Sardis will get the next one. The ladies were encouraged by the presence of Mrs. Hargrove, of the Scarritt Bible and Training-school, and Miss Viola Blackburn, of one of the schools in Mexico, and several of the preachers of the North Mississippi Conference.

In the heart of every man and in the soul of every woman there is a vacuum that can only be filled by a child. In America there are too many childless homes. All the love and passion of courtship and all the kisses of the honeymoon turn to bitter dust upon the lips of the wedded couple to whose home there never comes the patter of childish feet.

One cause, more than any other, contributes to making the tens of thousands of childless, and consequently unhappy, homes all over this country. The cause is often the unconscious fault of the wife. A woman who suffers from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism is unfitted for motherhood, and if she has children it will probably be at the sacrifice of her own life. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a wonderful medicine for women who suffer in this way. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in wifehood and motherhood. It makes them strong, healthy, vigorous, virile and elastic. It banishes the squeamishness of the expectant period and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It insures the little new-comer's health and a bountiful supply of nourishment. Thousands of homes that were childless and unhappy now echo with the prattle of healthy babyhood, as the result of the use of this marvelous medicine.

"When I began taking Dr. Pierce's medicines I was very sick," writes Mrs. R. D. Moore, of Schuyler, Colfax Co., Nebr., (Box 173). "I could not keep anything on my stomach, and kept getting worse. My husband got me two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, two of his 'Favorite Prescription' and four of his 'Pleasant Pellets.' (At this time I had been pregnant about two months.) I began taking the medicines, and in less than a week I could eat anything. The 'Favorite Prescription' is the best medicine in the world for prospective mothers. My health is better now than it has been for twelve years. My little girl is now six months old and is well and healthy. I do not think I should have had my baby if we had not obtained something to build up my system and strengthen me."

Best Edition of the World's Best Book,

—THE—

'COMBINATION' BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.
New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$5.00. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to July, '99. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Send for circular. Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

SELF-PRONOUNCING

S. S. Teachers' Reference Bible.

Text Conforms Exactly to the Oxford Teachers' Edition.

The self-pronouncing text enables the reader to pronounce all proper names at a glance.

This Bible is printed from Large, Beautiful and Clear New Type. All Proper Names are Divided into Syllables and Every Vowel is Marked and the Syllables Inflected, showing the Sounds and Accents as they are given in a Dictionary, thus enabling the reader to properly pronounce every word. This feature is a great improvement and a strong recommendation for this Bible over others.

This Bible contains the celebrated Oxford Teachers' Helps together with a complete series of New Maps illustrating the geography of Palestine and the surrounding countries from the earliest times, and embodying the most recent discoveries renders this Bible especially desirable to teachers and students of the Holy Scriptures.

Imperial Seal Binding, Tuck Edges, known as "Divinity Circuit," Linen Lined, Round Corners, Red under Gold Edges, Price, $4.00.

This book in Bourgeois type will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price ($4) to any address; but to that select class who read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, we furnish it on the following terms: Pay your subscription one full year in advance, viz., to July, '99, and we will send it to you, postpaid, for $1.75. (A little later you will have to pay to August, '99.) We will also send this book as a premium for two new subscribers at the regular rate—$2 per annum. We will also send this Bible with index for 50 cents additional.

For fifty cents additional we will send Bible with index. For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved on the outside in gilt letters.

P. S.—We are still handling the Minion type and the Emerald type Bible; but will not continue to do so long. Those who wish to order should do so at once.

PUBLISHING HOUSE CLAIM.

3. Dr. Barbee had, three months before, by telegram from Bryan, Texas, dated Dec. 10, 1897, informed Senator Bate most definitely that Mr. Stahlman had full authority, as follows:

"Your telegram mailed me here. Confer with Stahlman, who understands the case thoroughly, and has full authority. J. D. BARBEE."

As they sincerely believed that our attorney, who was on the ground watching the progress of the case, was a man of ability and integrity, they did not deem it wise or becoming in them to thrust him aside, and to take the case into their own hands 800 miles away.

We sincerely regret that Senator Bate fell into an error as to the meaning of this telegram of March 7.

With reference to all these letters and telegrams it ought to be said that the Book Committee in concluding, after a careful and minute inquiry, that Messrs. Barbee & Smith had not intended to deceive or mislead any of the Senators of the United States, did not reach this conclusion solely on the statements found in the letters and telegrams. Both Dr. Barbee and Mr. Smith were before the Book Committee and testified most positively that they had not intended to deceive or to mislead. They are both men of established character, of the highest reputation. No stain has ever rested on their good names. In the case of Dr. Barbee we had a minister of the gospel for forty-six years, a man often trusted by the church, and with no charge that he has ever been false to his trust. The Book Committee could not lightly deal with the statements of these men long trusted. Neither of them had any conceivable pecuniary interest or other selfish motive that will account for a design on their part to deceive the Senate. A character is not easily made, and when established is entitled to great weight. The Book Committee is well aware that for the most part a man's character is to be judged by his acts; but every man at times needs to have his acts interpreted in the light of his character, otherwise no man could stand in the confidence of his fellowmen. Men do not break down in a single act, but, by slow processes, character as an entirety is weakened, and guilt shows itself in more than one place. For these reasons, while not approving the exact form in which the telegrams to Senators Pasco and Bate were expressed, we are fully of the opinion that the Book Agents were not intentional deceivers, nor guilty of any other unworthy and corrupt purpose in the premises.

ACTION OF THE CHURCH IN MATTERS PERTAINING TO THIS CASE.

The claim against the government having been paid, the Book Agents, by the authority of the Book Committee, on the twenty-first day of March, 1898, paid over to Mr. Stahlman the amount agreed upon.

The Book Committee for the quadrennium, which would expire early the following month, held its last session in Nashville, Tenn., on April 21, 1898. While it was in session Drs. Denny and Lovejoy introduced the following resolution, which was unanimously passed:

"Whereas, When arrangements in accordance with which our claim against the United States government was collected, explicit instructions were given that nothing should be done which should, even in the slightest degree, compromise the good name of the church, and that, rather than compromise the church, we would prefer not to have the claim paid; And, whereas, When the bill for the payment of this claim was under discussion in the United States Senate, certain statements were made by some Senators which did not accord with the facts, such statements being made professedly on the authority of the Book Agents, yet whereas we do not believe that our Book Agents have, either in fact or in intention, made any statement contrary to the exact truth; therefore,

"Resolved, That the Book Agents be instructed to investigate the matter and prepare a statement relative to the whole subject, that the General Conference may be informed of the facts, and the church be prepared to show that she is free from all blame."

The Book Committee and the Book Agents made their report to the General Conference, setting forth the financial condition of the Publishing House, and the government claim was therein set out—its nature, justness, the efforts made to collect it, the long delay, the employment of Mr. Stahlman on a contingent fee of 35 per cent., the collection of the claim, and the payment to Mr. Stahlman of the sum agreed upon. The report was published in pamphlet form, submitted to the Conference, and was generally distributed among its members on May 5, the first day of the term of the General Conference.

When the General Conference was organized one of the Standing Committees elected was the Committee on Publishing Interests, composed of one member from each of the forty-seven Annual Conferences, which was the proper committee to consider all matters pertaining to the Publishing House. So soon as the Committee on Publishing Interests was organized—and, in fact, on the first day of the Conference—Barbee & Smith, agents, demanded an investigation of their conduct in regard to the collection of the claim from the government. At the first meeting of the said committee after organization the following was passed:

"Resolved, That all matters connected with the claim of our church on the United States government be made the special order for Wednesday next at 3 P. M., and that the Book Agents be requested to attend and give the committee all necessary information."

On the day appointed this matter was taken up by the full committee, and testimony was introduced, both oral and written. Three members of the Book Committee and Barbee & Smith were examined. Every member of the committee was at liberty to interrogate the witnesses. The examination of Barbee & Smith especially was prolonged and thorough. The letters and telegrams which passed between them and Senators Pasco and Bate, or copies, were put in evidence. The committee made a minute and prolonged investigation into the responsibility of the Book Agents for misstatements made by Senators on the floor of the Senate pending the passage of the bill.

The evidence having been concluded, a motion by Judge G. A. Hanson, "That a committee of five be appointed by the chair to draft suitable resolutions regarding the whole matter, and report back same to this committee at its next meeting," was passed, and Mr. J. L. Wheat, of Kentucky; Judge G. A. Hanson, of Florida; Revs. Drs. J. O. Willson, of South Carolina; C. C. Woods, of Missouri, and Rev. W. J. Collier, of Tennessee, were appointed on said committee, and at the next meeting of the full committee Messrs. Wheat, Hanson, Willson and Collier made a report, the following being the body of said report:

"1. That our church was fully entitled, as a matter of right and justice, to the sum of $288,000 for the use and damage to our property by the United States.

"2. That the contract of the Book Committee and Book Agents with Col. E. B. Stahlman was, under all the circumstances of the case, a reasonable and proper one, and in accordance with the usual business methods in like cases, and is approved, and the Publishing Committee specially commends the instructions given such attorney that no improper measures should be used in prosecuting our claim.

"3. That the settlement of said contract is also approved.

"4. That our Book Agents and Book Committee are not responsible for the misunderstanding that existed in the minds of Senators upon the passage of the bill granting our claim.

"May 11, 1898."

It was sought to amend this report so as to show that inasmuch as members of the Senate voted for the passage of the bill under the belief that no part of the recovery was to go to an attorney, that the money should be paid back to the United States government. After a full discussion all proposed amendments were voted down, and the report of the special committee was adopted. Although there was some diversity of opinion touching the questions of how far Senators were misled, and the moral obligation resting on the church to tender back the money to the government, yet there was no difference of opinion as to the blamelessness of the Book Agents; at least, one of the members who voted "no" on the adoption of the report announced in open committee that he supposed there was not a member of the committee who believed Barbee or Smith was guilty of any wrong-doing, and the statement went unchallenged.

On June 9, 1898, Senator Lodge introduced in the Senate the following:

"Resolved, That the Committee on Claims be directed to inquire and report to whom the money was paid under the claim of the Methodist Book Concern, South; and also as to all circumstances connected with the passage of the bill providing for the payment of said claim, and with the subsequent payment of the money, under said act of Congress."

The same day Senators Pasco and Bate made statements on the floor of the Senate reflecting on the Book Agents, and other Senators very seriously reflected on the church. On June 10 the Book Agents—Mr. Stahlman joining in the request—sent the following telegram to a number of Senators:

"We hope the Lodge resolution will pass, and that a thorough investigation may follow. We do not care to discuss the matter now. All we ask on our behalf, as well as the church, is that you and other Senators who supported the claim shall suspend judgment and refrain from comment or criticism until after the committee shall have done its work. We are persuaded that we shall be able to show to the satisfaction of the committee and the Senate that all statements made by us designed to promote the passage of the bill were justified by the facts and circumstances of the case."

The Book Committee for the present quadrennium was elected on May 28, 1898, and had its first meeting in Nashville on June 14, and so soon as organized Messrs. Barbee & Smith demanded a thorough investigation, which thorough investigation has been made, and has culminated in this report.

From the history of this movement, and from the action of Congress, it stands sufficiently attested that the claim was just, and that the long delay was, therefore, a hardship to the church. After the claim had been several times favorably reported on by the Committee on Claims of the House of Representatives, and had been finally endorsed by large majorities in both Houses of Congress, a step was taken in the offering of the Lodge resolution which was calculated to cast obloquy upon the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

As the representatives of that church which has had an unsullied history from its very origin, and which has stood for ecclesiastical, civic, political, and personal integrity in every period of its history, and in every place of opportunity, we most respectfully demanded a thorough investigation into the church's relation to the settlement of this claim as involved in the methods of the Book Committee and Book Agents in procuring the passage of the bill of settlement.

In order that the Senate may not judge the church by the statements of individuals either within or without the Senate, and whether prejudiced for or against this claim, we have fully investigated the movement from its beginning, and have submitted herein a history of the efforts to secure the passage of the bill, with the correspondence and telegrams relating to the issue involved in the proposed investigation. In addition the Book Committee appointed a subcommittee to appear before the Senate Committee of Investigation in order to furnish said Senate Committee with all the facts and papers in the possession of the Book Committee.

It is due to the Book Agents and to the church that attention be called to the fact that when the bill was before the Senate on March 8, and statements were being made that no agent or attorney was to receive any part of the money, the Book Agents were wholly without knowledge that any such statements were being made, or that there was any intention on the part of any Senator to make such statements. The Book Agents, believing for reason that such attorneys were usually paid for their services, and that Senators knew this, when they received Senator Pasco's letter of March 5, asking only as to whether Mr. Stahlman was to receive 40 per cent., which they interpreted to mean rather than some other per cent., assured him on this point in their telegram of March 7. Of the interpretation and use of that telegram before the Senate they were wholly ignorant until twenty days after the passage of the bill.

Finally, the church which we represent, one whose very existence was put in jeopardy by the issues of the Civil War, and whose Publishing House was compelled largely on account of the damage to our property by the army of the United States to struggle long with the problem as to whether it should live or die, has survived all adverse conditions, and has triumphed. It can not in any sense afford to have its good name reproached, or its efficiency limited, by accepting either a bestowment or a payment accompanied by conditions which shall carry aught to tarnish that honor which it has maintained at all cost, both in war and in peace, in poverty, and now in prosperity, and which its members hold above all price.

We have, therefore, respectfully requested, and do confidently expect that the Senate shall, after thorough investigation, state in unequivocal terms the innocence of the church of that wrong implied in the passage of the Lodge resolution, and thus leave the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, unimpeached in the eyes of the nation, for the good and honor of which it is the duty of Congress and the Church alike to labor.

STATEMENT OF THE BISHOPS.

We have had submitted to us the foregoing paper of the Book Committee, which we believe to be a correct and explicit statement of the facts involved, and as the Committee appears to have no legal authority to take the action proposed below, we, as Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, make the following statement:

While reaffirming the justness of our claim, payment of which has been sought for twenty-five years, we insist that the church can not afford to accept it as a gratuity or on conditions that reflect upon its honor. Inasmuch, therefore, as some Senators have affirmed on the floor of the Senate, that they were induced to support the claim by misleading statements on the part of the representatives of the church—statements, however, which did not affect the merits of our claim—we hereby give this assurance: that if the Senate, by affirmative action, declares that the passage of the bill was due to such misleading statements, we will take the proper steps to have the entire amount returned to the government.

(Signed) J. C. Granbery, R. K. Hargrove, W. W. Duncan, Chas. B. Galloway, Eugene R. Hendrix, Joseph S. Key, O. P. Fitzgerald, W. A. Candler, H. C. Morrison.

TO SUBSCRIBERS.

According to a recent act of Congress, every check, draft, post-office money order and express order must, after July 1, bear a United States revenue stamp. A two cents' stamp is required on sums of $100 or less. Let all our subscribers take note of this and govern themselves accordingly.

THE WAR CLAIM.

In accordance with our promise, we have given our readers the report of the Book Committee. The report is full and explicit. The facts are now before the public. We have no space in this issue for extended comment. On some points it seems to us that there ought to be universal agreement. In the first place, no one doubts that the claim is a just one and ought to have been paid years ago. That it has not been paid until this late day is a severe reflection upon Congress. In the next place, we think there can be no question as to the wisdom of the Book Committee in employing an agent to look after the matter and in giving him a commission of thirty-five per cent. If we had a similar claim of more than thirty years' standing, we would be willing to give fifty per cent., or even more. We think also that there will be universal agreement as to the wisdom and righteousness of the manifesto of the College of Bishops. If the United States Senate, when it convenes again, shall declare that it would not have made the appropriation but for the misleading letters and telegrams of our Book Agents, then it will be exactly the right thing for the church to refund the money. What action the Senate will take on this point no one can tell, and speculation on the subject would be a waste of time. The Book Committee has no power to refund the money. The General Conference, it seems, is the only body that can take this action. That it will do so on the recommendation of the College of Bishops no one can doubt.

NEW BOOKS.

NEW ORLEANS COOK BOOK, by the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of Parker Memorial M. E. Church, South, 1898. Officers: President, Mrs. J. W. Wilkinson; Vice-president, Mrs. L. Riggs; Secretary, Mrs. J. Billington; Treasurer, Miss C. Mitchell.

We are indebted to our friend, Mrs. J. W. Wilkinson, of this city, for a copy of the above-named work. It is a very attractively gotten-up pamphlet of a hundred pages. All its recipes were furnished by New Orleans women, and are said to have been tested by long use. It is, therefore, specially adapted to this latitude. All the ingredients named can always be had here. Those who desire a brief compendium for daily use in the cuisine should send to Mrs. J. W. Wilkinson, 1024 Valmont street, near Camp, New Orleans, and get a copy. Besides getting value received in the book, they will aid a good cause, as all the profits of the publication go into the treasury of the above-named society.

We are in receipt of a copy of the Minutes of the Sixteenth Annual Session of the W. C. T. U. of Louisiana, which was held at Shreveport, April 21-24, 1898. This is a very neatly gotten-up pamphlet of more than a hundred pages from the press of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. It is a remarkably full record, containing the entire proceedings of the Convention, including reports, addresses, etc. Few organizations publish so full an account of their operations. The secretarial work is admirably done. The officers for the current year are: Honorary president, Mrs. C. E. Merrick; president, Mrs. Mary R. Goodale; vice-president, Mrs. M. H. Crouch; corresponding secretary, Mrs. A. M. Zable; recording secretary, Mrs. Emma A. White; treasurer, Mrs. Lily F. Blanks. The district presidents are: First District, Mrs. A. M. Zable; Second, Mrs. H. C. Pharr; Third, Mrs. Kate E. Wilkins; Fourth, Mrs. Anna Gench; Fifth, Mrs. Annie L. Wilson.

AN APPEAL.

We invite special attention to the following communication of Bro. Rowan Thayer. We do not deem it necessary to add anything to what he has said. The cause is one in which our people feel a deep interest.

A PLEA FOR OUR HOME AT WATER VALLEY, MISS.

It is suggested that an effort be made to get at least two hundred consecrated men and women of this State, who will obligate themselves to pay one dollar per month for one year, to assist in the maintenance of our Orphans' Home at Water Valley. To this end your co-operation is asked. The general plan is to form clubs of three, five or more, in each town or locality, and appoint an earnest leader, who will make collections from each member on the first of each month, and remit same to our Bro. Burton at Water Valley, or, better still, have him draw on the leader each month for the amount. Thus our home would have an assured income, and the little ones whom God has placed in our charge would be cared for. Will you interest yourself in this matter and endeavor to form a club? Send me a list of names, with name of leader, and same will become a matter of record, and our dear Bro. Burton, who has charge of the Home, will receive due notice.

Sincerely yours,

ROWAN THAYER.

Greenwood, Miss., June —, 1898.

NOTES.

Rev. J. C. Mimms is serving Tupelo station, North Mississippi Conference, while the pastor, Rev. R. A. Meek, is taking a needed rest.

We gave a lecture at the Alabama Chautauqua, at Talladega, on Thursday night, the seventh, but have no space in this issue for a write-up of the trip.

Dr. H. R. Singleton has been appointed by the powers that be to fill the unexpired term of Dr. I. W. Cooper at Moss Point, Miss. Dr. C. Wesley Carter will fill the vacuum created by the transfer of Dr. Singleton.

We regret to learn that Rev. H. T. Cunningham, of the North Mississippi Conference, has been quite sick for some time past with typho-malarial fever. When we last heard from him he was slightly improving, but not free of fever.

Rev. W. D. Bass, as he goes to and fro in his evangelistic work, is acting as agent for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. We commend him in this capacity to our preachers and people, and invite their co-operation in extending the circulation of the Conference organ.

The yellow fever has been stamped out at Mellenry, Miss. The total number of cases is twenty-three; deaths, none. As the danger of infection from that point is now over, the Louisiana Board of Health has raised the quarantine against the States of Mississippi and Alabama. Those who desire to attend the Seashore Camp Meeting can do so without fear of detention by the health officers.

The following note from Rev. J. W. Dorman, presiding elder of the Greenville district, North Mississippi Conference, will be read with painful interest. We deeply sympathize with Bro. Murrah in his great affliction.

Clarksdale, Miss., July 5, 1898.

Bro. J. T. Murrah, our pastor at Clarksdale, Miss., is in the midst of deep waters. Sister Murrah having left this world for heaven this morning (July 5). She died in great peace; almost without a sigh. A pure Christian, she hesitated not to meet death bravely. She has left a husband and two little boys. Let all who love the Lord offer continual prayer for their consolation.

J. W. DORMAN.

The Seashore Camp Meeting began Wednesday evening, July 13, and will continue eight days. Tickets at reduced rates will be on sale at all points on the L. and N. R. R. until the twenty-third, good to return until Aug. 31. All trains will stop at the camp ground until July 24. The Seashore Camp Ground is a fine Summer resort. It is a remarkably healthful place, having always been free from contagious diseases. It has fine facilities for sea-bathing, and an abundant supply of pure, sparkling drinking water. Board can be had at reasonable rates.

Mrs. Porter, wife of Major D. P. Porter, of the First Mississippi Regiment, is endeavoring to raise enough money from the citizens of Jackson, Miss., to purchase a horse for Rev. F. M. Keen, the chaplain of the regiment. Having been with her husband at Chickamauga all the while, she is posted as to everything that is going on there. Bro. Keen is exceedingly diligent in the performance of his duties, and the labor involved is immense. The amount of walking he has to do is too great to be kept up permanently. Her effort is one that is eminently praiseworthy, and we are sure it will be crowned with success. Bro. Keen has proved himself to be "the right man in the right place." He is immensely popular with "the boys," and is doing a vast amount of good.

NOTICE.

To the Methodists and Friends of Christian Education in the Alexandria District—

DEAR BRETHREN AND FRIENDS: Dr. L. W. Cooper, president of Centenary College, is now traveling through the district in the interest of the college, and is meeting with success surpassing the most sanguine expectation. Numbers of boys have been secured for the college already. The people are very hopeful, and are manifesting considerable interest in the new president and his good work.

When the Doctor comes into your community give him your co-operation in his great and good work of educating the boys. Give him your boys for Centenary, and he will be pleased and your boys will be benefited for life.

ORPHANS' HOME.

MR. EDITOR: I attended a meeting of the Board of Trustees a few days since, and while, as a member of the Board, I was more or less conversant with the work done, I was surprised, as well as gratified, at very much that I saw and heard. We found that the Home was not in debt; that it had never been in debt but once, and then for only a few days. This is an unusual thing. An enterprise projected on as large a scale as this one (there is nothing small about it), and carried to so near completion without contracting a debt, is something out of the common order.

Thus far our friends who predicted failure have been unable to say, "I told you so." Then, sir, to have accomplished so much with so little apparent trouble is another pleasing feature. I think I can count upon my fingers the number of articles that have appeared in the columns of the ADVOCATE. In fact, I have thought we did not use the ADVOCATE enough. Our people have contributed freely and willingly, and to day we have in Water Valley a property worth at least $10,000, free from all encumbrance. In the coming days it will become more and more valuable, with little cost to the church. The furnishing of the building goes on from time to time, and while, of course, it is inexpensive, everything is neat and comfortable. The dormitory beds are all single iron ones, and I can testify from a personal test that they are fine to sleep on. We found twenty-three children in the Home. I want to say a few words about those little ones. I do not say that I would not be able to find twenty three handsomer youngsters, or smarter ones, if I had the State to select from, or better dressed ones. But I never have seen anywhere better behavior. It was my good fortune to dine with them, and I never saw that number of children dining together that had as good table manners; and those who are accustomed to seeing them often told me that they did not have their company manners on. The boys and myself got off in the dormitory together, and for an hour or so we had a fine time. I naturally did as much pumping as I could to see if I could find any "kicks;" but I did not find a kick. I asked one little fellow—the one that I selected as the chap more apt to get into trouble—"Well, how do you get along here?" "First-rate, sir." "Do you ever get punished?" "Well, I'll tell you, Mr. Gunning, as long as you tell Bro. Burton and Sister Burton the truth, it don't make no matter what you do, they won't whip you; but you better not tell them a story."

There is a lot to be gotten out of that little fellow's answer. They all seemed to be well satisfied, and you could see that the element of fear was not the cause of their obedience.

We are fortunate in having at the head of the Home the Rev. M. L. Burton. Bro. Burton and his wife took charge of the work at the beginning of the year. It is to their wise and judicious management that we are indebted for the prosperous condition of the Home. We made no mistake when we selected them. Their heart is in the work, and while there are trials to undergo and hard problems to solve, they can see the work prospering in their hands.

The Board reviewed the work of the entire year, and found nothing to criticise or condemn, but much to commend. Among other things that came under our notice was, "A Plea for Our Home," that is being sent out by Rev. Rowan Thayer, of Greenwood, Miss. We wish to commend this plan to our people, and ask their co-operation with Bro. Thayer.

I wish I could tell you of the three classes of preachers that we found there in sympathy with the work. Those who are indifferent, and those who are opposed to it; but I am thinking now that you are going to cut this article because of its length, so I'll keep the preachers for another letter. W. A. GUNNING.

HOW ONE OF OUR LADY READERS MAKES A GOOD LIVING.

I have noticed the different ways in which some of your readers have been making money, and I wish now to give my experience. I am selling Baird's Non-Alcoholic Flavoring Powders, never making less than $3 a day, and I often times clear over $5. These powders are much cheaper than the liquids, and they go twice as far. From one to eight different flavors can be sold at most every house for flavoring ice cream, custards, cakes, candies, etc., and they give to any delicacy in which they are put that richness of flavor so common to the fruits and flowers they represent. Guaranteed to be perfectly healthful. I have not any trouble selling them, as everyone who sees them tried buys them. By writing to M. F. Baird & Co., Station A, Pittsburg, Pa., they will give you full particulars and give you a start. I give my experience, hoping that others who are in need of employment can do as well as I have. MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

All preachers and laymen who expect to attend the District Conference, to be held here July 26-30, will confer a favor upon and expedite the work of the local Entertainment Committee by notifying me of their intention at as early a date as practicable.

Pastors who will have special representatives of the Epworth League and Sunday-school departments will please furnish me with the names of such delegates.

The promissory note drawn by Bro. Van Hook at Binnsville, last year, will be promptly and cheerfully honored by our hospitable people. A cordial welcome awaits the Conference.

A special invitation is hereby extended the editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, the Conference Missionary Society and the representatives of the colleges.

PAINT TALKS. VII.

THE PROVINCE OF OIL.

Generally speaking, the durability, as well as the economy, of a paint depends on the proportion of the oil it contains; the more oil on a surface, the more durable and the more economical the paint. This means that those pigments that require the most oil to transform them into paint ready for application, make the best paints.

Of the several materials used as bases for house paints, zinc white carries more than twice as much oil as any other; and when added, in combinations, to other materials, greatly increases their oil-carrying capacity. Thus a mixture of half lead and half zinc will carry about twice as much oil as a pure lead paint, and other combinations in proportion.

This fact explains why combination paints last longer than "straight" paints. It also explains why combination paints will cover, pound for pound, a much greater surface than the straight paints. The best paint is really nothing more than a preservative coating of pure linseed oil, the pigment being added to make the layer of oil thicker and to hide the surface covered. In oil varnishes the pigment is replaced by hard transparent gums, but the purpose is practically the same—to protect the surface with oil.

Linseed oil has the valuable property of absorbing oxygen and hardening into a tough, elastic layer, and this tough substance is the chief element of protective value in paint and varnish.

Now anything that has an injurious effect on linseed oil naturally injures the paint in which it is used. Some of the most popular paint materials form a metallic soap with a portion of the oil in which they are mixed; others oxidize or burn it, and the paint mule with such pigments gradually crumbles and washes away.

Of the white base materials, properly so-called, used for house paints, zinc white is the only one that has absolutely no effect on linseed oil, neither saponifying nor oxidizing it.

It follows, that of all pigments, zinc is the one of most value in paint. Other materials may be used because of their opacity or their ease of working; but durability, spreading capacity, economy, brightness and permanence of color are obtained only by the use of zinc.

The consumer, whose chief concern is that he shall have the best effect and the greatest wear at the cheapest cost, will find it of interest, when ordering paint, to insist on having a combination paint with a zinc base. When he gets that he will get a satisfactory paint no matter what it may be called on the label.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD.

OF INTEREST TO STOCKHOLDERS.

FREE TRANSPORTATION TO ATTEND THE ANNUAL MEETING AT CHICAGO. SOME INTERESTING FACTS.

In order that stockholders of the Illinois Central Railroad Company may more readily attend in person the annual meetings, there has been posted in each station of the Company a notice to the effect that, in accordance with a resolve of the Board of Directors, there may be issued to each holder of one or more shares of the capital stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, as registered on the books of the Company, a ticket enabling him or her to travel free over the Company's lines from the station of the Illinois Central Railroad nearest to his or her registered address, to Chicago and return, for the purpose of attending, in person, the next Annual Stockholders' Meeting of the Company, which will be held at its General Office in Chicago on Wednesday, September 28, 1898, at noon. Details as to the necessary procedure to obtain such ticket, the date of its issue and its limit, are fully set forth on the posted notices referred to. In this connection, it will be interesting to note that since, in 1862, the capital stock of the Company became full paid, a cash dividend, ranging from 4 per cent. to 10 per cent. per annum has been paid semi-annually to every holder of stock, and that it is now twenty years since the Company, in any year, paid less than 5 per cent., the present rate of distribution.

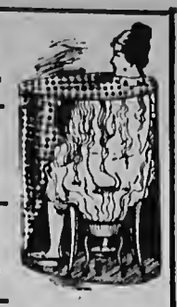
Niagara Vapor Baths.



We are the original manufacturers of portable Vapor Baths.

We have, during the last ten years, supplied thousands of our Baths to physicians, hospitals, sanitariums, etc., and we are now, for the first time, advertising them direct to the general public.

IN BUYING A VAPOR BATH Get one with a steel frame that stands on the floor. If a manufacturer does not show you a cut of the frame without the covering, you may take it for granted that his "Steel Frame" is a wire trap that rests on the shoulders of the bather.

Get one that is covered with proper material. Insist on seeing a sample of material before ordering. We make our own covering material and print it with a handsome "all over" pattern of Niagara Falls.

Get one with a thermometer attachment. Don't go it blind—a bath that is too hot or not hot enough will be of no benefit to you.

Get one that you can return and have your money back if not satisfactory in every way.

Send for sample of material and interesting booklet that will tell you all about Vapor Baths.

Vapor Baths are an acknowledged household necessity. Turkish, Hot Air, Vapor, Sulphur or Medicated Baths at Home, &c. Purifies system, produces cleanliness, health, strength. Prevents disease, obesity. Cures Colds, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, LaGrippe, Malaria, Eczema, Catarrh, Female Ills, Blood, Skin, Nerve and Kidney Troubles. Beautifies Complexion.

Price of Niagara Baths, $5.

SOME TIME.

BY MAY RILEY SMITH.

Some time, when all life's lessons have been learned,
And sun and stars for evermore have set,
The things which our weak judgment here have spurned—
The things o'er which we grieved with lashes wet—
Will flash before us out of life's dark night,
As stars shine most in deeper tints of blue;
And we shall see how all God's plans were right;
And how what seemed reproof was love most true.

And we shall see, then, while we frown and sigh,
God's plans go on as best for you and me;
How, when we called, He heeded not our cry,
Because His wisdom to the end coud see;
And, e'en as prudent parents disallow
Too much of sweet to craving babyhood,
So God, perhaps, is keeping from us now
Life's sweetest things, because it seemeth good.

And if, some time, commingled with life's wine,
We find the wormwood, and rebel and shrink,
Be sure a wiser hand than yours or mine
Pours out this potion for our lips to drink;
And if some friend we love is lying low,
Where human kisses can not reach his face,
O! do not blame the loving Father so,
But hear your sorrow with obedient grace.

CULTURE BY BOOKS.

When I consider what some books have done for the world, and what they are doing, how they keep up our hope, awaken new courage and faith, soothe pain, give an ideal life to those whose homes are hard and cold, bind together distant ages and foreign lands, create new worlds of beauty, bring down truths from heaven—I give eternal blessings for this gift.—James Freeman Clarke.

"A library of standard books in every private house of America would revolutionize our entire civilization."

A New York millionaire—a prince among merchants—once told us that the great regret of his life was that he did not possess a liberal education. He had felt hampered all his life, and had been mortified a thousand times, by his ignorance.

He took us over his palatial residence on Fifth Avenue, every room of which was a triumph of the architect's, of the decorator's, and of the upholsterer's art. We were told that the decorations of a single sleeping-room had cost ten thousand dollars. On the walls were paintings secured at fabulous prices, and about the rooms were pieces of massive and costly furniture, and draperies representing a small fortune, and carpets on which it seemed almost sacrilege to tread covered the floors.

PHYSICAL SURFEIT AND MENTAL STARVATION.

But there was scarcely a book in the house. He had expended a fortune for physical pleasures, comforts, luxury, and display, and scarcely a dollar for the mind! It was pitiful to think of the physical surfeit and mental starvation of the children of such a home as that.

Contrast this scene with an old log cabin, floorless and windowless, where young Lincoln lies on the ground, devouring, by the light of the fire, as though he may never see it again, the "Life of Washington," and other precious volumes, which he has walked many miles to borrow—for he can not afford to own even one. There are no libraries in that wilderness, and very few cabins contain any book, except the Bible.

See this boy thirsting for knowledge, his soul fired by the few books he has walked to Springfield and back to borrow and return, sitting up till long after midnight, and rising before daylight to dip into the precious volumes whose scenes have haunted his dreams. This humble cabin seems a paradise with the "Life of Washington" in it.

Which, think you, was the richer—if we regard brain-expansion, heart-culture, and character-growth as riches—of these two dwellings?

A FORTUNE FOR A MAN.

"Your daughter has no ear for music," said a professor to a wealthy acquaintance. "She shall have one, if it costs a thousand dollars," replied the rich ignoramus. Many another rich man has confessed to confidential friends and his own heart that he would give much of his wealth—all, if necessary—to see his son a manly man, free from the habits which abundance has formed and fostered till they have culminated in sin and degradation, and perhaps crime; and has realized that, in his ample provision, he has failed to provide that which might have saved his son and himself from loss and torture—good books.

Desirable books produce a doubly good result; they inspire noble thoughts and build high ideals, while leaving no room and making impossible a taste for pernicious literature.

A thing to be remembered is that young people are bound to read something. It usually remains with their parents or guardians whether this something shall be helpful or harmful. The man who spends all he earns for rich food, costly raiment, and unnecessary decoration, and provides no mental and moral stimulant in the way of reading, purchases almost inevitable disaster, and fails to acquire a mighty force for good.

"No entertainment is so cheap as reading," says Mary Wortley Montague; "nor any pleasure so lasting." Good books elevate the character, purify the taste, take the attractiveness out of low pleasures, and lift us upon a higher plane of thinking and living. It is not easy to be mean after reading a noble and inspiring book. The conversation of a man who reads for improvement or pleasure will be flavored by his reading; but it will not be about his reading.

NO HOUSE FURNISHED WITHOUT BOOKS.

When every householder comes to realize that no house, though in its finishing and furnishing a large fortune has been expended, is adequately furnished to meet the demands of the best and most important parts of its inmates—the soul, the heart, the intellect—we shall hear of fewer lacerated or wrecked lives, and know more of noble living and high thinking, the ideal life.—Success.

VALUE OF TRUSTWORTHINESS.

The integrity which can be trusted has always possessed a high moral value, and has been regarded as an important element in Christian character. The changes in our social and industrial condition have tended to give additional commercial value to trustworthiness. In former times each small holder managed his own little estate, and the character of his employee was of comparatively little importance because he wrought under the owner's eye. Those days are gone. Money has to be invested in new ways, and much of it through agents. Immense sums go into corporations, and the character of the management becomes an important matter for the investor. To know that he has a careful, judicious and trusty agent adds not a little to his sense of security and happiness. In all the new forms of investment the opportunities for dishonesty in the agent are much greater than in the old. Not a few have availed themselves of these opportunities to appropriate large sums which were not their own. The world is never going back to the old methods of business, and the character of agents who manage the property of others must become with each year more important. The man who proves himself trustworthy will be more and more in demand, while the one lacking that element will find himself discredited in the market.—Zion's Herald.

BE THOROUGH.

"I never do a thing thoroughly," Mary said to me the other day. She had just been competing for a prize in composition. "I only read my composition once after I wrote it, and I never practiced in the chapel at all."

She was naturally far more gifted than Alice, who was her principal competitor. Alice wrote and re-wrote her article and practiced it again and again.

The day came. Alice read her composition in a clear, distinct voice, without hesitation or lack of expression. It was condensed and well written. Mary's could not be heard beyond the fifth row of seats, and was long and uninteresting. Alice won the prize. One remembered and the other forgot the truth so trite, but so aptly put by Carlyle: "Genius is an immense capacity for taking trouble." One, by patient, persistent effort obtained what the other relied on her natural talent to win for her.

Whatever you do—whether you sweep a room, or make a cake, or write an essay, or trim a hat, or read a book—do it thoroughly. Have a high standard for everything; not alone because only thus can you win honor and distinction, but because this is the only honest, right, Christian way to use the gifts God has bestowed upon you. To be honest before him we must be thorough.—Observer.

A Christian manufacturer, who puts principle into production and morality into mechanism, is known and advertised far more widely than he thinks, by the goods he makes. A story appeared in print the other day which well illustrates this. It seems that a man went into a hardware store in a neighboring city to buy a shovel. Examining one, he asked the dealer: "Is this a first-class tool?" The shopkeeper replied: "My friend, I think you can know very little of shovels. You will notice this shovel is made by Mr. So-and-So. He is a Christian man and he makes a Christian shovel. Anything you see marked with his name you may know to be first-class." The tribute was a significant one. It is Christian principle which makes the best tools that the world uses. Ever since the days of the faithful Carpenter of Nazareth, its influence has been exerted in the direction of reliability in trade and honesty in all relations of life.—New York Observer.

AN OLD BULLY.

People who live in fear of his attacks.

How to avoid him or beat him off.

If billousness isn't the bully of the body then what is? When once billousness gets the upper hand you don't dare say your stomach is your own. "Don't you dare eat that dish saya billousness, or you'll see what I'll do." You take the dare and you do see or rather feel, the weight of the bnliy's revenge. The head aches, not a regular ache, but an open and shut ache. The eyes ache, not with a dull, tired ache, but with an agressive ache, as if they were being bored by a gimlet. The stomach trembles with nausea. "The whole head is sick and the whole heart is faint." There are scores of hundreds of people who live so under the dominion of this bully billousness that they don't dare eat or drink without his permission. There's no need of such slavery. Dr. J. C. Ayer's Pills effectually cure billousness.

"For fifteen years I have used Dr. J. C. Ayer's Pills, and find them very effective in all kinds of billous complaints. They are mild in operation and easy to take. I prefer them to any other pill, and have yet to see the case where they have failed to cure."—A. SWANGER, Texarkana, Ark.

"I have used Dr. J. C. Ayer's Pills in cases of billousness and general disorders of the stomach and bowels and have found them to be always reliable. They are less liable to gripe than other purgatives, and although mild in action, they are thorough in operation. They are the best family physic that can be had."—PETER J. DUFFY, Rockport, Texas.

"Having used Dr. J. C. Ayer's Pills for years and thoroughly tested them, both as a preventive and cure for billousness, I can truthfully say that I believe them to be the best medicine for the purpose and they do all that is claimed for them."—JNO. E. KOLB, Shark, Ark.

Billousness is in general bnt a symptom of a more stubborn disorder, constipation. Constipation is the root of almost all physical evils, and Dr. J. C. Ayer's Pills cure almost all these physical evils by going to the root. They cure constipation, and the consequent maladies, billousness, heartburn, palpitation, shortness of breath, sleeplessness, nervous irritability, foul breath, coated tongue, and a score of other miserable maladies that have their origin in constipation. Dr. Ayer's Pills are the surest and safest remedy for all diseases of the liver, stomach, and bowels. Send for Dr. Ayer's Curebook and read the story of cures told by the cured. Free. Address the J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

LENDING.

"Mother," said Johnny, "haven't you a pie you would like to lend to the Lord?"

"Why, Johnny, what do you mean?" she asked, for she thought at first it was a joke.

"Don't you remember," he said, "that the Bible says, 'He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord?' I don't believe old Betsy has had a pie for a long time, and I thought perhaps you would like to have me take one over to her; then you would be lending to the Lord, you know."

One of mother's best pies went to Betsy.

She was only sorry she had not thought of sending her one before.

Hygiene.

Here is what Nansen says about the use of stimulants and narcotics. His testimony is supremely valuable because he does not speak from mere theory, but from very real, arduous and prolonged experience, his splendid physical condition being the best possible evidence of the soundness of his conclusions. Dr. Nansen states in a Belgian journal that his experience has led him to take a decided stand against the use of stimulants and narcotics of all kinds, and he took no intoxicants with him on his recent expedition. He says it is obvious that one can get nothing in this life without paying for it in some way or other, and that artificial stimulants, even if they had not the directly injurious effects, which they undoubtedly have, can produce nothing but a temporary excitement, followed by a corresponding reaction. Stimulants, with the exception of chocolate, which is mild in its effect and at the same time nourishing, bring practically no nutritive substance into the body, and the energy which one obtains in anticipation by their use in one moment must be paid for by a corresponding exhaustion at the next.—Standard.

BED-RIDDEN.

MANSFIELD, LA.

I have been afflicted with rheumatism and general prostration for 14 months, being bed-ridden the most of the time and not able to dress myself. A lump formed on my liver that showed externally the size of an egg and was treated by several physicians during the time without any relief being obtained. At last I was told it was necessary to have an operation performed to save my life. Several physicians had pronounced my case hopeless. I was reduced to a mere skeleton. I met a friend who had an Electropoise who prevailed on me to wear it. I did so. The second day I was able to get up and dress myself. I sent and bought a Poise; have used it now six weeks and have increased in weight over 30 pounds. All pains and enlargements have disappeared. MRS. S. T. POTTS.

SPINAL TROUBLE.

SHREVEPORT, LA., April 9, 1894.

Dear Sirs: I bought a pocket Electropoise the 1st of February for my little boy, who had spinal trouble caused by a fall about three years ago. When I got the Electropoise my son could not walk; in fact, he was paralyzed from his hips down. He had not put his foot on the floor since last October. He was badly drawn, and could not even sit in a chair. We kept him in bed most of the time, and when he wanted to get up had to make him a pallet on the floor. His legs were so stiff we could hardly bend them, and after bending had to straighten them out again. His little body was in the shape of a half moon, and he could not even turn over in bed. I applied the instrument, and when reaction set in he could stand up by the bed by holding on. This was the first time his feet had touched the floor for seven months. I have not used any medicine or even rubbed my little boy while using the Electropoise. There are many skeptics, and I am one myself, but will have to give way in regard to the Electropoise and proclaim it the grandest invention of the age. Yours gratefully,

R. A. CALHOUN.

SUNDAY-SCHOOLS AS MISSIONARY SOCIETIES.

DEAR BROTHER: You have doubtless observed that the late General Conference in Baltimore changed Paragraph 247 of the Discipline so as to make it read thus: "Let every Sunday-school be organized into a missionary society, auxiliary to the Board of Missions." The phrase, "so far as practicable," was taken out. This means that it is the will of the church that our Sunday-schools, without exception, shall become missionary societies.

Many of the schools have been so organized for years, and are doing first-class work. What the church now directs is that these shall continue and enlarge their good work, and that all others shall be brought into line. You will find on the inclosed slip the action of the Board of Missions, asking the Sunday-schools for $50,000 this year for missions, and giving full directions for the guidence of all the schools.

By observing the following points every pastor and superintendent will be able to carry out easily the will of the church, and produce results which will be far reaching both at home and abroad:

1. Have every school which is not already such resolve itself into a missionary society to receive and properly use such missionary literature as shall be furnished, and to aid the cause of missions by its contributions.

2. Set apart a definite Sunday in each month to be known as Missionary Day, and on that day give the whole of the contributions to missions. This is better than to give one-fourth of the year's collection for that purpose, because this plan stresses the missionary idea, and leads the school to definite action in its behalf.

3. See that the literature furnished by the Board of Missions is properly distributed and read. A few words from the pastor or superintendent on Missionary Sunday, calling attention to the importance of this work, and giving interesting items of information, will do great good.

4. Do not fail to arrange for a great Missionary Rally Day on the third Sunday in October, or as near thereto as convenient.

The program for the Rally Day service will be furnished free. The program will be ready by Sept. 15. As it is impossible for us to ascertain the numbers in the schools, you must order as many programs as you wish. Remember, they cost you nothing.

5. On the Rally Day take a collection for missions to add to regular monthly collections, and send the whole amount to the treasurer of your Conference Board of Missions before the meeting of the Annual Conference.

Give clearly, to the Conference treasurer, the name of the Sunday-school and the name and address of the superintendent, so that a correct record can be made for publication in the Minutes.

6. Please to co-operate with us in every way possible to rear up a generation of church members who will love the cause of missions, and consecrate themselves to the advancement of our Savior's kingdom in the earth. At proper intervals through the year suitable missionary literature will be sent to the schools free of charge.

Now, my dear brother, in view of the great importance of this work, I beg that you begin this order at the next meeting of your school, and then constantly feed your young people in this movement. They will follow you gladly in any good work. I feel sure that you will not allow them to lack for a wise and enthusiastic leader.

Yours fraternally, JAMES ATKINS,
Sunday-school Editor.

CREDIT TO WHOM CREDIT IS DUE!

The Missionary Society has been in the college for about ten years, and has done great good for the cause of missions. This society has one missionary in the field and another at the training-school preparing for her labors in foreign lands.

The above paragraph, clipped from the College Journal commencement number, 1898, of East Mississippi Female College, is calculated to produce the impression upon the public mind that the missionary society of the college deserves the credit of supporting a missionary in the foreign field, and bearing the expenses of another at the training-school.

Now, it is evident that everyone who reads the above statement, especially the workers in our Conference Missionary Society, will understand that the two missionaries referred to are Misses Bettie Hughes and Lelia McNemar, they being the only missionaries connected with the college at any time during its existence, and we, as a Conference society, claim the privilege of stating a few facts concerning these missionaries.

When Miss Hughes felt that she was called to the missionary work, her need for some further preparation towards finishing her education was by some means directed to the attention of Rev. A. D. McVoy, then president of East Mississippi Female College, and he kindly offered to take her into the college, free of tuition, if the Methodists of the Mississippi Conference would provide for her other expenses. This was done for two years, at the end of which time she graduated, before an auxiliary missionary society was organized in the college. Miss Hughes went to the foreign field eleven years ago.

Miss McNemar was a pupil of East Mississippi Female College for three years during the presidency of Rev. T. B. Holloman, the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society paying her entire expenses. At the end of that time, which was two years ago, the Conference society sent her to the Scarritt Bible and Training-school for one year. During the school year just passed she was at Whitworth College, and is still there pursuing her studies, as she was detained from entering until late in the session.

We do not deny the fact that a missionary society has existed in the college auxiliary to the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference, and "has done great good for the cause of missions" in the years that are past.

At the beginning of the present school session our district secretary of Meridian district was refused the privilege of reorganizing this society in the college. We do not deny the fact that a missionary society has existed in the college during the session just closed, and that "this society has one missionary in the field and another at the training-school preparing for her labors in foreign lands," but, if so, this work is being done by them so quietly and unobtrusively as not to have come to the knowledge of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference; nor have we found a preacher of the Mississippi Conference who has any knowledge of the fact.

We feel that the above explanation is due to the workers of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and to the Methodists of the Mississippi Conference, who contributed so liberally toward the education of our Bettie Hughes, inasmuch as they, and not the East Mississippi Female College Society, have enabled two such noble young woman as Misses Hughes and McNemar to prepare themselves for the work to which they have been called.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

Hall's Family Pills are the best.

When the late Earl Cairns was a little boy he heard three words which made a memorable impression upon him, "God claims you." Then came the question, "What am I going to do with the claim?" He answered, "I will own it, and give myself to God." He went home and told his mother, "God claims me." At school and college his motto was, "God claims me." As a member of Parliament, and ultimately as Lord Chancellor, it was still, "God claims me." When he was appointed Lord Chancellor he was a teacher of a large Bible class, and his minister, thinking now he would have no time to devote to that purpose, said to him, "I suppose you will now require to give up your class?" "No," was the reply, "I will not; God claims me."—The Dial of Progress.

When courtiers come down into the country the common home-bred people possibly think their habit strange; but they care not for that—it is the fashion at court. What need, then, the godly be so tender-foreheaded as to be out of countenance because the world looks on holiness as a singularity. It is only the fashion in the highest court; yea, of the King of kings himself.—Leighton.

ROPER—ARBNA LEIGH ROPER, daughter of W. A. and L. R. Roper, was born in Water Valley, Sept. 24, 1880. She was converted and joined the M. E. Conrob, South, at Wood Street, Water Valley, at eight years of age; went to heaven on June 9, 1898.

Arbna was a good child of a sweet disposition, passionately fond of her parents, to whom she yielded a cheerful and affectionate obedience. She was much beloved by her brothers and sisters, and by her playmates and friends. Her last illness extended through many months, which at times was accompanied with intense suffering; but she always found the grace of God sufficient for her. For at least the last month of her illness she knew it must be unto death; yet so firm was her faith in God, so bright her hope of immortality, and so perfect her resignation to God's will, that she often talked of her departure as though she were preparing for an earthly journey.

During her last illness I was with her almost daily. I have never seen one so young so resigned to God's will. Up to the very last she enjoyed hearing God's Word read and having the preachers pray with her. Especially did she enjoy singing the songs of Zion, and oftentimes, when the body was too weak to move and the mind too flighty to talk, the soul would break out in raptures of praise through some familiar hymn. If we trust Jesus and live right, we will see her again.

Her pastor, H. P. GIBBS.

GRAYBEARD

WE make 200 bottles of our GRAYBEARD every week. No more—no less. If 200 bottles don't fill all orders, some customer must wait until the next week. We mention this as some do not understand the delay. We have earned a reputation for making a clean, fresh, sure remedy for Cancer—Eczema, Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and we cannot make GRAYBEARD faster, and make it good.

"A few years ago Cancer appeared on my face in form of a scab—not a sore, but a scab that dropped off, and soon reappeared, some worse. Finally it annoyed me to shave. Darting pains set in, effecting my sight. People said I had Cancer—I was miserable. About that time a planter name Jordan, down the State, once similarly afflicted, sent me a bottle of GRAYBEARD advising me to take it. I did so and to my great joy got better. Skin cleared, appetite improved, I got stouter and Cancer left me. And it has not returned. GRAYBEARD saved my life.

27th ANNUAL CAMP MEETING

—AT—

SEASHORE CAMP GROUNDS,

Located on the Gulf Shore, with a frontage of 1400 feet.

WILL OPEN (D. V.) ON WEDNESDAY, JULY 13, NEXT, AND CONTINUE FOR 8 OR 10 DAYS.

The Grounds are opened April 1, and closed Nov. 1, for occupying cottages and reception of visitors. Modern and ample accommodation have been provided for the multitudes that annually visit this refreshing and delightfully cool and bracing place of rest, free from malaria and contagious diseases.

The sea bathing is unsurpassed by any resort on the Mississippi Sound, while the supply of pure, sparkling drinking water is furnished by one of the finest of artesian wells, whose waters possess rare virtues.

The Grounds represent a beautiful grove of rare attractiveness, with its abundance of 20-odd varieties of shade trees, which afford shelter from the Summer heat.

The exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued, and act as a tonic to the debilitated visitors from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns. Boats for sailing and fishing always on hand. The drives along the seashore present magnificent views, and are over ten miles in length. Visitors are not expected to arrive or depart on the Sabbath day.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 5 to 23, inclusive, and be good to return on until Aug. 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. All trains will stop at the camp grounds from July 5 to 24, inclusive.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge.

The services during camp meeting are in charge of the presiding elders of the New Orleans, Seashore and Mobile District Conferences.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before and during camp meeting, or rent cottages for the season, will please communicate with W. L. Via, superintendent Camp Ground (Bilexi, P. O. 42, Miss.), or any of the following officers:

W. W. SUTCLIFFE, President, New Orleans, La.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Two hundred and thirty-five wounded men from Cuba reached the hospital at Fort McPhersen, Ga.

Treasury officials announce that the whole of the issue of war loan bonds would go to individuals, and not one to any bank corporation or firm.

Either the Spanish have moved out of Santiago, leaving a few men to cover their retreat, or they have withdrawn into the city and are waiting behind barricades. This means a street-to-street fight or a continuation of the bombardment.

It is thought that General Toral has left Santiago de Cuba. The greater part of his army is believed to have left the doomed city, and are now making their way to the nearest Spanish stronghold. The bombardment of last Sunday was but feebly answered by the enemy.

Admiral Cervera, fifty-four officers and 692 men, captured when his squadron was destroyed, arrived at Portsmouth, N. H., on the "St. Louis." The admiral has said that he had positive orders to leave Santiago and fight, no matter what the consequences.

In dispatches to the Navy Department Commodore Schley gave to Acting Rear Admiral Sampson the credit for the victory over Cervera, while Sampson denied that there was any friction between him and the commodore, and commended him and the other officers of the fleet.

According to the latest advices from Madrid, the long-expected Cabinet crisis has arrived, and the entire Sagasta Cabinet has resigned. Just what led to the crisis is not yet known, but it has been evident for some days that a reconstruction of the ministry would shortly be necessary. Sagasta's Ministry which assumed power early last Fall on the downfall of the short-lived conservative Cabinet which followed the death of Canovas de Castillo, while indirectly responsible for the war and the probable loss to Spain of all her colonies, was really not responsible for any of these things. The final outbreak of war was the culmination of causes which have been working for several years.

Admiral Camara's fleet is hastening back to Spain, and will probably arrive at Cadiz long before Commodore Watson's Eastern squadron has got well started on its trip across the Atlantic. The departure of the Eastern squadron is to be expedited as much as possible, however, and it is now understood that it will be composed of the "Newark" (flagship), the battle-ships "Oregon" and "Massachusetts," and the four large auxiliary cruisers, "Dixie," "Prairie," "Yankee" and "Yosemite." This fleet, supplemented by a number of colliers capable of carrying a large supply of coal, ought to be able to take care of any fleet Spain can now muster, and at the same time be able to make considerable inroads upon Spain's commerce.

Although there has been much talk of peace within the past few days, there appears to be no truth whatever in reports that Spain has asked the British Ambassador at Madrid to request the British government to sound the American government as to the terms of peace likely to be acceptable. Although it certainly looks as if Spain is contemplating some move to end the war, as yet no steps have been taken of an official character in that direction. The very least this country would assent to as terms of peace would be the withdrawal of Spain from Cuba, the cession of Porto Rico to the United States, a coaling station in the Ladrone Islands and a protectorate over the Philippines. It is probable that eventually this country might desire to abandon these distant Oriental possessions, but certainly not until a good government had been established there, and all danger of their absorption by the European powers had passed.

North Texas Female College.
SHERMAN, TEXAS.

This College has just closed another most prosperous and pleasant session. The class of work done here the past session has been of the very highest order. Mrs. Key has just returned from Nashville and other Eastern points, where she inspected schools and school facilities, and feels more than satisfied with the N. T. F. C., and assures the girls of Louisiana and Texas that it is not necessary for them to go East to get the best educational advantages and enjoy the most refined and æsthetic surroundings. Nowhere is there better work done or better facilities offered—earnest, able, conscientious teachers, new, full chemical and physical outfit; individual work in the laboratory required and performed by each member of the class.

LITERATURE.—Three years' course required in Literature—one in American and two in English.

MATHEMATICS.—The course in Mathematics is very complete, and thoroughly taught—higher than is taught in most female colleges.

LATIN.—The Latin course is unexcelled, and is the same as that in the best male colleges in the land.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC.—The Conservatory of Music is pre-eminently the best in the South. During the past session we have had pupils who studied under Sherwood, Carl Faelton, and other leading teachers of the East; also pupils from the New England and other conservatories. All of these pupils were more than satisfied with the advantages offered here. We feel sure that if those desiring the best musical advantages were cognizant of the ability and talent in this conservatory, they certainly would not leave the South. How can anyone expect to get a better piano teacher than Herr Von Mickwitz, who is personally recommended by the great Leschetizky as teacher and pianist?

SCHOOL OF ART.—We are very fortunate in securing the services of Miss Frances Fowler as Art teacher. She was for six years teacher of Art in Wells College, and spent twelve years studying with the masters in Europe. She is a lady of the highest intelligence, and will deliver to the school monthly lectures on the subject of Art. Mrs. Holt personally inspected Miss Fowler's work in New York City last Summer, and she assures us that she has seen nothing like it in the South.

CAMPUS AND DORMITORIES.—The Dormitories are well equipped and thoroughly comfortable. The campus is pronounced beautiful by all who see it, and it is certainly conducive to the æsthetic and refined. Nowhere will you find a lovelier home for your daughters.

SPECIAL REMARKS.—We have maintained the high standard and efficiency of this College, regardless of the existing depression, knowing that the people of Texas and Louisiana will be slow to economize at the expense of the comfort and culture of their daughters. Appreciating the fact that the public are often deceived by misrepresentations of school catalogues and agents, we extend to all who have daughters to educate a hearty invitation to visit and inspect the N. T. F. C. for themselves. For catalogue, address

"THY WILL BE DONE."

If I were told that I should die to-morrow,
That the next sun which sinks
Should bear me past all fear and sorrow—
What should I do?
I do not think that I should shrink or falter,
But just go on
Doing my work, nor change nor seek to alter
Aught that is gone;
But rise, and move, and love, and smile, and pray
For one more day.
And lying down at night for one last sleeping,
Say in that ear
Which hearkens ever: "Lord, within thy keeping,
How should I fear?
And when to-morrow brings thee nearer still,
Do thou thy will."

EVANGELISTIC WORK FOR THE SOLDIERS.

Twenty-five thousand men, wearing blue uniforms, are now at Camp Alger. The Salvation Army has established a tent there, and the Y. M. C. A. two of them. All during the days they are filled with soldiers writing letters and reading the literature that has been supplied for them. Every night meetings are held and the gospel preached. A glorious work is being accomplished.

For five weeks two girls alone from the Salvation Army have conducted religious services in their tent. One sings, accompanied by her guitar; the other preaches. The latter is not over 25; the younger hardly 20. They have secured board in a neighboring farm-house, and each evening, at the close of their meetings, four soldiers are detailed by the commanding officer of the camp to escort them home. They are treated universally with the greatest reverence. They do personal work among the men in the hospitals, in the tents, and wherever occasion offers, as well as ministering to them from the platform.

Two days since I was standing in the midst of a group of soldiers at Camp Alger with Major Edith Marshall, the young woman evangelist of the Salvation Army. A man in citizen's clothes was engraving some cards. Glancing up coolly to us, he said: "I am an infidel. Do you think you can do anything to help me?" With a rising flush the girl looked straight into the man's eyes and made one of the most magnificent defenses of Christianity that I ever heard. When she finished a soldier exclaimed with intense enthusiasm, "I am glad to find you so loyal!" "How could I be otherwise," she replied, "with such a Master?"

The National W. C. T. U. is missing one of the grandest opportunities that can ever come to it by not establishing tents at Camp Alger, at Chickamauga, and all the other places where our soldiers are stationed preparatory to entering into battle.

Dr. and Mrs. La Fetra, of Washington City, went with me on my visit to Camp Alger. Through the courtesy of the Salvation Army girls I was permitted to speak at their evening service. Before I began there were songs and testimonies. Numbers of those young men spoke of being regenerated since coming to the camp, nearly all joyously testifying that they had been saved from the appetite for strong drink. Numbers of others declared silently their desire to be Christians, and when the services ended the boys came up to me and, with hearty handshakes, said earnestly, "Please come again to-morrow night and speak to us." Another said: "Oh, you have brought back the memory of my home so vividly to me this evening. I do miss it so sadly and my beloved church."

Something must be done by the W. C. T. U. Never again, perhaps, shall we be able to reach such masses of men. Never again can they be found in such a spirit of seriousness and readiness for acceptance of the blessed truths of our organization. Judging from the way things are moving, it is quite probable that everyone of these men will return to their homes in the course of a few months, untouched by a bodily wound. Nearly all are young; they range from 18 to 26. They represent, to a vast extent, the coming citizenship of the United States. Hailing from all parts of the Union, they are national in character. They have little to do. In their idleness ample opportunity for thinking is theirs.

Our soldiers must be saved! They must be won for the temperance cause! If funds are not available in the national treasury, will not our friends subscribe money to be used in securing tents and defraying the daily expenses incident to conducting meetings? The evangelists and lecturers among our women would be willing to give their services freely for a short time each. There is no time to lose. Nothing is so effective as grasping situations as they come. If we can't have a tent of our own, perhaps the Y. M. C. A. or the Salvation Army would allow us to cooperate with them. Surely a flood-tide for righteousness has come to us. Dare we ignore it? May God show us the way in this crucial hour!

E. M. F. C. COMMENCEMENT.

Notwithstanding the quarantine of last year, E. M. F. C. has just closed the most successful session of its history. With a grand total of 326, over one hundred of whom being boarders, the college advanced beyond the expectation of the most sanguine. The commencement was a most enjoyable affair. Work in the primary and kindergarten showed what could be done with and for the little tots. The entertainment was well gotten up, displaying common sense in the selections, being especially adaptable to the understanding of the children. The musical exercises were delightful beyond description. The execution was fine, indicating the thoroughness of the work. This department of the college is quite up to the best, even in the North; Prof. Conrad, who is contracted with to remain for the next five years, having been a director of a conservatory of music at Cincinnati; so that the pupils will have the advantage of continuousness under the same methods of instruction—an advantage that not only does away with the confusion of conflicting systems, but also insures a greater thoroughness.

The graduating exercises, I do not hesitate to say, were the best I have ever seen in a female school. We had no show of finery, and flourish of rhetoric of doubtful importation, but the girls were modestly attired in Roman costumes made of some cheap material, and the subject discussed was, "Roman History—Its Military, Political, Religious and Social Customs, and Institutions." The young ladies had known for some time that they were to have this as a graduating subject, but did not know what particular division would be assigned to them until a short time before commencement; hence, no doubt, could have written with equal felicity upon any branch of that great subject. True, we had no boats loosing from moorings, standing on thresholds, or young eagles taking their flights, but we did have practical, common-sense discussions of a most interesting subject.

After the diplomas were given President Beeson announced that his corps of teachers for next year would, if anything, be better than this. He is grading the college constantly higher, and in the course of a few years will make the standard equal to that of our boys' schools, the grade for the coming year having been advanced considerably. And so our commencement came to an end.

The prospects for next year are brighter than ever, numbers having already signified intention of coming here, some by making contracts with President Beeson. The trouble will be to find room for the girls. Even with the $4,000 brick extension, there is not room enough.

The religious influence among the girls has been exceptionally fine, but one, so far as can be ascertained, not having been converted who was unsaved when they came.

God has greatly blessed the college. Scarcely a thing has been done that has not seemed to be under his special guidance.

Here in Meridian the most of us are proud of E. M. F., and who touches her touches the apple of our eye.

G. H. GALLOWAY.

July 4, 1898.

REPORT OF BOARD OF EDUCATION TO WINONA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

We have endeavored to carry out the plan recommended by the General Board of Education. We have assisted one young preacher in prosecuting his studies at Millsaps College. He is now a member of the North Mississippi Conference, and has repaid the loan with interest. This fund—now $150—will be loaned to another young man to enable him to attend Millsaps College and fit himself for the work of the ministry.

We are glad to report that Millsaps College has just closed the best session of its marvelously successful career. We heartily commend this college to all our people.

We are just in receipt of the information that Rev. W. B. Murrah, D. D., upon the unanimous request of the Board of Trustees, has decided to continue as president of Millsaps College; and we hereby express our appreciation of Dr. Murrah's services in the arduous and delicate duties of president of our college, and tender him our hearty sympathy and help, that he may continue to fill the position with the same distinguished ability and splendid success that have heretofore marked his administration. We congratulate Millsaps College and the friends of education in Mississippi that Dr. Murrah is to remain with us.

We are pleased to have with us Dr. J. W. Malone, president of Grenada College, and to learn of the continued and increasing success of this school. We direct special attention to that part of his report which tells of the deep and pervading "religious spirit" of the institution. We are glad to know the president and faculty emphasize religious training. It is gratifying to us to know of the large number of the daughters of our preachers who are able to avail themselves of the excellent advantages offered by our girls' college.

We are glad to note that the Board of Trustees are making provision to spend $500 in improving the buildings and grounds, and in providing appliances for Scientific Department; and have also inaugurated a plan to endow the college, and are already receiving endowment funds. We offer this resolution:

Resolved, That we are in perfect accord with the spirit of improvement expressed by the Board of Trustees of Grenada College in their recent meeting, and promise our hearty co-operation in any plan that may be adopted by the president and agent of the school.

J. R. BINGHAM,
Sec. Dist. Conf.

Selections.

DON'T DALLY WITH YOUR PURPOSE.

Success recently received the following letter:

"Through the columns of your valuable paper, will you not kindly give hints or suggestions about 'How to Concentrate the Mind?'

"It is almost impossible for the writer of this request to concentrate his mind even for a very few minutes; his mind seems to wander continually. No matter what study is taken up, very little progress is made, simply because the mind is not applied firmly during the study hour.

"Remarks about this subject, without doubt, would be of great benefit to more than one student, and I should very much like to see what Success has to say about it in one of its coming issues."

THE REMUNERATIVE QUALITY IS ATTENTION.

"Scatteration" is everywhere and always the greatest enemy to success.

"The one serviceable, safe, certain, remunerative, attainable quality in every study and pursuit is the quality of attention," said Charles Dickens. "My own invention, or imagination, such as it is, I can most truthfully assure you would never have served me as it has, but for the habit of commonplace, humble, patient, daily, toiling, drudging attention." When asked, on another occasion, the secret of his success, he said, "I never put one hand to anything on which I could throw my whole self." "Be a whole man in everything," wrote Joseph Gurney to his son; "a whole man at study, in work, in play."

Hogarth would rivet his attention upon a face, and study it until it was photographed upon his memory, when he could reproduce it at will. He studied and examined each object as eagerly as though he would never have a chance to see it again, and this habit of close observation enabled him to develop his work with marvelous detail. The very modes of thought of the time in which he lived were reflected from his works. He was not a man of great education or culture, except in his own power of observation.

THE VALUE OF CONCENTRATION.

One of the hardest tasks for a boy or a girl is to concentrate the whole attention upon the lesson of the morrow; for the student in college to prepare for the next recitation without running to the ball-field, or allowing his gaze to wander around the room, or doing anything else in order to cheat himself out of what he ought to do. In study, as in business, we must not only strike the iron while it is hot, but strike it until it is made hot.

William A. Mowry tells a story of one of the foremost of American scholars, who found himself spending two hours a day in preparing his Latin lesson. He determined to get that lesson in an hour and fifty minutes, and succeeded. When he afterwards sat down to learn his Latin, he bent every energy to accomplish it in the shortest possible time. He found, by daily trials, that he could learn it in an hour and forty-five minutes, and that the time required was diminishing. Concentrating all his powers upon the task, day by day, he soon found himself studying only an hour and a half upon it; then five, ten, and even thirty minutes less. Encouraged, he redoubled his efforts, and within a few months the lesson could be learned in less than half an hour—a thing absolutely impossible with his habits of study when he entered the school. But he had done something more than to learn a Latin lesson in a shorter time. He had learned something of the value of concentration. The acquisition of such power is of more value than the acquisition of knowledge.

Mr. Mowry gives another good illustration of this power in his "Talks with My Boys." A boy of fifteen once agreed to commit seven long stanzas of poetry in twenty minutes, with his companions allowed to use every possible effort to disturb him, provided they would not touch him. Amid such a pandemonium as only boys can make, the task was accomplished. This boy, George S. Boutwell, was afterwards governor of Massachusetts, United States senator, and secretary of the United States treasury.

THE ONLY VALUABLE KIND OF STUDY.

"The only valuable kind of study," said Sydney Smith, "is to read so heartily that dinner time comes two hours before you expected it; to sit with your Livy before you and hear the geese cackling that saved the capitol, and see with your own eyes the Carthaginian sutlers gathering up the rings of the Roman knights after the battle of Cannæ, and heaping them into bushels, and to be so intimately present at the actions you are reading of that, when anybody knocks at the door, it will take you two or three seconds to determine whether you are in your own study or on the plains of Lombardy, looking at Hannibal's weather-beaten face and admiring the splendor of his single eye."

"The weakest living creature," says Carlyle, "by concentrating his powers on a single object, can accomplish something; whereas, the strongest, by dispersing his over many, may fail to accomplish anything. The drop, by continually falling, bores its passage through the hardest rock. The hasty torrent rushes over it with hideous uproar, and leaves no trace behind."

By exercising this art of concentration in a higher degree than did his brother generals, Grant was able to bring the Civil War to a speedy termination. This trait was strongly marked in the character of Washington. One way of acquiring the power of concentration is by close, accurate observation. This was the main factor in Darwin's wonderful success.

It is the almost invisible point of the needle, the keen, slender edge of a razor or an ax, that opens the way for the huge bulk that follows. Without point or edge, the bulk would be useless. It is the man of one line of work, the sharp-edged man, who cuts his way through obstacles and achieves brilliant success. While we should shun that narrow devotion to one idea which prevents the harmonious development of our powers, we should avoid, on the other hand, the extreme versatility of one of whom W. M. Praed says:

His talk is like a stream which runs
With rapid change from rocks to roses,
It slips from politics to puns,
It glides from Mahomet to Moses;
Beginning with the laws that keep
The planets in their radiant courses,
And ending with some precept deep
For skinning eels or shoeing horses.

"The longer I live," said Fowell Buxton, "the more deeply am I convinced that that which makes the difference between one man and another—between the weak and the powerful, the great and the insignificant—is energy, invincible determination, a purpose once formed, and then death or victory."—Success.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Booneville, Miss., EDITOR.

Rev. P. H. Fontaine writes: "We reorganized our League at Parker Memorial Church last night. It was disbanded last year. I am just returned from New Mexico and appointed to this charge. League outlook very encouraging. Society for mission study organized in League. May God bless you! Pray for me."

In another place in this department will be found items of interest furnished by the Tchoupitoulas Epworth League. Mrs. L. Meekins is the correspondent, and from a private letter accompanying the above-mentioned report she writes as follows: "I have read with so much interest your department in this line. May your efforts so earnestly put forth toward the furtherance of the Master's work with our dear young people be a blessing to you and to them, and I pray this may be a better year's work than ever before with all our Leagues, and that we may all 'covet earnestly the best gifts.' May God most abundantly bless your labors!"

May God abundantly bless the good sister in New Orleans who penned the above lines, which came to cheer and encourage us at a time when it seemed that our efforts were very feeble and availed but little! By God's help we expect to do our very best to help just as many as we can just as long as we can, in all the ways we can, for Jesus' sake.

We appreciate an invitation just received from Presiding Elder Wier to attend the District Epworth League Conference to be held in Sardis, and regret our inability to be present. We trust the meeting will prove an impetus to the work, and that it will prepare all who attend to do more and better work for Jesus.

"Tchoupitoulas Epworth League held their regular monthly meeting on Thursday, June 30, and had their semi-annual election of officers. This was one of the best meetings—in attendance and interest. This League has for president a young lady of lovely character, consecrated and eager to do the Master's work in every way. The working members are earnest and 'zealous of good work.' The Sunday evening prayer meetings are interesting and spiritual."

Rev. J. H. Rogers, Elizey, Miss., writes: "We have just organized a League with a membership of twenty-two. We are away out here in the country thirty miles from the railroad, but I am going to try to get up one of the best Leagues in the Conference. I have plenty of material."

Let us see to it that wherever practicable—that is, wherever there is available material—we organize Leagues in the country for the intellectual, moral and spiritual development of our young men and young women. A large per cent. of the best men and women of America came from the country.

"Evil communications corrupt good manners." Would to God that every young man and woman would realize this. Many with bright prospects have been ruined through the influence of evil associates. Sargent Smith Prentiss might have left a record of which America would have been proud, but he got into bad company, was led into temptation, and went down to an untimely grave without God and without hope. If he could speak to-day, we think he would say to every young man, "My son, if sinners entice thee, consent thou not."

A picture of Dr. J. B. Fearn, "our own" missionary in China, adorns the first page in the Epworth Era of the issue of July 7. A young man with bright prospects for success in his chosen profession in his own State, yet he heard the voice of God calling him to other fields, and he answered, "Here am I; send me."

LESSON III.

SUBJECT—THE CONQUEST OF THE CAPE, OR THE MIRACLE OF PRAYER.

Is the most suggestive title for this section of our text. Several suggestive ideas are presented, such as a study in influence, as seen in the life and work of Mary Lyon, or the influence of the Christian school as evidenced by the great waves of good that have emanated from Holyoke Seminary. These might be taken up as illustrative of the main thought of the chapter—the power of prayer in mission work.

In this connection study the words of our Lord, "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest," and also the passage in Acts xiii, 2. The library will suggest many others. In the direct study of this section take note of—

1. The place—southern coast of Africa, inviting from commercial, educational standpoint, and, most of all, as being a strategic point from which to operate missionary enterprises.

2. The people who engaged in this movement. Study the history of the Huguenots, and justify the comparison instituted between them and the Puritans on page 30.

3. The plans employed were prayerful, intelligent, and full of purpose to do. Note how these plans were backed up by contributions of time and money that frequently meant self-denial of extreme kind.

4. Study, in conclusion, the prosperity of the mission as illustrated by the summary on pages 48 and 49.

Suggestion: Let some one give a few remarks on this theme, "The Effect of Christianity on the Physical Conditions of a Country." The quotation at the conclusion of the chapter is not to be taken altogether figuratively.

EVERY YEAR

BY GEN. ALBERT PIKE.

You are growing old, they tell us
Every year;
You are more alone, they tell us
Every year;
You can win no new affection,
You have only recollection,
Deeper sorrow and dejection.
Every year.

There come new cares and sorrows
Every year;
Darker days and darker sorrows
Every year;
The ghosts of dead loves haunt us,
The ghosts of changed friends taunt us,
And disappointments daunt us,
Every year.

But the truer life draws nigher
Every year.
And its Morning Star climbs higher
Every year!
Earth's hold on us grows slighter,
And the heavy burden lighter,
And the Dawn Immortal brighter
Every year.

Communications.

BRO. RICKEY AND THE COMMITTEES ONCE MORE.

MR. EDITOR: My already high regard for Bro. Rickey, not only as a man, but as a scholar and a thinker, has been greatly augmented since the reading of his article in the current issue of the ADVOCATE. I have always had a kind of boyish admiration for the man who could do and say things I could not understand. For that reason, among others, I respect many men and their works; Dr. Tigert and his Logic, and Bro. Rickey and his present article, being among them.

After reading the article and failing to get any idea of what the brother was trying to say, I called upon an ex-college president with the hope of getting some light on it, but in vain. I sought the opinion of intelligent laymen, but they refused to express an opinion upon a thing which they declared was beyond their comprehension. I have, therefore, concluded that Bro. Rickey has demonstrated his entire fitness for the editorship of a Pentecostal Age, and I sincerely trust that, ere long, he may have the delightful privilege of surveying the fields of human activity from the exalted position for which he is so eminently qualified.

Immediately after the appearance of my recent article, which he so severely condemns, I received a number of letters from various leaders of the Conference congratulating me upon its merits. I was also thanked by letter and in person by different ones of the "turn-downs." It remains, however, for Bro. Rickey to discover that I have maliciously assailed the character of the committees, slandered the country circuit riders, placed a premium upon laziness, declared God to be in league with ignorance, etc. Verily the Conference is to be congratulated upon numbering among its ranks a man of such rare mental acumen.

No one has even hinted that the committee did wrong in allowing the Centenary professor to make his examination at home. His papers were handed to the committee in the presence of the class, with the statement that he had worked on them twelve hours. This I offered in defense of my claim that the committee was too hard on the class. Since Bro. Rickey has challenged my statement, and in a seemingly wrathy mood demands the proof, I submit the class as my witnesses. They will also occupy the stand to substantiate every other statement made concerning that examination. If he will condescend to accept the evidence of such a lazy, trifling set (?), then he will be abundantly convinced; otherwise I am at my row's end. The Conference Minutes are my witnesses concerning the number of additions to the church by the class and committee. They are a record of history. I suppose all parties concerned are willing to abide their testimony.

The good brother rather makes fun of the idea of reading from the "pommel" and by the "pine-knot fire," but his prattle about laziness and late sleepers is, to say the least, amusing. I wonder what he knows about being called up to eat his breakfast by the light of a tallow candle, so that all hands may be ready for the field by daylight. What does he know about losing his way in the woods, lying out of nights, swimming swollen streams, and living on corn bread, fat bacon, and cow peas? What does he know about being without books, and the money to buy them, while visions of approaching Conference and a frowning committee continually haunt him? And at last, when the annual gathering comes, what does he know about going up clad in a patched suit, in the pockets of which the pennies have ceased to rattle because they are not?

As long as the memory of such experiences linger about me, I shall fail not to lift my voice in defense of the men who ride the big circuits. I shall insist upon common fairness in the examinations, and protest against classing every man off as a lazy ignoramus who fails to know his lesson. I shall also insist that a man shall be turned down, if at all, by a majority of the committee; not by one of them, as is now the case with us.

In conclusion, I care nothing for Bro. Rickey's dirty little epithets and personal flings. I am sorry, however, that he finds it necessary to resort to such methods in order to attract public attention. And now, since we have each had our say, for the sake of a suffering public, I suggest that we call off. Acting upon that suggestion, I am,

Yours for the defense of the saddle-bag brigade,

JNO. B. KENT.

DR. KELLEY'S QUERY.

Dr. Kelley seems perturbed because there are none of the utterances of Jesus of Nazareth inscribed on the walls of the Congressional Library building at Washington, along with numerous sayings of many of the world's celebrities thereon inscribed. He says Bishop Galloway confessed inability to answer his query, and you, Mr. Editor, say you are sorry to be unable to answer it. When such men as Bishop Galloway and yourself are silent from confessed inability, it may seem presumption in me to speak; yet there is a profound thought that stirs my soul, which I must humbly state. The thought is, that it may be accounted for on the ground of an innate reverence, and an unconsciously impressed sense of the irrelevancy of placing the incomparable sayings of Jesus on a seeming equality with even the greatest thoughts of the greatest men. Were we to undertake to arrange a collection of the most beautiful images formed by the rays of light from each of the planets, where would be the relevancy of placing those formed from sunlight among them, as though it were but a fellow among them? If comparison to show the sublime superiority of the sun and its difference in nature, and its different results, were the purpose, there might be some reason for the combination; but when simply intended to form a galaxy of notable results of like fellows, direct solar effects would certainly be out of place. So, when there is an attempt to arrange a symposium of the wise sayings of mere men, though the greatest, as we suppose, is the purpose of the quotations on the walls of the Congressional Library, the words of the Son of God can have no place among them.

I must confess to a sad and sorrowful feeling when I see the sublime sayings of Him who is the light of the world placed along with the sayings of noted men as symposiums of great men's thoughts. To me there is in it an irreverence that is dangerous to the faith of men, amounting almost to blasphemy. It seems that we ought to guard the holy words of the Lord from even a seeming irreverent connection. This is not the result of any sort of superstitious awe, but a due honor and reverence. For one, I must say the absence of the sayings of Jesus from a place like that mentioned by Dr. Kelley is no detriment to them and no dishonor to the men who failed to place them there. The not placing them there is an honor to them more eloquent in the absence than if they were written there in the largest letters of burning gold. "Never man spake like this man;" and his words can have no proper place in what is intended as a galaxy of the gems of mere human thought. His sayings are suns of light, theirs but pole stars, shining in mutation and with borrowed light. If we wish to see and enjoy the stars, we must have the sunlight out of the way, that darkness may hold sway. Then only can they dare to show themselves.

While the sayings of Jesus are couched in human words and forms of speech, that the simplest may understand and appreciate, they are diamonds from the laboratory of a divine mind, too awful and sublime for human comparison or association with the best from man. They are self-evident truths; they shine with inherent divine glory, and stand out like mountains, solitary and alone. They are without counterparts; they are miracles. They are worthy to be inscribed in places sacred and holy, only where the unhallowed and comparably sordid human gems of thought dare not attempt to come.

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

Centenary College deserves, and has a right to expect, the patronage of the Methodists of Louisiana. The college belongs to the church, and in her name offers Christian education to the boys and young men of our country.

Dr. Inman W. Cooper, A. M., the new president of Centenary, is a conscientious and thoroughly competent man. He will not only sustain the past reputation of this honored institution, but will exert every energy toward the enlargement of its usefulness.

In order, therefore, that the poor boys of our church and country may obtain an education at little cost, the mess-hall has been introduced, by which board can be secured for $7 a month. Those who may prefer to board in private families can do so at a cost of $12 per scholastic month.

The buildings and grounds are being improved. Four or five thousand dollars will be expended for this purpose. New fences and professors' cottages are being built. The dormitories will be put in good repair, including new flooring for the lower galleries.

Dr. Cooper desires to put two hundred boys in Centenary during next session. Who will help in this great work? Bro. Cooper and I will see as many during the Summer as possible. Brethren, will you not send us the names of all the boys within your work who are interested in an education? After attending the District Conference, July 8, at Bienville, my address will be Rayville, La. Any opportunity given me to see the boys on your charges will be appreciated.

(REV.) CHARLES W. CRISLER.

July 7, 1898.

DR. I. W. COOPER AND CENTENARY COLLEGE.

I am pleased to learn that my friend, Dr. Inman W. Cooper, has been elected president of Centenary College. There is one thing about this grand old school that I take great pleasure in mentioning here. It has maintained a moral and spiritual atmosphere unsurpassed by that of any institution of learning of which I have any knowledge. Situated in one of the most cultured, refined and religious communities in the country, with a faculty composed of men as eminent for their Christian character as for their scholastic attainments and teaching ability, the college has done a great work in molding the character and developing the piety of its students. I do not know how it is now, but a few years ago, when my sons were at school there, this was the case, and I presume it is the same now. I noticed that the college was a means of grace then as well as a means of education. The boys leaving a Christian home, and going there for a term of years, did not return home demoralized, or showing a decline in piety, but they came back home strengthened in their faith, and developed in their Christian purpose and zeal. It came as near being an ideal Christian school in those days as one would find anywhere. It was a place where we could safely trust our boys. This should be the case with all our schools, for our boys and for our girls. We have a right to demand it of those institutions of learning that claim our patronage as church schools. We want teachers who are capable and faithful, but we want them to be religious also—not merely members of the church, but thoroughly godly and zealous for Christ. And everybody about the school should be a help, and not a hindrance, to the religious influence thereof. The time is coming, and now is, when those things that pertain to the religious progress of our children at school will be more highly considered. I doubt not that under the presidency of Dr. Cooper, Centenary College will maintain its elevated standard as a spiritual force.

W. B. LEWIS.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

After consultation with the presiding elders of the Louisiana Conference, I make the following brief statement:

During the latter part of May it was announced in our daily papers that Mrs. Mary McGee Snell Hall would, on June 5, begin a series of meetings in a tent erected on the court square. About the thirtieth day of May, after consultation with Bro. B. F. White, my presiding elder, and the Board of Stewards of my charge, I addressed Sister Hall a respectful request not to hold said services. On June 5 Sister Hall, her husband, and others, proceeded with the meeting as advertised, and continued for ten days and nights, and on June 5 and 12 held their services during the regular hours for services at our church.

On June 15 I addressed her a respectful note, asking the name of her pastor and place of membership.

On June 20 she wrote me from Arcadia, La., acknowledging the receipt of both my letters, but declining to furnish me with the desired information.

On June 23 I received a letter from Rev. R. W. Seay, Thompson Station, Tenn., stating that, "Bro. Hall and wife sent for their church certificates on June 2, and are not now members of my charge."

Yours fraternally,

E. N. EVANS, P. C.,

W. F. M. S. AND H. M. S., WINONA DISTRICT.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Winona district met in the Methodist Church in Winona, on June 15, at 9 o'clock A. M. The devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Bessie Lipscomb. She gave a very interesting and instructive talk on the "Bread of Life," and earnestly exhorted every Christian to partake more bountifully of that Bread, in order that Jesus might become assimilated to each one's being, and thus each could do better work for him. An opportunity was given for the ladies present to testify for their Master as a preparation service for the day's work, and a great many responded.

District Secretary Mrs. Jones then took the chair, and the society elected Mrs. Shivers secretary. The bar was fixed at the third bench, and Mesdames Stone, Evans, Williams, Thayer, and Miss Ella Grider were invited to seats with the Conference. Mrs. Jones made her annual report, which was very encouraging to the workers. The secretary was requested to read a selection from the Missionary Advocate entitled, "A Missionary Dialogue." The roll was called, and each delegate responded with report from her auxiliary. First on the roll was Winona, and it soon became evident that she was first in other things as well, having remitted to Conference treasurer during the year $627.33. Then came Black Hawk, which reported 13 members and $25 20 sent to Conference treasurer. Carrollton gave a good report. She has 18 members in good standing—that is, they pay their dues; 16 subscribers to Woman's Missionary Advocate, and has sent Conference treasurer $42 10. This society is praying earnestly for the many who should be with them in this work, but at present are at ease in Zion. Acona has 17 members, 6 subscribers for the Advocate, and has sent Conference treasurer $43 15 this year. Greenwood's financial report is good, having given $61.25 this year for missions, but she finds it difficult to get her members to work in other ways. She gave the idea of taking two extra copies of the Advocate to lend to those who do not take it, and in that way get them interested in the work, for without knowledge there can not be much zeal. Shell Mound, McNutt, Indianola and Sunny Side have good societies. The Juveniles of Winona gave us a very sweet report. They have raised $37.50, and have 14 subscribers to The Little Worker. The Galloway Gleaners, of Carrollton, have given $47 68, and have The Little Worker in every family represented in the society. The Acona and Black Hawk Juveniles are doing very good work. The "McNutt Workers" and Sunny Side "Buds of Promise" manifest great interest in the work. After the roll call Mrs. Lipscomb gave a talk on the general work. The president then gave the ladies an opportunity of asking any question they might desire. "How to Arouse Interest in the Monthly Meetings" was discussed, and several good suggestions were made. The society decided to retain our Bible woman in Mexico. Mrs. Lay gave an interesting account of her recent visits to Laredo and Tampa, and Mrs. Bledsoe told of her visit to Methvin Institute, at Anadarko, I. T. A Committee on Resolutions was appointed, and the society was dismissed with prayer by Bro. Lipscomb.

The afternoon session was held by the Woman's Home Mission Society. The meeting was opened at 3:30 P. M. The devotional exercises were conducted by Bro. Lipscomb. In the absence of the district secretary, Mrs. Rowan Thayer presided over the meeting. The annual address of the district secretary was read by Mrs. J. B. Stone. There are six working societies in the district, and they have raised during the year for home and connectional work $650. An interesting selection on "Woman's Work" was read by Mrs. Stone, and Mrs. Cunningham read a selection from a speech made by one of our Bishops at the General Conference, on the "Work of the Woman's Home Mission Society."

Mrs. Lipscomb was appointed a committee to introduce the visiting brethren. Bros. Stone and Bachman were presented to the body.

Miss Stamp was appointed a committee to solicit subscriptions to Our Homes from the District Conference.

Indianola was selected as the place for the next meeting, and April as the month, leaving the exact date to the discretion of the district secretaries.

The evening session was held jointly by both societies. Bro. Stone read a Scripture lesson, and the congregation was led in prayer by Bro. Lester. The music rendered by the choir was appropriate and beautiful.

The societies were cordially welcomed by Miss Ella Grider, and Mrs. Shivers responded in behalf of both societies. Pretty recitations were given by little Misses Willie Grider, Ruth Stone, Clara Robertson and Alice Mitchell. An interesting paper on "Acting the Brother" was read by Mrs. Thayer. Mrs. Lipscomb gave an earnest and entertaining talk on "A Missionary Conscience." While the choir sang, two little girls passed through the congregation, and gave each person an opportunity to contribute something to the cause of missions. Thus ended the best meeting the societies of Winona district have ever held. The people of Winona entertained us royally, and we shall long carry with us pleasant recollections of June 15, 1898.

W. B. OF F. MISSIONS, M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

REPORT OF TWENTIETH ANNUAL MEETING.

As the understanding with Mrs. McIntosh was, that I write the report of the last three days of the meeting, I send my part of report.

The devotional services Monday morning were led by Mrs. Malone, of the Missouri Conference. Mrs. Wightman, president of the Board, made her annual address, which was full of wise and loving advice to the members of the Board. It was a bugle call to active and faithful service.

The report of treasurer, Mrs. McTyeire, shows $3,538.29 collected above the previous year, the year's receipts being $86,418.76.

Report of editor of Woman's Missionary Advocate was good, but we feel that the societies are not doing their duty in regard to this valuable periodical.

Monday afternoon Mr. Odel gave the members of the Board and visitors a splendid drive over the city, visiting many places of interest, passing by the home of our faithful co-laborer, Sister Bumpass, and to the cemetery where she now rests.

A memorial service was held Monday evening in memory of Mrs. Calloway, secretary of the North Georgia Conference, and Mrs. Bumpass, of the Western North Carolina Conference. The rostrum was appropriately decorated, and beautiful white flowers surrounded a portrait of Mrs. Bumpass. Mrs. Wightman opened the services. Mrs. Higginbotham read a sketch of the life of Mrs. Calloway. Mrs. Gray and Mrs. Herbert read beautiful tributes of her work. Mrs. Calloway had for twenty years been a prominent worker, and was one of the organizers of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Southern Methodist Church. Mrs. Lucy Robertson, of Greensboro, read a sketch of Mrs. Bumpass' life. She was from the foundation one of its honored as well as one of its most punctual members, never having missed an annual meeting. Mrs. Swindell, Mrs. Cunningham, Rev. Jessie Cunningham, and others, paid beautiful tributes to her life and character. Resolutions of the Board were read by Mrs. Trueheart. This was a very sad, but impressive meeting.

Tuesday's session was truly a business one. Reports and discussions of the work was the order of the day. Report of Scarritt Bible and Training-school shows a year of prosperity and progress. Report of editor of Little Worker was cheery. The subscription price was reduced to ten cents, and the paper will be used in juvenile meetings instead of the leaflets that have been furnished heretofore. The Evangel is still the organ of the training-school. Easter Sunday is appointed as a day for offerings for the training-school. The Cycle of Prayer, for daily use, is recommended for our members. As this is China jubilee year, "China Missions," by Harland Buck, is recommended for this year's study. $4,425.05 was raised by the children for the Korean Mission. The Hayes-Wilkins Memorial at Sung-kiang, China, has been completed, and is in charge of Miss Ella Leneritt. Arrangements were made for a school-building at Juiz de Fara, Brazil. There is great need for a suitable school-building in the City of Mexico, but the Board did not have the funds to build there at present. New missionaries: Miss Mary Pescot, of North Carolina Conference, was appointed to Juiz de Fara, Brazil. Miss Fannie Hynes, of Kentucky, to Seoul, Korea. Misses Mary Tarrent, of Texas, and Ida Anderson, of China, whose papers had not been in the hands of the Board the required length of time, were referred to the local Board at Nashville for appointment. Misses Annie Heath, of Georgia, and Elizabeth Davis, of North Carolina, were recommended to the training school for a two years' course.

As the Constitution of the W. B. of F. Missions requires that the officers of the Board be elected quadrennially at the annual meeting succeeding the General Conference, the officers were elected. The same officers who have so ably managed the executive branch of the work were re-elected. There was no change except in the election of a second vice-president, in accordance with a change of Constitution made by the General Conference; Mrs. A. W. Wilson being elected to the office of second vice-president, and also editor of Leaflets.

Austin, Texas, was selected as the place for holding the next annual meeting.

The reception of missionary candidates on Tuesday evening was a very happy occasion. Miss Pescot, in a short talk, told how happy she was that the desire of her life was about to be realized, and that she would soon leave for her life-work. Miss Mary Richardson, who was accepted by the Board last year, and who will soon leave for China, told of the joy she had in going. Miss Helen Richardson, who has spent some years in China, told of her work in that field. Miss Richardson is so bright and cheering in her talks of China that it makes one feel that a very great deal is missed by not being a foreign missionary. Miss Eluding told us of her work in Brazil. Miss Eluding is a very impressive speaker. Her earnestness in speaking of the work makes one think of all the mission fields. Brazil should have the most attention just now.

The Board adjourned Wednesday afternoon, the meeting being one of the most pleasant, I am told, that was ever held.

FOREST DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The District Conference for the Forest district, Mississippi Conference, was held at Lawrence, Miss., July 1-3. Our efficient presiding elder, Rev. W. W. Simmons, presided to the delight of all present. Paul D. Hardin was elected secretary and D. Scarborough, assistant secretary. All the pastors except four and a goodly number of local preachers and lay delegates were in attendance.

The opening sermon was preached, Friday, 11 A. M., by D. C. Langford from I. Cor. ii, 12. This was a sermon of great power, and heartily enjoyed by those who heard it.

Committees on Education, Sunday-schools, Epworth Leagues, and Sabbath observance were appointed, and later on made encouraging reports on these very important subjects.

The reports from the pastoral charges were gratifying indeed. These reports indicated that the district is in an unusually prosperous condition. The following facts were brought out: New parsonages have been built this year at Forest, Raleigh and Shiloh; five others have undergone substantial improvement. Twenty-six Sunday-schools and seven Epworth Leagues were reported. Financial reports indicate quite a forward movement in this important line of church work; the spiritual advancement in proportion to that along other lines. The pastors seem full of cheer and faith, expecting glorious revivals during the Summer campaign. May their fondest hopes be realized!

Rev. J. N. Tucker, preacher in charge, with two of the Choctaw brethren, represented the Indian Mission, which is now in this district. Bro. Tucker represented the work in good condition; one organized church with fifty members, several accessions to the church this year. They have also a good Sunday-school. He pleaded very earnestly for an increase of interest on the part of the church in this long-neglected work.

We were glad to have with us Rev. Jno. W. Chambers, president Whitworth Female College; Rev. M. L. Burton, manager Mississippi Methodist Orphans' Home, and Miss Addie V. Marshall, president Woman's Foreign Missionary Board of the Mississippi Conference—each of whom talked very ably and earnestly in behalf of the important interests which they represent. Bro. Burton's earnest plea for the orphans was followed by a free-will offering of $15.75 for the Home.

The license of nineteen local preachers were renewed by the Conference.

The following were recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial: Wm. P. Donnell, Jno. E. Williams, J. Madison Corley and Walter L. Blackwell. These young brothren passed very creditable examinations, and give promise of great usefulness in the Master's vineyard.

The following were recommended to the Annual Conference for deacon's orders: W. P. Donnell, J. M. Corley, J. E. Williams, G. W. Huddleston and Amos Kendall.

W. M. Thornton, Irvin Miller, A. A. Breckenridge and G. B. Harper were elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference. D. T. Myers and D. S. Harmon were elected alternates.

Hickory was selected as the place for the next session of the District Conference.

The preaching during the Conference was done by the following brethren: D. C. Langford, W. L. Linfield, D. P. Bradford, W. M. Sullivan, J. H. Foreman, W. W. Simmons, Irvin Miller, W. P. Donnell and P. D. Hardin. The services were largely attended and the Holy Ghost was present in power.

The members of the Conference were enthusiastic in their praises of the hospitality of the good people of Lawrence. The customary resolutions of thanks were adopted, and each one left believing he had had the best home in town, and praying that God would abundantly reward the people for their kindness.

PAUL D. HARDIN, Sec.

THE LOUISIANA STATE NORMAL.

The thirteenth commencement exercises of this institution closed on Friday, July 1, with great eclat. The sermon was preached on Wednesday preceding, at 11 o'clock A. M., by Rev. S. A. Steele, D. D., from Matt. xvi, 3: "Ye can discern the face of the sky; but can ye not discern the signs of the times?" The sermon was extremely optimistic, and consisted of a retrospective view of our country for the past one hundred years. The speaker discoursed eloquently of the rapid strides which our country had made on the line of progress in every way, which he said was characteristic of the Anglo-Saxon people, who would ultimately dominate the world. He thought that great good would result from the present war, and closed by referring to the different religions of the world, and said that the only live religion was the Christian religion, and that the only enterprising and progressive religion, keeping abreast with other lines of progress, is Protestantism. There were forty-eight graduates, about forty of whom were young ladies. They marched in solid column down the aisle to the rostrum, mid strains of the finest of instrumental music, and the clapping of hundreds of hands. After brief impromptu speeches by J. V. Calhoun and our governor, Murphy J. Foster, the large graduating class received their diplomas from the hands of Gov. Foster.

The president of the college is Mr. B. C. Caldwell, and under the present regime the school is growing in popularity and increasing its patronage. The enrollment during the past year reached about 450. The future is bright, yet I had a prejudice against the college which is strong and widespread. I take pleasure in defending the college, and say boldly that this prejudice must be the result of envy or ignorance. The school is not in any sense an ecclesiasticism, yet all the students in the boarding department, who are adults, enjoy the same church and Sunday-school privileges that they would enjoy at their homes. Three Protestant Churches—Methodist, Baptist, and Episcopal—all have Sunday-schools and regular church services.

Sister Lizzie McVoy (nee Carter), who has been teaching in the Normal for years, teaches a Sunday-school class in the Methodist Church each Sunday morning, consisting of two or three dozen Normal students.

As to discipline and instruction, the Louisiana State Normal College has no superior in our sunny Southland. A diploma from this school means something. As to health, there have been fewer deaths and less sickness here to date than any other place that I have ever lived. What interest have I in writing this? Nothing but the public good. I have spent fifteen years in teaching, and am, therefore, interested in the cause of education.

ACTION OF THE OPELOUSAS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Resolved, That it is with feelings of no ordinary pleasure that we welcome the presence of Rev. I. W. Cooper, D. D., president of Centenary College.

Resolved, That Centenary College, from its great usefulness in shaping the character of the ministry and statesmen of Louisiana through two generations, as well as for the large expenditure of labor and money for buildings and fixtures, is entitled to our hearty support.

Resolved, That in securing the services of Rev. I. W. Cooper, D. D., as president of Centenary College, the Board of Trustees is entitled to the thanks of our Methodist people, and we bid him welcome to our charges, and pledge him our hearty support for the college.

FROM THE WORK.

Steward, Bayon Barbary, La., July 12, 1898: "We have just closed one of the most successful meetings ever held at this place. It lasted seven days, and the Lord was with us from start to finish. The altar was crowded at every service with earnest seekers after that joy and peace that cometh only from above. Men and women who had been members of the church for years never knew what religion was until this meeting. Many received the blessed assurance that Jesus was theirs. Result of the meeting: 19 accessions and fully as many conversions. Young converts lifted their voices in prayer before they were received into the church. Bro. Lutz, of Slaughter, was with us and did most of the preaching. Truly he is a man of God. His earnestness carries conviction to the hearts of his hearers. Our pastor, Rev. W. R. Harvell, is doing a good work among us. He captured the hearts of his people at the start by his earnest Christian ways and friendliness to all. I predict the most successful year that we have had for years."

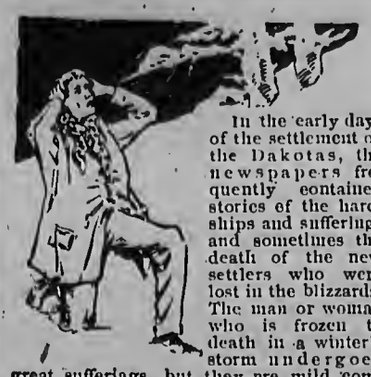
A NEW CHURCH AT EDWARDS.

Notwithstanding the awful scourge that swept over our community last Summer and Fall, and the great loss sustained by our church, our work at Edwards moves forward. Early in the year we paid our foreign mission assessment in full, and before the year was half gone our Conference claimants and domestic mission assessments were paid. About 75 per cent. of all Conference assessments paid to date.

And now, though many of our people were taken away by the yellow fever, and the financial loss to the church was very great, we are about to begin the erection of a new church. Our people have done well, but will not be able to complete this work without help from the outside of this recently scourged community. If any of your readers think this a worthy cause, and want to make glad the hearts of this people, let them send whatever aid they can to me.

The old church has been sold and moved off of our lot. Plans have been adopted and submitted to contractors for bids. The cost of the church, complete and furnished, will be about $2500. We hope soon to see the work begin, and to report a new church at Conference.

JAS. G. GALLOWAY.



In the early days of the settlement of the Dakotas, the newspapers frequently contained stories of the hardships and sufferings and sometimes the death of the new settlers who were lost in the blizzards. The man or woman who is frozen to death in a winter's storm undergoes great sufferings, but they are mild compared with those daily borne by thousands of victims of that dread disease—consumption.

For centuries this relentless disease was considered incurable. It is now known to be distinctly curable. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption, bronchitis, asthma, laryngitis and diseases of the air-passages. It has stood the test for thirty years. It acts directly on the blood, nourishing it with the life-giving qualities of the food. It tears down old, half-dead tissues and builds up new ones in all parts of the body. Through the blood it acts directly on the lungs, driving out all impurities and disease germs. It soothes the cough, but facilitates expectoration. It deepens the breathing, supplying the system with life-giving oxygen. It stimulates the appetite, facilitates the flow of digestive juices, invigorates the liver and tones and builds up the nerves. It is the great blood-maker and flesh-builder. It does not make flabby flesh like cod liver oil, but firm, muscular, healthy tissues.

"I had been troubled with bronchitis for several years," writes Mrs. Orilla O'Hara, Box 114, Fergus Falls, Ottertail Co., Minn. "In the first place I had sore throat. I doctored with different doctors and took various medicines, but got no relief. I raised from my throat a sticky substance like the white of an egg. Could not sleep, and had made up my mind that I would not live through the winter. I took Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Favorite Prescription' alternately, and in a few days began to see that I was better. I took eight bottles. I have not felt as well in years."

The Polytechnic College

Will open its eighth session Wednesday, September 7, 1898. It is an institution of high grade, employing a faculty of eighteen professors, instructors and assistants. The curriculum taught is fully equal to that of any college or university, doing only college and preparatory work, in the Southwest.

Full courses leading to the degrees of A. B. and B. S. are offered in Mathematics, English, Natural and Physical Science, Latin, Greek and Modern Languages, History and Economics, and Philosophy.

A course in the Bible is required for graduation.

A School of Pedagogy has been opened, and the theory and practice of teaching will receive careful consideration at the hands of a very successful instructor.

A special course for teachers is offered during the first ten weeks of the session, and again during the last ten weeks.

Instruction by correspondence to pupils who wish it.

A Business Department is maintained in which is given the most thorough instruction in Book-keeping, Shorthand, Typewriting, Penmanship, etc. Graduation from our business department means a great deal more than from the ordinary commercial college.

The Music Department, vocal, piano, guitar, violin, mandolin, orchestral, is first-class in every particular. The manager, Miss Kate V. King, is unexcelled in the South as a vocalist, pianist and instructor.

In Elocution Miss I. I. Ice has no superior as an instructor. During the last session her classes overflowed, and pupils had to be turned away. Assistance will be afforded during the next session. We have also arranged to introduce a department of Physical Culture for both young men and ladies.

Mrs. Emma Rhea, the instructor in Art, is giving great satisfaction, and her class the past session was quite large. All branches of Art taught. Special attention given to portrait and china painting.

The Polytechnic College is perhaps the best located college in the State. Altitude above sea level, nearly 800 feet. More than a mile from the city limits. (Electric car.) Railroads entering Fort Worth from eleven different directions. Telephone communication with all parts of the State.

Our co-educational system works beautifully. Strict discipline and careful oversight over both young men and women saves all trouble and secures great benefit to both.

TERMS:

YOUNG MEN: Board, tuition and matriculation fee for ten months, $130.00.

YOUNG LADIES: Board, laundry, tuition, matriculation fee, with music, elocution or art, $225.

N. B.—We teach full forty weeks—an advantage found at no other high-grade institution in the State; and these prices are for that length of time.

Large library in charge of librarian open to students every day. Library fee, $1.00

We have no imposing buildings to write about. We think a College is made up of Faculty, Curriculum and Student Body. If these are present the results will follow. On these points, faculty, curriculum and class-room work we invite the closest comparison with other schools of the Southwest.

NEW PROBLEMS.

Times change, and so do all things human. Change is the common lot of all human organizations. No set of men have ever been able to devise a system of government, civil or ecclesiastical, that could defy the vicissitudes of time. Methodism has changed immensely since the days of its infancy. A great, world-embracing ecclesiastical establishment such as we now behold was not in John Wesley's mind when he organized the first Methodist society. The vast changes which Methodism has undergone have been necessitated by the ever changing conditions which it has had to confront.

The English government of the present day is a very different thing from the government of a few centuries ago. And the changes wrought have been inevitable. No force of arms or other resources at its command could possibly have preserved intact the prerogatives of ancient royalty. The American government has also changed. The framers of the Constitution of 1787, although they stand first for far-seeing statesmanship among the world's government-builders, were unable to make provision for all the contingencies of the on-coming ages. Many events which now constitute salient features of our country's history were entirely outside the programme of the Constitution-makers. No sagacity could foresee these events and no statesmanship could provide for them. Yet every exigency has been met as it has arisen. The statesmanship of each age has been adequate to the demands made upon it And we do not doubt that the past is an augury of what the future will be in this respect. Our own age, let us hope, will deal with its problems as successfully as former ages dealt with theirs.

We of this age have some vast and complicated problems confronting us. That we shall be the victors in the present war no one doubts. When the war closes the stars and stripes will be found floating over a vast amount of new territory, embracing a population of several millions.

What shall be done with this conquered territory? is a problem which the statesmanship of this age must solve. This question is one which is destined to overshadow all other questions within the realm of American politics. Those questions of tariff and coinage which have so long furnished the battle-cry for the serried hosts of political partisanism will vanish for a time, or at least occupy a very insignificant place in the public mind. There will be a new alignment of political forces growing out of these new governmental problems. Party discipline will fall into "a state of innocuous desuetude." The American voter will not consent to do his thinking along these new lines under the stimulus of the party lash. The magnates of the political world may as well recognize this fact at once, and thereby save themselves from much vexation and disappointment.

Already there is a division in the ranks of the two great political parties. Republicans and Democrats of high standing are found on both sides of the new question which the Spanish war has created. Arguments, pro and con, in vast abundance and variety are being hurled at the people through the press. Almost every periodical in the land, from the most erudite Review to the most obscure rural weekly, is having its say on the subject. We have opinions concerning this matter, and have no hesitation in expressing them. So far as Cuba is concerned, the United States government has promises on record. We are not warring for the annexation of Cuba, but for its deliverance from the cruel bondage from which it has so long suffered. Cuba is to be liberated and allowed to form a system of government to suit itself, and take its place in the great sisterhood of nations. If, after some years of autonomy, Cuba should seek to be annexed to the great American Republic, that will be a problem for the statesmen of that period to deal with. At present, however, there is no movement anywhere for the annexation of Cuba, or for the assertion of authority over it any longer than necessary to enable it to construct a government that shall ensure peace and order.

As to other regions which will fall into our hands as the result of the war—viz: Porto Rico, the Philippine Islands, the Ladrones and the Carolines—we believe that the stars and stripes will float over them all for many a day to come, and that this is in accordance with the fitness of things and with the principles of righteousness. Justice, as well as international law, will entitle us to the retention of this conquered territory long enough to compel the payment of an adequate war indemnity. The man who thinks that, after expending hundreds of millions—perhaps billions—of dollars in carrying on the war, we will, as soon as victory perches upon our banners, simply pocket the loss and relinquish all this territory to our conquered foe, knows little of the animus of the American people. Any man who advocates such a policy will dig his own grave, politically.

But other and higher questions than those of finance arise before us here, and will not down at our bidding. Suppose Spain should be able, immediately after the close of the war, or a few years later, to pay an adequate indemnity, shall we then turn over the millions of human beings who compose the population of this conquered territory to the tender mercies of Spain—the most despotic, heartless, cruel government that exists to-day upon the surface of the earth, not excepting the barbarous Turk? We have no right to do so. When our flag, the symbol of law, order, freedom and civilization, floats over these vast realms, it will do so providentially, just as surely as it floats providentially over the blood-stained soil of Bunker Hill and other shrines of American patriotism. It is a strange sort of theology which recognizes the hand of providence in a war with England or Mexico, but not in a war with Spain. These realms, won by the favor of an all-wise providence, should never be relinquished to barbarous Spain. At the same time it is evident that the inhabitants of this conquered territory are too low in the scale of intelligence and civilization to be admitted to the honors and responsibilities of Statehood in our great Republic. Not only are these people unfit for Statehood; they are also incapable of self-government. They must, therefore, for a time be ruled by the United States government. This presents a situation not contemplated in the Constitution. Our fathers made no provision for the government of millions of semi-savages scattered over thousands of islands beyond the sea. Great are the responsibilities involved, yet they can not be righteously shirked. It will be our imperative duty to unfurl on these distant shores the same glorious banner which waves over this "land of the free," and govern these people in the interest of peace, order, liberty, and righteousness.

The perils of this policy, which have been so eloquently portrayed by such political magnates as Senator George F. Hoar, of Massachusetts, are, in our judgment, to a large extent imaginary. Progress always finds obstacles in its pathway. With every innovation upon time-honored customs, traditions and usages, a crimson danger-signal is unfurled to the breeze, and fogyism shouts itself hoarse in trying to call a halt. But the car of progress moves gloriously on, the danger-signal is, after a while, taken down, and the shouters find better employment. A few years since Massachusetts floated danger-signals upon every hill-top, and shouted herself hoarse in opposition to the purchase of Louisiana, which, as all well-informed persons know, included a large part of the territory between the Mississippi river and the Pacific Ocean—territory which now includes many of the most prosperous States of the Union. Every prophecy of evil made by Senator Hoar concerning our present trend in the direction of what he is pleased to call "Imperialism" can be more than matched by similar croakings from Boston and other New England centres when the "Louisiana purchase" was a live question in American politics.

But the predicted perils did not come. Westward the star of civilization made its way. The croakers died, and the nation entered upon an era of prosperity such as the wildest imagination had never dreamed of. Massachusetts raised a similar howl over the annexation of Texas and California and the other territory acquired by means of the Mexican war. Channing's works furnish some fine specimens of the lugubrious prophesyings of New England culture at that period. But the second crop of croakers died, and the nation still lives and flourishes. So we believe it will be in this case. Following "the right as God gives us to see the right," we will govern these degraded tribes in such a way as to develop in them those elements of civilization which will fit them for self government. In this work the church of Christ has an important part to perform. We have said that the inhabitants of these isles of the sea are at present incapable of self-government. Not only is this the case, but it is also true that they never will reach this high estate until they are Christianized. It may be said that the Philippinos are already Christians. Of course, such a statement applies only to a fraction of the populace; the tribes in the interior being Mohammedans. And most of those that are called Christians are about as properly so called as a pig would be after being sprinkled with holy water.

The Philippinos have been baptized by a Romish priest; they are required to pay taxes for the support of the church, and to observe certain ecclesiastical festivals. Aside from this, they have little more claim to the name "Christian" than does "the heathen Chinee." In none of the realms of Paganism is the gospel of Christ more needed. Give them Christianity in its purity, and civilization will follow. Upon this subject Hon. John T. Morgan, United States Senator from Alabama, has some wise words in a recent issue of the New York Independent. We quote as follows: "The foundations of all American governments are laid upon the teachings and sanctions of the Christian creed, which are thus bed-rock principles. In Asia and Africa the dominant creeds are anti-Christian, and where Christianity is not, republican institutions at this day are impossible. This Christian creed and free government, based upon the sovereignty of the people, are necessary associates in that highest development which qualifies a people for the full enjoyment of liberty regulated by law. The Asiatic peoples now have no apparent aspirations that can lead them up to this high plane of excellence, and they will not be animated with such desires and purposes until they have accepted the truth revealed in the Bible as the law of moral, social, and governmental control. Until far greater progress is made by the Asiatics in this direction, the introduction of our plan of free government among them will be premature. The Christian missionary, and not the soldier or the legislator, has been, and will be, the harbinger of free republican institutions, and we must wait upon their pioneer work to prepare the foundations of free institutions, and must protect them while they labor. Christianity is militant, but it wages war with the sword of the Spirit, and calls for the aid of governments and armies only when it suffers persecution. If the government of the United States plants its flag in authority, civil or military, at any place in the world, it is bound, by its Constitution, to decree the freedom of religion. Under that decree there can be no doubt that the Christian creed will ultimately become the foundation of the law of the land."

So sure are the American people that our government will put an end to the barbarities of Spanish rule in the Philippines and adjacent groups that the great, leading churches of the land are making preparations for the establishment of missions there. In the North the Methodists, the Baptists, the Presbyterians and the Congregationalists have already taken steps in this direction. Other churches will doubtless follow their example in the near future. So, the Spanish war, like the late China-Japanese war, will prepare the way for the furtherance of the gospel.

THE MONEY WILL BE REFUNDED.

When our issue of last week went to press we had not seen the full text of the report of the Senatorial Investigating Committee, but only a brief summary of it contained in the New Orleans dailies. We have since seen a fuller report, from which we make the following extract: "If these denials of the existence of a contract had not been made to the Senate from a source which was entitled to entire credit, the bill would not have been passed by the Senate, unless it had been so amended as to protect the beneficiaries from what many Senators regarded as a waste and improper use of the fund by the payment of an excessive and unreasonable fee."

This report having been adopted by the Senate, our Bishops stand pledged to "take the proper steps to have the entire amount returned to the government." The question is, therefore, settled. The money will be refunded at the earliest possible moment. We stated in our last issue that this will have to be done by the General Conference. Before the last General Conference met, the Book Committee could have taken such action; but the General Conference, having adopted the Book Committee's report, the General Conference is the only body that has power to take such action. Is it necessary, however, to wait four years? The college of Bishops has authority to CALL A SESSION OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Is not the present exigency such as to justify them in the exercise of this prerogative? This question we answer most unhesitatingly in the affirmative. Perhaps, however, the Bishops may think it best that the call should emanate from the Annual Conferences. If so, the call can be issued by the first of January, as nearly all the Conferences will have been held before that time. A majority of the Conferences is sufficient to make the call.

P. S.—Since the above was put in type we have received the following:

At a meeting held in the lecture-room of McKendree Church, Nashville, July 12, 1898, the following action was taken by the delegation of the Tennessee Conference concerning the collection of the Publishing House claim:

We, the undersigned delegates, representing the Tennessee Annual Conference, hereby give our hearty approval to the recommendation contained in the paper signed and sent forth by the Bishops of our church, proposing the return of the money recently paid to our Book Agents by the United States Congress on the conditions mentioned by the Bishops.

We further recommend that Senator Bate be requested to present said proposition to the Senate of the United States in such a way that it may find place on the pages of the "Congressional Record," and that he do it at the earliest possible opportunity.

2. After waiting for full light, and after carefully weighing all the facts, we are bound, in all good conscience, in the name of the church, to protest against the arguments made and conclusions reached as announced by the Book Committee in their official defense of the conduct of the Book Agents as regards the letters and telegrams sent to Senators.

3. Whereas the college of Bishops has given the following assurance, "that if the Senate, by affirmative action, declares that the passage of the bill was due to . . . misleading statements, we will take proper steps to have the entire amount returned to the government;" And, whereas, the Senate Committee has declared that "during the week before the bill passed, rumors became current in the Senate that a contract existed between the Book Agents and Mr. Stahlman, whereby the latter was to receive a large amount and an exorbitant fee for services rendered by him in connection with its passage, and a number of Senators applied to the Book Agents, Barbee & Smith, and Mr. Stahlman to ascertain the facts in the case. Some of these Senators saw Mr. Stahlman in person, and received from him assurances in positive language that left them under the impression that no contract whatever existed between him and the Book Agents relating to fee. . . . They were deceived and misled. . . . The Book Agents authorized —— Senators to deny the report; and, having absolute confidence in the candor and integrity of these gentlemen, the Senators accepted their telegrams as frank and honest, and assurances based on them were made that there was no foundation for the report of an agreement to pay a large proportion of the proposed appropriation to a claim agent or attorney. No candid man who examines this correspondence can reach any other conclusion than that the subject of the inquiry was the existence of such a contract, and not the percentage that an attorney was to receive. The replies of the Book Agents to this letter and telegram make it manifest that the policy of silence with reference to the contract was maintained to the end, even to the extent of withholding the truth and misleading and deceiving those who made an earnest effort to obtain it;" therefore,

Resolved, That we request the college of Bishops to call an extra session of the General Conference at the earliest date practicable, that action may be had on all issues involved.

Another delegate, Col. E. W. The only other delegate, Dr. Baskerville, is absent in Colorado.

AT THE ALABAMA CHAUTAUQUA.

In accordance with an engagement made some time since, we recently visited the Alabama Chautauqua at Talladega. We reached Talladega about noon on Thursday, the seventh. In the afternoon we heard a lecture on "The Fool-Killer," by Rev. Mr. Hall, a professional lecturer. It was highly entertaining, and contained much wholesome counsel interspersed according to the prevailing lecture fashion, with wit, humor and anecdote. At night, in spite of rain and muddy streets, a good audience assembled and listened attentively to what we had to say. The Alabama Chautauqua is the only Chautauqua we know of that is domiciled in a town. The tabernacle, which has a seating capacity of two thousand, or more, is in the very heart of Talladega—a city having a population of about five thousand. The citizens of the place take great interest in the Chautauqua. The secretary, Mr. Wellington Vandiver, has been abundant in labors in behalf of the institution. Talladega is the seat of two important State institutions—the Blind Asylum and the Deaf and Dumb Institute. The grounds of the latter are beautiful in the extreme. We had the pleasure of making this institution our home for two or three days at the time of our former visit to this Chautauqua, three years ago.

We were pleased to meet again, after a lapse of several years, Rev. V. O. Hawkins, who is now stationed at Talladega. We would have been glad to accept his very cordial invitation to stay over and fill his pulpit on Sunday, but duty called us home. We had also the good fortune to meet our old friends, Dr. Newman, presiding elder of the Birmingham district, and his excellent wife.

During our stay in Talladega we enjoyed the cordial hospitalities of Dr. S. M. Hosmer, presiding elder of the Talladega district, and his interesting family.

With five German warships facing Admiral Dewey's fleet at Manilla, and the intentions of the German Kaiser still a matter of some doubt, the leading article presented in The Cosmopolitan for July will be read with interest. The forty-six portraits and poses of the Emperor William which illustrate the article are in themselves an extraordinary exhibit. They might be described as "The Evolution of an Emperor Shown by Forty-six Human Documents." Undoubtedly so large a number of portraits were never before gathered together of any royal or imperial personage.

A NEW BOOK.

LIFE AND WORK OF LUCINDA B. HELM. By Arabel W. Alexander. Barbee & Smith, Nashville, Tenn. 1898. Price, $1.

By courtesy of the publishers the above-named work lies upon our table. It is a well-gotten-up 12 mo. of 178 pages. Lucinda B. Helm was the originator of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of our church. To this society she gave years of arduous labor. To her, more than to any other person, the church is indebted for the large results which have been accomplished through its instrumentality. Her life and work are, therefore, a part of the history of the church. Mrs. Alexander has done her work admirably. The work is well arranged, and the literary execution is worthy of high praise. The story of so noble a life can not fail to do great good. We bespeak for it an extensive circulation.

NOTES.

We regret to learn of the illness of Rev. J. F. Wynn.

We regret to have missed a call recently from Rev. W. W. Drake, of the Louisiana Conference.

Miss Suzie Lyons has been appointed organizer for the Woman's Home Mission Society. See notice of the secretary.

Dr. J. W. Roberts, of the North Georgia Conference, now stationed in Atlanta, has been elected president of Wesleyan Female College.

With this issue the controversy on Conference examinations closes. Other matter on the subject is in hand, but the Supreme Court has ruled against its publication.

Dr. Whitsett, president of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville, Ky., has resigned in the interest of peace and harmony and the prosperity of the institution.

An esteemed correspondent writes: "Everyone here is charmed with the brilliant editorials of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. The articles, 'At the Nation's Capital,' and 'Gladstone,' were exceptionally good."

In our issue of last week, in speaking of the successor of Rev. H. R. Singleton as pastor of Jackson, La., station, we said Dr. C. Wesley Carter, when we should have said Dr. Charles W. Carter, that being the name by which the distinguished divine is best known in these parts.

Bro. Henry Ware died at his home in Pass Christian, Miss., on the ninth, in his eighty-fifth year. He was an ardent Methodist, and a liberal supporter of the church. He was widely known in temperance circles, having been for many years a diligent worker for both State and National Prohibition. He was a man of strong convictions and invincible purpose. No one was ever in doubt as to his attitude on any question of importance. He has "fought a good fight," and now rests in peace.

In a recent diocesan address Bishop F. D. Huntingdon thus spoke of the present war: "So far as the motive of the war is humane, it presents a spectacle of national altruism well-nigh unprecedented in history. Nobody but fools can expect it to be ended till the Spanish despotism is broken. Nobody but fiends can wish it to be prolonged. Nobody but atheists can doubt that it will be overruled by Almighty God. Nobody but traitors can refuse to share patriotically its sacrifices."

When Sampson sent his famous Fourth-of-July dispatch, in which he claimed all the glory of the capture of Cervera and the destruction of his fleet, without even mentioning the name of Schley as a participant in the contest, he doubtless supposed that he was twining new laurels about his own brow; but he was mistaken. The whole civilized world now knows that it was Schley who did the work, Sampson being too far away to issue a single command, or participate in the engagement in any way whatsoever. Such an act stamps the perpetrator of it as a man of contemptible littleness of soul, no matter what may be his rank.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

To the Preachers of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences—

BRETHREN: I will appreciate the kindness if yon will send me as soon as practicable the names of persons in yonr charges to whom yon think it wonld be well to send catalogues of Millsaps College. Absence from home when many of the District Conferences were held prevented me from nsing these occasions for distributing our catalogues. Yon see, therefore, the importance of this request. If it is not convenient for you to attend to this at once, I respectfnlly suggest that yon get some yonng man who may be interested to send the names. It will only involve the cost of a postal card. It is important for us to have this information as soon as possible, as it will indicate the sections where we can do the most effective work in canvassing for stndents.

W. B. MURRAH,
President Millsaps College.

Jackson, Miss., July 16, 1898.

NOTES.

The Polytechnic College, Fort Worth, Texas, is worthy of the attention of all who are interested in the particnlar kind of edncational work in which it is engaged. The Sonth is far behind other sections of the conntry in regard to technological edncation. This institntion, though recently established, is admirably equipped. Read the ad. and write to Dr. Lloyd for a catalogue.

We invite attention to the ad. of Blue Mountain Female College. This institntion has been for years enjoying great prosperity. Notwithstanding the yellow fever excitement and the consequent quarantine restrictions, it had an enrollment last session of 236 pnpils, 173 of them being boarders. Forty-nine counties in Mississippi were represented, and six other States. The proprietors are Baptists, bnt the school is not denominational.

The North Texas Female College, under the presidency of Mrs. Key, wife of Bishop Joseph S. Key, has grown to be one of the mammoth schools of the Sonth. Its gronnds are beautiful, and the buildings admirably adapted to the purpose which they serve. No expense is spared in securing teaching talent, or in furnishing the needed equipments of any kind. For further information see ad. in another colnmn.

The ad. of Whitworth College will attract the attention of those who are interested in female education. This institution, the property of the Mississippi Conference, has an illustrions history. Its alnmnæ are found in all sections of the South. It has spacious, well-constructed buildings, and is admirably furnished. It has an able facnlty and superior facilities for edncational work. Writo to President Chambers for a catalogne.

East Mississippi Female College spreads an attractive ad. before our readers. The snccess of this school under the present administration has been very remarkable. It had 325 students last session. It has a teaching force of twenty-six, selected with great care with an eye to efficiency in class work. The president invites correspondence with those who have danghters to edncate.

NATCHEZ DISTRICT CONFERENCE will be held at Centorville, beginning July 26, at 2 P.M. A full attendance of ministers and lay delegates is desired and expected.

RAYNE MEMORIAL CHURCH.

MR. EDITOR: I notice in Bro. Thomson's Missionary Report in this week's ADVOCATE, that Rayne Memorial Church is credited with $10.00. The figures should be $210.00. I am pleased to report that the whole assessment of about $385.00 has been subscribed, and, as soon as the remaining subscriptions are paid, the balance of $175.00 will be handed to Bro. Thomsen. It is well to state that the Rayne Memorial assessments are much higher this year than heretofore. Several other of the Conference collections have also been subscribed, and the liberal spirit of the membership indicates that all assessments will be fully met.

BELHAVEN COLLEGE.

SOMETHING OF THIS WELL-KNOWN INSTITUTION OF LEARNING.

Special attention is called to the advertisement of this well-known institntion for the higher edncation of young women. Although yonng in years, it has already forged its way to the very front rank of the best colleges for girls in the Sonth It occupies a nniqne position among the other colleges in this State. It is a private institntion, owned and controlled exclusively by President Fitzhngh, whose work as an edncator in the University of Mississippi and other prominent schools in this State is well known. It is nndenominational and nnsectarian. Its nnmber of boarders is limited to fifty. So that each boarder receives more individnal care and attention. It has a high curricnlnm. Its facnlty is composed of teachers trained in the best universities and conservatories of this conntry and Enrope. Its site is one of the most beantifnl and pictnresqne to be found anywhere in the South. Its buildings are new and furnished with every modern comfort and convenience. Its health record is phenomenal. Its conrse in music and elocntion is so thorongh and the standard so high that its gradnates enter without trouble the senior class of New England Conservatory, and so far have taken the highest rank of any girls from the Sonth. Belhaven College is the pride of the whole State. It is first-class in all its appointments and is worthy of the best patronage.—Clarion Ledger, Jackson, Miss.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD.

OF INTEREST TO STOCKHOLDERS.

FREE TRANSPORTATION TO ATTEND THE ANNUAL MEETING AT CHICAGO. SOME INTERESTING FACTS.

In order that stockholders of the Illinois Central Railroad Company may more readily attend in person the annual meetings, there has been posted in each station of the Company a notice to the effect that, in accordance with a resolve of the Board of Directors, there may be issued to each holder of one or more shares of the capital stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, as registered on the books of the Company, a ticket enabling him or her to travel free over the Company's lines from the station of the Illinois Central Railroad nearest to his or her registered address, to Chicago and return, for the purpose of attending, in person, the next Annual Stockholders' Meeting of the Company, which will be held at its General Office in Chicago on Wednesday, September 28, 1898, at noon. Details as to the necessary procedure to obtain such ticket, the date of its issue and its limit, are fully set forth on the posted notices referred to. In this connection, it will be interesting to note that since, in 1862, the capital stock of the Company became full paid, a cash dividend, ranging from 4 per cent. to 10 per cent. per annum has been paid semi-annually to every holder of stock, and that it is now twenty years since the Company, in any year, paid less than 5 per cent., the present rate of distribution.

Niagara Vapor Baths.

We are the original manufacturers of portable Vapor Baths.
We have during the last ten years, supplied thousands of our Baths to physicians, hospitals, sanitariums, etc., and we are now, for the first time, advertising them direct to the general public.
IN BUYING A VAPOR BATH Get one with a steel frame that stands on the floor. If a manufacturer does not show you a cut of the frame without the covering, you may take it for granted that his "Steel Frame" is a wire hoop that rests on the shoulders of the bather.
Get one that is covered with proper material. Insist on seeing a sample of material before ordering. We make our own covering material and print it with a handsome "all over" pattern of Niagara Falls.
Get one with a thermometer attachment. Don't go it blind—a bath that is too hot or not hot enough will be of no benefit to you.
Get one that you can return and have your money back if not satisfactory in every way.
Send for sample of material and interesting booklet that will tell you all about Vapor Baths.
Vapor Baths are an acknowledged household necessity. Turkish, Hot Air, Vapor, Sulphur or Medicated Baths at Home, &c. Purifies system, produces cleanliness, health, strengths Prevents disease, obesity. Cures Colds, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, La Grippe, Malaria, Eczema, Catarrh, Female Ills, Blood, Skin, Nerve and Kidney Troubles. Beautifies Complexion.

GRAYBEARD

WE make 200 bottles of our GRAYBEARD every week. No more—no less. If 200 bottles don't fill all orders, some customer must wait until the next week. We mention this as some do not understand the delay. We have earned a reputation for making a clean, fresh, sure remedy for Cancer—Eczema, Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and we cannot make GRAYBEARD faster, and make it good.

"A few years ago Cancer appeared on my face in form of a scab—not a sore, but a scab that dropped off, and soon reappeared, some worse. Finally it annoyed me to shave. Darting pains set in, affecting my sight. People said I had Cancer—I was miserable. About that time a planter name Jordan, down the State, once similarly afflicted, sent me a bottle of GRAYBEARD advising me to take it. I did so and to my great joy got better. Skin cleared, appetite improved, I got stouter and Cancer left me. And it has not returned. GRAYBEARD saved my life.
Joseph Barnes, Taylor County, Ga."

WHEN I HAVE TIME.

When I have time, so many things I'll do
To make life happier and more fair
For those whose lives are crowded now with care;
I'll help to lift them from their deep despair.
When I have time.

When I have time, the friend I love so well
Shall know no more these weary, toiling days;
I'll lead her feet in pleasant paths always,
And cheer her heart with words of sweetest praise,
When I have time.

When you have time! The friend you hold so dear
May be beyond the reach of your sweet intent;
May never know that you so kindly meant
To fill her life with sweet content,
When you had time.

Now is the time! Ah, friend! no longer wait
To scatter loving smiles and words of cheer
To those around whose lives are now so dear:
They may not meet you in the coming year—
Now is the time!

THOUGHTS FOR YOUNG MEN.

In this country, most young men are poor. Time is the rock from which they are to hew out their fortunes; and health, enterprise and integrity the instruments with which to do it. For this, diligence in business, abstinence from pleasures, privation of everything that does not endanger health, are to be joyfully welcomed and borne. When we look around us, and see how much of the wickedness of the world springs from poverty, it seems to sanctify all honest efforts for the acquisition of an independence; but when an independence is acquired, then comes the moral crisis, then comes an Ithuriel test, which shows whether a man is higher than a common man, or lower than a common reptile. In the duty of accumulation—and I call it a duty, in the most strict and literal signification of that word—all below a competence is most valuable, and its acquisition most laudable; but all above a fortune is a misfortune. It is a misfortune to him who amasses it; for it is a voluntary continuance in the harness of a beast of burden, when the soul should enfranchise and lift itself up into a higher region of pursuits and pleasures. It is a persistence in the work of providing goods for the body after the body has already been provided for; and it is a denial of the higher demands of the soul, after the time has arrived and the means are possessed of fulfilling those demands. . . . Because the lower service was once necessary, and has therefore been performed, it is a mighty wrong when, without being longer necessary, it usurps the sacred rights of the higher.—Horace Mann.

The hair

is like a plant. What makes the plant fade and wither? Usually lack of necessary nourishment. The reason why Dr. Ayer's Hair Vigor restores gray or faded hair to its normal color, stops hair from falling, and makes it grow, is because it supplies the nourishment the hair needs.

"When a girl at school, in Reading, Ohio, I had a severe attack of brain fever. On my recovery, I found myself perfectly bald and, for a long time, I feared I should be permanently so. Friends urged me to use Dr. Ayer's Hair Vigor, and, on doing so, my hair immediately began to grow, and I now have as heavy and fine a head of hair as one could wish for, being changed, however, from blonde to dark brown."—Mrs. J. H. HORSNYDER, 152 Pacific Ave., Santa Cruz, Cal.

Ayer's Hair Vigor.

SELF-RELIANCE.

Henry Ward Beecher used to tell this story of the way in which his teacher of mathematics taught him to depend upon himself:

"I was sent to the blackboard, and went, uncertain, full of whimpering.

"'That lesson must be learned,' said my teacher, in a very quiet tone, but with a terrible intensity. All explanations and excuses he trod under foot with utter scornfulness. 'I want that problem; I don't want any reasons why you haven't it,' he would say.

"'I did study two hours.'

"'That's nothing to me; I want the lesson. You need not study it at all, or you may study it ten hours, just to suit yourself. I want the lesson.'

"It was tough for a green boy; but it seasoned me. In less than a month I had the most intense sense of intellectual independence and courage to defend my recitations.

"One day his cold, calm voice fell upon me in the midst of a demonstration, 'No.'

"I hesitated, and then went back to the beginning, and on reaching the same point again, 'No!' uttered in a tone of conviction, barred my progress.

"'The next'—and I sat down in red confusion.

"He, too, was stopped with 'No!' but went right on, finished and, as he sat down, was rewarded with 'Very well.'

"'Why,' whimpered I, 'I recited it just as he did, and you said "No!"'

"'Why didn't you say "Yes," and stick to it? It is not enough to know your lesson; you must know that you know it. You have learned nothing until you are sure. If all the world says "No," your business is to say "Yes" and prove it.'"—Ram's Horn.

PUSH.

A boy walked into a London merchant's office in search of a situation. After being put through a series of questions by the merchant, he was asked: "Well, my lad, what is your motto?" "Same as yours, sir," he replied. "Same as you have on your door—push." He was engaged.—Sparc Moments.

Hygiene.

LONGEVITY.

In all ages and in all lands people have tried to arrest the decay of the body. The Egyptians used amulets and astronomy; the Greeks believed in athletic exercises, the Romans in athletic exercises, bathing and rubbing the body. Both Greeks and Romans believed that life was prolonged by inhaling the effluvia of youth, and that the old were benefited by sleeping with children. The Alchemists from their alembics and crucibles distilled their life-giving elixir, and the astrologist drew from the stars of heaven some means of avoiding diseases and danger, while for the same purpose priests offered sacrifices to the gods and distributed amulets and charms which were to protect their wearers from all harm. Methuselah lived 969 years, according to ancient chronology, which would be about 242 of our years. Abraham died at 175 years, Isaac at 180, Jacob at 110, Moses at 120, Aaron at 123, and Mary at 150. Among the Greeks, Epimenides reached the ripe old age of 299. This is no doubt fabled—no one believes it now. There were many fables concerning this Greek poet; one was that he once slept 57 years, and when he woke up he was like our Rip Van Winkle, but he differed from Van Winkle in his habits; he then studied and became very learned. It is said he once stayed the plague in Athens as by magic, but this also is doubtful. Hypocrates lived 109, Anacreon, Thucidides and Plato 80, and Democritus 109 years. According to United States census of 1880, one million people had passed the age of 70 years, while 4,000 were over 100 years. The census of 1860 showed only 1,174 who were over 100 years.

In my opinion it is not a wise ambition to desire to live to be very old. Length of life consists not in the number of summers and winters which you can count, so much as in the good work you do, in your achievements. We all feel that we live in certain brief periods of hours or even minutes more than years of the common routine of eating and sleeping. A man who is always examining his pulse, and looking at his tongue, measuring his arms and his chest, and spends his time in considering his symptoms, and whose thoughts are all upon his own physical welfare, and whose highest aspiration is to look out with his sleepy eyes upon the world for nearly a century, may technically be long-lived, but in truth he may have less life than another man who in some grand effort for the good of his fellowmen achieves in a single year more than the other in his century of eating, breathing and sleeping.—Dio Lewis.

BED RIDDEN.

MANSFIELD, LA.

I have been affected with rheumatism and general prostration for 14 months, being bedridden the most of the time and not able to dress myself. A lump formed on my liver that showed externally the size of an egg and was treated by several physicians during the time without any relief being obtained. At last I was told it was necessary to have an operation performed to save my life. Several physicians had pronounced my case hopeless. I was reduced to a mere skeleton. I met a friend who had an Electropoise who prevailed on me to wear it. I did so. The second day I was able to get up and dress myself. I sent and bought a Polse; have used it now six weeks and have increased in weight over 30 pounds. All pains and enlargements have disappeared. MRS. S. T. PUTTS.

SPINAL TROUBLE.

SHREVEPORT, LA., April 9, 1894.

Dear Sirs: I bought a pocket Electropoise the 1st of February for my little boy, who had spinal trouble caused by a fall about three years ago. When I got the Electropoise my son could not walk; in fact, he was paralyzed from his hips down. He had not put his foot on the floor since last October. He was badly drawn, and could not even sit in a chair. We kept him in bed most of the time, and when he wanted to get up had to make him a pallet on the floor. His legs were so stiff we could hardly bend them, and after bending had to straighten them out again. His little body was in the shape of a half moon, and he could not even turn over in bed. I applied the instrument, and when reaction set in he could stand up by the bed by holding on. This was the first time his feet had touched the floor for seven months. I have not used any medicine or even rubbed my little boy while using the Electropoise. There are many skeptics, and I am one myself, but will have to give way in regard to the Electropoise and proclaim it the grandest invention of the age. Yours gratefully,

R. A. CALHOUN.

THE BOOK AGENTS AND THE WAR CLAIM.

As stated in a previous issue, we declined to publish articles about the Book Agents and the War Claim until after the Senatorial Committee had ended its labors and the Book Committee had made its report. In our last week's issue we gave the report of the Book Committee in full. We have since received the following resolutions passed by the Columbus (Miss.) District Conference at its session a few days since:

Whereas, It has been charged by Senators upon the floor of the United States Congress that they were misled by misrepresentations of Barbee & Smith, Book Agents of the M. E. Church, South, and E. B. Stahlman, attorney, in regard to the amount of commissions to be paid E. B. Stahlman for his services in securing the appropriation of $288,000 for use and abuse of our Publishing House by the Federal authorities during the Civil War; therefore, be it Resolved, By the Columbus district of the North Mississippi Annual Conference, that if our Book Agents, Barbee & Smith, knew that the contract existed to pay E. B. Stahlman 35 per cent. of our claim then pending before Congress when they, in reply to telegrams and letters from Senators Bate and Pasco asking for authority to deny that they were to pay "40 per cent. or any other fee," did authorize the denial, then we condemn and repudiate the action of Barbee & Smith and E. B. Stahlman, attorney; and it is the sense of this District Conference that Barbee & Smith should at once vacate the positions they now hold, and if they do not voluntarily do so, steps should be taken at once to remove them.

Resolved, That if it is true, as charged by Rev. Jno. D. Vinnil, D. D., in the St. Louis Christian Advocate, that the facts were known at the late session of the General Conference at Baltimore, and were "smothered" by designing men, the light should be turned on and the guilty party exposed.

Resolved, That the entire amount of $288,000 be returned to the government, not because we do not believe in the righteousness of our cause, but because of the methods used in securing its payment.

Resolved, That the Nashville Christian Advocate, NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, Memphis and New Orleans papers be requested to publish these resolutions.

Our church at Oxford, Miss., passed similar resolutions, and forwarded them before the Senatorial Committee had made its report. We did not publish them then, but give them here, omitting the preamble, which covers about the same ground as the Columbus district preamble:

Resolved, By said M. E. Church, South, at Oxford, Miss., in Church Conference assembled, that, in the opinion of said Conference, the $177,200 remaining of said appropriation, after the payment to said E. B. Stahlman of $100,800, should at once be returned to the United States treasury, to be credited to the fund from which it was taken, or to such other fund as the United States authorities may see proper to place it; and that the said sum of $100,800 paid said Stahlman should likewise be returned by the church as aforesaid as soon as the same can be had from the funds of the church or from the membership thereof throughout the country.

Resolved, That we take this method of informing those in charge of the affairs of the church at large of our unqualified disapproval of the idea of keeping and using for the church this money, which we think was obtained by deceptive methods; even though upon a claim which we believe to be just and proper.

Resolved, That the resignation of any and all church officials responsible for the deception be demanded, and trial be instituted.

Resolved, That a copy of this preamble and these resolutions be forwarded to Bishop Joseph S. Key, at Sherman, Texas, with request that the subject matter to which they pertain be brought to the attention of the college of Bishops at the earliest practicable moment; and that to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and the Nashville Christian Advocate, each, a copy be forwarded, with request to publish.

Among the articles sent for publication on this subject some time since was the following from Rev. T. L. Mellan, of the Mississippi Conference. Our columns being crowded, we abridge Bro. Mellen's article by omitting the first part, in which he admits the justice of the claim and the right of the Book Agents to employ Major Stahlman or any other agent to represent the Publishing House. Thus abridged, his article is as follows:

"And, I presume, no one will deny that it was a piece of impertinence for United States Senators to be inquiring into the nature of the contract, or how much was paid the agent, or agreed to be paid the agent. It was simply none of their business. Either the claim was just and legal, or it was unjust and illegal. If unjust and illegal, it ought not to have been paid; if just and legal, the contract with Stahlman had nothing to do with the payment of the debt, so far as the government or the United States Senators were concerned. But when the Senators did inquire about the contract between Barbee & Smith and Major Stahlman, had Barbee & Smith any right in law, nor conscience or morals to deny the existence of the contract, and telegraph a falsehood to Senator Pasco or Senator Bate? That's the question. There lies the scandal. A Jesuit might answer that question in the affirmative; a true Methodist, never. That falsehood taints the whole transaction, and brings shame upon our whole church. I am firmly convinced that, notwithstanding that money was lawfully and equitably due to the M. E. Church, South, yet, because of the falsehood telegraphed by Barbee & Smith, and without which the money might never have been paid, every cent of the $280,000 ought to be returned to the treasury of the United States. The Methodist Church can not afford to obtain payment of just debts by falsehood or misrepresentation. T. L. MELLEN."

Several other communications have been received on the same subject, but, as they simply cover the same ground as Bro. Mellen's article, we do not deem it necessary to publish them. Our Bishops are pledged to procure the refunding of the money if the United States Senate shall declare that the appropriation would not have been made but for the telegrams and letters of our Book Agents.

DENHAM—JOE BUGGESS DENHAM was born Jan. 12, 1875, and died May 1, 1898. Our young friend joined the church at the Black Water appointment, on the East Baton Rouge circuit, in his seventeenth year. Ever after he was true to his vows, a faithful and regular attendant upon the services of his church. He was an obedient and devoted son, a thoughtful and considerate brother. He was never known to be wild or profane, even before joining the church. Friendly in disposition, though modest and retiring, those who knew him were always struck by his kindly nature. He had been an exceptionally devoted son to his mother, and taught by his short life this lesson of devotion and obedience. In his last illness his mother asked him if he was willing to die, and the response was, he was ready and willing to go. No doubt he had an entrance to that glorious realm where the good rest from their labors in perfect bliss. Though short his life—only twenty-three years—yet, as he was ready, it is far above that life which has passed its threescore, then goes down without hope. So our young friend had the true wisdom, and is now wining the compensations of that choice of the Lord and his service in preference to the pleasures of sin for a season. We expect to meet him on the other shore. May all his loved ones join him in that land of happiness with the Lord forevermore! We pray that the Comforter may give solace to his loved ones, and bind up the heart of his mother. JOE'S FORMER PASTOR.

TAYLOR—With sadness and joy commingled we chronicle the death of Miss SARAH ALABAMA TAYLOR. She was a fond daughter of H. J. and V. W. Taylor, of Winston county, Miss.; born Dec. 18, 1879. She gave her heart to God and membership to the Methodist Church about seven years ago, in which she lived until June 19, when she ascended to her heavenly home. Her meek life and bright mind won for her a host of admirers. Her recitals on Children's Days and other Sunday-school occasions gave her the applause of the people who heard her. Her unwavering kindness to the sick, her unbroken devotion to her parents, brothers and sisters, easily gave her an enviable place in the hearts of those who knew her. She was a great-granddaughter of the late James Box, of precious memory, of Alcorn county, Miss. We hope to meet her again. D. W. BABB.

HOPPER—Resolutions adopted by the Crawford Street M. E. Sunday-school, at Vicksburg, Miss., Sunday, July 3, 1898:

Whereas, It has pleased our heavenly Father, in the fullness of his divine wisdom, to remove from our midst our brother, W. A. HOPPER, for many years an efficient teacher in this school; therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we deeply mourn our loss, and shall greatly miss his ever-faithful and earnest work in our Sunday-school and church, we rejoice with him in his translation from the church militant here upon earth to the church triumphant in our Father's kingdom, convinced that the Lord, who doeth all things well, hath used of him. To his afflicted family we tender our heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement, with the full assurance that in a little time they will meet with him again where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest. With the community at large we can but join our grief. In his death our city has lost an able and honest official, and a man of sterling worth, the rectitude of whose character and whose manly deposition was an example to all of the vains of a Christian life.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the Minutes of the Sunday-school, that a copy be furnished by the secretary to the family of our deceased brother, and that a copy be sent the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE with a request for publication.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

A cablegram from Admiral Dewey announced the capture of thirteen hundred Spaniards and requested sixty thousand pounds of soap.

Nearly 60,000 of the 75,000 volunteers asked for by the President in his second call for troops have been recruited and most of them have been mustered into service.

The expressed intention of the administration to make the invasion of Porto Rico the next important step in the prosecution of the war with Spain has naturally attracted attention to an island of which, hitherto, little was known.

Watson's fleet will sail for Spain next Saturday. The "Oregon" will be the flagship. He will reach the Canaries Aug. 1. Watson's fleet will include the "Oregon," "Massachusetts," "Newark," "Yankee," "Dixie," "Yosemite" and six colliers and a supply ship.

There is every prospect that every United States sailor, marine and petty officer on the vessels assisting in so completely smashing Spain's naval power will be officially presented with a medal of honor in token of their nation's appreciation of their gallantry.

War Department officials are giving the major portion of their attention to the adoption of strict measures for the protection of our troops from yellow fever and from low tropical fevers. The department has decided to remove the troops at Santiago at the earliest possible moment to the country in the rear of that city.

Captain-General Blanco at Havana will be deprived of all means of communication with his government at Madrid except through a strict censor when the American army formally takes possession of Santiago. There can be no doubt on this question, as Gen. Shafter will direct immediately on taking charge of the city that American operators be placed in telegraph office there. The signal officers will maintain a censorship of writing that is offered for transmission from Havana over the cable leading to Hayti, or to Jamaica, and nothing will be permitted to be sent which is in any way injurious to the interests of this government.

Shortly after nine o'clock on Sunday morning the Spanish colors over the government building of Santiago de Cuba were hauled down and the Stars and Stripes run up to the accompaniment of an American cheer that fairly shook the structure to its foundation. The transfer from Spanish to American rule was accomplished without difficulty. The Spanish soldiers, acting under orders from General Toral, commander-in-chief, left the trenches and laid down their arms at a point agreed upon by the commissioners who arranged the terms of surrender. The conditions of capitulation include all forces and war material in described territory. The United States agrees with as little delay as possible to transport all Spanish troops in the district to the Kingdom of Spain, the troops, as far as possible, to embark near the garrison they now occupy. Officers are to retain their side arms and officers and men retain their personal property. The Spanish commander is authorized to take military archives belonging to the surrendered district. All Spanish forces known as volunteers, mobilizados and guerrillas, who wish to remain in Cuba, may do so under parole during present war, giving up their arms. The transportation of the Spanish prisoners to Spain will cost the United States $500,000.

General Miles, with the first detachment of troops for Porto Rico, sailed from the neighborhood of Santiago on Sunday.

Troops will be sent from Charleston, Tampa and Newport News, transports getting to sea as soon as possible, and not going out in great fleets, as did the first expedition to Santiago. It is believed that provision has been made to obviate delay, and the Porto Rico army of invasion, to be composed of 30,000 men or more, will be assembled in a brief period on West Indian soil. General Miles will go in chief command, with General Brooke next in rank.

CURES PAIN

North Texas Female College,

SHERMAN, TEXAS.

This College has just closed another most prosperous and pleasant session. The class of work done here the past session has been of the very highest order. Mrs. Key has just returned from Nashville and other Eastern points, where she inspected schools and school facilities, and feels more than satisfied with the N. T. F. C., and assures the girls of Louisiana and Texas that it is not necessary for them to go East to get the best educational advantages and enjoy the most refined aesthetic surroundings. Nowhere is there better work done or better facilities offered—earnest, able, conscientious teachers, new, full chemical and physical outfit; individual work in the laboratory required and performed by each member of the class.

LITERATURE.—Three years' course required in Literature—one in American and two in English.

MATHEMATICS.—The course in Mathematics is very complete, and thoroughly taught—higher than is taught in most female colleges.

LATIN.—The Latin course is unexcelled, and is the same as that in the best male colleges in the land.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC.—The Conservatory of Music is pre-eminently the best in the South. During the past session we have had pupils who studied under Sherwood, Carl Faelton, and other leading teachers of the East; also pupils from the New England and other conservatories. All of these pupils were more than satisfied with the advantages offered here. We feel sure that if those desiring the best musical advantages were cognizant of the ability and talent in this conservatory, they certainly would not leave the South. How can anyone expect to get a better piano teacher than Herr Von Mickwitz, who is personally recommended by the great Leschetizky as teacher and pianist?

SCHOOL OF ART. We are very fortunate in securing the services of Miss Frances Fowler as Art teacher. She was for six years teacher of Art in Wells College, and spent twelve years studying with the masters in Europe. She is a lady of the highest intelligence, and will deliver to the school monthly lectures on the subject of Art. Mrs. Holt personally inspected Miss Fowler's work in New York City last Summer, and she assures us that she has seen nothing like it in the South.

CAMPUS AND DORMITORIES. The Dormitories are well equipped and thoroughly comfortable. The campus is pronounced beautiful by all who see it, and it is certainly conducive to the aesthetic and refined. Nowhere will you find a lovelier home for your daughters.

SPECIAL REMARKS.—We have maintained the high standard and efficiency of this College regardless of the existing depression, knowing that the people of Texas and Louisiana will be slow to economize at the expense of the comfort and culture of their daughters. Appreciating the fact that the public are often deceived by misrepresentations of school catalogues and agents, we extend to all who have daughters to educate a hearty invitation to visit and inspect the N. T. F. C. for themselves. For catalogue, address

INFLUENCES OF COLLEGE LIFE.

One of the truly great women of the present day is Mrs. Alice Freeman Palmer, wife of Prof. G. H. Palmer, of Harvard University. She is an A. M. graduate of the University of Michigan. She was for ten years the president of Wellesley College, and it is to her genius that this institution is indebted for the high rank and great prosperity it now enjoys. The degree of Ph.D. has been conferred upon her by Michigan University. She is a member of the Massachusetts State Board of Education, and also a trustee of Wellesley College. Recently a "Success" reporter interviewed her on the subject of colleges and their work. Below we present her words just as they fell from her lips. This interview alone stamps her as a genius. A woman who can talk like that, offhand, has no superior for grasp of intellect and conversational power.

"What is the college doing for girls?"

"Everything. And, perhaps, not the least important of its achievements is that through its influence American girls themselves are becoming aware that they need the stimulus, the discipline, the knowledge, the interests of the college in addition to those of the school, if they are to prepare themselves for the most serviceable lives. It is worth a great deal to find out what one really needs."

"Supposing we take a broader view, what is it doing for the community,—the community which has the college-bred women as a factor?"

"I might make almost the same general reply,—everything. Of the two or three most important movements during the last quarter of the century, movements most important in their influence upon the changes in our social life, perhaps the very first is the changed ideal of education, and especially of the education of our daughters. Our sciences have changed, and our methods of teaching them have changed. Our work in languages is changed. The kindergarten has come across the sea to us, and lives among us, and we, the women of to-day,—you and I, for instance,—shall go down to our graves poorer women, because we were born too soon to train our hands and our eyes as our minds are trained. We went to school, many of us, through lovely country lanes when we were little girls, but no teacher asked us the names of the birds that were singing in the trees overhead, of the rocks or the flowers under our feet. We found the length of the rivers and the heights of the mountains, and called it science."

NOT ALL GIRLS ARE FITTED FOR COLLEGE.

"Should all girls have a college career?"

"No more than all boys,—yet they should go in greater numbers than at present. They have failed to go because they, their parents, and their teachers do not see clearly the personal benefits distinct from the commercial value of a college training. It is undoubtedly true that many girls are totally unfitted for a valuable college course. The college can not be, should not try to be, a substitute for the hospital, reformatory, or kindergarten. To do its best work, it should be organized for the strong, self-controlled, and courageous spirits, not for the dull, the idle, or those who are already forming their characters according to the theory that life is for amusement."

"Yet, in your experience, you doubtless have met such girls within college walls?"

"Yes, a few; and I must say, in justice to these girls, that, in spite of drawbacks of temperament and of earlier influences, they have, in their college life, obtained large benefit and invigoration, new ideals, and unselfish purposes from their four years' companionship with teachers and comrades of a higher physical, mental, and moral stature than their own. I have seen girls change so much in college that I have wondered if their friends at home would know them; the voice, the carriage, the unconscious manner telling a story of new tastes and habits and interests that had wrought out, in truth, a new nature. Yet she does not get all that the other girl, with high purpose and definite aim, receives. For it is the young life, which is open and prepared to receive, which feels the gracious and uplifting influences of college days in their fullness."

"What do you consider the best gift which a college bestows upon an earnest student?"

"Of course, it is understood that a college is pre-eminently a place of education. That is the ground of its being. We go to college to learn, assuming that knowlege is sweet and powerful, and that a good education emancipates the mind and makes us citizens of the world. But there are some collateral advantages.

"Since you have chosen to come to college, you must, perforce, accept college ways. The first of these collateral advantages is happiness. Of course, no idle person can possibly be happy, even for a day; nor she who makes a business of trying to amuse herself. For full happiness, though its springs are within, we want health and friends, and work, and objects of aspiration. 'We live by aspiration, hope, and love,' says Wordsworth. The college abounds in all these. An exhilarating atmosphere pervades the place.

"Yet a girl should not go to college merely to obtain four happy years, but to make a second gain which is often overlooked, and is little understood even when perceived. I mean a gain in health. The old notions that low vitality is a matter of course with women, that to be delicate is a mark of superior refinement, that sickness is a dispensation of Providence, meet no acceptance in the plan of the new education, and find no sympathy at college. With the spreading scientific conviction that health is a matter largely under each person's control, that even inherited tendencies to disease need not be allowed to run their riotous course unchecked, there comes an earnest purpose to be strong and free. The young student, with all she has to do, can not afford quivering nerves, small lungs or an aching head any more than bad taste, rough manners, or a weak will.

GOOD HEALTH A DUTY.

"Why, do you know that statistical investigation in this country and in England shows that the standard of health is higher among the women who hold college degrees than among any other equal number of the same age and class? And it is interesting also to observe to what sort of questions our recent girl graduates have been inclined to devote attention. They have been the neglected problems of little children and their health, of home sanitation, of food and its choice and preparation, of domestic service, and of the cleanliness of schools and public buildings."

"Do you believe in college friendships?"

"Indeed I believe in them. Until a girl goes away from home to school or college, her friends are chiefly chosen for her by circumstances. But the basis of all valuable and enduring friendships is not accident or juxtaposition, but taste, interest, habit, work, or ambition. It is for this reason that to college friendship clings a romance entirely its own. Charming manners, noble character, amiable temper, scholarly power, find their full opportunity and inspire such friendships as are seldom made afterwards. I have forgotten my chemistry, and my classical philology can not bear examination; but all round the world there are men and women at work, my intimates of college days, who have made this wide earth a friendly place for me.

"The fourth gift of college life is ideals of personal character. To some people the shaping ideals of what character should be, often held unconsciously, come from the books they read; but, to the majority, they are given by the persons they most admire before they are twenty years old. The greatest thing any friend or teacher, either in school or college, can do for a student, is to furnish him with a personal ideal."

"And after she has received these gifts, what then?"

"WHAT SHALL I DO WITH MY LIFE?"

"Unless there comes to her, and comes early, the one chief happiness of life—a marriage of comradeship—she must face for herself the question, 'What shall I do with my life?' Yet even if that which is the profession of women above all others be hers, how can she be perennially so interesting a companion to her husband and children as if she had keen personal tastes, long her own, and growing with her growth? And these a college training gives."

"Then if the girl is not to study a profession, has marked out no special career, but is to live her life in a quiet fashion, with every-day duties, every-day interests, you would still advocate a college life?"

"Most emphatically. To make 'drudgery divine,' a woman must have a brain to plan and eyes to see how to 'sweep a room as by God's law.' Imagination and knowledge should be the hourly companions of her who would make a fine art of each detail in kitchen and nursery. The smallest village, the plainest home, give ample space for the resources of the trained college woman. And the reason why such homes and such villages are so often barren of grace and society is just because the fine qualities have not ruled them. The higher graces of civilization halt; finished ways of living give way to common ways. Little children die in endless thousands because of the dull, unimaginative women upon whom they depend. Such women have been satisfied with 'just getting along,' instead of packing everything they do with brains, and studying the best possible way of doing small duties and large, for there always is a best way, whether of setting a table, trimming a hat, or teaching a child to read.

"I note a promising outlook for the future through the influence of the men and women who are being taught in the new way, by the new spirit. The scholar to-day is not a being who dwells apart in a cloister. He has an interest in people; he is a leader of the thoughts and conduct of men. So the new subjects which stand beside the classics and mathematics of mediæval culture are history, economics, ethics, and sociology. Although these subjects are as yet merely in the working, thousands of students are flocking to their investigation, and are going out to try their tentative knowledge in college settlements and city missions and children's art societies.

WORDS OF ENCOURAGEMENT.

"But do not think I am one of those who believe there is no good outside of college life and its influences. We all know those who have had no college training; who are as cultivated, resourceful, rational, and happy as any people on our list of acquaintances; who excel in every one of these particulars the college graduates about them. And we see also young men and women going through college deaf and blind to their great chances there, and afterwards curiously careless and wasteful of the best things in life. While this is true, it is true, too, that, to the open-minded and ambitious boy or girl of moderate health, ability, self-control, and studiousness, a college course offers the most attractive, easy, and probable way of securing happiness and health, good friends and high ideals, permanent interests of a noble kind, and large capacity for usefulness in the world."

Correspondence.

A DAY AT MONTEAGLE.

It is Saturday, which means at Monteagle no classes, and excursions on foot and by carriage-ways to the various points of scenic attraction on the mountain. Chief in interest is the Bridal Veil Falls, which was a thing of beauty after the recent heavy rains, the sparkling water dashing down the rocky palisades in sheets of jeweled spray into the natural amphitheatre below. Then Alpine view—the king of views—with its noble outlook, over beyond Missionary Ridge, veiled in a mist of purple shadows, and into seven States. Yet, for variety and picturesqueness, many prefer Cooley's Rift, and Winston's Cascade, and a goodly number, I see, have decided to drive over to Suwanee to-day. A gay company in sun-bonnets and parasols sally forth from the Alabama Home across the way. The Home is as bright as its inmates, and patriotic this Summer in trimmings of red and blue on a fresh dress of white paint. Prof. Hinds has kindly agreed to take the School of Expression with his own class on a botanical walk, and after that delightful experience one comes back inspired with a more intimate love of the mountains, the result of a closer acquaintance with the graceful features, the minute details of the landscape. Who would imagine there are thirty-two varieties of fern, and an endlessly prolific and diversified family of peas, in all gradations, from the beautiful butterfly pea to the fragrant, sensitive "shronkia," or "mimosa"—all within a radius of a half mile, or less.

Still another walking expedition, setting out from our cottage with a lofty purpose to study the wild beauty of the scenery, returns in a state of aggressive enthusiasm. They have had the honor of walking with no lesser personages than Miss Florence Hobson, the sweet-faced, gentle-voiced sister of our gallant Lieutenant Hobson, and who is our next-door neighbor, and the Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr. After that relaxation of informal intercourse with our young people, kodaking and being snapped, the inimitable speaker, whom Sam Jones described as "six feet high and six inches thick," delivered directly a most eloquent and thrilling address on "Cuba." This was pronounced by some the most matchless piece of oratory heard at Monteagle for years. The lecture surpassed the effort of the evening before, and while colored strongly, perhaps, by the speaker's wonderfully vivid imagination, painted in primary colors, so to speak, it gave the desired effect, like other works of impressionism. The ladies were ready to go en masse to the front in defense of the unhappy Pearl of the Antilles, or even to exterminate the remnant of haughty Dons and hidalgos of cruel Spain.

The concert in the afternoon by Fischer's Centennial Orchestra—the Rev. Dixon taking leave at the same hour—soothed the agitated atmosphere to its normal mild adjustment, and Monteagleans were ready to hear a favorite lecturer this evening—Dr. W. S. Currell, of Washington and Lee University. He is a facile and charming speaker, and instructs as happily as he entertains. To-morrow the Rev. Dr. Whaling, also of Lexington, is to preach in the auditorium.

Monteagle is rejoicing in a plenitude of good things to an unusual degree. We have enjoyed hearing such speakers as Dr. Hawthorne, of Nashville; Gen. O. O. Howard, of Army and Navy Christian Commission; Dr. Withrow, of Toronto, Canada; Dr. Crafts, and Rev. Sam Jones, besides the lecturers and readers of the faculty: Dr. Currell, Prof. Naff, Drs. Hanchett and Griggs in their magic recitals, and Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Curry, of the Boston School of Expression. This school is holding its Summer term again at Monteagle for the benefit of Southern students. I wish I had time and space to say something of the nature of the work done in this school, that might give our teachers, not only of elocution, but teachers generally, some idea of what it is doing for us; also the necessity of raising the art of presenting truth by the spoken word to the plane it ought to occupy, from the artificiality of the old-school elocution to the truthful simplicity of natural expression. Suffice it to say, the students go away, seeing, as with clearer vision, the beauty of nature about them, feeling a deeper insight into human nature, a broader sympathy with their fellows, a conception of the meaning of expression in its relation to sincerity and earnest thought, and the science and philosophy of voice-training and vocal interpretation of literature. The large number of earnest students attest the thoroughness of the work. The Christian Endeavor Convention in Nashville probably prevented the usual crowd for about two weeks, but now the clans are gathering, and every day adds its quota to the already well-filled grounds. It would be difficult to find a more interesting and cultured body, attracted here by the superior advantages Monteagle offers in the excellent faculty, and the healthfulness and comfort of the location.

Mrs. Stonewall Jackson was expected to-day, the guest of her relative, Chancellor Summey, of Clarksville.

Dr. H. M. DuBose, editor of the Epworth Era, and League Secretary, was another distinguished arrival at noon.

Major Millsaps, Dr. Hoss, Capt. Pilcher, Mrs. Cobb, Mrs. E. S. Drake, Mr. Newsome, and many other well-known Summer residents, have arrived with their families.

New Orleans is well represented among the guests. Among them we note Mrs. Christian Keener, Miss Pasteur, Mrs. Gen. Ogden, Miss Bartlett, Mrs. Werlein and family, Mrs. Barrows, Mrs. Parham, Mr. E. P. Mackie, wife and mother; Mrs. Riley and Miss Clara Baer, who is director of the gymnasium this Summer.

The next two weeks promise an equally entertaining and more varied program. Notwithstanding the editor's decision to the contrary, we hope within that time to have the pleasure of listening to our friend, Dr. Black, preach at Monteagle.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Booneville, Miss., EDITOR.

The Booneville Epworth League has a nice way of remembering the sick. Some member of the Flower Committee carries a bouquet, together with a card bearing the colors and name of the League. On one side is written an appropriate Scripture verse.

The above-named committee make it their business to see that a handsome collection of flowers adorns the pulpit every Sunday. The house of God ought to be one of the cheeriest places in all the land. The Leaguers will help to make it such.

President McKinley is an ardent friend of the Epworth League. From the many things he has said commending the movement we quote the following: "It provides moral and mental equipment. It unites right-soonness and reason, piety and patriotism, and gives strength and purity to the church and the institutions of the country. It enlists the youth and strength, the spirit and courage of one of the great religious denominations of the world, and turns them into a well-disciplined army of battle for the noblest cause in which mankind ever engaged—the cause of the Master and of man."

The outline of our study in missions, which appears each week in this "department," is prepared by Prof. Thomas Carter, of Tulane University. These outlines of the different topics will appear each week, and, we trust, the Leaguers will be profited thereby.

On Tuesday eve, July 12, the Union Epworth League of New Orleans held its semi-annual election of officers, with the following results: President, Rev. Geo. D. Parker; first vice-president, M. B. DePass; second vice-president, Miss Fannie B. Patterson; third vice-president, Jos. A. Daniels; secretary, Willard S. Cushman; treasurer, Miss Hattie O'Pry; editor, Rev. P. H. Fontaine.

A letter received from Rev. Geo. D. Parker announces the League work in New Orleans to be flourishing. Nearly every chapter has a class in the study of missions. A number have ordered missionary libraries. There are now ten Leagues in the Union. We thank Bro. Parker for words of commendation and encouragement anent the League Department in NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Miss Estelle Boothe, district secretary of the Sardis district, North Mississippi Conference, writes in glowing terms of the District League Conference recently held at Sardis. Elsewhere in this column will be found "Notes from the Sardis District," furnished by this fair correspondent.

The new course of reading for 1898-99 has been announced, and will shortly be ready. The following comprise the course: I. "Dawn on the Hills of Tang," by Beach; II. "Investment of Influence," by Hillis; III. "Quillian Lectures," by Bishop Galloway; IV. "Life of Francis Asbury," by G. G. Smith. Also "Authorized Readings" in the form of twelve papers, to be published from time to time in Epworth Era, and to begin Oct. 6.

NOTES FROM THE SARDIS DISTRICT.

The first League Conference of the Sardis district marks a new era in this great work, and we think it will prove an "Epworth Era." It was a grand success, and surpassed our dearest expectations. The glorious dawn of a resurrection morn has scattered all the darkness of our night. The voice of the angel is heard crying, "There shall be no more death." God's Spirit was with us in our attempt to further the League cause in our district.

Miss Vic Thompson, the State corresponding secretary and treasurer, and Bro. E. B. Ramsay, of Memphis, came down to help us. Verily, the power of God's Spirit was with them, and the League cause prospered in their hands. Wish Mississippi were full of just such people.

We don't like to be personal in our remarks, but we "know" we have the best presiding elder in the whole State. And we wouldn't swap preachers with anybody in the North Mississippi Conference. Blessed is the Sardis district, and hurrah for the Epworth League!

LESSON IV.

SUBJECT—THE CALL OF CLOUGH; OR, THE MIRACLE OF PROVIDENCE.

Number III. of our sections fairly bristles with special providences. Call to mind two or three passages of Scripture illustrating this blessed fact of all Christian experience. Such passages are: "I will guide thee with my eye;" "They shall bear thee upon their heads, lest thou dash thy foot against a stone," and a hundred others.

1. Study here the providential hand of God in the preparation of Clough as a civil engineer. Illustrate from Old Testament examples of men who worked upon the temple. Christ has power to sanctify all realms of knowledge and all the skill of the arts and sciences to his service.

2. This thought of Providence is seen also in the plague described on page 51. Compare with England's noble behavior on this occasion the instances in the early church where Christians sent up offerings to the poor Jews. The gospel and material blessing not to be divorced. Men have bodies to be fed and clothed as well as souls to be saved.

3. Study in the third place the providential solution to the perplexing problem that confronted Mr. Clough and his wife in regard to the caste system on page 55. Was this Chance or Christ that spoke?

4. Providential indications drawn from the unprecedented progress of this mission. Study appreciatively the interesting statistics on pages 59 and 60.

Suggestion: Christ came to the world as a carpenter. He did a vast deal for labor. Dignified it by his own example. No man need be ashamed to work. He said, "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." Let some one prepare a few thoughts on, "What the Crafts Have Done for Christ."

Illustrate: 1. Medical missions—China was opened at the point of a lancet. 2. Engineering skill—Ships and railroads requisite to missions.

IF WE KNEW.

There are gems of wondrous brightness
Ofttimes lying at our feet,
And we pass them, walking thoughtless
Down the busy, crowded street.
If we knew, our pace would slacken,
We would step more oft with care,
Lest our careless feet be treading
To the earth some jewel rare.

If we knew what hearts are aching
For the comfort we might bring;
If we knew what souls are yearning
For the sunshine we might fling;
If we knew what feet are weary
Walking pathways roughly laid,
We would quickly hasten forward,
Stretching forth our hands to aid.

If we knew what friends around us
Feel a want they never tell,
That some word which we have spoken
Pained or wounded where it fell,
We would speak in accents tender
To each friend we chance to meet;
We would give to each one freely
Smiles of sympathy so sweet.

PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE.

The annual commencement exercises of the Port Gibson Female College were this year very much shorter than usual, for the reason that Mrs. M. H. Meek, one of the principals, and also musical directress, was for several weeks just previous to the time so extremely ill that her doctor required the most perfect quiet on the premises, and so the almost entire discontinuance of the Music Department. This condition promised disaster to the usual concert, and such would have been the result had it not been for the energy and skill of Miss Hartwell, the assistant in this department, and the use of some neighboring instruments and rooms.

The commencement sermon was preached by Rev. Fitzgerald Sale Parker, of Lake Providence, La. His text was Matt. xvi, 13 and 15: "Whom do men say that I, the Son of man, am?" "But whom say ye that I am?" He showed, as the text intimates, that Jesus is more than the Son of man, and that no hypothesis except that he is divine will account for the remarkable phenomena of his life; and then urged that the settlement of this question, not as to its historical, but as to its personal significance, is the first duty of every intelligence that has been called to its consideration, and that upon its right appreciation rests the proper placement and decision of every other question concerning the disposition of life. The large audience was delighted with the discourse, and, I think, were much impressed.

The sermon at night was by the same preacher, and the text used was II. Cor. vi, 17: "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you." It was a very interesting and beneficial sermon on the duty and necessity of the Christian's separateness from the world, and was considered by many even to surpass the sermon of the morning.

As sickness prevented my attending all the exercises, I clip the following from the Port Gibson Reveille, which is a part of the report of the commencement that appeared in that paper, expressing the universal commendation, and is, as another paragraph in the same issue tells us, "written by a citizen who is in no wise connected with the institution:"

"Both sermons were able pulpit efforts, profound in thought and deep in spiritual power. Mr. Parker has a commanding presence, and his pleasant and forcible delivery made a deep and pleasing effect upon his audiences. The music of the choir at both services was beautiful.

"On Monday the Art Gallery of the college was thrown open for the reception of visitors. It is needless to say that under the supervision and constructive genius of Miss McGill the work of the students was displayed to the best advantage, and proved an attraction which few citizens of the town and friends of the students failed to visit and enjoy. A consensus of opinion pronounced the exhibit among the best the college ever made, and one which would have honored a college of much greater attendance.

"The exercises of Tuesday evening consisted of a programme of most entertaining character, with its delightful variations of music, recitations, drills and exercises in physical culture, closing with the award of medals, accompanied by a timely and appropriate address by the Rev. Mr. Mounger, the presiding elder, who acted as distributor of the prizes, the same being as follows: First Scholarship Certificate, conferring Free Tuition for one year—Miss Gertrude Pottit. Second Scholarship, gold medal—Miss Emmie Jones. Certificate of Proficiency in Music, to Miss Laura Drake, having completed the Seventh Grade, in a most thorough and satisfactory manner. Medal for Expression—Miss Marguerite Reading. Medal for excellence in Art—Miss Clara Moore. Medal for Neatness—Miss Louise Hughes. Prize for best Competitive Crayon Sketch—Miss Atwood Reading. Gold Badges for Excellence in Deportment—Miss Mary Wharton and May Redus."

The report concludes: "Port Gibson may well be excused for a pardonable pride in this long-established nursery of culture and refinement, which, under its present excellent management, is regaining a prestige partially lost by the adverse circumstances of former years."

The trustees held their annual meeting Monday night, as the customary hour interfered with the court duties of some of the members who are also members of the bar. This meeting resulted in the re-election of Mrs. M. H. Meek and Miss W. L. Park co-principals for another session, and leaves the college under the same excellent management as for the past three years.

Next session the Bible will take its proper place in this Christian institution as one of the regular text-books, and in future its student body will be familiarized not only with Bible history, but with the Book itself. It is difficult for me to understand that Christian education claimed to be imparted without this, and the college is to be congratulated upon the new era thus inaugurated, and the larger expectation of divine favor and assistance.

Notwithstanding the disappointments and expenses incident to the quarantine everywhere in operation immediately after the opening of the session, the report of the principals was encouraging and full of promise. Under the present management the college is surely recovering from its retrograde of several years ago; and none but those who have undertaken the task can appreciate the magnitude and difficulty of undertaking to build up an educational institution that has, through some mismanagement, fallen into disfavor. If the progress of the past few years is the index to its future—and I believe it is—it will be but a little while before its comfortable apartments are full of happy girls, and its influence for Christ is felt over a large territory.

Because this institution is not making all the fuss, spilling all the printer's ink, and engaging in all the braggadocio of other schools, is no reason why anyone should for a moment suppose that it is not possessed of all the necessary facilities that the others claim, or that it falls short in any degree of the work the others are doing. The difference all lies in the one fact that the others that are doing the displaying are run by men, while Port Gibson Female College is in the hands of ladies, timid and shrinking, but capable, diligent and faithful. If pupils really imbibe the spirit of the teacher—the argument for Christian preceptors—and those pupils are to be the ladies of the future, the question is quickly settled as to where to send the girls. Port Gibson Female College is the school, and she is ready to welcome them.

WHERE PRENTISS RESTS.

On a sunny afternoon, when the bright tropical plants and towering trees stood a fit subject for the poet's pen or the artist's brush, we left the historic old city of Natchez to drive out to the stately old mansion, 'Gloucester," two miles distant, where lies in calm repose all that is mortal of Sargeant S. Prentiss, the matchless orator who made himself famous when he uttered in the Congress of the United States, while contesting his right to a seat in that body, the following beautiful words: "Should you decide against her, you tear from her brow the richest jewel which sparkles there, and forever bow her head in shame and dishonor. But if your determination is taken; if the blow must fall; if the Constitution must bleed, I have but one request on her behalf to make. When you decide that she can not choose her own representatives, at the same moment blot from the star-spangled banner of this Union the bright star that glitters to the name of Mississippi, but leave the stripe behind a fit emblem of her degradation." Had a bolt of iron fell from the sky upon his head the moment he uttered those beautiful words, he would have been famous; but this is only a sample of the boantiful gems that were wont to fall from his lips. What Mississippian does not feel a glow of pride as he thinks of Prentiss, the greatest orator America has ever produced.

We passed a stately old mansion on the road "called" "Dunlieth," which stands as a true monument of what Southern life was like in the ante-bellum days.

After a pleasant drive we arrived at "Gloucester," which looked lordly enough, but somehow a vapor of desolation pervaded the whole place. This mansion was once the property of Winthrop Sargeant, the first governor of the Territory of Mississippi, who was appointed in 1798 by President John Adams. A single old negro woman now occupies the home, being the only servant who has survived the family. She looks to be about eighty years of age.

Opposite the house is a plot of ground enclosed by an iron fence, being full of vines and creeping bushes. The gate could not be opened, but we stepped over. Before us stood a marble shaft, on which was inscribed the name of Winthrop Sargeant, and near it stood a plain white marble slab, on which was engraved the following:

S. S. Prentiss,
Born at Portland, Maine,
Sept. 30, 1808;
Departed this life at Natchez, Miss.,
July 1, 1850

"I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

That is all the tomb contains. It made me sad to see so small a mark above the grave of such a genius.

Sargeant S. Prentiss never lived at "Gloucester," but the owners were relatives of his wife, whom he was visiting from his home in New Orleans at the time of his demise. Only a small slab is erected to his memory; but the immortal words he has uttered stand as a magnificent monument to his memory, and will cause his name to be kept bright upon the golden record of fame as long as the sun gives light.

REV. ENOS B. FOUST.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON MEMOIRS, OPELOUSAS DISTRICT CONFERENCE, LAFAYETTE, LA., JULY 7, 1898.

Enos B. Foust was born in Lafayette county, Miss., July 19, 1844, and died at his home in Rayne, La., April 26, 1898, aged 53 years 9 months and 7 days. He was the son of William and Eveline Foust; was trained under religious influences. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in his thirteenth year as a seeker of religion, and the following year was happily converted. His call to the ministry was strong and conclusive. He was licensed to preach, and joined the North Mississippi Conference in 1871. His first appointment was Holly Springs circuit as junior preacher. At the close of that year he transferred to the Louisiana Conference, and was appointed to the Big Cane circuit for 1873, to Lake Charles for 1874 and '75, to Simsport for 1876, to Abbeville for 1877, '78, '79 and '80; to Mooringsport for 1881; to South Bossier, 1882 and '83; to North Bossier, 1885, '86, '87 and '88; to Fort Jessup, 1889, and to Oak Ridge, 1890. At the close of this year he was granted a superannuated relation on account of his great affliction, which relation he sustained until his death.

Bro. Foust was a soldier in the Confederate Army; he was wounded and taken prisoner; his leg had to be amputated; his suffering was great while in prison. In 1890 his other leg became diseased, and after much excruciating suffering it had to be amputated. This left him almost helpless, and, both legs off above the knees, his only mode of locomotion was in a wheel-chair. Being a man of great energy and fine practical sense, he put forth all his powers in supplementing a living for his family, as the amount received from the Conference was not sufficient to meet the demands of a growing family. In this he succeeded beyond anything that could have been expected. Most men would have surrendered, but Bro. Foust, with his noble Christian wife, blessed with energy and economy, succeeded in making a good living.

Bro. Foust was twice married—first to Miss Edith Bihm, April 1, 1875. She only lived a year and a half. In 1880 (Nov. 3) he was married, a second time, to Miss Adelia M. Harkins. There were seven children by the last marriage; none by the first.

Bro. Foust was an earnest, faithful preacher; a consecrated Christian man.

Resolved, That in the death of Bro. Foust the church has lost one of her most efficient ministers, the family a tender, loving husband and father; the community in which he lived a valuable citizen, and a kind, obliging neighbor.

Resolved, That we tender to the bereaved family our sincere sympathy and condolence.

Resolved, That a copy of this memoir be furnished the family, and be spread on the Minutes of this District Conference.

COLUMBUS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Columbus District Conference met at Piney Grove, in Lowndes county, Miss., July 5, 1898. Rev. R. A. Burroughs, our efficient and beloved presiding elder, presided with his usual ability. He holds the lines with a strong hand, but is always affable and kind. The attendance was smaller than for several years. Three of the leading charges were not represented at all. The pastors of these were detained on account of severe affliction. The reports from most of the charges showed a good degree of prosperity in the various departments of church work. The Sunday-school work showed marked advance over former years. The Epworth League movement is producing fine results where it is properly looked after, and vindicates the wisdom of the church in incorporating it in our church polity. The spiritual state of the church is constantly improving. Our people attend upon the various services of the church, and there is much less complaint of forgetfulness of vows and infraction of church rules.

The Conference was religious from the opening to the close. The preaching was in the "demonstration of the Spirit and with power," and the singing was inspiring.

Rev. G. W. Bachman, our faithful and efficient colporteur, was on hand selling books and taking subscriptions to our church papers.

Revs. E. G. Kilgore, of Greenville, Texas, former pastor of Columbus circuit; A. P. Leech, of Grenada district, and R. A. Clark, of Millsaps College, were present, and contributed much to the interest of the Conference.

Bro. Lagrone took a collection for Mississippi Orphans' Home at Water Valley, and received $210 in cash and subscriptions, and Bro. Clark received $16.10 for furnishing Y. M. C. A. Hall at Millsaps College.

Walter McNeil Campbell and Edward Bernard Sharp were licensed to preach. S. C. Frazier, W. V. Connell, Walter Price and S. B. Critz were elected delegates to the Annual Conference.

Pheba, a pretty little town on the Southern railroad, was chosen as the seat of the next District Conference.

The hospitality of the people of Piney Grove was hearty, cheering, and abundant. They attended the sessions of the Conference in full force. Pastor Johnson was a most delightful host, and gave everybody the "best home." Piney Grove is a beautiful country church, Gothic in architecture, thoroughly finished, furnished, and carpeted, situated in a grove of oaks and towering pines. The good ladies spread a bountiful dinner every day on a table erected in the grove. One and all testify that it was a Conference long to be remembered for social enjoyment and spiritual profit. We missed you, Doctor.

ALL HANDS TO THE OARS.

The following plan for missionary work in all our Sunday-schools was adopted unanimously by the Board of Missions at its annual session:

1. That the Board of Missions ask the Sunday-schools to raise within the next year fifty thousand dollars for the cause of missions.

2. That in all the Sunday-schools one Sabbath in each month be set apart as Missionary Day, and that the collections on that day be devoted to missions.

3. That a careful account be kept with all Sunday-schools, and a report of this work be made a part of the report of the Conference Board of Missions to the Annual Conferences, so that due publication may be made of the contributions of the various schools.

4. That on the third Sunday in October, or as near thereto as practicable, there shall be held in all our schools a Missionary Rally Day, for which a suitable programme shall be prepared by the secretary of this Board and the Sunday-school Editor, and furnished free of charge by the Board of Missions to all schools on condition that they will take a collection and forward the amount to the treasurer of the Annual Conference Board of Missions, to whom all collections for missions shall be transmitted.

5. That as often through the year as may be deemed expedient by the secretaries of this Board, special missionary intelligence shall be furnished gratis to the Sunday-schools.

6. That when special obligations have not already been assumed by the Sunday-school, special work should be discouraged in order to harmonious operation of this plan.

7. That the amount raised in the Sunday-school, or schools, may be credited to the assessment on the charges, provided, however, that in all cases a separate account shall be kept, so as to make a full exhibit of the work done by the schools.

The W. F. M. S. of the North Mississippi Conference convened at Greenville, Miss., Saturday, June 25. A preparatory service was conducted by Mrs. M. L. Hargrove. The Lord's Supper was administered by the pastor, Rev. J. E. Thomas, assisted by Rev. Mr. Gibbs. Conference sermon, Sunday morning, by Rev. Mr. Gibbs. Sunday night the welcome address delivered by Miss Susie P. Trigg, of Greenville, was well rendered. Original, and especially dear to our hearts, wore the names of our honored dead—Miss Helen Finley and Mrs. Myra S. Smith. Response by Miss Ella Grider, of Winona, in a clear, pleasing manner. The welcome from the young ladies by Miss Mabelle Steger was beautifully rendered; response by Miss Sykes, of Columbus, and our little Ida Pace delighted the congregation in a sweet, child-like manner. Then the fraternal greetings. Mrs. Phelps' welcome from the Episcopal Missionary Society was beautiful.

Monday morning the business session opened. Treasurer reported $632 increase over last year. Winona was banner auxiliary; Tupelo banner juvenile society. The president commended the auditor, saying how faithfully she had pored over those hard, dry figures. The reply came, "Figures are never hard or dry when they represent missionary money." I would like to tell of each district secretary's report, but space forbids. Mrs. Sholl, the indefatigable worker of Aberdeen district, gave many important items. Her talks were impressive and instructive. Miss Viola Blackburn, of Holly Springs, our missionary from Mexico, was introduced to the Conference. Her remarks were sweet and cheerful; her very diffidence was impressive. All can not talk; the silent clock keeps just as good time as the cathedral gong. Her work in Mexico shows what she is doing in the woman's work. We will never forget our sweet-spirited little missionary. Though like a modest violet hidden away under the grass, the perfume of her visit lingers with us. The church was beautifully decorated. "The World for Christ" in large letters over the chancel, "Go or Send" on one side, and on the other, "Woman's Work for Woman," the five flags representing the five fields of the Woman's Board. The presence of all those good women and their noble work arouses us to do more than we ever have before. The Nominating Committee reported: Mrs. G. H. Lipscomb, president; Mrs. Thames, vice-president; Mrs. McIntosh, Conference corresponding secretary; Miss Ella Grider, recording secretary. There were seventy delegates present, besides many visitors and some ministers. Mrs. M. L. Hargrove gave an address on the Scarritt Bible and Training-school. One young lady from Greenville offered herself as a candidate for the school. She was accepted, and will attend when the school opens. Another applicant from Pope Station, who will also go. One other young girl offers her life and talents to work in foreign fields, but could not be accepted, as she was too young.

We are glad the Conference met here, and believe it will prove a benefit to us, spiritually.

HOLDING UP CHRIST.

Here is a lovely little story which I had from one of "our own" men. A gentleman was visiting a friend who was an ardent admirer and lover of dear Mr. Spurgeon, and was continually extolling him as a preacher. "I have never heard him," said the visitor, "but next Sunday I will go and see whether he deserves the praise you so liberally bestow upon him." So he went to the Tabernacle, and on his return from the morning service, his host met him with the eager question, "Well, what did you think of him?" "Nothing," was the reply. Then, seeing the look of astonishment and sorrow on his friend's face, he said again, "No, nothing," but his eyes filled with tears of joy as he added, "All I can think of is the dear preacher's Savior!" My correspondent writes: "Oh, Mrs. Spurgeon, no finer eulogy than this could be passed upon any man's preaching; and even you can scarcely know how we—his men—long and yearn to imitate him who is still telling out 'the old, old story,' not only upon earth, but in the wide domain of heaven."—Sword and Travel.

FRUITS OR ROOTS.

The implanting of the seeds of life must precede the unfolding of the flowers of grace. No root, no fruit. The effort to put right principles, thoughts, and resolutions into the hearts of the children of our charge is more important than the search for the results of a seed-sowing, which time has not yet brought to its ultimate flowering. "They think it," says Newman, referring to certain teachers, "a light thing to be sowers of that heavenly seed, which he shall make spring up in the hearer's heart to life eternal. They are willing to throw it aside, as something barren and worthless, as the sand of the seashore, and they desire to plant simply the flowers of grace in one another's hearts, as though under their assidnous culture they could take root therein." Seed-time is before blossom-time, and the brightest blooms must languish with no supporting root.

"Scatter diligently in susceptible minds
The germs of the good and the beautiful;
They will develop there to trees, bud, bloom,
And bear the golden fruits of Paradise."

—New York Observer.

Holiness does not mean sanctimoniousness, or sacramental religion. The word itself is the equivalent of the Saxon word "wholth," and signifies health of heart and life. A holy man is a healthy man, who has been cured of the deadly disease of reigning sin by true conversion. One of the best evidences of his spiritual health is a clean conscience—a conscience enlightened by God's Word, kept sweet and wholesome by prayer, and ministering a constant comfort to its possessor. What a diseased member is to the body that is a bad conscience to a Christian; it breeds continual mischief and misery. The reason why so many church members are spiritual dyspeptics—without any joy in their countenances, any ring in their voices, any power in their prayers, or any usefulness in their lives—is a diseased conscience. If Jesus Christ lives anywhere in a good man, it is in his conscience, and then the man acts right instinctively. Old St. Augustine did not exaggerate this core-quality of holiness when he said that "a good conscience is the palace of Christ—the temple of the Holy Spirit, the paradise of delight, and the standing Sabbath of a saint."—Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler.

It is the natural course of sin to destroy, and unless something intervenes and something interrupts, it will destroy the soul. If sin is in our heart, it will work our ruin independent of God's judgment.—Rev. George W. Morris.

A MINISTER'S STATEMENT

Rev. C. H. Smith of Plymouth, Conn., Gives the Experience of Himself and Little Girl in a Trying Season—What He Depends Upon.

The testimonials in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla come from a class of people whose words are worth considering. Many clergymen testify to the value of this medicine. Read this:

"By a severe attack of diphtheria I lost two of my children. I used Hood's Sarsaparilla as a tonic both for myself and little girl and found it most excellent as a means to restore the impoverished blood to its natural state and as a help to appetite and digestion. I depend upon it when I need a tonic and I find it at once efficacious." REV. C. H. SMITH, Congregational parsonage, Plymouth, Conn.

OPELOUSAS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

In the quaint old town, once known as Vermilionville, now called Lafayette, made classic by the facile pen of Geo. W. Cable, convened the thirtieth annual session of the Opelousas District Conference. In this Catholic and Creole community dwell some of the most faithful Methodists anywhere to be found. They, with their energetic pastor, are to be highly commended for their efforts and success in erecting a neat church-building and a comfortable parsonage within less than three years.

The community and the Conference were disappointed by the announcement that Bishop Morrison was detained by important business, and was unable to be present at the Conference as previously announced.

The Conference was organized on the morning of July 5; Rev. H. O. White, P. E., in the chair. The afternoon and evening of the first day was devoted to discussions of various questions of interest to Sunday-school workers.

The second day the Conference began the regular business of reports from the work. The plan of proceeding by a set of questions covering the entire field of District Conference work was adopted, and was found to facilitate the transaction of business. The reports indicated a fairly healthy condition of the work in each of the departments reviewed. During the past few years, within the observation of this reporter, this South Louisiana country has passed through an era of church building. The presiding elder reported nine churches and three parsonages built within his three years and a half of service on the district. Several successful revivals were noted. Suitable resolutions were adopted with reference to the presiding elder's service on the district, in view of the fact that his fourth year is drawing to a close. Bro. White's term of service on the Opelousas district has been one of faithfulness, usefulness and harmony.

Our colleges were both represented in the persons of Mrs. Sligh, of Mansfield, and President Cooper, of Centenary, who addressed the Conference. There seemed to be enthusiastic sympathy with both institutions.

Jno. G. Sloane, of Crowley, an earnest and promising young man, was licensed to preach and recommended for admission to the Annual Conference. J. N. Parr, A. M. Mayo, Jno. G. Sloane and E. E. Duplantis were elected by delegates to the Annual Conference, with W. T. Blackshear and Dr. M. R. Cushman as alternates.

The Conference had the sad duty of commemorating the death of Rev. E. B. Foust in a memoir, which was ordered to be published in the ADVOCATE.

The session was a harmonious and pleasant one, all the charges but two being represented. Forty-two preachers and delegates were present, besides about a dozen visitors.

The preaching was done by Rev. W. W. Drake, W. B. Van Valkenburgh, Robt. J. Harp, Percy R. Knickerbocker, Wm. G. Evans, I. W. Cooper, and J. M. Henry, in the order named. Specially noticeable among the sermons preached was that by Rev. R. J. Harp on the Providential Indications of the Age. It was replete with interesting information and vigorous thought, and animated by a refreshing spirit of optimism. The Conference requested its publication.

The last session closed with a "love-feast" in fact, which brought tears to many eyes and hallelujahs to some lips.

The next session is to be held at the growing young city on the Calcasieu—Lake Charles.

DURANT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

SPIRITUAL INTEREST OF CHURCH.

We, your committee, beg leave to submit the following:

From the statistical reports we present you the following summary: Members of the church, 6,117; members received this year, 128; professions of faith, 49; adults baptized, 23; infants baptized, 11; family altars, 159; church papers taken, 290.

We furthermore gather from the reports that the attendance upon the services of the church is very good, the temperance sentiment strong, the spiritual interest increasing, and the progress of the church manifest.

We would call the attention of the body to the fact that our Methodism is a large factor in this district in the establishment, conservation and maintenance of that Christian character, that practical piety, and that strong and sturdy public sentiment which are the foundation-stones of our physical, intellectual and moral freedom.

We would call our people to a systematic and habitual reading of God's Word, for it is the Magna Charta of religious liberty and the chart of a righteous life; to the practice of secret prayer, for it is the fountain of spiritual strength and satisfaction; to the establishment and maintenance of family worship and a strong home religion, for it is the conservator of our national and social safety.

We would urge upon our adherents a loyal allegiance to Christ and our church. In the beginning of the revival season we would direct you to the supreme purpose of our existence—the salvation of souls. Methodism was born under the inspiration of a revival, developed under the fire of a holy fervor, perpetuated by the power of an abiding Pentecost, and shall live by its continuance in the "old paths."

We conclude the report with expression of gratitude to God for the evidences furnished us of the fidelity and aggressive application of the pastors to the great mission of our church.

J. C. PARK, for Committee.

Ackerman, Miss., July 13, 1898.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. C. Grace, Plaquemine Brulee circuit, July 13, 1898: "This is our first year on this work. On our arrival, last January, we were received very nicely by all; and since then we have lacked for nothing, for the people have been very kind to us. Our people here differ a little on the subject of sanctification—not that they do not believe in sanctification, but on the number or time that you get it. There are some that believe that we get the great blessing from our heavenly Father in the first blessing; some believe in the second blessing, and even there are some who believe in the third blessing; and as I have no objection to the first, second or third blessing that gets sanctification, but am inclined to lean a little towards the third number, if I should favor any number; therefore, I think, taking all things in consideration, we are getting on very well, spiritually. We have prayer meetings, class meetings, and Sunday-schools, and some of them are doing good work. We also have a splendid Epworth League, and we are praying and expecting a sweeping revival all over the circuit. If the Lord will, our series of meetings shall commence next Saturday at Plaquemine Brulee. We want to take up a full report to Annual Conference next December. Pray for us."

Rev. A. C. Flowers, Jacoby, La., July 16, 1898: "We have a Sunday-school at this place in very good working order. Bro. Cain, a Presbyterian, is our superintendent. Sunday-school has missed only one Sunday on account of rain. We expect to celebrate Children's Day the second Sunday in August. Such a thing was never known on Bayou Desglase. This is my banner appointment, and has paid $5 quarterage. Please announce through the ADVOCATE that my address is Jacoby, La. We are doing what we can on our mission work. Pray for us."

Rev. I. T. Reames, Lafayette, July 19, 1898: "We had a pleasant and, I trust, a profitable session of our District Conference. The visitors, and those visited, so far as I can learn, enjoyed the session very much. As a church, we are moving along quietly; constantly, as I believe, advancing, if not fully 'abounding in the work of the Lord.' No revival has yet been held, but at the close of the Conference session the indications for a genuine revival were exceedingly good. A little later—when the heat becomes less intense—we propose holding a series of services, which we hope will result in the conversion of sinners and the edification of the children of God. Last, but not least, we have finished the parsonage—including the painting of both outside and inside—and have painted the interior of the church. The balance now due upon the whole property does not exceed $30 or $35. Thanks to you, Mr. Editor, for a contribution to the amount of $31, the proceeds (in money) of your lecture delivered last March. Brethren, pray for us."

SOULE CHAPEL PROTRACTED MEETING.

We have just closed our protracted meeting, which began Sunday, July 10, and lasted until Sunday, 11 A. M. (17). Our faithful, devoted pastor, Bro. Leech, was assisted by a consecrated young brother, J. B. Mitchell, now a student at Millsaps. Bro. Mitchell preached with great power and earnestness. He has a fine delivery, fluency of language, and a beautiful voice, and it is most interesting to see a young man devoting all his talents to the service of his Master. His opening sermon was from Romans xii, 1, "I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice," etc., and was most appropriate for the beginning of a meeting. He spoke of the duty and privilege of using every faculty in the service of God, yielding our members to him—our hands, our feet, voice, lips—and all we possess to his service. From the beginning there was a spirit of deep earnestness, and we felt the presence of the Lord with us. The sermons were very fine, the singing was beautiful, and was heartily joined in by the whole congregation, whose attendance was large throughout the meeting.

On Thursday, at 4 P. M., there was a sermon to young men and boys, which was largely attended, and produced a deep impression. I can not do more than take a cursory glance at the details of the meeting, but note specially the united efforts of all denominations who attended as punctually as if it had been their own.

I must also notice the kindness of the residents near Soule Chapel, who, with unbounded hospitality, threw open their homes and hearts to all attending the meeting. We love the people of Soule Chapel for their Christian love and affectionate kindness to all, and thank God for association with them and their sweet Christian fellowship. The last sermon, on Sunday (17), was the finest, if we may compare, when all were so good, on the subject of the brazen serpent, and lovingly Bro. Mitchell pointed all to Him who is lifted up to take from the world the sting of the serpent, sin. I am sure all who heard were blessed and profited by his teaching. All the church and congregation took his hand in greeting and promise to lead a higher life. Several united with the church at the close of the services. Eight in all joined as a result of meeting. Praise God for his blessing in this meeting, and association with Christian brethren and people. All the church were profited, Sunday-school interests revived, and Christian enterprises organized and encouraged, and all feel like thanking God and taking courage. M. D. C.

Brooksville, July 19, 1898.

Thousands of men in lonely homes call up the pictures of the loved and lost ones, who might still be happy husbands with healthy babies prattling at their knees, if they had only been a little more observant and thoughtful. When a woman's complexion gets pale and sallow and her eyes look heavy; when she is evidently nervous and despondent, and complains of pains and aches and dragging down and burning sensations; a wise man should know that she is suffering from weakness or disease in a womanly way. The thoughtful man who realizes this will at once advise his wife to consult some eminent and skillful specialist. He will know that the average physician will insist upon the obnoxious examinations and local treatment so embarrassing to modest, sensitive women. He should know that these ordeals are unnecessary. Dr. R. V. Pierce is an eminent and skillful specialist, who has been for thirty years chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y. During that time, with the assistance of a staff of able physicians, he has prescribed for many thousands of women. He is the inventor of a wonderful medicine for the special weaknesses of women, that cures in the privacy of the home. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It makes the delicate and important organs that bear the burdens of maternity strong, healthy and vigorous. It corrects all irregularities and stops all debilitating drains. Medicine dealers sell it and have nothing "just as good."

W. R. Malcolm, Esq., of Knobel, Clay Co., Ark., writes: "My wife for perhaps four months previous to the birth of our child took the 'Favorite Prescription.' This strengthened her entire system, and child-birth, to her, was very easy, being attended with little pain. Our baby Ruth is 13 months old and she has never been sick a day."

The Polytechnic College

Will open its eighth session Wednesday, September 7, 1898. It is an institution of high grade, employing a faculty of eighteen professors, instructors and assistants. The curriculum taught is fully equal to that of any college or university, doing only college and preparatory work, in the Southwest.

Full courses leading to the degrees of A. B. and B. S. are offered in Mathematics, English, Natural and Physical Science, Latin, Greek and Modern Languages, History and Economics, and Philosophy.

A course in the Bible is required for graduation.

Young preachers receive special instructions in Church Discipline and Government.

A School of Pedagogy has been opened, and the theory and practice of teaching will receive careful consideration at the hands of a very successful instructor.

A special course for teachers is offered during the first ten weeks of the session, and again during the last ten weeks.

Instruction by correspondence to pupils who wish it.

A Business Department is maintained in which is given the most thorough instruction in Book-keeping, Shorthand, Typewriting, Penmanship, etc. Graduation from our business department means a great deal more than from the ordinary commercial college.

The Music Department, vocal, piano, guitar, violin, mandolin, orchestral, is first-class in every particular. The manager, Miss Kate V. King, is unexcelled in the South as a vocalist, pianist and instructor.

In Elocution Miss I. I. Ice has no superior as an instructor. During the last session her classes overflowed, and pupils had to be turned away. Assistance will be afforded during the next session. We have also arranged to introduce a department of Physical Culture for both young men and ladies.

Mrs. Emma Rhea, the instructor in Art, is giving great satisfaction, and her class the past session was quite large. All branches of Art taught. Special attention given to portrait and china painting.

The Polytechnic College is perhaps the best located college in the State. Altitude above sea level, nearly 800 feet. More than a mile from the city limits. (Electric car.) Railroads entering Fort Worth from eleven different directions. Telephone communication with all parts of the State.

Our co-educational system works beautifully. Strict discipline and careful oversight over both young men and women saves all trouble and secures great benefit to both.

TERMS:

YOUNG MEN: Board, tuition and matriculation fee for ten months, $130.00.

YOUNG LADIES: Board, laundry, tuition, matriculation fee, with music, elocution or art, $225.

N. B.—We teach full forty weeks—an advantage found at no other high-grade institution in the State; and these prices are for that length of time.

Large library in charge of librarian open to students every day. Library fee, $1.00

We have no imposing buildings to write about. We think a College is made up of Faculty, Curriculum and Student Body. If these are present the results will follow. On these points, faculty, curriculum and class-room work we invite the closest comparison with other schools of the Southwest.

A PATRIOT'S PRAYER.

Oh, make thou us, through centuries long
In peace secure, in justice strong;

LEGALIZED INIQUITY.

Among the many reforms of this reforming age the temperance reform has long occnpied a prominent place. In its ranks are large nnmbers of men and women of lordly intellect, high social position, and vast influence. The great, leading chnrches of the land have enlisted in the canse with nnanimity and enthnsiasm. The influence of the press has been wielded to a large extent in its behalf. Throngh the instrnmentality of the W. C. T. U. the school-rooms of the nation have become a part of its enginery. In every State, with three exceptions, scientific temperance is tanght in the pnblic schools. And the same is true of the great government schools—the Military Academy at West Point and the Naval Academy at Annapolis. A few States have adopted a straight-ont prohibitory regime, while in most of them the principle of local option has been utilized for the overthrow of the liqnor through vast areas of territory.

In view of these facts, the temperance ontlook has, nntil qnite recently, been deemed encouraging. Bnt since the commencement of the Spanish war we are confronted with a sitnation that is absolntely appalling. From day to day newspapers in the regions contignous to onr military encampments have described scenes of drnnkenness and disorder and lawlessness on the part of onr soldiers snch as one might expect in a tribe of Comanche Indians. The people of Mississippi and Lonisiana have had no opportnnity of knowing mnch abont these things, as comparatively little has been said on the snbject by the papers in this section. Bnt those who have seen papers pnblished in places contignous to the military encampments know whereof we speak.

What is the canse of all this? Has onr citizen-soldiery been drawn entirely from the ranks of the intemperate? Are onr habitnal drunkards the only men who have snfficient patriotism to rally aronnd the stars and stripes? Such a snpposition is entirely at variance with the facts. Though there may be local exceptions, we believe it to be true that onr soldier boys will compare favorably with their neighbors in the towns where they live. Why, then, all this debauchery? The question is easily answered. The United States government licenses men to make drnnkards of its soldiers. If the licenses were given only to the dealers in the towns contignous to the encampments, the evil would not be so great, since, nnder military regnlations, the soldiers could only go to town a few at a time. Bnt the government licenses men to deal ont liqnid death to the soldiers in their own camps. A saloon, known by the enphemistic name of a canteen, is operated in every regiment, provided the regimental commander gives his consent. The two Mississippi regiments have no saloons, for the reason that they are commanded by men who have the manhood to say No! to the would-be saloon keeper. All honor to Colonels Govan and Montgomery for the noble stand they have taken! Bnt while there are a few commanders of this stamp, the rnle is that each regiment has its saloon. The New York Voice, a short time since, made an investigation as to the drink-evil among onr soldiers at Camp Thomas, near Chattanooga. At that time there were about fifty thonsand troops encamped there. The sales of liqnor at the canteens aggregated about $5,000 per day. Twenty eight cars loaded with liqnor were on the side track at one time. Is it any wonder that drunkenness abonnds, with its consequent disorder and lawlessness? Soldiers, many of whom are almost boys, away from the restraints of home and bnsiness and society, and with much of their time hanging heavily on their hands, fall easy victims to the snares of the whisky devil.

Camp Thomas is a fair sample of onr military rendezvons. Camp Alger is an exception to the rnle, no "canteens" being allowed there. Snch a state of things onght not to be tolerated. If the periodical press of the land wonld nnite in making war npon this iniqnity, it wonld soon come to an end. Even the United States government is not proof against pnblic opinion.

Since the above was pnt into the hands of the printer, we have received the following, with a request for its pnblication:

RALLY TO DEFEND OUR DEFENDERS.

All pastors of chnrches, officers or members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Christian Endeavorers, Yonng Men's Christian Associations, Good Templars, Sons of Temperance, and all other Christian and temperance workers, are earnestly nrged to copy ont the following petition at the head of a large sheet of paper, secure as many signatures as possible, and send in at once to President McKinley, that the great evils of the canteen system may be abolished before the war has proceeded fnrther. The President has been appealed to on the snbject, and it is known that he is disposed to consider favorably all protests and petitions regarding it.

A PETITION.

To the President of the United States:

Whereas, The so-called army canteen system, professedly designed to keep onr soldiers from the temptations of saloons ontside of camp, has in fact resnlted in bringing the saloon temptation directly within the camp, exposing thereto many thonsands of yonng men carefnlly nnrtnred in temperance principles in Christian homes and chnrches;

Whereas, The amonnt of liquor consnmed (the sales often averaging from $100 to $200 a day to a canteen) threatens seriously to injnre the military efficiency of onr troops and to cause widespread demoralization on the retnrn of those troops to peaceful life; and,

Whereas, Leading army snrgeons declare the nse of alcoholic liqnors of any kind to be extremely dangerous to the health and stamina of onr soldiers campaigning in a tropical climate like that of Cnba;

We, The nndersigned, do hereby respectfnlly petition that yon will, to the extent of yonr authority as commander in-chief of the army, forbid the sale of intoxicating liqnors at all post and camp exchanges, or elsewhere within the lines of the armies of the United States.

We can not nnderstand why President McKinley shonld wait for petitions. Without waiting to hear what anybody thinks abont it, he onght at once to pnt an end to the whole iniqnitous system.

Still, as it seems that His Excellency is waiting for the people to ask him to do the right thing, we favor flooding the White House with petitions with signatures galore. The signatnres can be had for the asking. Let some one in every commnnity constitnte himself (or herself) a committee of one to attend to this matter without delay. Copies of this petition are in circnlation in every State in the Union.

THE CHIMNEY CORNER GENERAL.

The Chimney Corner General is a very uniqne individnal. Let no one snppose from his title that he is a fighting character. It isn't his business to fight, bnt to criticise those who do. The smell of bnrnt gunpowder is the one odor which his olfactories can not endure, and so his headquarters are always very remote from the battle-field. He is the one personage in the annals of this mnndane sphere who is wiser than Solomon was, and, nnlike David's great son, he does not have to delve for knowledge. Whether it was born with him or whether it comes to him by an indescribable intuitional process, no one has ever been able to ascertain. Without studying military tactics a single day, he knows how to manipnlate an army on the day of battle far better than all the commanders in the field. And as to the condnct of a campaign, all the knowledge of all earth's great military chieftains from the beginning nntil now is not a circnmstance to the stores of wisdom in his craninm.

Strange to say, though he is constitntionally and unalterably averse to war as a personal experience, he is an ardent advocate of it for other people. He raved and stormed and tore his hair during the few days when President McKinley was exhausting the resonrces of diplomacy in an effort to bring Spain to her senses, and thns avert the horrors of war. When war had been declared he began at once to paw the earth on account of the tardiness of the government. The idea of waiting nntil troops could be organized and drilled was simply preposterous. Savages fight without all this red tape; why shonldn't we? And the idea of an army having to wait for weeks to be supplied with gnns and ammnnition and provisions and clothing and medicines and vehicles for the transportation of these military stores; who ever heard of snch nonsense? This sort of racket he has kept np from the beginning nntil now. He fnssed and fnmed for weeks because onr troops did not leave for Cnba; and when they had landed on the enemy's soil he raved and ranted because Shafter did not take Santiago at once. What was he waiting for? What if there were heavy rains and bad roads and great difficnlties in the way of a proper marshalling of onr troops abont the city? What if the enemy were strongly fortified, so that an assanlt npon their lines wonld resnlt in a loss of several thonsand of onr soldiers? It is trne that if Shafter had heeded this advice and rnshed into battle nnprepared and snffered an inglorious defeat, no one wonld have been more severe in condemnation of his conrse than this same Chimney Corner General; bnt, all the same, he onght to have gone. It is true that Shafter, by pnrsning a different conrse, captured Santiago, together with Toral and his army; but why could he not have done this the moment he landed?

And now, day after day, he is braying louder than ever because Watson did not leave for Spain within ten minntes after Cervera surrendered. It is trne that, in comparison with other wars of both ancient and modern times, onr military movements dnring the present campaign have been characterized by remarkable celerity; bnt what of that? Cnba and Porto Rico and the Philippines onght to have been captured two months ago; and by this time we onght to have had the stars and stripes floating over Madrid, and had tax-gatherers in every city, village and hamlet in the Spanish dominions. Perhaps it is well (for himself not his country) that his highness, the Chimney Corner General, can not see himself as others see him; otherwise he might imitate the example of Jndas by committing snicide.

THE QUESTION SETTLED.

For certain reasons we deem it proper to repeat the statement made in onr last issne—that the question of retnrning the $288,000 to the United States Government is settled. In connection with the Book Committee's report the college of Bishops made the following statement: "If the Senate, by affirmative action, declares that the passage of the bill was due to snch misleading statements, we will take the proper steps to have the entire amonnt returned to the government."

Almost immediately after the pnblication of this declaration the Senatorial Investigating Committee made its report, which was adopted and pnt npon the records. The report contained the following: "If these denials of the existence of a contract had not been made to the Senate from a sonrce which was entitled to entire credit, the bill wonld not have been passed by the Senate, nnless it had been so amended," etc.

The question of refunding is, therefore, settled. The only question now is, When will the money be paid? Shall we wait until the next General Conference, four years hence? or shall we call a General Conference? In onr last issne we went to record as favoring a called session of the General Conference. We did this believing that prompt action wonld allay excitement, and thns prove beneficial to the chnrch. And yet, it may be, that a called session of the General Conference wonld not be best. The entire matter may be wisely left with onr Bishops. They understand the sitnation thoronghly, and the honor of the church is safe in their hands. As they have pledged themselves to see to it that the money is refnnded, there is no longer any need of resolntions in favor of refunding by ecclesiastical assemblies, or of filling our church papers with communications on the subject.

A BRUTE WITH EPAULETTES ON.

Soldiers need to be drilled regularly day by day. Moreover, it is eminently proper that they should be required to do a snfficient amount of marching to give them the physical stamina that is requisite on the field of battle. Bnt when a military commander, for the pnrpose of testing the powers of endnrance of his men, requires them to take a forced march under snch conditions as to cause hnndreds of them to be prostrated, he has gone entirely outside the limits of legitimate military operations. A case in point occnrred a few days since near Charleston, S. C. Brigadier-General Ernst ordered his command ont on a forced march of ten miles nnder a blazing sun over a macadamized road, with the thermometer at ninety degrees in the shade. Every man was required to carry the maximnm bnrden of forty ponnds, and no breakfast was allowed except two army crackers and a cnp of weak coffee. The march was in qnick time—almost a rnn. By the time the men had marched two miles they began to show nnmistakable signs of over-fatigne. Col. Hnling rode to the front and snggested to Gen. Ernst that he onght not to continne the march the fnll ten miles; bnt the snggestion was disregarded. Presently the men began to fall at a rapid rate. Col. Hnling again rode to the front and asked that the rate of speed be diminished. Thereply was, "I know my bnsiness." And thns the march continned according to the programme. Nearly five hnndred men fell, overcome by the heat and fatigne. In some companies the prostrations amonnted to thirty-three and a third per cent. Every ambnlance in the command was kept bnsy for many honrs in carrying the men to the city for treatment.

In this "land of the free" snch brntality onght not to be tolerated. Snch a general wonld be a disgrace to the Spanish army. Weyler's brutality was not manifested towards his own soldiers. Gen. Ernst onght to be redneed to the ranks, and kept there ninety-nine years.

THE WAR LOAN.

When the United States Government recently took steps to negotiate a loan of many millions of dollars, and announced its pnrpose to secnre the money, not from banks and syndicates, bnt from the masses in small sums, capital broke ont into a lond gnffaw over the snpposed absnrdity of snch a proposition. Bnt in almost no time not only the amonnt asked for, bnt more than four times as mnch, was tendered, and that, too, at the low rate of three per cent. This shows that the country is in a much better condition, financially, than has generally been supposed. The calamity-howlers have received a set-back. It shows also that the people have faith in the government. Demagoguery has made mnch noise, bnt it has not nndermined the faith of the people in the perpetuity of our institntions. The issuance of these bonds to the toiling masses instead of to capitalists was a wise stroke of policy. It tends to the increase of good citizenship when you get a large nnmber of the lower and middle classes financially interested in the government. The placing of government bonds in the hands exclusively of opulent moneysharks was a huge mistake of the Cleveland administration.

AT ADAMS CAMP GROUND.

By invitation of the pastor, Rev. W. W. Morse, we spent last Sabbath at Adams Camp Ground. In spite of rain and mnddy roads there was a large congregation, the spacious tabernacle being well filled. There were two services, viz.: at eleven and at three, at both of which we committed an attempt at preaching. We also occnpied the pnlpit on Monday morning. Rev. Robert Selby, of Hazlehnrst station, arrived Monday to remain dnring the week. We regretted that we could not prolong onr stay, but dnty called ns home Monday afternoon. Bro. Morse is in favor with his flock, and is doing good work. Adams is a flourishing church of about three hundred members. It has one of the largest congregations we know of in a rnral neighborhood. It has two good weekly prayer meetings. It is to the credit of the people of the commnnity that they have provided for the comfort of their pastor by bnilding a neat, well-constructed parsonage, with several acres of gronnd, so that there is ample room for yard and garden, and a small farm besides.

To Bro. Morse and his excellent family we are indebted for most cordial entertainment during our stay.

ELECTION FRAUDS.

At one of the courts in this city, one day last week, a case was tried which is of more than ordinary interest and importance. The election commissioners for the First Ward were charged with doctoring the returns in the election for delegates to the Constitutional Convention. The fact that a fraud had been perpetrated was established beyond the possibility of a doubt, but the jury brought in a verdict of acquittal on the ground that the guilt could not be fixed upon any particular person. We are not prepared to say that the verdict was wrong, but it requires no prophet's eye to foresee what the result is likely to be. Commissioners who desire to falsify election returns can very easily cover up their tracks so that it will be impossible to fix the responsibility upon any particular individual.

A NEW BOOK.

THE MAKING OF METHODISM: STUDIES IN THE GENESIS OF INSTITUTIONS. By John J. Tigert, D. D., LL.D., editor of the Methodist Review. 175 pages. Illustrated. Price, $1. Barbee & Smith, Nashville, Tenn.

This is a constitutional history of the beginnings of Methodism, particularly of Methodism in America, and covers a field quite distinct from that worked by most of our church historians. The facts and principles of the rise and development of the denomination are viewed in the light of philosophy, the cause and occasion of certain important results in our ecclesiastical government being pointed out and made luminous. The task undertaken was no easy one, requiring, as it did, much research, careful sifting of evidence, and philosophic treatment. The author, however, has given us a highly trustworthy, edifying and valuable account of the "Genesis of our Institutions," and has thereby done the Methodist world a great service. Few have the leisure for such investigation; fewer still, the inclination and ability. Hence a production of this kind is all the more to be prized.

Some attention is devoted to forecasting the future of certain parts of our system, and several perils that threaten us are pointed out. The question of maintaining the unity and efficiency of the episcopacy along with a vastly extended and extending church is introduced and discussed at some length. The advantages of the Methodist itinerancy are brought into plain and pleasing prominence. The author asserts positively, and not without show of facts, that the Christmas Conference of 1784 was really not a General Conference, but an organizing convention.

The leading topics considered are: "The Episcopacy," "The Presiding Eldership," "The Itinerancy," "The Genesis of the General and Annual Conferences," and "The Baltimore Conference System of Government in American Methodism." There is an Appendix on "Orders: Roman and Anglican," that will be found suggestive and instructive. The Methodist who follows the author as he traces the governmental beginnings of the church which now occupies the foremost place in the Protestant world will be dull indeed if he does not feel the glowings of pardonable pride in the strength and perfection of our system. This strong, succinct, and scholarly history ought to be read by every Methodist preacher and wide-awake layman.

NOTES.

We invite attention to the communication of Bro. H. P. Lewis on the fifth page. Sister Lewis is already in Jackson in charge of Williams Hall, getting ready for business in September. Bro. Lewis himself will remain at Carthage nntil the close of the Conference year. Parents who wish to give their boys while at college the advantages of a Christian home would do well to correspond with Bro. Lewis.

Mr. H. K. Kearney, a son of Col. W. G. Kearney, of Flora, Miss., and a brother of Miss Belle Kearney, was killed near his home at Las Cruces, New Mexico, a few days since by some outlaws whom he and others were trying to arrest. He was a talented young man about thirty years of age, just starting in the profession of law with brilliant prospects. He was one of those genial, companionable souls that make friends everywhere, and hold them as with hooks of steel. This is the second heavy stroke that has fallen upon Bro. Kearney and his family within a brief period. Less than two years ago another son was called in the prime of young manhood. We deeply sympathize with our esteemed brother and his family in their sore bereavement. Great is their sorrow, but they know where to look for comfort. Their faith, we are sure, will sustain them in this time of sorrow.

A CORRECTION.

MR. EDITOR: I wish to correct a mistake Bro. Galloway unintentionally made in his article about the E. M. F. College in last week's ADVOCATE. He says Prof. Conrad was a director of a conservatory in Cincinnati. He did not have a conservatory in Cincinnati, but a private studio, took private pupils, and did a high grade of work there. Among his students in Ohio was one who is now a professor of piano in the College of Music in Cincinnati. He studied several years under Prof. Conrad.

I will say that we have had students at Meridian who have studied for quite a while in Cincinnati and Boston Conservatories, and they unhesitatingly and emphatically say they get as fine talent and better attention, and, therefore, accomplish more and do better work at Meridian than at Boston or at Cincinnati, and they studied under some of the finest teachers in those places. One goes so far as to say she learned more in three weeks here than in three months under one of the leading professors in Cincinnati.

THAT GENERAL CONFERENCE.

I would be recreant to my sense of duty if I did not enter my vote against calling a session of the General Conference. It would cost thousands of dollars; would be exceeding difficult to bring all the members together, and, if assembled, would be irreconcilably divided on the issues which they try to settle.

DR. HOSS ON OUR RANDOLPH-MACON WOMAN'S COLLEGE.

"The next morning I inspected the Randolph-Macon Woman's College. It is a noble building, quite the completest thing of the kind in the Church. Its situation commands a view incomparably grand. Favorable as my preconceptions of the college had previously been, I confess that everything about it went beyond my expectations. In equipment, faculty, and course of study, it is a real college. Some day the endowment—now $100,000—will be enlarged to $500,000. That day ought not to be far in the distance."—Dr. Hoss, in the Nashville Advocate, July 17.

CAMP MEETINGS.

The Topisaw Annual Camp Meeting will begin Thursday, Aug. 11, and continue eight days. Opening sermon by Rev. J. M. Weems, presiding elder, at 7.45 P. M. Revs. E. Selby, T. W. Adams, C. W. Crisler and H. D. Howell have promised to assist in the preaching. All ministers of the gospel, and especially the pastors in the Brookhaven district, are cordially invited and will be furnished free transportation from railroad and return, and entertainment.

Bro. J. D. Adcock, of McComb City, so well known to the traveling public, will meet all persons coming by rail at the depot, and convey them directly to the camp ground.

At the last annual meeting of the association it was decided to adopt the gate-fee system, the grounds will be enclosed with a substantial wire fence. Ten feet has been added to three sides of the tabernacle. A new, comfortable, and commodious hotel will be finished by camp meeting, and will be in charge of Bro. J. W. Ball, of Tylertown, who needs no introduction to the public as a hotel keeper. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Season ticket, 25 cents. Children under 10 years of age, free.

V. V. BOOSE, P. C.

The twenty-seventh annual meeting, under the auspices of the Hemingbon Camp Meeting Association, will begin on Tuesday, Aug. 23, and continue for ten days. Rev. Geo. R. Stuart, of Cleveland, Tenn., whose labors on this campground in former years have been so signally blessed, will conduct the services during the meeting.

The recent improvements on the grounds and buildings, and the well appointed restaurant warrants us in the statement that all who come will find comfortable accommodation at very moderate charges.

The usual reduction of fare on the I. C. R. R. will be given during the meeting.

Ministers of the gospel are earnestly invited, and will be provided for free of expense.

To defray the expenses of the meeting and to avoid the necessity of a public collection, an entrance fee of fifty cents is required. Tickets good during the meeting, but are not transferable.

We extend a cordial welcome to all to enjoy with us the feast of tabernacles at this famous camp ground.

Chairman Ex. Com.

Crystal Springs, Miss.

Rapides Camp Meeting will open on Saturday, the thirtieth instant, and continue for ten days. The location of this encampment is seven miles south of Boyce and T. and P. R. R., in the pine hills, where an abundance of cool, freestone water meets all requirements for man and beast. Hotel accommodations ample for all comers. Conveyance at Boyce for passengers by all day trains. A corps of the selected "camp-meeting preachers" of Louisiana have promised to attend the meeting. Rev. R. S. Isbell is expected to have charge of the singing.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

To the Members of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences:

For forty years I have been a pastor in the Mississippi Conference, having entered the work in November, 1857. The Lord has blessed me in this service, but I am growing old, and still have several children whose education is not complete. Our Conference is well supplied with younger men, and still they come. Under the circumstances, I have consented to take charge of one of the boarding-houses at Millsaps College (Williams Hall). We can accommodate twenty-five, or more, boarders. We propose to give them the best of care, and make the house a "home" to them in the best sense of the word. We have long tried to maintain a Christian home of the purest type in which to rear our own children, and we will spare no pains to keep the standard high for the benefit of the young gentlemen who may be intrusted to our care. At present address me at Carthage, Miss.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD.

OF INTEREST TO STOCKHOLDERS.

FREE TRANSPORTATION TO ATTEND THE ANNUAL MEETING AT CHICAGO. SOME INTERESTING FACTS.

In order that stockholders of the Illinois Central Railroad Company may more readily attend in person the annual meetings, there has been posted in each station of the Company a notice to the effect that, in accordance with a resolve of the Board of Directors, there may be issued to each holder of one or more shares of the capital stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, as registered on the books of the Company, a ticket enabling him or her to travel free over the Company's lines from the station of the Illinois Central Railroad nearest to his or her registered address, to Chicago and return, for the purpose of attending, in person, the next Annual Stockholders' Meeting of the Company, which will be held at its General Office in Chicago on Wednesday, September 28, 1898, at noon. Details as to the necessary procedure to obtain such ticket, the date of its issue and its limit, are fully set forth on the posted notices referred to. In this connection, it will be interesting to note that since, in 1862, the capital stock of the Company became full paid, a cash dividend, ranging from 4 per cent. to 10 per cent. per annum has been paid semi-annually to every holder of stock, and that it is now twenty years since the Company, in any year, paid less than 5 per cent., the present rate of distribution.

Niagara Vapor Baths.

We are the original manufacturers of portable Vapor Baths.

We have, during the last ten years, supplied thousands of our Baths to physicians, hospitals, sanitariums, etc., and we are now, for the first time, advertising them direct to the general public.

IN BUYING A VAPOR BATH Get one with a steel frame that stands on the floor. If a manufacturer does not show you a cut of the frame without the covering, you may take it for granted that his "Steel Frame" is a wire hoop that rests on the shoulders of the bather.

Get one that is covered with proper material. Insist on seeing a sample of material before ordering. We make our own covering material and print it with a handsome "all over" pattern of Niagara Falls.

Get one with a thermometer attachment. Don't go it blind—a bath that is too hot or not hot enough will be of no benefit to you.

Get one that you can return and have your money back if not satisfactory in every way.

Send for sample of material and interesting booklet that will tell you all about Vapor Baths.

Vapor Baths are an acknowledged household necessity. Turkish, Hot Air, Vapor, Sulphur or Medicated Baths at Home; 3c. Purifies system, produces cleanliness, health, strength. Prevents disease, obesity. Cures Colds, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, La Grippe, Malaria, Eczema, Catarrh, Female Ills, Blood, Skin, Nerve and Kidney Troubles. Beautifies Complexion.

ROCK-A-BYE, BABY.

"Rock-a-bye, baby, in the tree-top,
When the wind blows the cradle will rock;
When the bough breaks the cradle will fall,
Down tumbles baby and cradle and all."

Rock-a-bye, baby; the meadows in bloom
Laugh at the sunbeams that dance in the room,
Echo the birds with your baby tune,
Coo at the sunshine and flowers of June.

Rock-a-bye, baby; as softly it swings
Over the cradle the mother-love sings,
Brooding or cooing at even or dawn—
What will it do when the mother is gone?

Rock-a-bye, baby, so cloudless the skies,
Blue as the depths of your own laughing eyes;
Sweet is the lullaby over your rest,
That tenderly sings little baby to rest

Rock-a-bye, baby; the blue eyes will dream
Sweetest when mamma's eyes over them beam;
Never again will the world seem so fair,
Sleep, little baby, there are clouds in the air.

Rock-a-bye, baby; the blue eyes will burn
And ache with that your manhood will learn;
Swiftly the years come with sorrow and care,
With burdens the wee dimpled shoulders must bear.

Rock-a-bye, baby; there's coming a day
Whose sorrows a mother's lips can't kiss away—
Days when its song shall be changed to a moan—
Crosses that baby must bear all alone.

Rock-a-bye, baby; the meadows in bloom,
May never the frost pall the beauty in bloom,
Be thy world ever bright as to-day it is seen—
Rock-a-bye, baby, "thy cradle is green."

—London Reader.

HONESTY AS CAPITAL.

In a word, trust that man in nothing who has not a conscience in everything.—Laurence Sterne

"Put that back!" exclaimed President John Quiney Adams, when his son took a sheet of paper from a pigeon-hole to write a letter. "That belongs to the Government. Here is my own stationery, at the other end of the desk. I always use that for letters on private business."

Mr. Adams was as particular in other ways, and is celebrated for his accuracy, truthfulness, and punctuality. When a member of the House of Representatives, his entrance was a sure indication that the time to call to order had arrived. He always kept his appointments, and would no more think of taking others' time by tardiness than their money by theft. His life exemplified the Golden Rule.

THE DEALING WHICH EXALTS HUMANITY.

Mark Twain tells us that an impoverished descendant of Audubon, in straits, was willing to sell a copy of his great volume on "Birds" for a hundred dollars. It was worth in the market a thousand dollars; the scholar chuckled over his mean bargain. "How different was Hammond Trumbull," he says. "A lady in the South, in straitened circumstances, wrote him that she had an 'Eliot's Indian Bible,' which she would gladly dispose of for a hundred dollars. He wrote to her that, if a perfect copy, it had its market value, one thousand dollars; and he would sell it to the British Museum for that sum. It proved such a copy, and she got her thousand dollars in gold. That is the honorable dealing which exalts humanity."

A. T. Stewart determined that the truth should always be told over his counters, whatever the consequences. No clerk was allowed to misrepresent, or cover up a defect. He once asked the opinion of an employee in regard to a large purchase of goods of novel patterns, and was told that the designs were inferior, and some of them in very bad taste. The young man was just pointing out the defects of a particular pattern, of which he held a sample in his hands, when a customer from an interior city came up and asked, "Have you anything new and first-class to show me to-day?" The young salesman replied promptly, "Yes, sir; we've just brought in something that will suit you to a dot." Throwing across his arm the very piece he had criticised a moment before, he expatiated upon its beauty so earnestly that a large sale was the result. Mr. Stewart, who had listened in wondering silence, here interrupted, warning the customer to give the goods further and more careful examination, and telling the young man to call upon the cashier for any wages due him, as his final account would be made up at once.

SUCCESS IS NOT GAINED BY CUNNING.

What a rebuke is George Peabody's life to thousands who believe that success is gained by smartness, cunning, taking advantage of a man's necessities, grinding the most possible out of employees, who think it is right to inveigle innocent people into wild speculation, to palm off useless articles, to get money from poor working-people for opiates and worthless drugs, which injure the health of innocent children and unwary adults, and to put shoddy into everything worn. The government statisticians in London, in 1874, declared that ninety-three per cent. of all the property of that city was in the hands of moral men, whose business and inheritance had been legitimate.

"The twenty years which I spent at the shovel works was the pleasantest part of my life," said Governor Ames. "Everywhere I went on business I was known, and our name was the synonym of honesty.

"There was a time when the price of the Ames shovel did not vary a cent for twenty years. So, in the days of wild-cat money in the West, the Ames shovels were used as currency. A man could always pay his debts with our shovels.

"Though our goods went to all countries, we never had an agency anywhere. We made them so attractive that all the world wanted them. Instead of our going out and trying to sell goods, the world came and begged for them."

THE WORLD WANTS HONEST MEN.

What the world wants to-day is young men who will not offer "English woolens" manufactured in American mills; who will not sell "Irish linen" made in New York. The world wants physicians who will not pretend to know the nature of a disease when they do not, or experiment upon patients with questionable doses of drugs; statesmen who will not pack caucuses or pull wires; lawyers who will not urge their clients to press their suits into court to get their fees, when they know there is no chance of winning; clergymen who can hear a louder call than that of a large salary or popular applause. It wants business men who will give thirty-six inches for a yard, and thirty-two quarts for a bushel; journalists who will not write scurrilous, scandalous articles, merely because the chief editor wants them; men who will not say they do a thing because "everybody does"—young men who will not think anything profitable that is dishonest, or tell a lie to gain a point.—Success.

THE SCOLDING HABIT.

Scolding is mostly a habit. It is often the result of nervousness and an irritable condition of both mind and body. A person is tried or annoyed at some trivial cause, and forthwith commences finding fault with everything and everybody within reach. Scolding is a habit very easily formed. It is astonishing how soon one becomes addicted to it, and confirmed in it. It is an unreasoning and unreasonable habit. Persons who once get into the way of scolding always find something to scold about. If there is nothing else, they begin scolding at the mere absence of anything to scold at. It is an extremly disagreeable habit. It is contagious. Once introduced into a family it is pretty certain in a short time to affect all the members. Women contract the habit more frequently than men. This may be because they live in a confined and heated atmosphere very trying.—The Methodist Protestant.

Hygiene.

EFFECTS OF STRONG TEA AND COFFEE.

Dr. Bock writes as follows respecting the influence of these drugs: The nervousness and peevishness of our times are chiefly attributable to tea and coffee; the digestive organs of tea and coffee drinkers are in a state of chronic derangement, which reacts on the brain, producing fretful and lachrymose moods. Ladies addicted to strong coffee have a characteristic temper, which I might describe as a mania for acting the persecuted saint. The snappish, petulant temper of the Chinese can be ascribed to their immoderate fondness for tea.

FREE SCHOLARSHIPS FOR YOUNG PREACHERS AT VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY.

There are twenty-five free scholarships in the Biblical Department of Vanderbilt University which are available for college graduates. They cover the cost of board in Wesley Hall, tuition and room rent being free. These scholarships have been held during the past year by graduates of Randolph-Macon, Emory and Henry, Trinity, Wofford, Emory, Southern University, Centenary, Center, Kentucky Wesleyan, Central, Hendrix, Southwestern University, and other institutions. A loan fund is available for those who fail to receive scholarships. Many young ministers, by the aid of these helps, work their way through the whole three-year course in biblical and theological study with no other aid than their own labor during vacation. Every young minister of the church should try, if possible, to spend at least one year in the Biblical Department of Vanderbilt. Post-graduate courses in the Academic Department are open to theological students. Let those interested write to Dr. W. F. Tillett, dear, Nashville, Tenn.

GOD IN EVERY-DAY THINGS.

If we had eyes to see the glory of the Lord in the every-day of divine providence, we should find light and comfort a thousand times where now we walk in darkness with sorrow uncomforted. The glory of the Lord is everywhere. It shines in the lowliest flower, in the common-est grass-blade, in every drop of dew, in every snowflake. It lives in every sunbeam, in every passing cloud. It flows around us in the goodness of each bright day, in the shelter and protection of every dark night.

Yet how few of us see this glory! We walk amid the divine splendors, and see oftimes nothing of the brightness. We cry out for visions of God when, if our eyes were opened, we should see God's face mirrored in all about us. There is a legend of one who traveled many years, and over many lands, seeking God, but seeking in vain. Then, returning home and taking up her daily duties, God appeared to her in these, showing her he was ever close beside her. So there is glory everywhere in life, if only we have eyes to see it. The humblest lot affords room for the noblest living. There is opportunity in the most commonplace life for splendid heroisms, for higher than angelic ministries, for fullest and clearest revealings of God.—The Congregationalist.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

LEDBETTER—LEWIS LEON LEDBETTER, son of John M. and Maggie Ledbetter, was born near Crawford, Miss., Aug. 6, 1875. Under the ministry of Rev. T. B. Malone he was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Crawford, in July, 1889. In January last he moved his membership to Starkville, where he had engaged in business. Early in May he was stricken with typhoid fever. On his sick-bed, at the residence of his uncle, Bro. N. W. Pullen, on the evening of May 15, I married him to Miss Ora Iranetta Lawrance. After a month's illness, on June 3 he died peacefully. He possessed all the qualities that make up a sterling and righteous manhood. He was diligent in business, frugal in his habits, careful of his expenditures, and liberal to the church and the needy. Genial without undue familiarity, jovial without frivolity, he gained many friends, and won the esteem and confidence of business men. He had never been contaminated by the ordinary vices; hence he brought into the church a character without stain or reproach, and a young manhood without scars. His employers appreciated his worth, and were sorely bereaved when he died. He loved his wife in their childhood, and for many years they were pledged to each other. Realizing that he was very ill, he desired her to be near him. She readily consented to marry him. Faithfully did she discharge the trust, sheering with his father and mother the care of nursing until the end came. He was a dutiful, loving son. A devoted mother and father weep over the loss of their first-born. A young wife is broken-hearted because her only beloved has been taken from her. He said that he was ready and not afraid to die. May God comfort the bereaved!

Starkville, Miss.

FOSTER—The committee appointed by your superintendent beg leave to submit the following:

The sad messenger, Death, has visited our Sunday-school and taken from us our much-loved and honored ex-superintendent, Capt. C. J. FOSTER, who, for sixteen years, has been an active worker in our Sunday-school, and by his uprightness and strict adherence to his Christian principles and duty made all who came in contact with him feel his influence for good. Those of us who knew him best loved him for his real worth; will ever cherish his memory and endeavor to emulate his virtues; And, whereas, It has pleased our heavenly Father to take back the spirit he gave and allow him to sleep with those who have preceded him; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the First Methodist Sunday-school, that, while we mourn for him and lament his departure, we bow in humble submission to the will of our heavenly Father, and that our prayer shall be that his mantle, like that of Elijah on Elisha, may fall on us.

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved family our sincere sympathy in this, their great bereavement, and commend them to Him who has promised to be with us in all our trials and sorrows.

S. B. MCCUTCHEN, Chair'n.

On motion the report of the committee was adopted by a rising vote, and the secretary was instructed to record the same in the Minutes of the Sunday-school, and that a copy be furnished the family of the deceased and the Nashville and NEW ORLEANS Christian Advocates.

CORA DENHAM,
Sec. M. E. Sunday-school.

MOORE—THOMAS G. MOORE was born in Greensborough, Ga., Aug. 3, 1832; died in Magnolia, Miss., May 31, 1898. While a lad his parents moved to Mississippi and located in Houston. While young he made a public profession of Christ, and lived thenceforward a consistent, joyous Christian life.

May 20 1861, he and Miss Mary E. Garner were married near Summit, Miss. She, one daughter and two grandsons survive.

He was scrupulously honest and truthful, generous to a fault, and a most liberal contributor to every call of the church. Many of the Lord's poor bless his name for constant, tender, generous, and timely kindness. He was his pastor's true, abiding and reliable friend—regular, always on time, and a deeply interested participant in every service in his church. If his attendance was possible. He was a diligent student of the Bible. During the delirium of his last illness, when he failed to recognize the voice of dearest earthly friends, or child, or wife, he would respond to a quotation from the Bible, or the hymns he had so long loved. A short time before his departure, when it seemed impossible to quiet him, his pastor began to sing, "Jesus, lover of my soul." He joined in the singing. At the conclusion of the singing he exclaimed: "That is glorious. We will sing that hymn together in heaven, and we will make the welkin ring." He lived and died respected, honored and loved by all who knew him.

J. A. B. J.

BLACKWELL—Bro. B. M. BLACKWELL was born June 27, 1835, in Morgan county, Ala.; professed religion and joined the Southern Methodist Church in his youth at Oak Grove Church. On Jan. 2, 1867, he married Miss H. S. Longmire in Marshall county, Miss., where he lived the balance of his life.

Bro. Blackwell was a brave soldier during the late war between the States, courageously, yet quietly, performing any duty that might be assigned him. He was a man for real ties, and not for show.

Bro. Blackwell was the same unpretentious, firm soldier of the cross. He was a man of few words and deep piety, marching on steadily and firmly through whatever toils, trials or afflictions might come. The stormy winds of life only served to drive him nearer home.

He leaves a wife, several children, many relatives and friends, who will miss him here. May they all meet him in that home above, where parting will be no more!

J. H. SMITH.

BLAKEWOOD—ANNA ELIZABETH BLAKEWOOD was born Aug. 12, 1870, on Bayou Desglase, near Big Bend; was married Feb. 6, 1895, to Mr. B. W. Blakewood, at her father's home (Mr. John George). She was a patient sufferer for nearly a year, and died April 3, 1898.

Sister Blakewood was a member of the Baptist Church. She leaves one child, a husband, father and mother, and many friends to mourn her departure. May God bless the bereaved ones!

GRAYBEARD

WE make 200 bottles of our GRAYBEARD every week. No more—no less. If 200 bottles don't fill all orders, some customer must wait until the next week. We mention this as some do not understand the delay. We have earned a reputation for making a clean, fresh, sure remedy for Cancer—Eczema, Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and we cannot make GRAYBEARD faster, and make it good.

"A few years ago Cancer appeared on my face in form of a scab—not a sore, but a scab that dropped off, and soon reappeared, some worse. Finally it annoyed me to shave. Darting pains set in, affecting my sight. People said I had Cancer—I was miserable. About that time a planter name Jordan, down the State, once similarly afflicted, sent me a bottle of GRAYBEARD advising me to take it. I did so and to my great joy got better. Skin cleared, appetite improved, I got stouter and Cancer left me. And it has not returned. GRAYBEARD saved my life.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

General Shafter issued an order praising and thanking his army for extraordinary bravery at Santiago.

Shafter's army is to have a rest until Fall, when it will form part of a force of 150,000 to move against Havana.

Rear Admiral Dewey believes the Philippine rebels more capable of self-government than the Cubans.

Spain is reported to be awaiting an opportunity to open peace negotiations on the basis of independence of Cuba under the guarantee of the United States.

It is now becoming quite clear to everybody that the United States can count on no practical help from either the Cuban or the Philippine insurgents; but, on the contrary, must look for opposition and obstruction from such quarters.

Four Russian warships are reported to have left Port Arthur, bound, presumably for the Philippines, and four Japanese men-of-war have been hastily dispatched to Saischo, with orders to co-operate with the British and American admirals.

Cubans in Santiago will make a strong protest to the President because General Shafter did not ask General Garcia to participate in the ceremonies attending the surrender of Santiago. They have prepared a petition asking that the city be given them to govern.

The third month of the war has closed with an unbroken record of victories. Two Spanish fleets have been wiped out of existence. One of Spain's Cuban strongholds has been captured. A fine harbor is ours on the northern coast. Numerous gunboats of the enemy have been destroyed.

The action of the Cuban insurrectionary leader, Garcia, in withdrawing his Cuban forces from further co-operation with the American army is an evidence of the character of support that can be looked for from the Cubans, and from the very outset it has been evident that only obstruction was to be expected from the insurgents about Manila.

Major-General Miles, commanding the Porto Rico expedition, is believed to have arrived at the point of debarkation decided upon on the coast of Porto Rico. Although General Miles has less than 5000 effective fighting men with him, the officials of the War Department are confident that he will be able to accomplish all that he expected to do before the arrival of re-enforcements. He will establish his landing base under the protection of the guns of the naval convoy accompanying him.

According to advices from Washington, the President has announced that he did not propose to issue a further call for volunteers. This would seem to mean that, in the opinion of the administration, a sufficient force has been gathered together to meet all demands likely to be made by the exigencies of the present war with Spain. Two calls for volunteers have been issued, the first providing for 125,000 men and the second for 75,000 men. Of this number, 183,000 men have been enlisted and mustered into the service, showing that the volunteers are only about 17,000 short of their total authorized strength. To these must be added the ten regiments of immunes, the three regiments of engineers and the three special regiments of cavalry. In round numbers, therefore, the enlisted strength of the volunteers is 200,000 men.

On Thursday, July 21, the United Confederate Veterans of the Civil War, being assembled at Atlanta in annual convention, to the number of more than 20,000 men, and representing every Southern State that was engaged in that war, adopted, by a rising and most enthusiastic vote, resolutions setting forth the following:

Whereas, the United States of America are at present engaged in a war with Spain in the interest of human liberty, and

Whereas, our comrades and our sons are members of that glorious army and navy, the achievements of which are now the wonder of mankind;

Resolved, That we, the members of the United Confederate Veterans, pledge to our government the hearty support of the organization in this crisis of affairs, standing ready at all times, with men and with money, irrespective of political affiliation, to support the President of the United States, as commander-in-chief of our army and navy, until an honorable peace is conquered from the enemy.

S. S. "State of Texas," Harbor of Key West, May 17th, 1898.

Finlay, Dicks & Co., New Orleans, La.—

Gentlemen: I am in receipt of your kind letter of May 13th, stating that you have forwarded per express to the Red Cross one hundred bottles of your Mul-en-ol antiseptic, for which we desire to return our very grateful thanks. We shall doubtless find abundant occasion for all antidotes of pain and suffering, and we hope to class yours among the best. In the onerous of suffering humanity, permit us to thank you again.

(Signed) Very truly yours, CLARA BARTON, President American National Red Cross.

North Texas Female College.

SHERMAN, TEXAS.

This College has just closed another most prosperous and pleasant session. The class of work done here the past session has been of the very highest order. Mrs. Key has just returned from Nashville and other Eastern points, where she inspected schools and school facilities, and feels more than satisfied with the N. T. F. C., and assures the girls of Louisiana and Texas that it is not necessary for them to go East to get the best educational advantages and enjoy the most refined and æsthetic surroundings. Nowhere is there better work done or better facilities offered—eminent, able, conscientious teachers, new, full chemical and physical outfit; individual work in the laboratory required and performed by each member of the class.

LITERATURE.—Three years' course required in Literature—one in American and two in English.

MATHEMATICS.—The course in Mathematics is very complete, and thoroughly taught—higher than is taught in most female colleges.

LATIN.—The Latin course is unexcelled, and is the same as that in the best male colleges in the land.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC.—The Conservatory of Music is pre-eminently the best in the South. During the past session we have had pupils who studied under Sherwood, Carl Faelton, and other leading teachers of the East; also pupils from the New England and other conservatories. All of these pupils were more than satisfied with the advantages offered here. We feel sure that all of those desiring the best musical advantages were cognizant of the ability and talent in this conservatory, they certainly would not leave the South. How can anyone expect to get a better piano teacher than Herr Von Mickwitz, who is personally recommended by the great Leschetizky as teacher and pianist?

SCHOOL OF ART. We are very fortunate in securing the services of Miss Frances Fowler as Art teacher. She was for six years teacher of Art in Wells College, and spent twelve years studying with the masters in Europe. She is a lady of the highest intelligence, and will deliver to the school monthly lectures on the subject of Art. Mrs. Holt personally inspected Miss Fowler's work in New York City last Summer, and she assures us that she has seen nothing like it in the South.

CAMPUS AND DORMITORIES. The Dormitories are well equipped and thoroughly comfortable. The campus is pronounced beautiful by all who see it, and it is certainly conducive to the æsthetic and refined. Nowhere will you find a healthier home for your daughters.

SPECIAL REMARKS.—We have maintained the high standard and efficiency of this College, regardless of the existing depression, knowing that the people of Texas and Louisiana will be slow to economize at the expense of the comfort and culture of their daughters. Appreciating the fact that the public are often deceived by misrepresentations of school catalogues and agents, we extend to all who have daughters to educate a hearty invitation to visit and inspect the N. T. F. C. for themselves. For catalogue, address

PROVIDENCE.

God never would send you the darkness
If he felt you could bear the light,
But you would not cling to his guiding hand
If the way were always bright;
And you would not care to walk by faith
Could you always walk by sight.

'Tis true he has many an angoish
For your sorrowful heart to bear,
And many a cruel thorn-crown
For your tired head to wear;
He knows how few would reach heaven at all
If pain did not guide them there.

So he sends you the blinding darkness
And the furnace of sevenfold heat;
'Tis the only way, believe me,
To keep you close to his feet,
For 'tis always so easy to wander
When our lives are glad and sweet.

Then nestle your hand in your Father's,
And sing to his praise as you go;
Your song will cheer some one beside you
Whose courage is sinking low,
And, well, if your lips do quiver—
God will love you the better so.

Correspondence.

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY."

We have been in the torried zone, or not far from it, here in Mississippi for the past twelve or fifteen days. It has been too hot for anything—too hot to work, read, write, think, eat or sleep. But I have had to do something. I have not yet learned the art of sitting and holding my hands. The hardest of all hard work is to do nothing. "Always employed, and never trifilingly employed," is a good rule, and one that brings the sweetest content.

Just at the beginning of this hot spell Bishop C. B. Galloway sent me his last book, "Christianity and the Nation," the first of the Quillian Lectures at Emory College, Oxford, Ga. These lectures were delivered in March of this year. They are fresh and brand-new. Bishop Galloway is never less than interesting and instructive, and often eloquent and powerful. In the matter of style, he is a wonderfully gifted man. He excels in choice phrase with both tongue and pen. These lectures are at the top-notch of his best style. In this particular they ought to be a study and an inspiration to young men. Things worth saying are worthy of being well said. Apt and felicitous speech is captivating to the human mind. It is worth while to covet this gift, and to cultivate it from childhood to old age. For this reason young men ought to devote time and attention to style; ought to write much and improve their own writing. A sentence that goes in everywhere, and comes out nowhere and says nothing, is trying and very provoking.

There are five of these lectures—four on the theme set for discussion, and one on a subject nearly related to it. The propositions stated are ably discussed, and they are abundantly supported by cumulative evidence that amounts to demonstration.

Religion lies right at the foundation of national integrity and prosperity, and no religion is so strong as our holy Christianity. This is manifest from the position, standing and commanding influence of the Christian nations of the world.

When preachers and lay workers bring individuals to Christ they do most and best for the nation where they labor. The man who toils for the salvation and elevation of the masses is the friend of God, the friend of the race, and the best friend of the country where his field of labor lies. If we can purify the people, the ballot-box will take care of itself. These lectures will tend to make preachers and Christian workers, generally, think more of their calling.

While reading this book I was wondering how a busy Bishop, who spends largely more than half his time from home in the pulpit or on the cars, could find time for the extensive reading and research that these lectures indicate. Younger men of leisure can find suggestions of topics and sources of information for a fuller and more exhaustive study of this subject. Bishop Galloway suggests more than he says—a great gift in any writer or speaker. A thought-provoking book, sermon or speech is like leaven in a barrel of meal.

Few of us, comparatively, read history enough, and when we do read it, we go along too hurriedly, too thoughtlessly. The author of these lectures has read history with both eyes open and mind alert. The proof of this is seen on every page. In the nature of the case and of their work, preachers are likely to be too narrow in the range of their reading. This tends to make them narrow men, men of narrow views. History, philosophy, poetry, science—all learning—will be useful to the man of God. It is a part of that thorough furnishing necessary for his great work. The pulpit is not the place for the display of great learning, and certainly not the place to display consummate and criminal ignorance. God is not honored by any man's ignorance in any matter where he might know if he would.

We call this government, and some others, a Christian civilization, and in a high sense it is that. Relative to the past, it is the best government, most Christian civilization, the world has ever known; but relatively to what it ought to be, to what some day will be, it is far from perfect. The world is striving after national perfection. At last the nation and the church must stand on the same rock, and that rock is Christ; indeed, he is the rock on which the universe of God is built.

It is suggestive, as indicated by the Bishop, that the closing decades of the last several centuries of the Christian era have witnessed wonderful and far-reaching changes, upheavals, and revolutions. We are to-day in the midst of stirring times. What God designs to bring out of this no mortal man can tell, but his hand is shaping great ends, rough hew them as the nations will. When, and as long as, a nation is true to God and his holy will, he stands pledged to prosper and build it up, and to extend its power and influence among men. When a nation is not true to God, and has no regard for his will, decay, dry rot, confusion, and national and political disintegration set in, and soon all is gone. If this wild olive branch in the wilderness of America does not forget the stock on which it is grafted and from which it grows, it will live for a thousand generations. If God spared not the Jews because of unbelief, neither will he spare the United States if they reject, or even stumble at, Christ. It is Christian civilization, a Christian nation, or anarchy and utter ruin. Oh, that statesmen and leaders would recognize the relation of the State to Christ, and of Christ to the State. This book has done me good, stirred me up, made me think and pray, filled me with joy that I am a minister of the Master, and it has enlarged my range of vision.

GILDEROY.

IS THE LOBBYIST A NECESSITY?

The scandal concerning the appropriation by Congress to the Methodist Book Concern of the South for losses that institution suffered at the hands of the Northern forces during the War of the Rebellion is worthy of serious consideration as an example of modern legislative methods. Congress having made the appropriation of $288,000, is now debarred, as well as are those voting for it, from saying that the amount appropriated is not justly due the Concern, and has not been due it ever since the wrong was inflicted—more than thirty-five years ago. During all these many years this money (and perhaps more) was due this institution to the full knowledge of Congress, and yet no appropriation was made to repair the wrong. Congress failed in its duty, although often urged to perform it. And now that a large part of the sum appropriated has fallen into the hands of lobbyists ("sharks," as they are often called), and the whole affair has become a public scandal, Congress is angry, and would very much like to punish some one if it could.

The methods pursued in urging this claim on the attention of Congress are those pursued by almost every claimant before that body, and which must be pursued if success be attained there, or even before the ordinary State Legislature. A man can not hope for success unless he employ some one to present his case before the committee to which it is referred, and urge favorable action by its membership and by the members of that House to which it is favorably reported. Constant pressure must be brought to secure the allowance of the claim, until it is laid before the Executive for his approval. This requires the expenditure of money, and if the employment be contingent upon success in securing its allowance, the fee must necessarily be a very large part of the appropriation.

In view of these conditions, can it be said that the calling of the lobbyist is altogether disreputable? Nay, may we not say that he has become an essential agent in securing modern legislation?

Let me give a few examples of congressional injustice that were righted only by the aid of the lobbyist. When Gen. George Rogers Clark arrived at Kaskaskia in the Winter of 1778 he found himself out of means to prosecute his march to Vincennes. A French priest came forward and offered all his wealth for that purpose, if it would be refunded to him. Clark accepted the offer, and pledged the faith of the government for the reimbursement of the patriotic Frenchman. Vincennes was captured, and this capture formed the sole basis of our demand upon the British for the surrender, at the Peace Conference, of the territory now forming the splendid domains of the States of Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin. And yet Congress never recognized the justness of the good priest's claim until nearly a hundred years had elapsed, and only then after the most persistent lobbying. The priest died in poverty, and his heirs, far removed, only enjoyed a moiety of that due them.

A few years ago, as the last vote was taken in the lower House of Congress, allowing a claim of nearly one hundred thousand dollars, because of the destruction of a large vessel by the Federal authorities during the Revolutionary War, the ears of those present were greeted by the salutations of youthful hands in the gallery, their owners rejoicing that justice at last had made itself manifest through the agency of a congressional vote. And yet those thus applauding were only the great-grandchildren of him to whom justice was due; and they were only enabled to applaud through the work of the lobbyist.

There are many more instances such as these.

What is said of the allowance of claims can be said of much of our legislation. There is little hope of serious legislation arising spontaneously from the floors of a legislative hall, unless the measure has been made by a party platform, or has become since a political measure. The greater part, and decidedly the better part, of our legislation has its origin outside our Legislatures, at the hands of persons who have the welfare of the government at heart. The passage of these proposals is nearly always secured by the most persistent lobbying, not by paid individuals usually, but by men, and sometimes women, who devote their time, their strength, their patience, often their means, and sacrifice their ease for the benefit of the commonwealth and its people. Unless backed by an organization whose members are sufficient to count for something in an election, those urging the enactment of proposed laws often not only meet with a cool reception, but with disagreeable and cynical rebuffs. They are regarded with suspicion or dubbed as "cranks." They are, in fact, lobbyists, and they are actuated by the highest motives. They are as essential to the securing of modern legislation as the officers of a legislative body—perhaps more so.

A few years ago the Commercial Club and several good citizens of this city set about to secure a law which was practically a charter for this city. They employed an attorney who was especially qualified for the task to prepare the proposed law, and paid him for it, however, a mere nominal sum, considering the great amount of labor required. A bill was drafted and introduced in the Legislature. But it was found necessary to appoint committee after committee to lobby (this is the word for it) to secure the passage of the bills, and many citizens went to members of the Legislature and urged its passage. By the most persistent labor the desired result was secured. To-day, through the efforts of the lobbyists, Indianapolis has, perhaps, the most perfect municipal legislation in America. This is only one instance of thousands that could be cited. Without the special efforts put forth, we to-day would have had the old and imperfect law of the past.

The fact is that the lobbyist is essential in order to secure modern legislation, and the conduct and criminal neglect of our legislators have made him a necessity. There is no doubt he has done great harm and brought about much corruption; but on the sum total, at the present day, the balance is on the right side of the ledger of good and evil.—W. W. Thornton, in The Independent.

THE RESULTS OF ROME RULE.

Church conditions among the people of the Philippine Islands are not ideal. By the law of the islands everybody is Roman Catholic. No other church services of any kind are allowed. There are church-buildings in every town, and the churches are the finest buildings, as a rule, in the town. The Roman Catholic cathedral is the finest edifice in the city of Manila. It is under the care of the Jesuits, as are many of the churches on the islands. It was twelve years in building, and cost $1,000,000. The very finest and hardest woods in the Philippines were used for the finishing, and the structure is of a bluish-tint marble. There are exquisite carvings, some of which have recently been made. The education of the young on the islands is in the care of the church authorities. There are no endowed schools and no hospitals. The children go to school only one hour per day for two days each week, and study almost nothing save church history and a few proverbs. Writing is not taught, and reading is taught only to the upper classes.

All news published is censored by the Archbishop of Luzon. The only newspaper in the Philippines is printed in Spanish, and everything in it has been approved by the archbishop.

All marriages have to be celebrated by the priests. Some time ago a marriage was performed between British subjects in the British legation, and so much trouble came from it that a battle well-nigh ensued. Cargoes in the harbors may not be unloaded on feast days except by permission from the priests, which permission has to be paid for. As feast days are rather more numerous than those that are not feast days, the fees are given as a regular thing, and the church greatly enriched. No music is permitted in the houses of the people after ten o'clock at night unless by special permission from the priest, and this permission has also to be paid for.

The great institution of Manila is the lottery. This is drawn monthly, the prizes ranging from $5 to $80,000. It is managed by the public officials and by the archbishop, and $200,000 each month is collected for the State and the Church. It is from this lottery that Spain and the Roman Catholic Church in the Philippines derive much of their enormous revenues.

Wages of farm male laborers are about five cents per day, and each man is required to pay an annual tax of from $1.50 to $25. Much of this tax goes to the church. The archbishop forbids the sale of farm products, but requires them to be simply exchanged. There is a tax for the benefit of the church on cocoanut trees, on animals when killed for food, on shops, mills, and oil presses, and a particularly high tax on cock fights, which are the national pastime of the people.—Exchange.

The pious Quaker's motto, "Do all the good you can, to all the people you can, and in all ways you can," might profitably be adopted by every church member. It accords with what was said of a certain Hebrew in Esther's day, "Seeking the good of his people and speaking good to all his seed." God has sent us into the world to benefit others. Ours ought to be no selfish life. In all earth's relations we can be helpful. We can and should soothe the weary, console the afflicted, aid the necessitous, instruct the ignorant, arouse the desponding, pour oil upon the troubled waters, and minister to the dying. In a word, "Do good to all men as we have opportunity."—Presbyterian.

Do not esteem too lightly the small things of life, for the whole universe of God is made up of insignificant atoms.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Booneville, Miss., EDITOR.

The "protracted-meeting" season is upon us, and special efforts are being made to save sinners. Let us not forget that, having been saved ourselves, we are under obligation to help save others.

Many of the young men and young women of our country are drifting with the tide of worldliness, and, under the influence of so-called society, they have gone far away from God.

The Epworth League represents a life-boat sent out by God to "rescue the perishing," to "throw out the life-line" to save some tempest-tossed sailor who is about to go down beneath the last wave of doubt and dissipation.

In order that we may accomplish the work wherennto we have been called, we need to have much faith, "continuing instant in prayer," studying daily the Word of God, that we may know what things are written concerning us.

Epworth League correspondents will do well to take notice that all communications should be addressed to Booneville, Miss. This will avoid delay in publication. Dr. Black desires the editor of this department to peruse and arrange all matter for these columns; hence we have recently received matter from New Orleans that should have been directed to Booneville, Miss.

Of course, the above notice does not include Prof. Thos. Carter, who so ably prepares the "Study in Missions" each week, and who will continue to send his contribution to the New Orleans office.

From the "Memphis Conference News and Notes," in Nashville Christian Advocate, we clip the following: "The Epworth League of Central Church, also that of the First Church, will conduct the Wednesday evening prayer meetings during the remaining Summer season. This arrangement will, for the time being, supersede the Sunday 7 P. M. devotional service of the Epworth League."

We are glad to note the increased circulation of the Epworth Era. It is reported that Georgia, Tennessee and Virginia have recently added to the list seven hundred new subscribers.

From now until Jan. 1, 1899, the Era will be sent in clubs of ten to one address for twenty-five cents. Let every chapter appoint some one to canvass, and send in the names and amounts at once to the Publishing House at Nashville Tenn.

It is with a feeling of sadness that we chronicle the death of Bro. Hart, formerly one of the livest Leaguers in Arkansas. He occupied a place on the programme of the second International Conference of Epworth Leagues, which convened in Chattanooga three years ago.

The Sardis district has produced an Epworth League poet. We have a lengthy communication before us, which we promise to publish so soon as we shall learn the name and address of the contributor.

We desire to call attention to the following lines, written by Anna B. Baldwin, and published in the Ladies' Home Journal:

"O Lord, thou knowest well how dark the way:
Guide thou my footsteps, lest they stray;
Give me fresh faith for every hour,
Lest I should ever doubt thy power,
And make complaint

"Give me a heart, O Lord, strong to endure;
Help me to keep it simple, pure;
Make me unselfish, helpful, true
In every act, whate'er I do,
And keep content."

We would be glad to have short reports from the district secretaries, stating as to how the work flourishes in their respective districts. Who will be the first to respond?

LESSON V.

SUBJECT—SIAM SAVED; OR, THE MIRACLE OF THE PRESS.

1. The place and people, pages 61 and 62. Their size, customs, and conditions of life, presenting formidable barriers to the progress of the gospel.

2. Origin of the work. Begun by a woman's translating the gospel of Matthew. Note how the press has been of greatest importance to Christianity.

3. Note the development of the work due to this modest beginning. Study successively the labors of devoted missionaries to formulate the work (pages 65 and 66).

4. The crisis (page 68). "Man's extremity is God's opportunity." Illustrate this providential occurrence from the accession of Constantine the Great to throne of Roman Empire.

5. Study the concessions made to Christianity in the famous document of Chaun-Klow on page 71. Compare the utterances of a greater man, Li Hung Chang, in his recent tour of the Western world. Do not these confessions indicate that the rulers of the earth are beginning to acknowledge the sway of Christ?

6. Make a careful study of spiritual pedigree from page 72. Note other instances of like spiritual descent in the history of the church.

7. Re-read the section and gather up the data that shows that Siam is an illustration of the passage that sometimes, at least, "the kingdom of God cometh not by observation."

Suggestion: A pleasant ten minutes might be spent in discussing the relative values of the pulpit and the press as agents for the dissemination of the gospel.

WE WOULD SEE JESUS

BY MRS. G. D. ELDERKIN.

If when walking in some highway
Our dear Savior we should meet,
How we'd rip to do him honor,
Fall in homage at his feet!

If we saw him sad and weary,
We would comfort—all we could;
If we saw him cold and hungry,
We would bring him clothes and food.

If our blessed Lord were thirsty,
How we'd hasten to the spring,
And with eager, trembling gladness,
A refreshing draught would bring.

Sister, brother, let your vision
Be more clear the Lord to see;
He is ever walking with us,
And entreating you and me.

Every trembling hand extended,
Every cry of want or pain,
Is a plea from our dear Savior.
Shall he plead with us in vain?

For the smallest service rendered
To the least of Jesus' own,
Will most surely be remembered
By our Lord upon his throne!

WHAT CAN BE DONE?

A Christian layman, after a thorough inspection of the Scarritt Bible and Training school, a few years ago, remarked to its principal: "It is a noble institution, Madam, and in twenty-five years the church will fully appreciate its value; you are twenty-five years ahead of the times." It is a source of real gratification to the friends and teachers of this school that the prophecy of the aforesaid brother is being proven false, and that at the close of six years the W. F. M. S. and the church at large, in a measure, are beginning to show true appreciation of the aim and work of this, their training-school for Christian workers. The hearty and unqualified endorsement of its graduates, coming up from every one of our mission fields, can but open the eyes of our church to the quality of the work done in its halls. As a proof of his appreciation, and from an earnest desire to advance the cause of missions, Dr. Y. J. Allen, of China, will himself meet the expenses of a missionary candidate the ensuing session. But the purpose of this institution embraces the home, as well as the foreign field; the young women of our Christian homes, of our churches, Leagues and Missionary Societies, stand greatly in need of its course of Bible study, Church History, Methods, etc., and its practical training in all lines of Christian service.

It gives us real pleasure to see that many of our young women are awaking to their deficiencies and needs, and are desirous of taking advantage of the privileges afforded them in the Scarritt Bible and Training-school, thus obeying the injunction of Holy Writ, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly divideth the word of truth." (II. Tim. ii, 15.) But other inspired words of the great apostle are as true to-day as when they were penned: "For behold your calling, brethren, how that not many wise after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called." (1. Cor. i, 26.)

It is exceptional to receive an application for entrance into the training-school from a young woman who is able to meet her own expenses. It is a sad truth that when liberally supplied with this world's goods, few, very few, of our young women dedicate their lives to active service for the Master. To-day the principal of the training-school has on file 10 applications for entrance for the coming session from young women who desire to fit themselves for efficient Christian service; 4 of them for the foreign field, but each one asks for a scholarship, not being able to defray her own expenses. The church needs the service of these 10 young women; the training-school needs these 10 Bible students, and it is a real sorrow to the principal to be compelled to reply to their earnest, eloquent appeals: "The scholarships are all filled, and also the five positions in the school in which young women can defray their own expenses by extra service." Shall these young women, with hearts full of love for Christ and human souls, and eager to learn his Holy Word that they may teach others, be refused entrance and preparation? Our Students' Loan Fund is too small to be of material service. What can be done? Are there not men and women in our churches whom God has blessed with means, who would be willing and glad to meet wholly, or in part, the expenses of one of these 10 young women? One hundred and sixty dollars will pay all charges for one session; board, laundry and books. What a privilege to be able to provide a substitute in heathen lands, or a Christian worker, well-equipped for service, to take the place of some loved child called early to our Father's house, or to carry on the work of God after we are called to our reward!

May the Holy Spirit inspire some steward of the Lord's bounty who reads these lines to come to the assistance of these chosen servants of his! "He that receiveth you receiveth me, and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me." (Matt. x, 40.)

MARY L. HARGROVE,
Bible Teacher, S. B. and T. School.

A GRATEFUL ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

MR. EDITOR: I rise to thank Bro. W. H. Huntley for gallantly coming to the rescue of two of our Conference colleges—Port Gibson Female College, and Edward McGehee College at Woodville. On reading Dr. Mellen's article, expressed tersely and with conviction as usual, my first impulse was to write a reply, immediate and protestant. On second thought, however, I found myself hesitating for a reason. My own personal regard for an institution that had been nursed through tedious months with exceeding care into something of its pristine vigor and usefulness, was that sufficient grounds for denying the assertion that two schools were enough for one Conference—that the larger and more flourishing institutions were the ones to be fostered to receive the support of the brethren of the Conference. I once had a very beautiful, but thoroughly old-fashioned, notion that when a mother had one child, an older daughter, perhaps, that was in years that are gone her mainstay and comfort, now weaker, less vigorous than her younger, hardier sisters—I once fondly believed the mother regarded that feebler one more tenderly than the rest, giving to it more of helpful care and attention. But this is no day of sentimentalism. In the intensely practical, fin de siecle realism the motto is the tontine theory, or the survival of the fittest, meaning, as we see demonstrated daily, the strongest, or with ability to hold out longest. Notwithstanding the fact that the great universities are recognizing the more thorough preparation, the greater breadth of individual development and original thought comes from the student in the small colleges. Notwithstanding the fact that our literary and elective courses are a bulwark of strength, and the independent womanhood grown therein a tower of defense, none of these, nor all of these, can compensate for being something slighter and less conveniently located than the rest. The fiat has gone forth, and there shall be, not four nor six Conference schools, but two. And in all earnestness and disinterestedness I agree that it is better so. Unless the Conference can sustain or lease the colleges that are church property, see that they are kept up as they should be; currioula, as well as buildings, kept in repair, and a high standard maintained throughout, it would be infinitely more to the purpose to sell off the property and invest the proceeds in endowment for the colleges that are best adapted by location; healthfulness and convenience being the considerations, not buildings nor previous endowment. We are not preachers, nor even practical logicians; neither are we wholly unselfish in the regard. But I unhesitatingly aver that not one preacher or layman president has the interest of the Christian education of our girls nearer to heart than the women who have the honor to be at the heads of Port Gibson and Edward McGehee Colleges, respectively. I believe that we will concur most heartily in any plan for correlation or other measure that will best further the influence and efficiency of our Conference schools.

In conclusion—for I have spoken too long already—let me say briefly, our college in Port Gibson is in better condition, financially, than for a number of years; neither in arrears for rent nor teachers' salaries. The health of the school and town is unsurpassed, the character of the student-body most select, the community cultured and refined, the faculty thoroughly equipped and competent, and the high moral bearing of the school beyond censure. Port Gibson, moreover, is the prettiest town in the State, conveniently located on the Memphis and New Orleans division of the I. C., and connecting closely with the Jackson and Natchez railroad. We cordially invite Bros. Huntley and Mellen to make us a visit. Then they may express themselves through the columns of the ADVOCATE again, with your permission. Yours faithfully,

W. L. PARK,
Principal Literary Department, P. G. F. College.

ONE'S VALUE TO THE CHURCH.

The correct estimate of one's value to the church is a problem that is not likely to be quickly solved by the human mind—not "till the mists have rolled away," and "we know as we are known." With all the aid of supposed phenomena on this subject, man is at best but a guesser, for it is not only the quantity and quality of the influence exerted during an individual's life, but also the perpetuity of that influence down through the future, that is indispensable to a just estimate of his worth. Yet ever and anon we see unwise comparisons of the statistical results of men's labors and inferential conclusions, in bold statement or lurking innuendo, of the relative values of these lives to the church and the cause it represents. Such a comparison formed part of the argument in a recent article in the ADVOCATE.

It requires but little thought to see that numerals constitute but a meagre part of a history. The conditions under which those numbers were wrought into the life's record are worth a thousandfold more as factors of true valuation than the numbers themselves. There are fields not a few—and in Christian lands—where an addition of five to the fold of God will lay a heavier tribute of thought, effort and consecration on the pastor than would be required in other fields for the ingathering of half as many hundred. Nor must we forget the quality of the additions, for all ingatherings are not additions to the church. Sometimes the outgoings, that have cost the faithful pastor heartaches and tears—and, perhaps, slander and persecution—are the real additions to the working power of the church that count more for its future than any that swell a year's statistics or bloat a register. As long as the church has its present variety of preachers, that one is of inestimable value who does not fear or blush to report a decimated membership that is the result of his fidelity to his sacred trust. The man who is shouting over his rapid additions to church registers may be simply making work and sowing sorrow for the thoughtful, conscientious and efficient minister of God. There was the day of Christ's popularity, and there was the day of outcast and crucifixion; but it is this day of rejection that is of richest value and sweetest memory to the church. This shows us that the church can not estimate the worth of its sons and daughters as well by what they are willing to do as by what they are willing to suffer for its success, for "there are first that shall be last, and there are last that shall be first."

The knowledge of three things is indispensable to a correct estimate of one's value to the church: 1. The degree of his consecration. 2. His natural gifts. 3. The cultivation these gifts have received. Other things being equal, that man is unquestionably of greatest value to the cause of soul-winning who has most fully developed his powers. So true is this that our church considers as extremely doubtful the consecration of that minister who does not manifest a tender conscience on the subject of the cultivation of his every faculty that will add to the efficiency of his work. Nothing less than this can be the logic of the mental furnishing upon which she conditions ordination; and she charitably concludes that the preacher who will study for the less motive of success in his examinations and promotion in orders will undoubtedly cherish a conscience ever responsive to that sublime incentive: the highest development of self for the best service of the Master.

Correspondence.

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY."

And now my friend, Rev. I. W. Cooper, A. M., is at the head of old Centenary College. He is a choice man and a perfect gentleman. If I am not mistaken in my estimate of him, he will make a first class college president. The people of Louisiana will be proud of him when they come to know him well. He is a level-headed, cultivated, genial Christian gentleman—a good man for boys to look up to and to measure by. This last named is a great item in the make-up of a college president. He should be both a pattern for and a moulder of young men. Bro. Cooper is both. Centenary has a noble record. She has given to the world and the church a long line of noble men. They have been leaders in many places and prominent in all the professions. I believe it is right to judge colleges by the men and women they turn out. This is the purpose had in view when they were erected. When they fail in this they fail in everything.

I do hope the good people of Louisiana—especially the Methodists—will stand by Centenary and give Bro. Cooper all the support and encouragement he needs. I know he will do his best. It is in him to do that way. He is no half way nor half hearted man in anything. Whatever his hand finds to do he does with his might. This institution ought to be liberally endowed. This is the only way to insure permanency and the largest usefulness to colleges and universities. It takes money to make men and to qualify them for the largest usefulness.

Dr. Cooper wants your sons—boys and young men—to educate them and to make men out of them. Give him a chance at them, and give them a chance with him. The Doctor will soon make full proof of his mission and ministry to and for them.

Years ago I was helping Bro. Cooper in a meeting. I discoursed on Martha and Mary. I said something about how Martha was "cumbered with much serving," and made some observations on the Marthas living now who worried their lives out of them fixing a fine dinner when the pastor—the Lord's minister—came to dine or sup. "Give me," I said, "a cold crust and a glass of milk." That day Dr. Cooper sent me for dinner a glass of sour buttermilk and a hoe-cake of corn-bread. That was the first time I ever had to eat my own preaching, and so soon after it fell from my lips. The bread was sweet, but the milk extremely sour. I heartily wished some good Martha were about the place, and there was, for Sister Cooper had a fine dinner in the dining-room.

Saturday evening the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered, followed by consecration service. Mrs. Hargrove's sublime talk on the "Glory of God" was a feast for the soul, and verily we could see his glory shining in her face as she told of his wonderful revelation to those who feed on his words.

Sunday, at 11 A. M., a magnificent sermon from Bro. Gibbs was greatly enjoyed. 4 P. M.—Children's service, conducted by Mrs. Mary Hargrove; subject, "Grow in Grace." 9 P. M.—Annual report of Conference corresponding secretary, and a fine address by our most worthy president, Mrs. Lipscomb, which was interesting, sweet and touching, captivating all present.

Winona district again leads off in the largest amount of money raised—something over $1,000. Mrs. Lay, of Winona, contributed more than half the amount. Aberdeen district is more than $200 in advance of last year—holds the banner for work accomplished; and Prairie Juveniles, or "Fannie Hanghton Memorial," for "specials."

Sisters, we can justly feel proud of our district, especially of our district secretary. True, we do not yet possess a Mrs. Lay; neither have they a Mrs. Shell.

Monday morning Miss Sallie Hinton, of Holly Springs, discussed the "Auxiliary Meeting." First the auxiliary, where our excellent Advocate's program is carried out in a listless way, without interest or spirituality; next, reversing the picture, she presented us with a live president—good discipline, heart all aglow with devotion to God and his work; always arousing great interest, and giving to each member present spiritual food to digest through the coming month, enabling them to gather enough spiritual strength to lead them to their next meeting. Not only do we need number one presidents, but live, enthusiastic members, to make monthly meetings a success.

Monday evening Mrs. Clifford discoursed on "Our Finances," which contained two striking points—consecrated purses and model treasurers. At 8 P. M., Mrs. McIntosh gave her report of "Woman's Board." Our Conference reported to have gained ground this year. South Georgia Conference has the privilege of naming the "Korean School," having raised the largest amount of money for that field. South Carolina follows next, and names the chapel in this school.

Thursday morning finishes up the reports from auxiliary and juvenile societies. 3 P. M.—Reports from the different committees were read, which will soon be published in our Minutes. 8 P. M.—Sister Shell read an article on "Specials" to a large and appreciative audience. Would that all members of the nine districts could have been present, for we were indeed proud of specials and representatives of Aberdeen district. Her secretary was elected as reserve delegate to Woman's Board. Our former (most excellent) president, Mrs. Hargrove, certainly did justice to her subject, "The Scarritt Bible and Training-school." Miss Viola Blackburn gave interesting facts concerning the "Women of Mexico," making touching appeals in their behalf. Same officers were elected, with the exception of three new district secretaries and Conference editor.

Sisters, we have a noble band of officers selected from our strongest, best women—those consecrated to our Master's work. Remember, they can not stand alone; our co-operation is needed to sustain them. Let's not sit idly by rejoicing over victories already won, but resolve to make this and each succeeding year the best of our lives.

Muldon, Miss., July 2, 1898.

Dear Sisters of the North Mississippi Conference:

As the subject was agitated at Greenville that none but the higher Conference officers could serve as reserve delegate to Woman's Board of Foreign Missions, it was thought best to have the clause under the title, "Conference Societies," By-laws, Section 1, interpreted for us at Woman's Board headquarters, Nashville, Tenn. The clause referred to is, "A reserve shall be elected to attend the meetings of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions in the absence of the corresponding secretary." Now, the answer received:

"MY DEAR SISTER: You ask me what the By-laws, Section 1, of Conference Societies, means. It means just exactly what it says: 'A reserve shall be elected to attend the meeting of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions in the absence of the corresponding secretary.' The Conference Society can elect whoever it pleases, whether she is an officer at all, or not."

So, my sisters, you can see that no preference or precedent is given, and all officers and delegates have an equal showing. Let every woman of the North Mississippi Conference study our Constitution and By-laws, and when discussions are brought forward, we will then know our duty, and all will be well.

MRS. J. L. LENOIR.

NOT APPRECIATED.

Fain would I now speak a passing word of comfort to another class of workers—those that are not appreciated. I am not going to say much, because I have not much sympathy with them. Yet I know that the smallest slight chafes those who are over-sensitive. They murmur: "I do my best and nobody thanks me." You think yourself a martyr, and complain that you are misrepresented. Be it so, dear friend; that was your Master's lot, and it is the lot of all his servants. This is a cross we must all carry, or we shall never wear the crown. Do you fancy that this is a new experience? Look at Joseph. His brethren could not bear him, and yet it was he that saved the family and fed them in time of famine. Look at David. His brothers asked why he had left the charge of the sheep to come down to the battle, suspecting that the pride of his heart had brought him among the soldiers and the standards. Yet nobody could bring back Goliath's head but that young David. Take a lesson from the ruddy hero; take no notice of what your brethren say about you. Go and bring back the giant's head. A good adventure is the best answer to evil accusations. If you are serving the Master, let their scandal stir you up to more self-consecration. If they cry out against you as too forward, serve the Lord with more vigor, and you will antidote the venom of their tongues. Did you enter into Christ's work in order to be honored among men? Then retire from it, for you came with a bad motive. But if you enlisted purely to bring honor to him, and to win his smile, what more do you want? What more do you want? Be not, therefore, disheartened because you are not applauded. Be certain of this, that to be kept in the rear rank is often necessary to future eminence. If you take a man and put him in front, and pat him on the back, and say, "What a great man he is!" he will make a false step before long, and there will be the end of your hero; but when a man is brought forward by God, he is often one whom everybody criticises, finds fault with, and declaims as an impostor, but the banter he is exposed to serves as ballast for his mind. When he comes off with success he will not be spoiled with conceit, for the grace of God will make him bow with gratitude. The sword that is meant for a princely hand, to split through skull and backbone in the day of battle, must be annealed in the furnace again and again; it can not be fit for such desperate work until it has passed through the fire full many a time. Do not ask to be appreciated. Never be so mean as that. Appreciate yourself in the serenity of conscience, and leave your honor with your God.—Spurgeon.

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord; for they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them." They rest from their labors. All their struggles, disappointments, failures, backslidings, which made them unhappy here, because they could not perfectly do the will of God, are past and over forever. But their works follow them. The good which they did on earth—that is not past and over. It can not die. It lives and grows forever, following on in their path long after they are dead, and bearing fruit unto everlasting life, not only in them, but in men whom they never saw, and in generations yet unborn.—Charles Kingsley.

It is a fatal delusion to imagine that the arts of life, which only enlarge its resources, have any necessary tendency to improve its spirit; or that the completest acquaintance with science affords any guarantee of higher goodness. No laboratory can neutralize the poison of the passion, or find a crucible to make the hard nucleus of the heart flow down; no observatory can show us a new constellation of the virtues, correct the aberration of life's true light, or deepen any heavens but those of space.—Dr. James Martineau.

Are you looking for some opportunity of doing good? If you are, take to heart these words of William Burleigh's: "There never was a day that did not bring its own opportunity for doing good that never could have been done before, and never can be again." These are true words. You can prove them if you will. It is often true that those who talk most about "wanting to do good if they could" have no perception of the opportunities given them every day of their lives. If you are in earnest, you will never be idle for lack of opportunity.—The Standard.

Carry religious principles into common life, and common life will lose its transitoriness. The world passes away. The things seen are temporal. Soon business, with all its cares and anxieties, the whole "unprofitable stir and fever of the world," will be to us a thing of the past. But religion does something better than sigh and moan over the perishableness of earthly things. It finds in them the seeds of immortality.—John Caird.

Clergyman's Statement

Nerve Strength Gained by Taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

BRIGHTON, IOWA.—Rev. Bernard M. Shulick of this place, owing to weakness of the nerves, was for a time unable to attend to his duties. He makes this statement: "I have suffered for a long time from weak nerves. After I had taken a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla I became quite well again. The weakness of the nerves has now wholly disappeared and I am able to attend to my duties again. I am therefore grateful to Hood's Sarsaparilla and I recommend it to every one who suffers from weak nerves."

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best—in fact the One True Blood Purifier.

MOTIVES FOR MISSIONARY EFFORT IN CHINA.

BY REV. A. P. PARKER, D. D.

The value of all moral and religious work is estimated in terms of the motive that prompts it. This is the law of the kingdom of God. Many wonderful works may be done in the Master's name; yet if they proceed not from loving obedience to him, they amount to nothing in the final account.

Motives are based on ideas, and ideas rule the world. Every great movement, social, political, religious, is the expression of some idea that has taken hold of the minds of men. This idea furnishes both the motive for the movement and the means by which the objects of the movement are to be accomplished.

The great missionary enterprise is the expression of a dominant thought that has taken hold of a vast number of Christian people all over the world. What is this dominant thought, this ruling motive, that sends forth from Christendom every year such an army of men and women to go to the ends of the earth to engage in such an enterprise?

The world does not understand our motives any more than it understood the motives of our Lord Jesus, nor of his apostles, nor of any of the faithful preachers of the Word in all ages of the world. If there were a Klondike in China, there would be no difficulty in understanding why men would want to go there. To go there even at great discomfort, to engage in the tea and silk trade, and in order to get rich quickly, is perfectly rational and easily understood. Even to join the army or the navy and go to the far East to kill and be killed is thought to be entirely reasonable. But to go to a heathen land to teach the people about the true God and help them to a better life, to convert them from the errors of their ways and turn them from darkness to light, this, when there is no money in it, no fame or personal gain, is quite absurd, and the wise men of the world shake their heads and refuse to believe that it is prompted by disinterested motives. They cast about, therefore, to find some, to them, more rational explanation of the phenomenon. Hence all sorts of motives but the right one are imputed to the missionaries, both by their own fellow-countrymen and the natives to whom they go. But our judgment is with the Lord and our work with our God, and we need not fear what man can do unto us.

Motives determine action and the use of means to an end. It is well, therefore, for missionaries and candidates for the mission field to examine their motives very carefully so as to have a clear perception of what they are attempting to do and what means they propose to use in doing it.

A brief statement of a few points may be helpful to some.

1. The missionary does not go to China, or any other heathen land, for the money there is in it.

(1) After long experience and observation the various Mission Boards have fixed the salaries paid to the missionaries on the basis of enough to support them and no more.

(2) It is a fact, universally known among the missionaries, that the amount received is, as a rule, with but few exceptions, barely enough, and there is no chance to lay up anything for sickness, old age, etc.

(3) I know of more than one missionary who had a little money when he first went to China, but on account of sickness or other causes had to spend it all to supplement his salary in the support of his family.

(4) There are missionaries, not a few, who could get a larger salary by engaging in some other employment. Some few have yielded to the temptation to better their temporal affairs. But such cases are, happily, very rare.

(5) There are not many of the missionaries in China who, if actuated simply by a desire to find an agreeable place to live, would not gladly exchange places with the home pastors even with the small salaries that the home pastors usually get.

These are facts.

2. We do not go to China simply to educate and civilize the people. Education and civilization are good in their places, and we want the Chinese to get all the good, both material and intellectual, that our highest Christian civilization can confer upon them. But these things can not and do not save men from their sins. They are perfectly consistent with the most abandoned moral character. They have no tendency Godward. They have no power to convict men of sin and make them morally better. Anyone, therefore, who believes that the Chinese must first be civilized and educated before they can be converted to Christianity would better stay at home. There is no place for him on the mission field.

It is a sad fact that a few missionaries have apparently lost faith in their message and have turned aside to the production of books on History, Science Civilization, etc., or to the promotion of schemes for the material improvement of the country. But such men have become shorn of spiritual power and have taken a subordinate position in the great missionary army.

With but few exceptions, the 3000 missionaries in China believe that the gospel is the power of God unto salvation, and that the simple proclamation of it is the most effective method of saving the people from sin and idolatry and every false way.

What, then, is the true motive for missionary effort in China, or indeed, in any mission field? The answer is, the one-sufficient and all-comprehensive motive for missionary effort is the plain command of our Lord Jesus Christ: "Go disciple all nations. Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." No other motive is needed. No other motive is so plain or so easily understood. And all who love the Lord Jesus in sincerity will do their best to carry out this last command of their risen and ascended Lord, by either going themselves or helping to send others.

With this command before us we need not speculate as to what will become of the heathen who have never heard of the historical Christ. We do not know what will become of them. We simply leave them in the hands of the Judge of all the earth, who will do right, and who will undoubtedly judge every man according to the light he has. Our business is not to speculate, but to obey.

With this command upon us we have no time for side issues and secondary matters. Our one work is to preach the gospel in the most effective manner possible and build up a witnessing church in heathen lands.

With this command upon us we can have unbounded faith in our message and be perfectly confident of success. And even if the results do not come at once, we can still go forward to our appointed task, like obedient soldiers obeying their general, though they can not see any immediate results from their effort and can not understand why they are commanded to do this or that.

With this command upon us our duty is not primarily to save the people from their sins. Our duty is to obey our Master, and he does the saving. He depends on us to obey him in the proclamation of his truth to the people, and then he manifests his power in their salvation, and he has taught us that he can not do this until we have done our part.

Obedience, OBEDIENCE, OBEDIENCE! This is the first and last word in the Missionary Propaganda. When the spirit of implicit, loving obedience fills the missionary he becomes a channel of divine power that nothing can resist.

No other motive, professional or otherwise, will sustain a missionary amid the harrassing difficulties and disappointments that constantly confront him. No other motive will keep his spiritual life in the glow and warmth of a devoted zeal without which all duties become mere perfunctory routine and all work becomes lifeless and powerless for good.

TOLERANCE.

Do you show your love by your works? While you have time, as you have opportunity, do you in fact "do good to all men," neighbors or strangers, friends or enemies, good or bad? Do you do them all the good you can, endeavoring to supply all their wants, assisting them both in body and soul, to the uttermost of your power? If thou art thus minded—may every Christian say yea!—if thou art but sincerely desirous of it, and following on till thou attain, then "thy heart is right, as my heart is with thy heart."

"If it be, give me thy hand." I do not mean, "Be of my opinion." You need not; I do not expect or desire it. Neither do I mean, "I will be of your opinion." I can not; it does not depend on my choice; I can no more think than I can see or hear as I will. Keep you your opinion, I mine; and that as steadily as ever. You need not even endeavor to come over to me, or bring me over to you. I do not desire you to dispute those points, or to hear or speak one word concerning them. Let all opinions alone on one side and the other: only "give me thine hand." I do not mean, "Embrace my modes of worship: nor, I will embrace yours." This, also, is a thing which does not depend on your choice, or mine. We must both act as each is full persuaded in his own mind. —John Wesley.

The great majority of people will find the work of life near at hand. It may be, perhaps, to correct the faults in one's self, to sweeten the atmosphere at home, to bless the local church, to consecrate one's business, or to purify the political atmosphere. Trite and true as is this statement, it is a difficult one to apprehend. If we set ourselves to master it, the task is soon abandoned, and we are looking far away for some other and greater work to do. The most successful and useful minister is the man whose labors are confined strictly to the cultivation of the one vineyard committed to his care. The minister's best helper is that member of his church who finds duty nearest at hand, and can always be relied upon to sustain the home church in its regular constituted work.—Zion's Herald.

When He takes your work away and bids you no longer to do good and obedient things, but only to be good and obedient, surely that is not the death of faith. That may be faith's transfiguration.—Phillips Brooks.

I wonder many times that ever a child of God should have a sad heart, considering what the Lord is preparing for him.—S. Rutherford.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. L. J. Jones, Walnut Grove, Miss., July 21, 1898: "Will you allow me to correct one mistake that occurred in the proceedings of our District Conference (Brandon district)? Our secretary states there was a new parsonage built at Raleigh during the present year. If this statement is not set right with some, they might wonder what I did with the money that was sent to me from a distance, and the large amount collected on the work. I wish to state that we had the parsonage covered, one chimney up, lime and brick for the other one. Other work was done. I mention this not to hurt the feelings of anyone, nor to let the world know what I have done, but to satisfy the minds of good people who assisted in time of need."

The trouble with most men is not that they do not know how to work, but that they do not know how to rest. If a man knows how to rest and how to take care of his health, there is hardly a limit to the amount of work that he may accomplish without doing himself injury. The trouble is that men not only overwork, but that they neglect to rest at the proper hours and neglect their health. A man passes a restless, sleepless night, gets up dull and headachey in the morning, goes to the breakfast table without an appetite, bolts what little he does eat and rushes away to business. He is drowsy and nervous by turns all day and forces himself to work against his will. He takes five minutes for lunch and not a minute to rest afterward. He goes home at night utterly fagged out and with no appetite for supper. The idea of taking medicine or even taking a little rest never enters his head. Some night his wife finds him in the rocking-chair before the fire-place—dead. The doctor will call it nervous prostration or heart trouble or something of that kind. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the best medicine for hard working men. It restores a keen edge to the appetite. It facilitates the flow of the digestive juices and makes the digestion and assimilation perfect. It invigorates the liver and purifies and enriches the blood. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and nerve-tonic. Medicine dealers sell it.

N. Gaddis, Esq., of No. 313 South J Street, Tacoma, Washington, writes: "I was taken ill in February 1892. My lungs hurt me and I got so poor that I was just skin and bone. I thought I was going to die. I tried Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and it saved my life."

Pierce's Pellets. For sick headache, biliousness and constipation, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the most rational cure known. They are mild but thorough and effective. They regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Never gripe. No other pill is like them.

BELHAVEN COLLEGE

FOR YOUNG LADIES,

JACKSON, MISS.

Select home school for girls. Number of boarding pupils limited. Offers college courses with degrees. Also eclectic courses with department diplomas in Literature, Music, Art and Elocution. Location and environments unequalled for beauty and healthfulness.

No College in the South offers better advantages in Music, Art and Elocution. Mr. Chas. Robinson Kelly, Superintendent of the Department of Elocution in the New England Conservatory, Boston, praises the work done at Belhaven. He says:

"Those young ladies from the South who were formerly students of BELHAVEN COLLEGE stand not only in the highest rank in their classes here, but are regarded, WITHOUT EXCEPTION, as possessing those true WOMANLY TRAITS of character and that degree of INTELLECTUAL DEVELOPMENT which command instant respect and ADMIRATION."

Mr. Carl Faelton and General Manager Frank Hale also endorse in the highest terms the work done at Belhaven.

Next Session Opens September 14th, 1898.

North Texas Female College.

SHERMAN, TEXAS.

This College has just closed another most prosperous and pleasant session. The class of work done here the past session has been of the very highest order. Mrs. Key has just returned from Nashville and other Eastern points, where she inspected schools and school facilities, and feels more than satisfied with the N. T. F. C., and assures the girls of Louisiana and Texas that it is not necessary for them to go East to get the best educational advantages and enjoy the most refined and æsthetic surroundings. Nowhere is there better work done or better facilities offered—earnest, able, conscientious teachers, new, full chemical and physical outfit; individual work in the laboratory required and performed by each member of the class.

LITERATURE.—Three years' course required in Literature—one in American and two in English.

MATHEMATICS.—The course in Mathematics is very complete, and thoroughly taught—higher than is taught in most female colleges.

LATIN.—The Latin course is unexcelled, and is the same as that in the best male colleges in the land.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC.—The Conservatory of Music is pre-eminently the best in the South. During the past session we have had pupils who studied under Sherwood, Carl Faelton, and other leading teachers of the East; also pupils from the New England and other conservatories. All of these pupils were more than satisfied with the advantages offered here. We feel sure that if those desiring the best musical advantages were cognizant of the ability and talent in this conservatory, they certainly would not leave the South. How can anyone expect to get a better piano teacher than Herr Von Mickwitz, who is personally recommended by the great Leschetizky as teacher and pianist?

SCHOOL OF ART. We are very fortunate in securing the services of Miss Frances Fowler as Art teacher. She was for six years teacher of Art in Wells College, and spent twelve years studying with the masters in Europe. She is a lady of the highest intelligence, and will deliver to the school monthly lectures on the subject of Art. Mrs. Holt personally inspected Miss Fowler's work in New York City last Summer, and she assures us that she has seen nothing like it in the South.

CAMPUS AND DORMITORIES. The Dormitories are well equipped and thoroughly comfortable. The campus is pronounced beautiful by all who see it, and it is certainly conducive to the æsthetic and refined. Nowhere will you find a lovelier home for your daughters.

SPECIAL REMARKS.—We have maintained the high standard and efficiency of this College, regardless of the existing depression, knowing that the people of Texas and Louisiana will be slow to economize at the expense of the comfort and culture of their daughters. Appreciating the fact that the public are often deceived by misrepresentations of school catalogues and agents, we extend to all who have daughters to educate a hearty invitation to visit and inspect the N. T. F. C. for themselves. For catalogue, address

A WORD TO PARENTS AND TEACHERS.

During the past year my duties as secretary of the Evangelical Alliance have brought me into contact with the pastors of nearly two-score cities. In almost every city they have spoken to me of the deplorable prevalence of vice among children and young people. Facts have been brought to light which are shocking in the last degree. I am not speaking of children of the slums whose heredity and environment have both been vicious, but of children who belong to good homes, often Christian homes, whose parents refuse to believe evil of them until confession forces conviction.

Statements have come to me from California, Minnesota, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Connecticut which indicate that this corruption is widespread and exceptional at the present time.

The exceptional cause of it would seem to be the wide circulation of vicious literature. Salacious French fiction whose sale has long been a crime in England, and is now outlawed even in Paris, may legally corrupt American youth. But doubtless the worst source of contamination is the obscene literature, often illustrated with photographs, which, though forbidden by law, finds easy access to the mails, and is surreptitiously distributed by hand often on the platforms of railway stations, sometimes on the play-grounds of children.

One who has never seen this obscene literature can form no notion of it. A Christian imagination simply can not conceive of it. It might have come from the cesspool of perdition. This poison has repeatedly been found in public schools, academies and colleges. In some cases every boy and every girl in the school has confessed to having read it; and the vice which pastors are deploring is the perfectly natural result.

Two things, it seems to me, can be done and ought to be. First, let parents and teachers break the conspiracy of silence, into which they seem to have entered. Rare are the parents who do not leave their children to learn from vicious companions the most sacred facts of their physical life. I do not believe one father in twenty does his duty by his boy, in this particular. If he does not know how to speak on so delicate and difficult a subject, let him put into his boy's hand a judicious book like "What a Young Boy Ought to Know," one of a series of dollar books by Sylvanus Stall, D. D., of Philadelphia, admirably adapted to meet the needs of parents and teachers, and which has received eminent endorsement everywhere.

Secondly, the curfew ordinance which has been adopted in many Western cities with admirable results would throw a shield around the children during the hours of greatest temptation.

Pastors who have seen the working of this ordinance tell me that it has wrought a great reformation where it has been adopted, and city officials are loud in its praise.

If we give our children less liberty and more light, there will be less vice. JOSIAH STRONG.

New York.

Few ministers in the United States are more widely known or more highly honored than Dr. Josiah Strong, author of "Our Country." No writer of the day has a stronger hold upon the Christian public. The article above was sent to us by Dr. Strong, accompanied by a private letter of considerable length setting forth the facts which caused him to write this appeal. The facts referred to, gathered from almost all sections of our great country, reveal a condition of things among the youth of our land that is absolutely appalling. Our young people are being contaminated through the instrumentality of the press. Books and pamphlets as vile as hell itself are being industriously and systematically circulated among the youth in our schools; and this literature is being read while the parents are in blissful ignorance of the fact. And not only is this pernicious literature being circulated and read on a scale of prodigious magnitude; it is being incorporated into the life and character of the rising generation. Our young people of both sexes are being led into the most degrading and disgusting vices. The extent to which young manhood and womanhood has already been debauched in some sections of our country is appalling in the extreme. Having come into possession of these facts from a source so unquestionable, we would be recreant to our duty as a journalist if we did not sound an alarm-bell in the ears of parents, teachers and others who are custodians of the morals of the young. Parents should exercise a most rigid censorship over the literature that comes into their homes. They should not take it for granted that their children are too pure to take vile literature into their hands. They should remember also that such literature, when it comes into the home, is absolutely sure to be carefully concealed. Boys and girls know by an unerring instinct the opposition of parents to this sort of literature; hence paterfamilias or materfamilias will find it only by searching "as with a lighted candle." And not only should there be a literary censorship in every home; there should also be the utmost vigilance as to associations. It is as true now as it was eighteen hundred years ago, that "evil communications corrupt good manners." Let the heart of a youth be corrupted by contact with this diabolical literature, and then let there be no restrictions as to associations, and no prophetic ken is needed to foretell the result. It is our deliberate judgment, formed as the result of years of careful observation, that there is no one matter concerning which the average American parent exercises so little common sense as in the matter of the associations of his children. Men notorious for lechery and general profligacy can go into almost anybody's parlor and arm almost anybody's daughter to any place where she chooses to go. And as to the boys, they choose their own associates of both sexes ad libitum, and spend as much time away from home as they choose, their parents being ignorant of their whereabouts. Of course, this state of things is not universal. If it were, Ichabod would already be written upon our walls. We rejoice to know that there are still many parents in the world who strive carefully and prayerfully to preserve the integrity of the young minds placed under their care from all contaminating influences, even at the expense of being called old-fashioned by society magnates.

Read Dr. Strong's article; read, reflect, and act. As to the curfew law, we believe in that; but wise parents will not wait for a town council to lay a restraining hand upon their children. There should be a curfew law in every home.

A FORWARD MOVEMENT.

In New York City, a few days since, there was held what we regard as one of the most significant religious convocations of the century, viz.: a conference of representatives of the foreign missionary societies of the leading Protestant Churches of America. The movement in favor of such a conference was initiated by the Board of Missions of the Presbyterian Church (North). The purpose of the conference was to agree upon a definite co-operative policy in carrying on mission work in Cuba, Porto Rico, the Caroline Islands, and the Philippines. It was assumed that the United States will come out victor in the present war, and that, whatever international complications may arise as to the final disposition of this territory, the whole of it will, at the close of the war, be accessible to missionaries of every faith and order. The sceptre of Rome will be broken. She will no longer have power to persecute other communions, or to place insuperable barriers in their way.

Another conference is to be held soon, to which each Mission Board interested in these new fields is invited to send representatives. No church makes any compromise of its principles by participating in these conventions. There will simply be mutual agreement as to the stations to be occupied by each church. There are three churches ready to enter the Philippines, viz.: the Presbyterian (North), the M. E. Church, and the Baptist (North). The American Board wishes to occupy the Caroline Islands. Cuba will probably be occupied by the Southern Baptists, the Southern Methodists, the Southern Presbyterians, the United Brethren, and the Friends. The Southern Methodists, the Southern Baptists, and the M. E. Church have an eye upon Porto Rico.

An inter-ecclesiastical conference, with a view to co-operation in mission work, is something new under the sun. Heretofore each church, as a rule, has carried on its missionary operations with very little regard for the work of other churches. How sickening the spectacle of ecclesiastical rivalry in mission fields in countries where is abundant room for all without setting up altar against altar anywhere! This conference aims to prevent all such unseemly rivalry in the new fields soon to be thrown open. We hail this movement as the harbinger of a brighter and better day for the Christian world. If churches can co-operate in this way in one mission field, why not in all? That they will do so we regard as one of the certainties of the near future. We should be profoundly grateful that we live in an age when God is working so wondrously in various ways for the evangelization of all the nations of the earth.

DR. WHITSITT.

Speaking of Dr. Whitsitt's resignation, the New York Independent says:

It should be remembered that there was no charge of unsoundness in the faith. This is not a case in which the higher criticism is in any way involved. Dr. Whitsitt no more questions the inspiration, authority and truth of the Scriptures than his opponents. He does not reject any of the leading doctrines of Evangelical Christianity, nor is he disloyal to any distinctive Baptist principle. He does not question that immersion is the scriptural and proper form of baptism, nor that the only proper subjects for the ordinance are those who profess faith in Christ. He has no quarrel with Baptist order or Baptist polity. The one point on which he has offended is in holding that the truth of history shows that baptism by immersion was not practiced by the Baptists in England prior to 1641, nor by the Baptists of America until a later date, and that probably Roger Williams was baptized not by immersion, but by sprinkling.

Now, this is a historical question, pure and simple. He may be right; he may be wrong. In any event it is difficult to see how his honest opinion can be regarded as disloyal to his denomination. Baptist faith, order and polity are not established upon the practice of the English Baptists prior to 1641, but on far different foundations. Baptists believe they are in accordance with the inspired Word of God. But the Baptist history of the seventeenth century has never been regarded as inspired, and, therefore, it must be open to question the same as Baptist history in any other century. If Dr. Whitsitt was wrong in his views of that period, it was perfectly competent for Baptist scholars to show that he was in error. It only required the marshaling of facts against him to rule his entire case out of court.

The act, therefore, of overzealous leaders in the denomination in forcing him to resign seems to be an act of persecution, pure and simple. For the sake of the denomination we very greatly regret it, and we believe the time will soon come when it will be disavowed, and when Baptists of the South with Baptists of the North will stand strongly and unitedly for the broad liberty that has ever distinguished those of the denominational name.

AT THE SAM JONES CAMP MEETING.

By invitation of the presiding elder, Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, and Bro. J. F. Cassels, chairman of the Association, we spent last Sabbath at the Sam Jones Camp Meeting. Leaving home after four o'clock Saturday afternoon, we reached the camp ground, 146 miles distant, in time to hear the concluding half of an interesting and effective sermon that night by Rev. G. W. Huff, of the Mississippi Conference. The meeting began on Friday night, the opening sermon being preached by Rev. J. A. B. Jones. The preaching on Saturday was done by Revs. M. H. Moore and W. W. Moore. On Sunday it is estimated that there were about fifteen hundred people on the grounds. The 8 o'clock sermon was preached by Rev. M. M. Black. At 11 o'clock and at night the pulpit was filled by the editor of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. At 3 o'clock a clear-cut, interesting and vigorous sermon was preached by Dr. Hunnicutt. Monday, at noon, we were again in the editorial tread-mill at 512 Camp street, New Orleans.

Up to the time of our departure little had been accomplished in the way of statistical results. Good order prevails, and close attention is given to the preaching of the Word. Rev. R. A. Breland arrived Monday morning. Rev. W. M. McIntosh and Dr. J. W. Price, of the North Mississippi Conference, were expected on Tuesday. Hopes are entertained that the meeting will be more than ordinarily successful.

We made headquarters during our stay with our old friends, Col. and Mrs. Enoch G. DeLap, of Natchez. For courtesies extended we are also indebted to Sisters Hines, Raiford, and Love.

PEACE PROBABLE.

As will be seen in our news columns, peace negotiations are now in progress between Spain and the United States. Whether Spain will accept President McKinley's ultimatum is not yet known, but the impression prevails in government circles that she will. If so, then hostilities will have ceased by the time our next issue goes to press. It would be a mistake, however, to suppose that our troops will at once be brought home and the volunteers disbanded. Our volunteers now in the field can only be kept in service during a state of war, or while there is immediate danger of war; but as there will in all probability be a necessity for garrisons in various places in the newly acquired territory, and as our standing army is entirely too small to meet this demand, President McKinley will probably call a special session of Congress at an early date to make provision for the emergency.

THE DISCUSSION CLOSED.

As shown in former issues, the question of returning the $288,000 to the United States Government is already settled, the United States Senate having complied with the condition named by our Bishops. Articles on that subject, pro and con, are, therefore, now out of place. Still, as we have given the other side a hearing, we publish in this issue an article from Dr. Sullivan opposing the return of the money. No one need to sharpen his pencil for a reply to Dr. Sullivan. We have a number of communications of that sort on hand now.

The question having been settled, we do not deem it wise to continue the discussion. We publish this article of Dr. Sullivan's for the reason that otherwise we might be charged with being unfair to that side.

NEW BOOKS.

FAITHFULNESS AND UNFAITHFULNESS IN LITTLE THINGS. By Isaac L. Peebles, of the Mississippi Conference. Barbee & Smith, Nashville, Tenn. 1898.

The above is the title of a pamphlet of about thirty pages which lies upon our table by courtesy of the author. The aim of the work is to show the importance, from a religious standpoint, of giving attention to little things. Small duties, as the world esteems them, are vastly potential in the development of Christian character, and so-called little sins are often prolific of evil results. This thought the author elaborates in a way that is calculated to interest and edify both young and old. We heartily commend the work as one whose circulation will do good.

W. E. GLADSTONE: ENGLAND'S GREAT COMMONER. By Walter Jerold, author of Faraday, Man of Science, etc. New Edition Revised and Brought up to Date. Fleming H. Revel Co., New York, Chicago, Toronto. Price, 75 cents.

By courtesy of the publishers this work came to our table a few days since. It is a 12 mo. of 168 pages. The mechanical make-up of the book is good. It is well printed on good paper and neatly bound. It is also quite handsomely illustrated. The author's name is a sufficient guarantee of literary merit. The story of the "Great Commoner's" life is told in a way that is attractive to both young and old. It is a most excellent book to put into the hands of the young. How inspiring is such a life! We wish it could be put into every home in the land. But in commending it specially to the young we do not mean to convey the idea that it is a book for juveniles only. Men and women in every walk of life will find it instructive and inspiring. Biography is a very important department of literature, and the annals of the world afford few lives more worthy of study than that of England's greatest statesman.

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS; OR, FINGER POSTS ON THE HIGHWAY OF LIFE. By John T. Dale. Fleming H. Revel Co., New York, Chicago. $1.50.

The above-named work is a well-gotten up octavo of 400 pages. Its dedication is as follows: "To all those aspiring souls who are struggling to attain true development of mind and heart, success in life, and happiness here and beyond, this book is respectfully dedicated." In these dedicatory words the spirit and purpose of the work are manifested. It contains more than sixty chapters, and treats of almost every theme that is anywise related to success in the highest and noblest sense of the term. Its ideals are pure and lofty. We have read many works intended to be wise counselors for all classes, but especially for the young, in relation to "the conduct of life," but of them all there is scarcely one which is more replete with true wisdom. Such a book placed in the hands of an aspiring youth of either sex would be a boon of priceless value. It is not a book to be read and laid aside, but one to be read and re-read time and again. He who makes it a "vade mecum" to be perused whenever he has a moment's leisure, and seeks to mould his character in accordance with its counsels, will inevitably grow in all the elements of a noble manhood.

NOTES.

Rev. H. R. Singleton and family were given a royal reception by the Methodists of Moss Point.

Miss Pearce, president of Millwood Institute, is in attendance upon the Sam Jones Camp Meeting.

Dr. J. A. Parker wishes to go on record as opposed to a called session of the General Conference.

With its issue of Aug. 1, the German Gazette (Deutsche Zeitung), of this city, completed the fiftieth year of its publication and celebrated its golden anniversary.

Miss Swanson, president of Edward McGehee College, and Prof. A. M. Mackenfuss, of Millsaps College, attended the Natchez District Conference in the interest of their respective institutions, and also took in the Sam Jones Camp Meeting.

Mrs. Mary R. Goodale, of Baton Rouge, accompanied by her daughter and her mother, Mrs. Reed, is at the Sam Jones Camp Meeting. They were on the grounds a week or more before the meeting began. They are the only Louisianians tented there.

The Rayne Memorial pastor, Dr. Jno. T. Sawyer, went up to Slaughter, La., Monday, to preach all the week for Rev. A. S. Lutz, who already has a good meeting started. Bro. Sawyer expects to return Saturday, and fill his pulpit as usual on next Sunday.

Dr. H. M. DuBose spent something like twelve hours of Wednesday, July 20, in St. Louis, attending the Missouri State League Conference. He secured 520 subscribers for the Epworth Era. It looks as if he was determined to make the Era succeed. We bid him God speed!—Nashville Advocate.

The Natchez District Conference held, last week, at Centerville, is said to have been a most delightful occasion. Reports from the pastoral charges indicate gratifying progress in many directions. Dr. Hunnicutt stands deservedly high in the estimation of his brethren as a faithful, efficient, and progressive presiding elder.

Bro. H. H. Hines died at his home in Jackson, Miss., a few days since, having been in feeble health for a long while. Bro. Hines was a life-long Methodist and a thoroughly consistent Christian. No one could be more regular in his attendance upon all the services of the church, prayer meeting and Sunday-school, as well as preaching services. He filled various church offices with great zeal and acceptability. None who knew him well can doubt that he has gone to

FROM MISS HANNAH RAYNHAM TO HER FORMER PUPILS.

DEAR YOUNG FRIENDS: I am starting a benevolent work in a settlement of the drouth district, and this is to request my old pupils to contribute each a dime to help my work. We are trying to enlarge our reading circle, and this money is to be used in the purchase of books to found a library. In West Feliciana, East Feliciana, East Baton Rouge, St. Helena, and other parishes, there are hundreds of young men and women who were once my pupils. To these I appeal.

Will you not help me in benevolent work in behalf of the youth of this destitute region? Also show this appeal to your friends, and interest them. Address me at Atlanta, Winn parish, La.

The outlook for the next session of the Mississippi State University is most promising. The fifty high schools affiliated with the University will each furnish from one to five new students. It is a well-known fact that students now enter the university with much better preparation than ever before.

We invite attention to the advertisement of Edward McGehee Female College. This institution has a long and honorable history. Its influence upon the womanhood of Mississippi and Louisiana has been stimulating, elevating, and every way salutary. Its president, Miss Swanson, is a refined, cultivated woman of admirable tact and fine administrative ability. Her faculty has been selected with care. Write her for a catalogue.

THE WAR CLAIM.

I am opposed to returning the money to the government, except on one ground, to-wit: that the vote cast in the United States Senate on the church's claim was legally invalid and void, because cast, not to pay a debt, but to bestow a benefit. This is a question which, to my mind, has not been settled in the affirmative. To offer to return money that came legitimately into the Agents' hands in payment of a debt that was discreditably held back by Congress for twenty-five years, is something I am not prepared to do, especially so when the proposal is in response to aspersions and accusations made against the Book Committee and Agents, whether singly or corporately. They have been vindicated, and stand before the world acquitted by the Committee at General Conference, and by the new Book Committee at Nashville, whose report was approved by the Bishops. Surely there will be no vindication of honor or purity in returning money which, by every possible right, belongs to us, when the act would imply our acceptance of charges and insinuations against the honesty and fidelity of these tried men.

PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE.

Port Gibson Female College is worthy of the attention of all who have daughters to educate. It is located in a refined and intelligent community. Its grounds are ample and its buildings spacious. It has an excellent faculty, and is doing admirable work. The accomplished principals, Mrs. Meek and Miss Park, give careful attention to their pupils, not only as to intellectual development, but as to health, manners, and morals. See their ad., and write for a catalogue.

Tulane University, an advertisement of which appears in this issue, offers excellent facilities for higher education. Having a munificent endowment, it is not dependent upon tuition fees for its income. It has a large and able faculty, and ample equipments of every description. A number of free scholarships are given every year to young men of the State. See advertisement.

FROM REV. J. T. MURRAH.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me the privilege of expressing my appreciation and affection for the many brothren and friends who have given to me such tender and sympathetic assurances of their interest and love in the severe and desolating grief which has so recently visited my home. This is indeed to me the darkest providence I have ever been called upon to face. The gospel of Jesus Christ, which I have tried to present to others under like afflictions, has been my only comfort and hope in this dark hour.

GRAYBEARD

WE make 200 bottles of our GRAYBEARD every week. No more—no less. If 200 bottles don't fill all orders, same customer must wait until the next week. We mention this as some do not understand the delay. We have earned a reputation for making a clean, fresh, sure remedy for Cancer—Eczema, Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and we cannot make GRAYBEARD faster, and make it good.

"A few years ago Cancer appeared on my face in form of a scab—not a sore, but a scab that dropped off, and soon reappeared, some worse. Finally it annoyed me to shave. Darting pains set in, affecting my sight. People said I had Cancer—I was miserable. About that time a planter name Jordan, down the State, once shiftery afflicted, sent me a bottle of GRAYBEARD advising me to take it. I did so and to my great joy got better. Skin cleared, appetite improved, I got stouter and Cancer left me. And it has not returned. GRAYBEARD saved my life.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

To the Members of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences:

For forty years I have been a pastor in the Mississippi Conference, having entered the work in November, 1857. The Lord has blessed me in this service, but I am growing old, and still have several children whose education is not complete. Our Conference is well supplied with younger men, and still they come. Under the circumstances, I have consented to take charge of one of the boarding-houses at Millsaps College (Williams Hall). We can accommodate twenty-five, or more, boarders. We propose to give them the best of care, and make the house a "home" to them in the best sense of the word. We have long tried to maintain a Christian home of the purest type in which to rear our own children, and we will spare no pains to keep the standard high for the benefit of the young gentlemen who may be intrusted to our care. At present address me at Carthage, Miss.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD.

OF INTEREST TO STOCKHOLDERS.

FREE TRANSPORTATION TO ATTEND THE ANNUAL MEETING AT CHICAGO. SOME INTERESTING FACTS.

In order that stockholders of the Illinois Central Railroad Company may more readily attend in person the annual meetings, there has been posted in each station of the Company a notice to the effect that, in accordance with a resolve of the Board of Directors, there may be issued to each holder of one or more shares of the capital stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, as registered on the books of the Company, a ticket enabling him or her to travel free over the Company's lines from the station of the Illinois Central Railroad nearest to his or her registered address, to Chicago and return, for the purpose of attending, in person, the next Annual Stockholders' Meeting of the Company, which will be held at its General Office in Chicago on Wednesday, September 28, 1898, at noon. Details as to the necessary procedure to obtain such ticket, the date of its issue and its limit, are fully set forth on the posted notices referred to. In this connection, it will be interesting to note that since, in 1862, the capital stock of the Company became full paid, a cash dividend, ranging from 4 per cent. to 10 per cent. per annum has been paid semi-annually to every holder of stock, and that it is now twenty years since the Company, in any year, paid less than 5 per cent., the present rate of distribution.

Niagara Vapor Baths.

We are the original manufacturers of portable Vapor Baths.

We have, during the last ten years, supplied thousands of our Baths to physicians, hospitals, sanitariums, etc., and we are now, for the first time, advertising them direct to the general public.

IN BUYING A VAPOR BATH Get one with a steel frame that stands on the floor. If a manufacturer does not show you a cut of the frame without the covering, you may take it for granted that his "Steel Frame" is a wire loop that rests on the shoulders of the bather.

Get one that is covered with proper material. Insist on seeing a sample of material before ordering. We make our own covering material and print it with a handsome "all over" pattern of Niagara Falls.

Get one with a thermometer attachment. Don't go it blind—a bath that is too hot or not hot enough will be of no benefit to you.

Get one that you can return and have your money back if not satisfactory in every way.

Send for sample of material and interesting booklet that will tell you all about Vapor Baths.

Vapor Baths are an acknowledged household necessity. Turkish, Hot Air, Vapor, Sulphur or Medicated Baths at Home, &c. Purifies system, produces cleanliness, health, strength. Prevents disease, obesity. Cures Colds, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, La Grippe, Malaria, Eczema, Catarrh, Female Ills, Blood, Skin, Nerve and Kidney Troubles. Beautifies Complexion.

Such hospitals as the Bellevue of New York City, Howard of Philadelphia, Maryland and Johns Hopkins of Baltimore, have used this famous ever-two-continents remedy—Polynice Oil—with unvarying success in Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lumbago and Inflammatory Disease.

WHAT A PHYSICIAN SAYS:

Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, April 5, 1897.

The experiments made here at the hospital with the Polynice Oil, witnessed by me, having been very successful. I hereby recommend it in all cases of rheumatism.

MANNERS AT HOME.

If the spirit of courtship and its manners continued after marriage, there would be comparatively little domestic trouble in the world. Some say that it is absurd to expect artificial politeness in the family, and argue for the right of unrestrained action and speech to the verge of roughness and bluntness, on the principle that it is necessary to have freedom somewhere, and as one can not have it in society he should be allowed it at home. While subjection to the rule of a martinet, "be he he or be she she," is incompatible with domestic peace, it is much better to err on the side of conventional politeness than to go to the other extreme.

Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster is, it is to be feared, true to average domestic life, when she says:

"If I had known in the morning
How wearily all the day
The words unkind
Would trouble my mind
I said when you went away,
I had been more careful, darling,
Nor given you needless pain;
But we vex our own
With look and tone
We might never take back again.

"For though in the quiet evening
You might give me the kiss of peace,
Yet it might be
That never for me
The pain of the heart should cease,
How many go forth in the morning
That never come back at night;
And hearts have been broken
For harsh words spoken
That sorrow can ne'er set right.

"We have careful thoughts for the stranger,
And smiles for the sometime guest,
But oft for 'our own'
The bitter tone,
Though we love 'our own,' the best.
Ah, lips with the curve impatient,
Ah, brow with that look of scorn,
'Twere a cruel fate
Were the night too late
To undo the work of morn!"

—New York Advocate.

EDUCATION AT HOME.

How many people there are in this country who were deprived of school advantages during their younger days, and who have deplored the loss all their lives! Yet, if they only knew how, they could get, right where they are, nearly all the advantages which they so deeply desire. It is a great thing to form a habit of improving the mind at every opportunity, no matter how short the time or how meager the opportunity may be.

It is wonderful what a habit of systematic reading or studying will do for a person if carried on through a term of years.

COULD SCARCELY RAISE HIS HAND.

Yet took care of seventy head of stock.

The farmer who found a friend.

Serious results often follow a strain, especially when it affects the back, and few people are so liable to strain as those who are lifting heavy loads of various kinds, from day to day. The teamster rarely ever overtaxes his strength. Familiarity with the class of wares he handles, enables him to entirely gage the load he lifts so as not to put an excessive burden on himself. But with the farmer it is different. He is lifting loads of such varying weights and under such varying conditions that he is very liable to lift a little too much some day, with injurious results. Many serious affections of the great organs of the body originate in a strain. It was so in the case of H. R. W. Bentley, of Towner, North Dakota. A strain resulted in serious trouble with the liver. How he recovered and was enabled to feed seventy head of stock during the winter, let him tell himself:

"About a year ago, I sustained an injury in my back and shoulders by lifting a heavy weight. After a time, a liver trouble came on, which so weakened me that I could scarcely lift my hand to my head. While in this condition, I began the use of Dr. J. C. Ayer's Pills, and finding almost immediate benefit, continued until I was cured of my complaint, so that I was able to take care of seventy head of stock all through the winter, which shows that the cure was not temporary but permanent."—H. R. W. BENTLEY, Towner, N. D.

The action of Dr. Ayer's Pills on the liver makes them invaluable for those living in malarial climates. C. F. Alston, Quitman, Texas, writes:

"I have found in Dr. J. C. Ayer's Pills an invaluable remedy for constipation, biliousness, and kindred disorders, peculiar to miasmatic localities. Taken in small and frequent doses, these pills act well on the liver, aiding it in throwing off malarial poisons, and restoring its natural powers. I could not dispense with the use of Dr. Ayer's Pills."—C. F. ALSTON, Quitman, Tex.

Dr. Ayer's Pills are a specific for all diseases of the liver, stomach, and bowels; they promote digestion, cure constipation and its consequences, and promote the general health of the entire system. They should always be used with Dr. J. C. Ayer's Sarsaparilla when a cathartic is required. More about the pills in Dr. Ayer's Curebook. Sent free. Address the J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

The habit of concentrating the mind upon one thing regularly each day, even if only for a few minutes, or a half hour or an hour, will accomplish wonders. Let one who doubts this, try the experiment and be convinced.

It is said that more than two-thirds of the graduates of the Chautauqua course last Summer were beyond the age of school or college. Many of them were past middle life, and many of them were mothers and housekeepers. What a blessing it would be for those whose opportunities have been narrow and limited, if they could see the widening of the horizon of their monotonous, humdrum lives, by the adoption of new aims and new ideals and interests!

If one finds it dreary or unsatisfactory to study by herself, a pleasant remedy would be to invite several of her neighbors to study or read along the same lines, and to meet with her on certain afternoons or evenings of each week to discuss the matter read, and to refresh one another's memories. She will thus relieve the sameness, and give new impetus in other lines than her own. The lack of early education or college training is not the serious thing it once was. The Cosmopolitan University, the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle, the Home Study Club, public, circulating, and traveling libraries do much toward putting home education within the reach of all.

Let one earnestly resolve that no day shall go by without a certain amount of time being spent in study or the reading of instructive literature, and let her allow nothing to prevent the carrying out of this design, and she will soon recognize with joy the fact that her life has been enormously enriched and blessed.—Success.

Christian courtesy demands and requires cultivation like other Christian graces. It seems to be born in some, and bred in others; but many must acquire the habit of thoughtfulness in trifles by persistent effort. That one does not come naturally by an easy manner and unconscious grace, is no reason why he should despair of becoming a truly courteous person. No code of rules will help him, except as they will show roughly what is usually regarded as unselfish and kindly behavior. Some of the customs which seem to lack significance may not always be lightly disregarded, for one is not usually in a position to explain why he fails to conform to the prevailing mode, and is likely to be misunderstood. But the thirteenth chapter of first Corinthians is a manual of etiquette that never grows obsolete. Read in the light of those glowing sentences, conduct is seen to be more than half of life, manners are dignified, love shines through little things and lifts them to its own high level, as "the greatest thing in the world."—The Standard.

It is well known that at certain central agencies a record is kept of the name, position, and standing of nearly every business man in the country. Careful men are employed to collect this information; and it not only includes the amount of property which the parties are worth, but also their standing as regards punctuality, promptness, integrity, temperance, morals, etc. A number of years ago, it is stated, a firm of four men in Boston were rated as "A 1." They were rich, prosperous, young, and prompt. One of them had the curiosity to see how they were rated, and found these facts on the book and was satisfied; but at the end it was written, "but they all drink." He thought it was a good joke at the time; but a few years later two of them were dead, another was a drunkard, and the fourth was poor and living partly on charity. That one little note at the end of their rating was the most important and significant of all the facts collected and embodied in their rating.—Christian.

AIR, SUNSHINE AND HEALTH.

A New York merchant noticed, in the progress of years, that each successive bookkeeper gradually lost his health, and finally died of consumption, however vigorous and robust he was on entering his service. At length it occurred to him that the little rear room where the books were kept opened in a back yard, so surrounded by high walls that no sunshine came into it from one year's end to another.

An upper room, well lighted, was immediately prepared, and his clerks had uniform good health ever after.

A familiar case to general readers is derived from medical works, where an entire English family became ill, and all remedies seemed to fail of their usual results, when accidentally a window glass of the family room was broken in cold weather. It was not repaired, and forthwith there was a marked improvement in the health of the inmates. The physician at once traced the connection, discontinued his medicines, and ordered that the window pane should not be replaced.

POWER.

With the increase of the knowledge of natural forces there seems to be a loss of knowledge, or failure to use those of the spiritual kingdom. Everywhere men, under the guiding hand of scientific research, are learning more and more of the secrets of nature, while everywhere, under the potent influence of unbelief and indifference, men are learning to forget those of grace.

Science, the handmaid of religion, has caught her devotees literally to "take the wings of the wind, and fly to the uttermost parts of the earth," to call down fire from the clouds, to bring it up from the depths of the earth, to draw it from the air around us, and nothing seems impossible to them. Thus the son of the handmaid not only inherits with, but seeks to supplant the son of the free; and the wisdom of the children of this world exceeds that of the children of light.

With this decadence there has come a similar decadence of language (which is but the expression of thought), and where we once had "powerful preachers," we now have "forcible speakers;" where once were men "mighty in prayer and the Scriptures, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom," we have "gracious orators, popular pastors, pleasant talkers," or "witty evangelists;" and the change has crept on us so insidiously that few have been aware of it, much less marked its progress. Paul's very enemies and detractors said his letters were "weighty and powerful." To how many modern writers could their best friends give such a meed of praise? Yet the same Lord is rich toward all, and his kingdom ruleth over all.

Can it be that in seeking the friendship of the world the church has declined from the love of God?—that with the praise of the world has come the disapproval of him who searches the heart and tries the reins? If so, let us return and take with us words—the confession of our sin and the eternal promise of his forgiveness—and let us bring forth fruits meet for repentance, and being no more conformed to this world, be transformed by the renewing of our minds, and, under the presence and guidance of the Holy Ghost, we can claim our inheritance of power. Then we will take the wings of the wind, and, with God's message of eternal life and everlasting love, will fly to the uttermost parts of the earth. Restored to the joys of his salvation, upheld by his free spirit, we will teach transgressers his ways, and sinners shall be converted unto him. By faith and prayer we will bring down the baptism of the Holy Ghost, while from beneath, in our own hearts, we will bring the holy living and holy thinking incident to the power of an endless life. Then shall our light rise in obscurity. We will lift our faces unto God; decree a thing, and it shall be established unto us, because he has said, "Behold, I give unto you power."

FANNIE MINOR MONTGOMERY.

IN MEMORY OF COL. N. L. McGINNIS.

The subject of this sketch, Col. Noble L. McGinnis, departed this life surrounded by the sorrowing members of his family, at his home, Eden Plantation, on Bayou Rapides, June 14, 1898. He was in his sixty-ninth year, a native of Tennessee, a one-time resident of Texas, and for many years an honored, trusted, and beloved citizen of Rapides parish, La.

He was born in Madisonville, Tenn., on Aug. 3, 1829. His parents moved to Savannah, Tenn., during his early life, and to Mississippi in 1840. In 1851 he went to Bastrop, Texas, where he engaged in farming until the outbreak of the Civil War. When Texas passed the ordinance of secession he raised a company, which became Company H, Second Texas Infantry, C. S. A. His command was ordered east of the Mississippi in time to take a distinguished part in the battle of Shiloh, and afterwards to take part in many engagements, including those at Corinth, Iuka, Yazoo City, and the siege of Vicksburg. In due course of promotion he became colonel of the regiment to which he belonged.

He moved to Rapides parish, La., in 1869, where he was for many years a stock dealer, mail contractor, livery-stable man, and merchant.

During the period of reconstruction he was one of the firmest leaders of a gallant people. When it was dangerous to be a leader of the Democracy he never faltered, and the same fearless bravery that carried him manfully through many a bloody battle sustained him in the dark days that accompanied the redemption of his adopted State from Republican misrule.

He was a friend of education, and for many years of disinterested and distinguished services on the School Board the children of Rapides will rise up and call him blessed.

He was for years mayor of Alexandria, and during his administration were laid the foundations of the plans which afterwards resulted in the splendid public improvements which have so distinguished that city, and have proved to be such a source of pride and comfort to her citizens.

His last remaining years were quietly spent at his plantation home on Bayou Rapides. Twice married, he leaves to mourn his loss a loving wife and a devoted family of sons and daughters.

About ten years before his death he became deeply impressed with a duty of becoming a practical Christian. He joined the Methodist Church shortly afterwards, and was in it a pillar of strength until his death. His hand was liberal to the poor, and out of a not too abundant purse he ministered unceasingly to the comfort of the servants of the church of his choice.

His family life was kind; his administration of discipline among his children was gentle, yet firm; his love to his wife strong and devoted.

He met the obligations of citizenship bravely and fully. He bore arms for his country, and faced death in a thousand forms during war, and in peace was foremost in all good works for the upbuilding of the interest of the community in which he lived.

He was a man, and fallible; his mistakes were many, but his characteristics were those of energy, persistency, and bravery.

His loss is real and felt in the parish of Rapides, and in his death almost every individual feels that a personal friend has departed. He suffered much, but patiently and with fortitude, during his last illness, but his end was one of great peace.

Husband, father, soldier, citizen and friend, he filled every station faithfully, and he died trusting in the atoning blood of the Son of God, which washeth away the sins of the world.

"Calm on the bosom of thy God,
Brave spirit, rest thee now.
Even while with us, thy footsteps trod,
His seal was on thy brow.
Dust to its narrow house hasteth,
Soul to its place on high,
They that have seen thy look in death,
No more may fear to die."

OBITUARIES.

Obituaries of 200 words published free. For all words in excess of that number send one cent per word.

JONES—Died at the home of her daughter, Mrs Belle Gannier, near Thibodeaux, La., Mrs. T. J. JONES, June 23, 1898, aged seventy-eight years. She was buried at Franklin, La., June 24, 1898.

The writer became acquainted with Sister Jones in 1881, and was her pastor for four years at Franklin. She was of that type of women which shapes this world for good. Having a high sense of right, dominated by a child-like faith in God, her life was a living epistle to be seen and read of all men.

She was the mother of twelve children, three of whom survive her. Left a widow in February, 1865, with three small children, she met the dual relation of father and mother with firmness and integrity, and though the times were such as tried the souls of strong men, she never lost courage, but, with faith in her God, applied herself to the duties that devolved upon her.

Her life was beset by many and peculiar trials, such as would have crushed most women, but out of them all she "came forth more than conqueror." When the right was involved she made no compromise, shirked no duty, used all the means at hand with firmness and judgment, leaving results to God.

A GREAT SYSTEM FOR EDUCATION.

The Randolph-Macon system of correlated Colleges and Academies, organized by Dr. Wm. W. Smith in Virginia, has attained much celebrity. Especially has the Randolph-Macon Woman's College at Lynchburg, Va., grown with remarkable rapidity under his personal supervision for the past five years, numbering now 233 students. It is a college for women with the same standards as those of the old and highly esteemed Randolph-Macon College for men at Ashland, Va.

The Randolph-Macon Academies at Bedford City and Front Royal, Va., are revelations in the way of equipment. The cost of their plants is much greater than that of many colleges, and yet they are only academies, but academies worthy to be compared with the best in the North. We wish Dr. Smith great success in the work he has set on foot, and commend these institutions to those of our readers who, for any reason, propose to send their children out of the State for higher education.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Prince Bismarck died last Saturday. The great German died without a struggle after much suffering. He was eighty-three years old.

Natives of the Philippine Islands resident in Europe have sent a protest to President McKinley against the restoration of Spanish supremacy in the islands.

President McKinley's reply to Spain's appeal for peace demands independence of Cuba, cession of Porto Rico, Guam, and a coaling station or port in the Philippines.

The London Spectator implores President McKinley to annex Cuba and the Philippines, and to break his pledge to Congress rather than grant independence to the islands.

Investigation of the prisoners of Santiago has revealed many cases of inhumanity, prisoners being held either without trial or long after the expiration of their sentences.

Naval Constructor Hobson will preside at an entertainment in the Metropolitan Opera House, Thursday night, for the benefit of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Families' Protective Association.

With the surrender of Ponce, General Miles has secured an excellent harbor for the debarkation of re-enforcements and supplies. Ponce is on the direct road to San Juan, which is barely fifty miles distant. As soon as a sufficient force has arrived, the advance against the capital of Porto Rico will commence.

According to official reports received from General Miles, in charge of military operations in Porto Rico, and Captain Higginson, in charge of the naval contingent, the port of Ponce, on the south coast of Porto Rico, has surrendered to the American forces without firing a shot. The Spanish garrison evacuated the place, and it was occupied without resistance.

The surrender of Ponce is in keeping with the report that the Spanish government has ordered the garrisons withdrawn from outlying towns and concentrated in San Juan; but the more probable explanation of the absence of resistance is the realization by the Spaniards that negotiations for peace have practically commenced, and that further stubborn resistance would only increase Spain's difficulties.

Lieut. Gordon L. Sneed, of Company A, First Louisiana Volunteers, died at Miami, Fla., on Sunday, July 24, where his regiment was encamped. "Bertie" Sneed, as he was called, was a native of Mississippi, and, after his remains were kept in state in the City Hall, New Orleans, on Thursday, they were taken to Koscinsko, his old home, for interment. He was a member of the Mississippi Press Association, and had been a reporter on the Times-Democrat previous to his enlistment in the army, when he was mustered in with a company made up of employees of that journal.

It is proposed to hold at St. Louis, in 1903, a celebration of the one hundredth year of the annexation of the Province of Louisiana to the United States. The area embraced in the original province now appears in the States of Louisiana, Arkansas, Missouri, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, the two Dakotas, Montana, Wyoming, Idaho, Oregon and Washington, and large parts of Minnesota and Colorado, and the whole of Indian Territory and Oklahoma, a region one-third larger than that of the original thirteen States. The celebration is to be held in St. Louis, because, as the Globe-Democrat says, St. Louis is the largest city in the province and is the geographical center of the country.

President McKinley's reply to Spain's appeal for peace was placed in the hands of Ambassador Cambon on Saturday. It is emphatic and definite as to the terms upon which the United States will consent to a cessation of hostilities, but will leave open the question of the future government of the Phillppines. Absolute cession of Porto Rico to the United States. Independence of Cuba. Cession of Guam Island to the United States as a coaling station. Cession of at least a coaling station in the Philippines, and of a port, if desired, the future government of the Phillippines to be a matter for future negotiations, after Spain has consented to accept the general terms outlined above. Immediate acceptance of the general terms by Spain will mean immediate peace. Refusal or a desire on the part of Spain to dicker for better terms will mean a prolongation of the war, with more rigid demands.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE WOMAN'S HOME MISSION SOCIETY.

On account of the many draw backs, and over which we had no supervision, the annual meeting of the Woman's Home Mission Society has been postponed to convene at East End, Meridian, on the twenty-third of September, 1898.

We hope that each auxiliary will take an active part, and make the next meeting the most successful we have ever held.

Let the treasurers of auxiliaries collect the Conference contingent fee, 25 cents to $1, and 50 cents to secure the printing of the Minutes, and send to Mrs. Holloman as soon as possible.

Let each auxiliary be certain to elect, and then send a delegate, and make your annual report as full and complete as possible.

Doctors

An experience of two years or more has demonstrated the curative power of the Electropoise far beyond any therapeutic agent or appliance known or available to the medical profession. Without a doubt the Electropoise has the gift and power to cure multitudes, who, without it, must surely die, and that, too, in early life or in the very maturity of strength, when their loss is most severely felt and the mystery of their untimely death is most terribly difficult of solution.

C. COLEGROVE, M. D.,
Holland, N. Y.

Lawyers

The latter part of last February I was so much affected with rheumatism that I left home prepared to go to Hot Springs, Ark., for treatment. Being detained in Memphis two days, I concluded to try the Electropoise, and was so much benefited that I bought one and went back to my home in Oxford, Miss. I now feel very little effects of the rheumatism and believe that any one using the Electropoise according to directions and for a sufficient length of time will be entirely cured. I most heartily recommend it to all suffering humanity. Respectfully,

I. G. HOLLOWAY,
Oxford, Miss.

Ministers

I find the Electropoise almost a necessity. It is, indeed, of great importance to my comfort. I experienced relief from neuralgia, which at one time threatened to keep me a constant sufferer. I take pleasure in speaking for the Electropoise, and hope these few words will induce those who read them to make trial of this "cure-all."

THE LAND BEYOND THE SEA.

The land beyond the sea!
Oh, how the lapsing years,
Mid our not unsubmissive tears,
Have borne, now slugly, now in fleets, the biers
Of those we love to thee,
Calm land beyond the sea.

The land beyond the sea!
When will our toil be done?
Slow footed years! more swiftly run
Into the gold of that unsetting sun!
How sick we are for thee,
Calm land beyond the sea.

THE LARGEST BREWERY IN THE WORLD.

The Anheuser-Busch Brewery, of St. Louis, affords one of the most colossal temperance object-lessons of the times. It claims to be the largest brewery in the world, and having inspected its various departments, and being duly impressed with its magnitude, I hoped, indeed, that the claim was based on truth.

The other day I saw a building whose sign read, "The St. Louis Wrecking Co.," and I wondered if this were a branch of the brewery honestly advertising its business. For its beer this stupendous enterprise owns block after block of handsome brick and stone buildings, the interior of many being veritable marble halls of costly tiled floors and beautiful walls, the roofs ornamented with turrets and towers reaching skyward. In a conspicuous niche stands a life-size marble statue of Mr. Busch, made at a fabulous cost in Switzerland, and erected by—himself. So many visitors daily throng the place that fifteen or twenty guides are employed to show them through. From the valuable escort of our party we received the following information: The brewery employs two thousand four hundred men. Two hundred and eighty horses are kept for the purpose of delivering beer to the local patronage. Forty millions of bottles were then stacked up, ready to be filled. The brewery manufactures five hundred tons of ice daily for its cold storage department. An average of ten thousand barrels are sold per day. Each one of the twenty-four hundred employees is allowed twenty free drinks a day, these drinks being delivered to them twice an hour at their various posts of work. Unparalleled liberality! The brewer builds wisely in instituting this free drinking-school, for those who do not possess the love of his wares when first initiated into their positions may have full opportunity to cultivate it; and if the statement of the guide be true when he said, "The only fault to be found with the beer is, that one glass tastes like more," the matter of cultivation is not a difficult one. When we had been shown through the various departments we were invited to be seated at polished oak tables, where was served foaming glasses of the amber liquid. Some emptied two, three, and four glasses, and still the urbane attendants pressed them to more. I am told upon authority that the lavish use of free drinks is, among liquor dealers, one of the recognized methods of increasing trade—bread thrown upon the waters, as it were.

So great an enterprise is not without great results. In St. Louis the staff of life is beer, not bread. Bread may be sent by express to neighboring towns, and the baskets returned to the baker for a small charge. Beer is sent and the bottles returned free, conclusively proving that beer is a necessity, and bread a luxury. No object meets the eye oftener on the streets of St. Louis than the world-wide familiar label of the Anheuser-Busch Brewery.

A thousand public gardens blossom in and near the city, where beautiful flowers border walk and square; thousands of vari-colored lights reflect their brightness in splashing fountains, and while a band concert, or a vaudeville performance, and sometimes an opera or a play, is given, men, women and children quaff their favorite beverage. When we see mothers and fathers pressing their children of three and four years to drink, we can but conclude that they do so in the benighted belief that it is not only harmless, but good for them. This is not confined to the German element, which forms so strong a part of the population of St. Louis, but includes representatives from every class.

It is claimed that beer is the least harmful of all alcoholic drinks; that it does not make drunk. From scientific authority we learn that while it does not make drunk as stronger potions do, it inflames the brain and perverts the moral sense.

Some of the St. Louis papers issue four daily editions, their pages always glaring with announcements of crime and deeds of violence, of suicide and sorrow, until the heart is sickened with the harrowing details. Better that the unfortunate perpetrators of such deeds were made helpless on stronger drink than left with nerve and strength to do the will of their baser natures, unchecked by reason or sense of right. Truly, a spectacle for moralists to muse upon. A subject for press, pulpit and platform to unite upon, and "fight strong 'till deliverance come."

THE NATCHEZ DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Natchez District Conference convened at Centerville, Miss., Tuesday afternoon, July 26, and continued in session until Thursday evening. In the absence of a Bishop, Presiding Elder Hunnicutt called the Conference to order, and filled the office of chairman. Rev. M. M. Black was elected secretary, with Rev. G. M. Hull as assistant. All of the pastors except two were present, though several of them were rather late in arriving. Twenty lay delegates and three local preachers were in attendance. Though no special programme had been prepared, the time of the Conference was fully and profitably occupied in hearing and discussing reports upon the questions laid down in the Discipline, so that it was in the true sense a Conference. On the whole, the reports from the various charges were of an encouraging nature, both as to spirituality and as to finances. Successful revivals have been held at several points in the district. Especially gratifying were the reports from the two churches in Natchez, and also from the Fayette, Woodville, and Centerville charges. The fact was brought out in the discussions that in the majority of the charges no definite financial system is followed as concerns ministerial support; hence it is no wonder that so frequently there is a deficit at the end of the year. Most of the pastors reported a goodly per cent. of the Conference assessments as having already been raised. Bro. B. S. Rayner stated that the contract has been let for a new parsonage at Fayette, to cost $1,200. Arrangements are being made by the indefatigable Bro. Breland for the purchase of a much-needed parsonage at Roxie.

A number of the brethren expressed themselves as in favor of a stricter enforcement of the Discipline. The laymen in attendance were more than usually communicative and interested.

Impressive and highly edifying sermons were preached by Revs. J. W. Chambers, M. L. Burton, and T. B. Holloman. This scribe had the pleasure of preaching to a very attentive congregation on Thursday morning. We were sorry to have missed a sermon by Rev. Waldo Moore the evening after adjournment.

The attendance upon the Conference by the people of Centerville was not as large as it would have been on account of the continued rains. Not a few, however, came to listen and learn. At night the church was filled almost to overflowing.

Rev. J. W. Chambers, the genial and hustling president of Whitworth College, was on hand, and made an earnest, forceful speech in behalf of education in general, and also in behalf of the institution under his care. Miss Swanson, the accomplished president of Edward McGehee College at Woodville, was introduced to the Conference, and made a few impressive remarks. Rev. J. W. Crisler, the pastor at Woodville, then spoke more at length in behalf of this school, and showed that under Miss Swanson's management it is doing finely. Those who know Miss Swanson well speak in the highest terms of her as an educator and as a Christian.

The claims of our Orphans' Home were strongly and eloquently presented by Manager M. L. Burton, who lacks neither warmth of heart nor assertive power. Nearly all the pastors in the district who have not already done something for the Home pledged themselves to give their respective flocks an opportunity to contribute to this noble benevolence.

We were glad to have among us such a worthy and talented representative from Millsaps College in the person of Dr. A. M. Muckenfuss, our friend and former co-laborer.

The licenses of the following local preachers were renewed: Revs. J. M. Griffin, of the Meadville circuit; John Early Gray, of the Roxie circuit; H. W. Day, C. A. Hastings, and R. M. Cassels, of the Wilkinson circuit. Six Epworth Leagues were reported within the bounds of the district, three of which are doing fine work.

Our presiding elder is a man of prudence, experience, and ability, and is fulfilling the duties of his office greatly to the benefit of the church.

The following brethren were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: H. B. McGehee, T. M. Carter, Dr. J. R. Whittington, D. F. Ashford. Reserves: J. D. Ireland and R. Whitaker.

Woodville was selected as the place for holding the next Conference.

Some resolutions introduced by Dr. Hunnicutt, exculpating from censure the Book Committee and the Agents of the Publishing House, were passed, and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE was requested to publish same. They will be found elsewhere.

The following resolutions relative to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE were unanimously adopted, and their publication was requested:

"We, the preachers and laymen of the Natchez District Conference, commend the present administration and wise management of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. We deplore the fact that our Conference organ does not have a wider circulation among our people, and note with regret that some of the official members of the church do not take and read the ADVOCATE. Feeling confident that a wider circulation of the ADVOCATE would be beneficial to the church; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the preachers of the district make an earnest effort to put the ADVOCATE in every Methodist home."

The brethren were all unstinted in their praise of the kindness and generous hospitality of the Centerville people. Their pastor thinks he has the most pleasant appointment in the district. We were delightfully entertained while at the Conference in the home of Bro. Brisco, the depot agent, to whom and to whose good wife we are indebted for many courtesies.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

This body met in its thirty-second session in Jordan Street (now Texas avenue) Church, Shreveport, La., July 28, 1898. Bishop Morrison was present, and presided. He won our hearts at the start, and our admiration deepened as the work progressed under his presidency. There was a large attendance of preachers, but not of laymen. A number of visitors from the Delhi and Arcadia districts were in attendance, and also Bro. Timmons, the pastor at Marshall. All the interests of the church were passed in review, and the reports showed improvement, especially in a material way. We have never before known such an era of church-building.

Work among our young people is "on the move." Epworth Leagues and Sunday-schools are multiplying and improving. One deplorable fact was brought out prominently, and that is, that papers not of our publication are supplanting our own Conference organs. This ought not so to be. The Bishop, from time to time, suggested questions for informal discussion, and this not only relieved the monotony, but added greatly to the interest and profit of the occasion.

S. B. McCutchen, W. G. Wadly, A. F. Jackson and John L. Sutton were elected delegates to the Annual Conference, and J. F. Henderson and C. D. Hicks, alternates.

Coushatta was chosen as the place for the next District Conference.

Resolutions were passed urging local preachers to attend the sessions of the District Conference; also expressing our love for, and appreciation of, the work of our presiding elder, Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, now serving the district the fourth year; expressing appreciation and gratitude for the presence and service of Bishop Morrison, and thanks to the good people of Shreveport for kind and abundant hospitality. Our work was finished under a baptism of the Holy Ghost, and we were all glad that we were there.

Sunday was "the great day of the feast." The handsome new church in which the Conference was held was dedicated. The building cost, besides the lot, about $2,800, the members of First Church helping liberally in its construction. The Bishop, after preaching one of his masterly sermons on a subject appropriate, announced the necessity of raising $650 before the house could be given to God. "He will not make it," thought some, but in about twenty minutes the cash and subscriptions amounted to $730. Then the house was formally and solemnly dedicated to the worship of Almighty God, according to the Discipline. Then we saw the "happy priest and happy people."

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

The protracted-meeting season is being well utilized by the pastors, who are generally holding their own meetings and helping each other. The professional evangelist is not much in demand. This is as it should be. Pastors can not relegate their work to others without spiritual detriment to their own souls. An eminent layman was heard, not long ago, to say to his pastor, "If you do not hold a meeting yourself soon, I am afraid you will backslide." That was a wholesome suggestion. Let us be fellow-helpers to each other, but let no pastor permit another to take his crown.

Rev. J. W. McGee, P. C., Lehrton circuit, reports 46 accessions to our church and 18 to the Baptist as the fruits of a tent meeting recently held at Ruleville by Bro. McIntosh. It was my privilege to spend one week in said meeting, preaching four days until Bro. McIntosh arrived, and aiding in the work generally. The meeting was evidently a great blessing to that community.

Bro. Lester has just closed a successful meeting at Black Hawk with 20 additions to the church on profession of faith. He was assisted by Bro. Geo. H. Lipscomb, who, by his earnest preaching and faithful work, did effective service and endeared himself very much to the people.

It was my good pleasure to spend last week with Bro. Sanders and his people at Coila, Carrollton circuit. While there were not the visible results in the meeting that were desired, we hope much good was done.

I am enjoying a week of service and fellowship with the good people of Black Hawk as the special guest of Bro. J. B. Streater and family, in whose delightful home the weary itinerant always finds a welcome and rest. May they live long to bless the church and the world with their presence and good works!

I will be with Bro. Lester a few days next week at Acona; thence I go home for a few days.

"The Young People's Hymnal" gains favor wherever used. It is "the song book" for our revival meetings. The music edition, round or shape note, only $3 per dozen; word edition, $1 per dozen, by express, not prepaid. "In His Steps; or, What Would Jesus Do?" is one of the most inspiring books of the day. Only 25 cents, postpaid. Quillian Lectures, "Christianity and the Nation," by Bishop Galloway, ought to be read by every citizen, old and young, of this country. Price, 75 cents, postpaid. Send me orders for any of these right away.

HER WEALTH A BLESSING.

MISS HELEN GOULD'S ROYAL AND LOYAL MUNIFICENCE.

Miss Helen Gould has won a place for herself in the hearts of Americans such as few people of great wealth ever gain. She is, indeed, one of the best known and most popular young women of New York, if not in the world. Her strong character, common sense, and high ideals, have made her respected by all, while her munificence and kindness have won for her the love of many.

Her personality is charming. Upon my arrival at her Tarrytown home, I was made to feel that I was welcome, and everyone who enters her presence feels the same.

Miss Gould takes a very great interest in her famous greenhouses, the gardens, the flowers, and the chickens, for she is a home-loving woman. It is a common thing to see her in the grounds, digging and raking and planting, for all the world like some farmer's girl. That is one reason why her neighbors all like her; she seems so unconscious of her wealth and station.

When I entered Lyndhurst, she came forward to meet me in the pleasantest way imaginable. Her face is not exactly beautiful, but has a great deal of character written upon it, and is very attractive, indeed. She held out her hand for me to shake in the good old-fashioned way, and then we sat down in the wide hall to talk.

Her good works are numerous and many-sided. For a number of years she has supported two beds in the Babies' Shelter, connected with the Church of the Holy Communion, New York, and the Wayside Day Nursery, near Bellevue Hospital, has always found in her a good friend. Once a year she makes a tour through the day nurseries of New York, noting the special needs of each, and often sending checks and materials for meeting those needs.

A MOST CHARMING CHARITY.

One of her most charming charities is "Woody Crest," two miles from Lyndhurst, a haven of delight where some twoscore waifs are received at a time for a two weeks' visit. She has a personal oversight of the place, and, by her frequent visits, makes friends with the wee visitors, who look upon her as a combination of angel and fairy godmother. Every day a wagonette drawn by two horses takes the children, in relays, for long drives into the country. Amusements are provided, and some of those who remain for an entire season at Woody Crest are instructed in different branches. Twice a month some of the older boys set the type for a little magazine which is devoted to Woody Crest matters. There are several portable cottages erected there—one for the sick, one for servants' sleeping-rooms, and a third for a laundry.

Miss Gould's patriotism is very real and intense, and is not confined to times of war. Two years ago she caused fifty thousand copies of the national hymn, "America," to be printed and distributed among the pupils of the public schools of New York.

"I believe everyone should know that hymn and sing it," she declared, "if he sings no other. I would like the children to sing it into their very souls, till it becomes a part of them."

A PATRIOTIC SOUL.

She strongly favors patriotic services in the churches on the Sunday preceding the Fourth of July, when she would like to hear such airs as "America," "Hail, Columbia," and "The Star-Spangled Banner," and see the sacred edifices draped in red, white, and blue.

UNHERALDED BENEFACTIONS.

Miss Gould has a strong prejudice against letting her many gifts and charities be known, and even her dearest friends never know "what Helen's doing now." Of course, her great public charities, as when she gives a hundred thousand dollars at a time, are heralded. Her recent gift of that sum to the government for national defense has made her name beloved throughout the land; but, had she been able, she would have kept that secret also.

I tried to ascertain her views regarding the education of young women of to-day. This is one of her particular hobbies, and many are the young girls she has helped to attain to a better and more satisfactory life.

HER MEANS OF EDUCATION.

"In the first place," she said, "I believe most earnestly in education for women; not necessarily the higher education about which we hear so much, but a good, common-school education. As the years pass, girls are obliged to make their own way in the world more and more, and to do so they must have good schooling."

THE EVIL OF IDLENESS.

"I don't think it matters much what a girl does, so long as she is active, and doesn't allow herself to stagnate. There's nothing, to my mind, so pathetic as a girl who thinks she can't do anything, and is of no use to the world. Why, it's no wonder there are so many suicides every day!"

She is consulted by her agents in regard to all her affairs. "I have no time for society," she said, "and, indeed, I do not care for it at all. It is very well for those who like it," she added, for she is a tolerant critic.

Her life at Tarrytown is an ideal one. She runs down to the city at frequent intervals, to attend to business affairs, for she manages all her own property; but she lives at Lyndhurst. She entertains but few visitors, and in turn visits but seldom.

People wonder why she doesn't marry, and even her friends can not give a reason. But perhaps a good, true man may sue, some day, and win her, and at last an American heiress will marry an American man for his character, and not for his money or social position. For Helen Gould is American from head to foot, in mind and in heart, and when she marries, it will not be a foreign duke or earl. Thus much her dearest friends prophesy.—Success.

HALLOWED HOURS.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

There are hours our hearts remember
When we knelt in peace alone,
And the blessing of the Lord our God
Came to us from the throne.
Oh! sweet it was to feel it.
The peace our Lord bestows
As the dew upon the waiting fields
The fragrance in the rose.

There are hours when life was bitter
With the anguish of defeat,
When strange it seemed that anything
Had ever tasted sweet.
And we scarce knew how to bear it,
But One came o'er the wave,
And the peace he gave us with a word
Then made us strong and brave.

There are hours when work is pressing.
Just little homely work,
That must be done, that we must do,
That it were shame to shirk.
And in those hours full often
To crown the petty cares,
Has fallen upon the house a gleam
Of God's heaven unawares.

So, for our hallowed hours
We find them, where our Lord
Has called us unto service meet
For blessing and reward.
They are sometimes in the closet,
They are often in the mart,
And the Lord can make them anywhere.
His "desert place apart."

WEAK POINTS IN SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORK,

AND HOW TO STRENGTHEN THEM.

(Geo. W. Williams, of Knightstown, Ind.)

I do not presume to come before the Conference to tell you any new thing, or to bring to you any new plans, but to stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance on the old plans. It is not for lack of knowledge we fail, but for lack of intelligently putting into effect the things we already know. So I ask you, my fellow-workers, to pray that we may, in our work for the Master, have the faith of St. Paul and the works of St. James so combined that we may "show our faith by our works."

The topic assigned me combines the whole range of subjects presented for discussion in a Sunday-school convention program, viz.: "The Weak Points in Sunday-school Work, and How to Strengthen Them."

To present this theme in the limited time allotted to me, I shall touch but three points: 1. The weakness of Sunday-school work as developed in the home; 2. In the Sunday-school, and, 3. In the world.

God, in his infinite goodness and wisdom, gave us the home. He designed that it should be a type of heaven. He threw around it and in it such sweet and hallowed associations that should tend to develop the higher ideals of the human heart, and fit us for that home "not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

This is the ideal. While I am not a pessimist, I am forced by my own observation to say that in these latter days a great change has come over the home, so far as it exerts a Christian influence in its own circle. If I were to express my convictions clearly, I should say we are becoming more respectable and less spiritual. Or, perhaps, more definitely, we are setting up our own standard of moral excellence, and leaving God's standard out of account. We are trying to place the organization above the individual, and just in proportion as organized effort is developed, individual responsibility decays.

In the matter of public education, for instance, we have turned the whole matter over to the teacher; pay the bills, and bother ourselves but little about it. In religious matters we contribute our money freely, and hold the minister responsible for the results. We expect temperance reforms to come to pass by passing laws, and give no heed to their enforcement. We expect to save the world by passing resolutions. We are great moral cowards. We meet in organized bodies, and pose as reformers, but when we get an individual hand-to-hand conflict, we make the best compromise we can with the devil, and go on with our business. We have put into our whole social fabric the modern "slot-machine" idea. We drop in our coin and expect to get for our children education, business success, happiness, and heaven. We see, alas! too late, that our plans have failed, our money could not meet the crying need for individual, parental effort, and instead of success, we have wrecked hopes and broken hearts.

Can you find in the Scripture where it says, "Have your child trained up in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it?" No. The responsibility is on you, not on your Sunday-school superintendent, or your teacher in the public school. We find that in almost every instance that back of God's great heroes, both ancient and modern, there was a godly mother. And to-day the men and women who are serving God and their fellow-men most successfully are those who received their inspiration and laid the foundation of a Christian life around the hearth-stone in a Christian home.

No organization for training children for Christ can supplement the home, and the extreme looseness of home government is one of the problems confronting the Sunday-school workers. At the risk of receiving your criticism, I say that our modern home life (with large exception, of course) lacks the elements that produce the sturdy Christian characters which has ever been the pride of American civilization. In many cases our home is only recognized as a place to eat and sleep. The associations, the recreations, the pleasures and entertainments are elsewhere.

Would to God we could have a revival of the old-fashioned home, and the old-fashioned father and mother who took, not sent, the boys and girls to Sunday-school, and made themselves responsible for their good behavior.

One of the most serious weaknesses of Sunday-school work is parental indifference and the absence of any religious instructions in the home. To strengthen this weak point is to make the home life stronger, and herein lies the great need of the "Home Class Department."

Dr. J. C. M. Floyd, of Ohio, who, for four years, has personal supervision of a large and successful Home Class Department, and for two and a half years was State Home Department secretary for Ohio, says: "In my annual report at Toledo, last June, I said the weakest place in our Sunday-school plan is the 'home,' and a large share of the energy and enthusiasm of our officers and teachers is used up in overcoming the example and indifference in the home. The Home Class Department comes to us at this time fully equipped and abundantly able to make these weak places strong."

What a grand day it will be when in all Christian homes the Bible is made the text-book of the family, and the Sunday-school lesson is studied at home, and the teacher's business is not to teach a lesson, but hear a recitation. The way to strengthen this weak point is to put our individual efforts in such a way as to strengthen the breach in our own wall any way. I am here to-day to urge you to commence at once to make the Sunday-school a subject of prayer, and the lesson the subject of earnest study and investigation.

CENTENARY COLLEGE AGAIN.

Some time since I wrote an article for the ADVOCATE in behalf of the Centenary College Reading-room, asking our preachers and laymen for assistance, to place in the hands of our students some of the leading periodicals. I also sent out about fifty personal letters for the same cause. So far I have not received so much as five cents. Can it be possible that our Methodists of Louisiana are so little interested in the welfare of Centenary College as not to help to build it up? Brothers, this must not be. If all of our preachers were to ask their congregations for a small contribution, even if no more than one dollar, and add a small amount from themselves, we would soon have a reading-room that any of our Conference colleges would be proud of.

Centenary is on the upward move. The main building and dormitories are being put in first-class order; new cottages are being built for the professors; we will soon have a beautiful college park; we have a wide-awake president, and now we want a reading-room. Let us rally round our new president, not only with the cry, "Long live old Centenary," but let us bring our pocket-books, and fix up that reading-room.

Now, who will be the first to have their names enrolled as a contributor to this cause? Several hundred of Louisiana's young men have volunteered to give all they had in the service of their country—their lives. Some of them are old Centenary boys.

Now, let us show our patriotism to boys like them by giving them something good to read. We want $200. Let us raise it before the Fall term begins. Send your subscriptions either to Dr. I. W. Cooper, Jackson, La., or to me. D. F. TURNER.

To the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society—

DEAR SISTERS: I have returned from the meeting of the Woman's Board of Missions, and as our own annual meeting convenes in the Fall, I should like to tell you of this meeting.

We were in session eight days. Our Constitution requires that we elect officers quadrennially at the meeting succeeding the General Conference; so officers were elected. There were no changes made except that a new office of second vice-president was created, and Mrs. Bishop Wilson was elected to this as well as re-elected to her old office of editor of Leaflets. We had with us Dr. Young J. Allen, who has spent forty years in China; Miss Helen Richardson, from China; Rev. C. N. Tucker and Miss Elerding, of Brazil; Dr. Palmore, of St. Louis, and our own Bishop Galloway, the last two of whom have visited all our mission fields. The addresses and words of cheer from each of them made deep impressions for good, and were soul-inspiring. The meeting was a feast of good things throughout.

Much was said in regard to our literature, especially our Missionary Advocate, and I do urge you to do your best to secure more subscribers, and to support our organ. The price of The Little Worker has been reduced to ten cents, and it will be used instead of the juvenile leaflets. At ten cents it should be in every home. The Evangel is still the organ of the training-school, and 600 subscribers secures a scholarship for one year. Easter Sunday is appointed as a day for offerings for the training-school. Programs will be furnished. The cycle of prayer for daily use is recommended for our members. As this is China jubilee year, "China Missions," by Harland Beach, is recommended for this year's study. A library should be in every society.

Dues are to be paid quarterly, so your treasurers may send their reports quarterly. Our Conference pledge this year is $250. This does not include dues, Bible women scholarships, or day-schools. Four thousand four hundred and twenty-five dollars was raised by the children for the Korean Mission. North Carolina Conference raised the largest amount; South Georgia the next. Korea still remains the children's work. Mrs. Campbell said the Korean work has grown so that she needs another teacher; so Miss Hynes, of Kentucky, was appointed to that work.

Miss Mary Prescot, of North Carolina, was appointed to Juiz de Fora, Brazil, while Misses Mary Tarrant, of Texas, and Ida Anderson, of China, were referred to the Local Board for appointment, as their papers had not been received the proper length of time. Misses Annie Heath, of Georgia, and Elizabeth Davis, of North Carolina, were sent to the training-school for a two years' course of study.

The Hayes-Wilkins Memorial at Sung-Kiang is now completed, and Miss Ella Leveritt is in charge. There is great need for a building at Juiz de Fora, Brazil. Rev. Mr. Tucker, Bishop Galloway, and Miss Elerding, who have been in the field, recommended that we build there at once; so Rev. Mr. Tucker was instructed to secure a lot, and a building will be put up at once, the whole property to cost $15,000, $5,000 of which is to be paid annually until all is paid. There is also great need for a suitable school-building in Mexico City, but for lack of funds we could not build.

We hope to reach the $100,000 mark this year. The treasurer's report shows an increase of $3,538.29 this year over last year.

The appropriations for the work this year are $98,866. I hope that each member will do her share—indeed, all in her power—to raise the money this year. Let us make our Conference pledge $300 instead of $250. Let us work and pray as never before.

I am always glad to hear from you. Please send reports to district secretaries by the first of October, so that I may have my report in full at our Conference in Brookhaven.

May grace and truth crown you! Out of grace cometh love, and out of truth wisdom. They who have love and wisdom have also power.

Sincerely your friend,

SALLIE SMYLIE,
Cor. Sec. Miss. Conf.

We thank our secretary for the above. Let us use every means in obeying the marching orders of our Board, "Go forward," and the greater command, "Go teach all nations," from our blessed Lord and Master. Let us examine our Minutes of last session, and find how nearly we have complied with the requirements. Let us at once prepare for our next session what remains to be done, not forgetting to elect delegates and alternates, if not already done, and furnishing each with the required credentials. Are district secretaries being nominated at district meetings? How many auxiliaries have secured life members?

MRS. E. D. JONES.

Dear Sisters of the North Mississippi Conference:

The news of the undeserved compliment your noble band recently bestowed upon such an unworthy member as myself almost paralyzed my thoughts, causing me to be some what dilatory in returning thanks; nevertheless, words are inadequate to express my appreciation. At first frail nature and many excuses urged me to decline taking up such a cross, but by prayer I hope to be able to cope with the great duties, remembering, greater the cross, brighter the crown. My heart echoes, "I will work, I will pray; I will work in the vineyard of the Lord."

Requesting an interest in your prayers at all times, and a hearty co-operation in this work, and promising to try to do every duty (D. V.), thanking our most worthy president, Conference and district secretaries, and many others, for their kind letters of warm welcome and congratulations, I remain, ever,

Your humble co worker in Christ,
MRS. JAMES L. LENOIR.

Muldon, Miss., Aug. —, 1898.

FAITHFUL TO COUNTRY AND COMRADE.

"Private Benjamin Owen, —— Regiment, Vermont Volunteers, was found asleep at his post while on picket duty last night. The court-martial has sentenced him to be shot in twenty-four hours, as the offense occurred at a critical time." "I thought, when I gave Bennie to his country," said Farmer Owen, as he read the above telegram with dimming eyes, "that no other father in all this broad land made so precious a gift. He only slept a minute—just one little minute—at his post. I know that was all, for Bennie never dozed over a duty. How prompt and trustworthy he was! He was as tall as I, and only eighteen!—and now they shoot him because he was found asleep when doing sentinel duty!" Just then Bennie's little sister, Blossom, answered a tap at the door, and returned with a letter. "It is from him," was all she said.

"DEAR FATHER: For sleeping on sentinel duty, I am to be shot. At first it seems awful to me, but I have thought about it so much now that it has no terror. They say that they will not bind me, nor blind me, but that I may meet my death like a man. I thought, father, that it might have been on the battlefield, for my country, and that, when I fell, it would be fighting gloriously; but to be shot down like a dog for nearly betraying it—to die for neglect of duty! Oh, father, I wonder the very thought does not kill me! But I shall not disgrace you. I am going to write you all about it, and when I am gone, you may tell my comrades; I can not now.

"You know I promised Jemmie Carr's mother I would look after her boy, and, when he fell sick, I did all I could for him. He was not strong when he was ordered back into the ranks, and the day before that night I carried all his baggage, besides my own, on our march. Toward night we went in on double-quick, and the baggage began to feel very heavy. Everybody was tired, and as for Jemmie, if I had not lent him an arm now and then, he would have dropped by the way. I was all tired out when we came into camp, and then it was Jemmie's turn to be sentry, and I could take his place; but I was too tired, father. I could not have kept awake if a gun had been pointed at my head; but I did not know it until—well, until it was too late.

"They tell me to-day that I have a short reprieve—given to me by circumstances—'time to write to you,' our good colonel says. Forgive him, father; he only does his duty; he would gladly save me, if he could; and do not lay my death up against Jemmie. The poor boy is broken-hearted, and does nothing but beg and entreat them to let him die in my stead. I can't bear to think of mother and Blossom. Comfort them, father! Tell them I die as a brave boy should, and that, when the war is over, they will not be ashamed of me, as they must be now. God help me; it is very hard to bear! Good-by, father. To-night, in the early twilight, I shall see the cows all coming home from pasture, and precious little Blossom standing on the back stoop, waiting for me—but I shall never, never come! God bless you all!"

"God be thanked!" said Mr. Owen, reverently; "I knew Bennie was not the boy to sleep carelessly."

Late that night a little figure glided out of the house and down the path. Two hours later the conductor of the southward mail lifted her into a car at Mill Depot. Next morning she was in New York, and the next she was admitted to the White House at Washington. "Well, my child," said the President, in pleasant, cheerful tones, "what do you want so bright and early this morning?" "Bennie's life, please, sir," faltered Blossom. "Bennie? Who is Bennie?" asked Mr. Lincoln. "My brother, sir. They are going to shoot him for sleeping at his post," said the little girl. "I remember," said the President; "it was a fatal sleep. You see, child, it was a time of special danger. Thousands of lives might have been lost through his culpable negligence." "So my father said; but poor Bennie was so tired, sir, and Jemmie so weak. He did the work of two, sir, and it was Jemmie's night, not his; but Jemmie was too tired, and Bennie never thought about himself—that he was tired, too." "What is that you say, child? Come here; I do not understand." He read Bennie's letter to his father, which Blossom held out, wrote a few lines, rang his bell, and said to the messenger who appeared, "Send this dispatch at once." Then, turning to Blossom, he continued: "Go home, my child, and tell that father of yours, who could approve his country's sentence, even when it took the life of a child like that, that Abraham Lincoln thinks the life far too precious to be lost. Go back, or—wait until to-morrow; Bennie will need a change after he has so bravely faced death—he shall go with you." "God bless you, sir," said Blossom. Not all the queens are crowned.

Two days later, when the young soldier came with his sister to thank the President, Mr. Lincoln fastened the strap of a lieutenant upon his shoulder, saying, "The soldier that could carry a sick comrade's baggage, and die for the act without complaining, deserves well of his country."—Success.

THE FAULTLESS ONE.

One of the excellent results springing from the frankness of the biblical writers concerning the sins and faults of the people they portray, is that the sinlessness of Jesus stands out with wonderful distinctness. We can not say, "Oh, well, it is their way to say only good of the dead; if we knew all the facts, a very different impression would be made." This retort is prevented by the freeness with which they relate their own discreditable squabbles and darker doings. They compel us to trust them by their evident honesty and simplicity. They are truth-telling men, we are forced to exclaim; they hide nothing, they show up the imperfections of the great men of Hebrew and Christian history against a background of purest light. Therefore, when they draw this one perfect picture we can not do otherwise than fall down and worship. We cry: "Yes, he walked the earth completely upright. Peter might lie, and John flee, and Moses get angry, and Elijah wish to die, but One there was against whom none of these charges can be brought. Him we will hear, him we will follow, him we will adore and love. All glory to his blessed name! We will bring forth the royal diadem and crown him Lord of all, our Savior, our King, and our God!"—Zion's Herald.

FORGIVENESS.

Little words have great force sometimes. In the prayer, "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors," who has not stumbled over that word "as," and found it more than a mouthful? Who has not offered the petition with a mental reservation? For it means vastly more than forgiveness of our enemies. That might be easy; in fact, many of us are not conscious that we have any enemies. But our friends who hurt us, who touch us in the sorest places, who are unjust to us; our friends who pass by on the other side when we are overcome in life's conflicts—they are the ones we find it hardest to forgive.

In the words of the prophetic psalm: "It was not an enemy that reproached me; then I could have borne it. . . . But it was thou, a man mine equal, my guide, and mine acquaintance."

Our Savior, entering into all the depths of human needs by his own experience, knew well what power this one petition would have to bring the hearts of men into harmony with his own loving spirit.

Only as we are filled with his love; only when like him we are meek and lowly in heart, unselfish, seeking not our own, only then we dare to pray, "Forgive us, as we forgive."—Helen A. Hawley, in New York Observer.

A VITAL QUALIFICATION FOR ALL CHURCH OFFICERS.

Sometimes we think the Holy Ghost is only needed to furnish men to do spiritual work, but we are reminded that in the choosing of the first deacons to attend to the temporal and material interests of the church, called the "serving of tables," the disciples were directed to choose "men of good report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business." Perhaps the reason why most church quarrels and disagreements grow out of questions and matters effecting the formalities, is because we are not careful to seek the presence and power of the Holy Ghost here, as well as in what we are pleased to call the spiritual interests and concerns of the church. Is not everything that appertains to the church of God a spiritual interest; and ought not everything be done in the power of the Spirit, from the building of the meeting-house to the preaching of the sermon in it?—Words and Weapons.

To fill a little space because God wills it; to go on cheerfully with a petty round of little duties, little avocations; to accept unmurmuringly a low position; to be misunderstood, misrepresented, maligned, without complaint; to smile for the joys of others when the heart is aching; to banish all ambition, all pride, and all restlessness in a single regard to our Savior's work; he who does this for one hour is a greater hero than he who for one hour storms a breach, or for one day rushes forward undaunted in the flaming front of shot and shell.—Exchange.

Be sure of this: that the one longing which will never be disappointed, nor when answered will prove to have given us but ashes instead of bread, is the longing to be like God and like Christ.—Alexander Maclaren.

Many have yielded to go a mile with Satan that never intended to go two. He leads poor creatures down into the depths by winding stairs, and does not let them see the bottom, where they are going.—D. L. Moody.

My heart has always assured and reassured me that the gospel of Jesus Christ must be divine reality. The Sermon on the Mount can not be merely human production.—Daniel Webster.

The true Christian is like the sun, which pursues the noiseless track and everywhere leaves the effect of his beams in blessing upon the world around him.—Martin Luther.

A PREACHER'S REPORT

Interesting Statement by Elder Joel H. Austin of Goshen, Ind.

"I was a victim of catarrh and had almost constant pain in my head. The trouble was gradually working down on my lungs. I was weak and irresolute. My wife had the grip and Hood's Sarsaparilla cured her. After this I had the same disease and resorted to Hood's. In a short time the aches and pains were relieved and I also saw the medicine was helping my catarrh. In six weeks I ceased to have any further trouble with it and am now a well man. The pains and lostlag I had in my limbs are gone and am relieved of a heart trouble. I am thankful for a medicine so intelligently compounded and so admirably adapted to the needs of the system." IN MEMORIAM.

Very few men such as Bro. Henry Ware live within our century. His probation covered most of the nineteenth century of the Christian era. Born of Thomas Ware and his wife (who had been a Miss Jemison), in Greene county, Ga., July 29, 1813, he tabernacled among men till July 9, 1898. This brought his age up to nearly fourscore and five. God, who is good beyond his promises, gave him extraordinary strength to enjoy life till past fourscore. Giving his heart to God in very early manhood, he joined the Methodist Church at the age of eighteen. His life was ever afterward morally correct and increasingly religious. While still young he married Miss M. A. Everitt. She died in 1879, leaving him seven children and many grandchildren. During the year 1880 Miss Lou Ford, of Alabama, united her destiny with his. She had the privilege of aiding and comforting him in health and in sickness for the eighteen remaining years of his pilgrimage. Among his last words uttered to his pastor were touching tributes to the kindness and efficiency of her care whom he was so soon to have in widowhood. Talking of this and of God's goodness to him brought tears to those eyes not given to weeping.

Bro. Ware saw many changes in many ways while journeying to the better Land. During the year 1846 he removed with his young, and growing family from Central Georgia to Texas—first to Colorado county, and then to Harrison. This trip had to be accomplished by the old emigrant style of covered wagons with horsemen to blaze the way. The usual scenes of camping out at night, killing deer and other game by day, crossing swollen streams without bridges or ferries, gave relish to his taste for progress and enterprise. It took weeks to cover the breadth of three and a half States, and a portion of the fourth.

He was among the pioneers of the new great Empire State of the South. And he was worthy of the post—just the caliber for a mighty commonwealth's best basis. Integrity, industry, progressive ideas, with moral fiber of the first class, marked him as a man among men. With these qualities to build on, he began with a small force his planting operations. Soon he added manufacturing interests. The latter became very helpful to his fellow-citizens of the Confederacy during the war between the States. Having, by wise and aggressive energy, amassed a considerable fortune, despite the havoc of war in emancipation of slaves and confiscation of cotton, he removed to New Orleans and entered the commission business. After three years of measurable success he engaged in sugar planting. Here again he failed not to increase his property, while many around him were losing. A watchful eye, good judgment and economy brought success where others failed. Though never a patentee, he invented and used some notably helpful improvements on planting utensils. The benefits of these devices he wished all his neighbors to share. This was on his mind during his last illness—even while racked with acute pain.

In 1879 he came to Harrison county, Miss., on the Gulf coast, for comparative rest, and to enjoy its salubrious breezes. First, he settled at Scott's Station, now named Long Beach, and grew to quite a village. His enterprise in building there a Methodist Church helped much to bring the place to the notice of Protestant home-seekers. Here, and along the adjacent coast he did much good as a "lay preacher," filling out lack of service by the regular ministry. While intensely Protestant, he was truly catholic in his love for all souls and earnest efforts for their salvation.

Some years ago he purchased a lovely home on the beach at Pass Christian, where his useful life drew to a peaceful close.

Prominent as he was in the church for many years, his most distinguishing qualities of head and heart came out in the temperance cause. An ardent Prohibitionist, he thoroughly believed that little permanent good can result till we enthrone the principle of Prohibition in the fundamental law of the land, and back it up at the polls. Nothing short of this could satisfy his ideal. For this he labored untiringly and aggressively. His worst enemies gave him credit for superb courage in the consistent and persistent fight he made for his convictions. Neither name nor fame ever kept him from opposing measures he did not believe to be best. Nothing but the best could satisfy him temporarily. It was hard for him to admit that "a half-loaf is better than no bread." He was afraid of the after-claps of all compromise measures. From the heavenly world he may yet look down on that civic righteousness, which 'twas the height of his earthly ambition to behold—admiring our commonwealth, our nation, and our world. God grant it speedily.

Like ripening fruit he sweetened and mellowed with age. A wonderful constitution long held in check the dread disease from which few even in youth recover. For months he faced the fell destroyer at close quarters without a qualm of fear. Meanwhile his request had been urgent on pastor and friends not to pray for his recovery, but only that he might have grace to endure uncomplainingly and gain a speedy release. He was heard, but the refining fire burned long and brightly.

In March last, believing the end very near, he executed with his own hand his last will and testament. After exact and just division of his considerable property among his heirs, he wrote: "A few more days and my sufferings will be over. I wish I could take you all with me. I can not do that. But all you can and must meet me over there. I shall watch every arrival." Let none of us disappoint this now-glorified saint.

SUNDAY-SCHOOLS AS MISSIONARY SOCIETIES.

MR. EDITOR: As chairman of the Sunday-school Board of the North Mississippi Conference, I desire to direct the attention of the presiding elders, pastors, and Sunday-school superintendents to the change made by the General Conference in paragraphs two hundred and forty-seven of the Discipline. As the law now is, the words, "so far as practicable," have been stricken out, and the organization of each Sunday-school into a Missionary Society is made mandatory. It will hardly be possible for the Sunday-schools to undertake all of the work of Missionary Societies proper, but they can at least set aside the collections of one Sunday in each month (and the first Sunday is suggested for that purpose) to be devoted to missionary work. This fund should go to the Missionary Treasurer direct, but where so requested, it will be credited to the missionary assessment of the charge in which the Sunday-school is located. This monthly contribution, accentuated by proper comment on the part of the pastor and superintendent, will give an impetus to the cause, and make some impression on the minds of our young people, which latter is more to be desired than the fund itself.

The General Board has set aside the third Sunday in October as Missionary Rally Day, when a large contribution is to be expected. For this day appropriate exercises are expected to be prepared. Such a day, like Children's Day, will cost trouble and effort; but it will break the monotony, dissipate lethargy, and set the wheels to turning faster. It should not be ignored. The Sunday-school that does so will sear its aggregate conscience.

Our Board, through the generous help of the presiding elder, has compiled a complete directory of our more than four hundred Sunday-school superintendents. With them we have had much pleasant and, we hope, profitable correspondence this Conference year already. Our presiding elders will soon be furnished new books in which to revise the lists of superintendents on their fourth round. The statistical blanks called for by our last Conference will also be furnished the pastors in due time, and it is greatly to be desired that each preacher in charge in the Conference will carefully fill out and return them.

Yours truly, GEO. J. LEFTWICH.

Aberdeen, Miss., July 26, 1898.

I would not give much for your religion unless it can be seen. Lamps do not talk, but they do shine. A lighthouse sounds no drum; it beats no gong; and yet, far over the water, its friendly spark is seen by the mariner. So let your actions shine out your religion. Let the main sermon of your life be illustrated by all your conduct, and it shall not fail to be illustrious.—Spurgeon.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. G. A. Klein, P. C., Nesbit, Miss., Aug. 3, 1898: "We have just closed a most wonderful meeting at Endora. One of our beloved superannuated preachers, Bro. C. N. Terry, was with us, and did all the preaching. He came to the meeting accompanied by the Holy Spirit, and preached with the old-time power. There were moments during the service when the tension was truly painful and awe-inspiring. Those of our members who came, willing to receive a blessing, went away with more than they could contain. Sinners were made to feel the power and presence of a living God. I voice the testimony of many when I say, 'I never felt the presence of God more distinctly, nor saw his workings and power more plainly demonstrated.' Bro. Terry is truly a preacher sent of God. The mellowness of his spirit in dwelling upon the love and goodness of God to undeserving man was deeply touching, and passed with electric rapidity from heart to heart. His boldness when denouncing sin, and his graphic style when picturing the terrors of hell and the felicity of heaven, were soul-inspiring, and left the congregation overwhelmed with awe. We rejoice to-day for what 'our eyes have seen and our ears have heard.' Brethren, if you need help in a meeting, you would do well to look up one of these 'fathers in Israel.' They may be weak physically, but they are strong spiritually. Bro. Terry has not authorized me to say so, but I take it upon myself to say that, if you desire him to aid you in a meeting, he will come. He is enjoying good health, and will build up your church. His address is Nesbit, Miss."

Rev. Ruffin T. Davis, Lonoke, Ark., Aug. 2, 1898: "Joy and sorrow have been our portion in the last few weeks, while absent attending our District Conference. Our son, Purvis, a bright, lovely boy near his fourteenth year, was drowned while in bathing. He was a manly little fellow, and we were proud of him as parents who had bright hopes for his future; but God, who is too good to do wrong, saw best to transplant him from earth to his heavenly inheritance. We bow in submission to his divine will, and kiss the hand that smites us. Our eldest daughter, Minnie, who was born on Louisiana soil, was, on yesterday, united in marriage to the man of her choice, Mr. Charles B. Shannon, of Arkansas county, this writer performing the ceremony, assisted by Rev. Franklin Moore, her pastor. Our new son-in-law does not fill the place of our dear, departed boy; but we give our daughter to his care and keeping, believing that in him she will find a good, kind husband, and one who will provide for her wants. The protracted-meeting season is on us up this way, and pastors and local preachers are busy about the Master's work. May the great Head of the church bless us abundantly! I just felt like writing this note for the paper. I may write again some time."

In the evening twilight of winter time, when the fire sparkles and glows and dances upon the hearth, there are dreams and air castles of the future in the flames for the young woman who sits and gazes into them. Whether these air castles will ever become realities, is largely a matter of health.

No woman can hope to be a contented wife, the mistress of a happy home and the mother of healthy children who suffers from weakness and disease of the delicate organs that are distinctly feminine. All the air castles that she builds will crumble into dust, unless she takes measures to correct the disorders from which she suffers. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive cure for all disorders of these most sensitive organs. It makes them strong, healthy and vigorous. It prepares a woman for happy wifehood and healthy motherhood. It robs maternity of its peril and of nearly all pain. It insures children with strong, healthy constitutions. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits. For nursing mothers it is the best supportive tonic.

When a dealer urges some substitute he's thinking of the larger profit he'll make—not of your welfare.

"About six years ago my wife became afflicted with displacement, causing inflammation and much pain," writes Rev. I. J. Coppedge, of Elmo, Kaufman Co., Texas. "She could not stand on her feet or get in any position but what she suffered great bearing down pain. I got her a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription which she soon found was helping her; so she kept on until she had taken six bottles. Since taking the last she has not suffered a moment from the old trouble."

BELHAVEN COLLEGE

FOR YOUNG LADIES,

JACKSON, MISS.

Select home school for girls. Number of boarding pupils limited. Offers college courses with degrees. Also eclectic courses with department diplomas in Literature, Music, Art and Elocution. Location and environments unequalled for beauty and healthfulness.

No College in the South offers better advantages in Music, Art and Elocution. Mr. Chas. Robinson Kelly, Superintendent of the Department of Elocution in the New England Conservatory, Boston, praises the work done at Belhaven. He says:

"Those young ladies from the South who were formerly students of BELHAVEN COLLEGE stand not only in the highest rank in their classes here, but are regarded, WITHOUT EXCEPTION, as possessing those TIME WOMANLY TRAITS of character and that degree of INTELLECTUAL DEVELOPMENT which command instant respect and ADMIRATION."

Mr. Carl Faelton and General Manager Frank Hale also endorse in the highest terms the work done at Belhaven.

For further information and for illustrated catalogue apply to

Next Session Opens September 14th, 1898.

North Texas Female College.

SHERMAN, TEXAS.

This College has just closed another most prosperous and pleasant session. The class of work done here the past session has been of the very highest order. Mrs. Key has just returned from Nashville and other Eastern points, where she inspected schools and school facilities, and feels more than satisfied with the N. T. F. C., and assures the girls of Louisiana and Texas that it is not necessary for them to go East to get the best educational advantages and enjoy the most refined and æsthetic surroundings. Nowhere is there better work done or better facilities offered—earnest, able, conscientious teachers, new, full chemical and physical outfit; individual work in the laboratory required and performed by each member of the class.

LITERATURE.—Three years' course required in Literature—one in American and two in English.

MATHEMATICS.—The course in Mathematics is very complete, and thoroughly taught—higher than is taught in most female colleges.

LATIN.—The Latin course is unexcelled, and is the same as that in the best male colleges in the land.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC.—The Conservatory of Music is pre-eminently the best in the South. During the past session we have had pupils who studied under Sherwood, Carl Faelton, and other leading teachers of the East; also pupils from the New England and other conservatories. All of these pupils were more than satisfied with the advantages offered here. We feel sure that if those desiring the best musical advantages were cognizant of the ability and talent in this conservatory, they certainly would not leave the South. How can anyone expect to get a better piano teacher than Herr Von Mickwitz, who is personally recommended by the great Leschetizky as teacher and pianist?

SCHOOL OF ART. We are very fortunate in securing the services of Miss Frances Fowler as Art teacher. She was for six years teacher of Art in Wells College, and spent twelve years studying with the masters in Europe. She is a lady of the highest intelligence, and will deliver to the school monthly lectures on the subject of Art. Mrs. Holt personally inspected Miss Fowler's work in New York City last Summer, and she assures us that she has seen nothing like it in the South.

CAMPUS AND DORMITORIES. The Dormitories are well equipped and thoroughly comfortable. The campus is pronounced beautiful by all who see it, and it is certainly conducive to the æsthetic and refined. Nowhere will you find a lovelier home for your daughters.

SPECIAL REMARKS.—We have maintained the high standard and efficiency of this College, regardless of the existing depression, knowing that the people of Texas and Louisiana will be slow to economize at the expense of the comfort and culture of their daughters. Appreciating the fact that the public are often deceived by misrepresentations of school catalogues and agents, we extend to all who have daughters to educate a hearty invitation to visit and inspect the N. T. F. C. for themselves. For catalogue, address

To the sunny soul that is full of hope,
And whose beautiful trust ne'er faileth,
The skies are blue and the fields are green,
Tho' the wintry storm prevaileth.
—Selected.

Doubt indulged soon becomes donbt realized.—F. R. Havergal.

An effort made for the happiness of others lifts us above ourselves.—L. M. Child.

The end of man is an action, and not a thought, though it were the noblest.—Thomas Carlyle.

There is no such thing as a church without the Holy Ghost; they are only so-called churches.—Rev. F. M. Hussey.

Let us read with method and propose to ourselves an end to which our studies may point.—Edward Gibbon.

"So may heaven's grace clear away the foam from thy conscience, that the river of thy thoughts may roll limpid forever."—Dante.

There is a lesson to be learned in the school of adversity that can be learned nowhere else. The lesson of patience and resignation.—Midland Advocate.

"A religion without thanksgiving, praise, and joy is like a flower without tint, perfume, or honey. There may be such a flower, but surely no one would care to pluck it."

Many examples may be put of the force of custom, both upon mind and body; therefore, since custom is the principal magistrate of man's life, let men by all means endeavor to obtain good customs.—Bacon.

Be pure in thought, language and life—pure in mind and in body. Be unselfish. Care for the feelings and comforts of others. Be generous, noble and manly. This will include a genuine reverence for the aged and for things sacred.—Churchman.

When God hides from us so much that we would fain know, let us believe that the same love conceals, as at other times reveals, and that shadow and sun are accomplishing our growth in grace and in the knowledge and love of God.—F. B. Meyer.

Christianity wants nothing so much in the world as sunny people, and the old are hungrier for love than for bread, and the oil of joy is very cheap, and if you can help the poor on with a garment of praise, it will be better for them than blankets.—Henry Drummond.

Make a rule, and pray God to help you to keep it; never, if possible, to lie down at night without being able to say, "I have made one human being, at least, a little wiser, a little happier, or a little better this day." You will find it easier than you think, and pleasanter.—Charles Kingsley.

We can close out the sunshine from our homes by blocking up the windows. The sun shines all the same. So we can also refuse to admit the sweet, life-giving sunshine of Christ's presence and sympathy into our lives, but he shines forth, the light and joy of souls, all the same.—Rev. Henry W. Little.

GOOD SAMARITANISM AMID THE HORRORS OF WAR.

Never was the Good Samaritanism of the gospel of Christ so conspicuously displayed on a large scale as during the present war. We are not now speaking of the noble work in behalf of our own soldiers, such as the organization of War-Relief Associations by the women of all sections of our land to raise funds to minister to the comfort of our soldiers in camp and the volunteering of large numbers of non-immunes to yellow fever from all ranks of society for service as nurses in a pestilence-stricken region. This is worthy of high praise, but what we now speak of is the magnanimity displayed by our troops in dealing with the foe. This magnanimity began with the beginning of actual warfare. In that first battle soon after Shafter had landed on Cuban soil, our troops, after suffering heavy losses from a terrific ambuscade fire, charged the enemy with such impetuosity that they were forced to fly, leaving their dead and wounded upon the field. The dead were buried as carefully and the wounded nursed as tenderly as if they had been fighting under "the stars and stripes."

A few days later on the blood-stained field of El Caney a number of prisoners fell into our hands. The Spanish officials, with their usual mendacity, had made their soldiers believe that it was the custom of the Americans to kill all prisoners of war. Hence, these poor fellows, expecting nothing but death in the end, begged to be killed at once. They were almost beside themselves with joy when they learned that they would be as well fed and cared for as our own soldiers until such time as they could be exchanged. When the news of this humane treatment reached Santiago, hundreds of Spanish troops deserted and took refuge within our lines. These, and also thousands of non-combatants who threw themselves upon our hospitality, were fed just as our own soldiers were. Indeed, for a time our boys in blue were on short rations, in order to relieve the wants of this famishing multitude. The Spanish sick, both soldiers and citizens, were nursed as carefully as if they had been fighting under the star-spangled banner. When Santiago surrendered our government, with unparalleled magnanimity, agreed to carry the entire Spanish army home at its own expense.

But the sublimest spectacle of all was witnessed on that ever-memorable day when Cervera's fleet was destroyed. On some of the ships the Spaniards, half crazed with liquor, kept on firing even after the ships were burning or sinking. Our sailors, though still under fire, ceased firing, jumped into boats, and worked with might and main to save the lives of their foes. Nor does this complete the picture. Their lives were in peril not only from the enemy's guns, but from the burning ships. As the conflagration progressed, bombs were bursting continually, and there was no telling at what minute the flames might reach the magazine where tons of powder were stored, in which case death was inevitable. There was danger also from the sea, for the billows were tossing high against the doomed ships. In spite of all this, our sailors, both officers and men, put forth almost superhuman efforts to save the lives of those with whom a few moments before they had been engaged in fiercest combat. Fifteen hundred Spaniards were snatched from the very jaws of death. Our men could not have worked more vigorously or valorously if they had been rescuing their own comrades. The Spaniards were utterly amazed. They had never seen warfare after this fashion. Many of them were moved to tears.

Such a scene is unparalleled in the annals of the world. It belongs to the latter part of the nineteenth century. Never before in the history of the world was any nation so permeated by the Good Samaritanism of the gospel. Of course, these sailors are not all Christians in the highest sense of the term, but such deeds of heroic magnanimity show that they have all through their lives breathed the atmosphere of Christian civilization. The benignant spirit of the Christian religion has entered into the very warp and woof of their being.

Our country has won imperishable renown during the present war. The skill and courage and dash of our commanders, both on land and sea, and the perfect discipline of our soldiery, their cool, unerring aim amid the exciting din of battle, their courage mounting to the loftiest heights of heroism—all these challenge the admiration of the civilized world. But all the laurels won with the blood-stained missiles of death pale into insignificance in comparison with the unparalleled magnanimity which treats a fallen foe as a brother beloved. Hail! ye soldiers and sailors of "the best government the world ever saw!" ye bulwarks of American liberty! ye champions of human rights! to you it has been given by the King of kings to plant the blood-besprinkled banner of war on moral heights where it never floated before. While sweet charity has a devotee, or God a worshiper, the sun of your matchless example will shine in our national sky with undimmed lustre.

NO SECOND DECLARATION NECESSARY.

"The Senate has not taken the affirmative action indicated by the Bishops, but there can be no doubt that it will take it this Fall."—Midland Methodist, of Aug. 3.

We hold that the above statement is radically erroneous. The United States Senate has taken the affirmative action indicated by the Bishops. Here is what the Bishops said: "If the Senate, by affirmative action, declares that the PASSAGE OF THE BILL WAS DUE TO SUCH MISLEADING STATEMENTS, we will take the proper steps to have the entire amount returned to the government." The report of the Senatorial Investigating Committee contained the following words: "If these denials of the existence of a contract had not been made to the Senate from a source which was entitled to entire credit, THE BILL WOULD NOT HAVE BEEN PASSED BY THE SENATE, unless," etc. This report went to record as a part of the proceedings of the United States Senate. The positive affirmation contained in the report is, therefore, now the affirmation of the Senate itself.

Let us illustrate by reference to our General Conference. When a committee makes its report to the General Conference, the report is subject to the disposal of the General Conference. It can be recommitted or referred to a new committee, or to some other committee already existing; it can be postponed either indefinitely or to a given time; it can be tabled; it can be amended, or substituted; it can be voted down, or it can be adopted. Unless the report is adopted, the General Conference is not responsible for it. But when the report is adopted, then the action of the committee becomes the action of the General Conference. Of course, the same rule applies to the United States Senate. When the Senatorial Investigating Committee made its report, that report was before the Senate for its action. When the Senate adopted the report, then the report became the action of the Senate itself. The Senate having once declared most positively that, but for the misleading statements of the representatives of the M. E. Church, South, it would not have passed the bill, to demand of it that it shall take the same action a second time would be a piece of unconscionable effrontery.

Without claiming the gift of prophecy in even the smallest degree, we venture the prediction that if the church waits for any further "affirmative" action on the part of the United States Senate, it will wait forever.

A SOLDIER OF THE CROSS.

Captain John W. Philip, of the battle-ship "Texas," finds no incompatibility between the service of God and the service of his country. He is a man whose piety stands the test on all occasions. Denominationally, he is a Congregationalist. His membership was at Plymouth Church, San Francisco, during the time he was on duty there. When he removed to Boston he brought his membership with him, and at once connected himself with Winthrop Church. During the three years, or more, of his stay in Boston he was regular in his attendance, not only upon the Sunday preaching services, but also upon the weekly prayer meeting and upon the business meetings—Church Conferences we would call them. When appointed Oct. 19, 1897, to take command of the "Texas," he said to the chaplain, Rev. H. W. Jones: "I am a firm believer in prayer, and I think it is a duty we owe to God to have prayers on board ship every evening." His suggestion was acted upon at once, and prayer became a part of the daily programme. In a letter to his wife, written during the blockade of Santiago, he said: "I am just as safe here as I would be walking up Broadway with you, because God is with us, and he is listening to our prayers."

Soon after Cervera's fleet had been located in Santiago harbor, Admiral Sampson summoned the chief officers of the fleet to a council of war on board the flag-ship, and proposed to begin a bombardment the next day, which happened to be Sunday. Captain Philip promptly replied: "Admiral, this is Sunday. I do not think we should fight to-day. We may be sorry if we do." The Admiral thanked Captain Philip for his reminder of its being Sunday, and the bombardment was postponed until Monday.

At the close of that world-famous battle, July 3, which resulted in the utter destruction of Cervera's fleet, Captain Philip summoned his men on deck and said to them: "I want to make public acknowledgement here that I believe in God the Father Almighty. I want all you officers and men to lift your hats, and from your hearts offer silent thanks to the Almighty." Every hat was lifted, and a silence like that of death prevailed for a few moments. When the prayer was ended the voices of all that throng rang out as the voice of one man in three lusty cheers for their noble commander. Such a man is a tower of strength to our nation. May his tribe increase!

THE MARCH OF HISTORY.

In a recent baccalaureate address Dr. F. L. Patton, president of Princeton College, spoke as follows:

"There is such a thing as the logic of events, the march of history, the inevitable, and we sometimes feel helpless when confronted by this unmistakable march of events. We do what we can to protest, but are overborne. We say we will not let ourselves be submerged in the torrent, but the formation of the public sentiment goes on just the same. The imperious 'ought' is forced to capitulate to the stubborn 'is.' History knows not what it is to retreat. Every step we take shuts a door behind us. The boom of Admiral Dewey's cannon across the Pacific made us forget the Farewell Address and thrust the Monroe Doctrine for the time being into the background. It is impossible, as some one says, for a nation to secede from the family of nations, and if it stays in the family, it is going to have family complications, which sometimes take the form of war.

"What I would have you understand is that we must always judge events from a high moral and religious point of view. Do not emphasize too much national convenience. What objects Providence may have in throwing open new avenues of industry, and strengthening the bond between us and our blood relations across the seas, we do not know. But we do know that these things must be regarded from the light of moral principles. So I would tell you to do your work always as in the great Task-master's eye.

"The idea of God is supreme, and there is nothing behind it. You will make the mistake of your life if you do not make it supreme. You owe service to the State as a religious duty. Yet you do not exist simply for the State. Remember that while you honor the men who have responded to their country's call in the present instance, still there are honors to be gained and laurels to be bestowed in still other fields. I commend to you the example of Mr. Gladstone, the typical university man, and the typical man of our age."

EMPHASIZE YOURSELF.

The following is an extract from a recent baccalaureate address by Chancellor J. R. Day, of Syracuse University:

"If you aim at yourself, you will make the highest success. Furnish a man that the world wants is the surest way to secure the coveted place the world has to give. Seek place only, and you may realize your ambition for a time, but you probably will not be the man it demands. You will be conspicuous, but not famous.

"The size of yourself and the thoroughness and genuineness of yourself will determine your orbit. A puff ball can not sail through the orbit of Jupiter. All the diameters between the two are determined by the density, the quality of each star. Men talk about fortune and friends and many adventitious aids to success. There often is a mistake in what is success. But men of power and quality who are and have what the world wants can not be suppressed. Launch a star, and it will find the orbit of a star. There are infinite and unalterable laws upon which it may depend to find its orbit. But it must be a star. And it will make its own orbit by what it is. That will determine its relation to all other stars and the field of its own eternal movements.

"It is from what you are that we may predict your future. You may think that there are too many exceptions to this rule. Never trust yourselves to exceptions.

"Emphasize yourself. In the name of all that is high above us, lay aside all things besides, long enough to see the greatness of manhood, womanhood, in their own merits and possibilities, and the claims of heaven and earth upon you, yourselves, to be true men and women. That, as an ambition, is worthy of all your powers. That ambition realized will be the greatest service you can render to the world. That ambition is the surest road to true success."

A NEW BOOK.

THE DUTIES OF CHURCH MEMBERS TO THE PASTOR, AND THE PASTOR TO THE PEOPLE. By Rev. W. D. Bass.

The above is the title of a pamphlet of seventy-five pages just issued from the press of the Corinth (Miss.) Herald. It contains a good wood cut likeness of the author. We have not yet had time to read it as a whole. Having sketched it, however, in a journalistic way, we judge that its circulation will do good. Its tendency will be to bring about harmony and concord between pastors and their flocks. For terms see ad. in this issue.

We invite the attention of preachers to our fifty-cent offer. Please make it known to your people publicly and privately.

OUR NAVAL VESSELS.

Europe is rubbing its eyes as it reads in the daily papers the remarkable achievements of the American Navy. The patronizing tone which has heretofore characterized the English press whenever it has had occasion to speak of our Navy, has given way to an expression of alarm. The terribly effective fire which our ships poured into Cervera's fleet has convinced the world that our marksmanship is superb. It has also occasioned a good deal of anxiety in England, France and Germany. These nations have not given half as much attention to target practice as we have, and they are awake to the fact that it is the accurate fire that is effective. When Mr. Roosevelt asked Congress for more money for ammunition in the middle of the year, he was asked what had become of the year's allowance, and he replied that he had "fired it away." It is reported on good authority that we have been spending more money for target practice of late years than England, France and Germany. These countries are now convinced that economy in ammunition in time of peace is poor policy, and there will certainly be more target practice among those nations hereafter. The manner in which our ships have been handled excites the open admiration of all the world. Theoretically, it is not possible to manœuvre so many ships for so many weeks without serious accident; theoretically, too, it is not possible for two engagements to be fought, where eighteen of the enemy's ships are sunk, with hundreds of men killed on them, and only one man killed on our side. But our Navy which has grown up within the last fifteen years has put a great many theories to flight, and our naval officers are showing to-day that before the ships were built the Naval Academy at Annapolis had educated officers thoroughly competent to successfully handle and magnificently fight the battleships which are to-day the admiration of the world.—Zion's Herald.

The following from the pen of John Wesley is worthy of a place in the scrap-book of everyone who calls himself a Christian. What a tremendous uplift this old world would receive if these sentiments were universally adopted and acted upon!

"I will not quarrel with you about opinions. Only see that your heart is right toward God, that you know and love the Lord Jesus Christ, that you love your neighbor and walk as your Master walked, and I desire no more. I am sick of opinions, and I am weary to hear them. Give me solid and substantial religion; give me an humble, gentle love of God and man, a man full of mercy, and good fruits, a man laying out himself in the work of faith, the patience of hope, the labor of love. Let my soul be with these Christians, wheresoever they are, and whatsoever opinions they are of. Whosoever thus doeth the will of my Father in heaven, the same is my brother and sister."

A pretty story is told at Hawarden regarding Mr. Gladstone's interest in young men. Some time ago an aged charwoman at Hawarden Castle had a refractory son, who had long given her great trouble. In her desperation she begged to be permitted to see Mr. Gladstone. She poured her tale of sorrow into the ears of the venerable statesman, who, after sympathizing with her, sent a special messenger in pursuit of the youth, and he was brought to Hawarden Castle and placed in the library. There Mr. Gladstone had a long, quiet talk with him, pointing out the path of rectitude and melting him to tears. The youth rose to go, whereupon Mr. Gladstone, placing his hand on his shoulder, said: "We must have a word of prayer." The venerable gentleman and the rebellious youth knelt together in prayer, with the result that the mother's heart was rejoiced in the complete reclamation of her son.—Self-Culture.

When a man has not a good reason for doing a thing, he has one good reason for letting it alone.—Thomas Scott.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Booneville, Miss.
EDITOR.

In another place in this column will be found a communication from Bro. Geo. D. Parker anent the work of Bro. C. D. Atkinson, the missionary campaigner from Vanderbilt University.

Will all the pastors in Mississippi please read and call attention of same to their Leagnes; and if yon desire the presence of Bro. Atkinson, send in your address and date to this (Booneville) office at once, and we will appoint some live Leagner in Mississippi to arrange (for Bro. Atkinson) the trip.

These missionary campaigners are sent out by authority of the Board of Missions. We are informed that the M. E. Church has one hundred of these missionary workers in the field this Summer.

A flonrishing Epworth Leagne was organized at Girard, La., on July 15. Already they have gone to work in earnest. Among other things, they have sent copy of a resolution passed by them to President McKinley, condemning the military "canteen," and asking him to use his power against this great evil. This promising young League hopes soon to send in some very interesting items. May God bless and prosper them!

The Executive Committee of the Union Epworth Leagne of New Orleans is soon to meet for the purpose of discussing plans for the establishment of a Mission Sunday-school, which shall be controlled, manned and supported by this loyal band of Leaguers.

IMPORTANT TO LEAGUERS.

STUDENT MISSIONARY CAMPAIGN.

During the session just closed at Vanderbilt University twelve picked, consecrated young men from the Theological Department attended a course of lectures given by Dr. W. R. Lambuth, Mr. F. S. Brockman, Prof. O. E. Brown, and others, for the purpose of fitting themselves for work among the Epworth Leagnes in our Conferences. Each of these young men promised to devote at least one month of his vacation, without salary or remuneration guaranteed, to this work, he choosing his own field. The watch-words of this movement, "Pray," "Study," "Give," explain in a word the object and work of the campaign.

PRAY.

The campaigner, in the first place, tries to get the individual Leagner to pray daily, fervently, intelligently, "Thy kingdom come." Prayer is the dynamic that will move the world from Satan's power back to God's love.

STUDY.

In order to pray intelligently, we must know the world's great need, and this is learned from the excellent and interesting course of reading and study mapped out by the committee. "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge," and, "if we but knew" how much heathendom needs the gospel, we would not hesitate to go or give. It is desired that each Leagne organize a class in the study of missions, and also secure a library of missionary books.

GIVE.

And what must necessarily follow, we give of our prayers, sympathy and means to world-wide evangelization. Not only of our means will we give, but from the ranks of loyal Leaguers of Louisiana and Mississippi will there not be those who will volunteer to go to the uttermost parts of the earth, bearing the blood-bought banner, "All for Christ; Christ for all!"

Mr. C. D. Atkinson, a former student of Centenary, and at present a theologue at Vanderbilt, chose Louisiana as a field for work. He was the first campaigner to get to his field, coming direct to New Orleans. Here he made a thorough canvass of the Leagnes, visiting and addressing each one, and at the end of his campaign in this part of the State he held two public mass meetings, in which all the Leagues joined. The rally aroused the latent energy and enthusiasm, and the Institute, held the next evening, conserved and directed this enthusiasm into channels of usefulness. The Leagnes took up work along all lines indicated by the movement. We have mission-study classes in nearly every League, missionary libraries, and have undertaken systematic giving to foreign missions.

Mr. Atkinson has made a tour of the State, touching the most prominent centers of Leagne work. He rendered valuable service to the Arcadia District Rally, and has been eminently successful in his campaign—so much so that instead of giving us a month of his vacation, he has been urged to make engagements which have kept him in the State for nearly three months. Seeing the great need of this work, and being so much interested in it, Mr. Atkinson has decided to devote his entire vacation to the work.

In view of the fact that Mississippi has not had the benefit of a campaigner's visit, he has consented to give his time from about August 15 to the Mississippi Leagnes, if they desire his services.

The Leagnes visited pay his traveling expenses, which may be very light, if his route is planned by some one who knows "how the land lies," so that he can get from one Leagne to the next without much expense.

I heartily commend Mr. Atkinson to all Leagnes that need new life and energy instilled into them. He will come to you in the power of the Spirit of Christ, and will leave you thankful to God for sending him to muster your forces so that they will be able to present an unbroken front in your aggressive warfare to win "all" for Christ.

LESSON VI.

SUBJECT—AT HOME AND ABROAD; OR, THE MIRACLE OF PREACHING.

1. Refer to the life of John G. Paton in the Missionary Library, and gather all the facts relative to his early life and training.

2. Make a tabulated summary of his work as a city missionary; his faithfulness and zeal in the Wynds of Glasgow—the key-note to all his after career. "He that is faithful in that which is least," etc. Make a special point of the means employed to secure the ends in view (pages 81 and 82).

3. Study the forces of opposition which allied themselves against the brave worker and his band (page 84). Compare in this particular the opposition met by the early apostles in the Book of Acts, notably chapter v.

4. Note the illustrations of the power of the gospel in the ease of men deluded by infidelity and demonized by drink (pages 87 and 88). Were any miracles greater than these wrought by the apostles themselves?

Suggestions: Let some member of the class bring forward points showing that the cause of temperance is one of the greatest auxiliaries to the spread of the gospel. Be careful to emphasize the need of mission work in our large cities. Formulate some practical principles from this study of Paton's method.

Niagara Vapor Baths

We are the original manufacturers of portable Vapor Baths.

We have, during the last ten years, supplied thousands of our Baths to physicians, hospitals, sanitariums, etc., and we are now, for the first time, advertising them direct to the general public.

IN BUYING A VAPOR BATH Get one with a steel frame that stands on the floor. If a manufacturer does not show you a cut of the frame without the coverlog, you may take it for granted that his "Steel Frame" is a wire hoop that rests on the shoulders of the bather.

Get one that is covered with proper material. Insist on seeing a sample of material before ordering. We make our own covering material and print it with a handsome "all over" pattern of Niagara Falls.

Get one with a thermometer attachment. Don't go it blind—a bath that is too hot or not hot enough will be of no benefit to you.

Get one that you can return and have your money back if not satisfactory in every way.

Send for sample of material and interesting booklet that will tell you all about Vapor Baths.

Vapor Baths are an acknowledged household necessity. Turkish, Hot Air, Vapor, Sulphur or Medicated Baths at Home, 3c. Purifies system, produces cleanliness, health, strength. Prevents disease, obesity. Cures Colds, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, La Grippe, Malaria, Eczema, Catarrh, Female Ills, Blood, Skin, Nerve and Kidney Troubles. Beautifies Complexion.

AT HOME.

"Home, where never a sorrow
Shall dim their eyes with tears,
Where the smile of God is on them,
Through all the summer years.
I know! But my arms are empty
That fondly folded seven,
And the mother's heart within me
Is almost starved for heaven.

"And still as the summer sunset
Fadeth away in the West,
And the wee ones, tired of playing,
Go trooping home to rest,
My husband calls from his corner,
'Say, love, have the children come?'
And I answer, with eyes uplifted,
'Yes, dear, they are all at Home.'"

HER FORTUNE IN HER FINGERS.

BY EMILY L. McLAWS.

In Westfield, Massachusetts, there has just been completed a house with a history. It is distinctly a "woman's house," for it is the product of the energy of Mrs. Clara Louise Kellogg, and the money to build and furnish it was earned by her needle.

When, at the age of fourteen, she was thrown on her own resources, by the death of her father, there was but one thing she could do—embroider. It seemed such a doubtful way to attempt to earn a living, that many of her friends advised her to try something else. But there was nothing else, and the girl began to cast about for the best method to apply her talent, her one accomplishment. As there was no market in the small town for her work, she decided to give lessons. So, at the age of fourteen, she became a teacher, with classes in Holyoke, New Britain, Northampton, and Hartford. Before her fifteenth birthday, she was earning thirty dollars a day with these classes. Too practical to be carried away by her success, the little teacher—for she was a very small girl—realized that her popularity could not last unless she continued to teach stitches and designs unknown to other instructors, as well as to her scholars. To get these new stitches and patterns, she took lessons of the best teachers in Boston and New York. Then, as the Kensington stitch and style of embroidery became popular, she decided to go to Kensington and learn all that could be taught of that beautiful art. So advantageous was her first trip abroad, that she decided to go every Summer, visiting the monasteries, castles, palaces, and other places where old tapestries or bits of embroidery could be seen. In this way she traveled all over Europe.

To the writer, Mrs. Kellogg explained: "While I get many orders through large furnishing and upholstering establishments, my commissions frequently come direct from the owners themselves. When a house is completed, I study its architectural style and finish, and I then design hangings, cushions, etc., to harmonize. I keep two hundred girls employed following my directions. I select the materials, sign and stamp the patterns, and they do the work. When the whole article is finished, I examine it. Every article must be perfect.

"Very few of my workers live in Mansfield. They are scattered all over the United States, and the majority I have never seen. They hear of me, and write for work. As a trial, I send them two pieces, all materials, exactly alike. If their work is satisfactory, I try to keep them busy. Some of my workers are clever artists in shading leaves, flowers, etc., while others excel in borders or filling in. An article is seldom finished wholly by the same woman, but each part is done by the worker whose specialty it is. My orders come from different parts of this country and Europe. I designed and made the portieres and hangings for the new home of General Porter in New York City. I have just shipped a large order to Mrs. Hay, the wife of our ambassador to England, and am working on one to go to Paris. During President Cleveland's last term I had some orders from the White House. My work includes cushions, table-covers, portieres, and all kinds of embroidered articles. Before the holidays the demand is very much greater than at other seasons.

"In my new home all the work is of my own designing. Even in the painting, I did the mixing, to secure the right shade, and the work upon the walls, and the cushions on the chairs and floors are also my handiwork. I have now been working twenty years, and this house, and some other property, most of which is invested in stocks and bonds, are the results of my labor. I have probably worked harder than most women of my age. By five o'clock in the morning I am up, and never think of retiring before twelve. The building cost, without furnishings, something under $15,000."—Success.

THE MILLIONAIRE AND HIS CLERK.

Girard, the infidel millionaire of Philadelphia, one Saturday ordered all his clerks to come on the morrow to his wharf and help unload a newly-arrived ship. One young man replied quietly:

"Mr. Girard, I can't work on Sundays."

"You know our rules?"

"Yes, I know. I have a mother to support, but I can't work on Sundays."

"Well, step up to the desk, and the cashier will settle with you."

For three weeks the young man could find no work, but one day a banker came to Girard to ask if he could recommend a man for cashier in a new bank. This discharged young man was at once named as a suitable person.

"But," said the banker, "you dismissed him."

"Yes, because he would not work on Sundays. A man who would lose his place for conscience's sake would make a trustworthy cashier." And he was appointed.—The Pearl of Days.

AT HOME.

It is an old admonition, but it can not be too frequently repeated: Be your best at home in dress, manners, and spirit. Life is too short to waste its holy hours in criticism, fault finding and unkind words and acts. Only a few brief years do family circles remain unbroken by the invasion of marriages, removals, or deaths; and, if our retrospect of the time spent together is to be precious memory, let its hour be filled with all that is loving and generous and noble.—Evening Messenger.

If the instinct of daughter, sister, wife or mother dies out of a college-bred woman, even in the course of a most brilliant career, the world will forget to love her: it will scorn her, and justly. If she does not make her surroundings home-like wherever she is, whether she be teacher, artist, musician, writer, daughter at home, or a mother in the household, and if she herself is not cheery and loving, dainty in dress, gentle in manner, and beautiful in soul, as every true woman ought to be, the world will feel that the one thing needful is lacking: vivid, tender womanliness, for which no knowledge, however profound, can ever compensate. It is better for a woman to fill a simple human part lovingly, better to be sympathetic in trouble, and to whisper a comforting message into but one grieving ear, than that she should make a path to Egypt and lecture to thousands on ancient Thebes.—Edw. W. Bok, in Ladies' Home Journal.

Hygiene.

THEY HURT THE NERVES.

Boys, do you desire to have always good, strong nerves? Then don't use cigarettes. You think they are harmless? They certainly look very innocent—only a roll of white paper with a bit of doctored tobacco inside. But they do weaken the nerves; and in fact they have kept many a man from securing a good position on a certain railroad in the West. Read what Mr. George Baumhoff, superintendent of the Lindell railway, of St. Louis, says about their use. He says:

"Under no circumstances will I hire a man who smokes cigarettes. He is as dangerous on the front end of a motor as a man who drinks; in fact, he is more dangerous. His nerves are bound to give way at a critical moment. A motorman needs all his nerve all the time, and a cigarette smoker can't stand the strain. It is a pretty tough job for men in good condition, and even they sometimes get flurried. If I find a car beginning to run badly and getting irregular for any time, I immediately begin to investigate the man to find out if he smokes cigarettes. Nine times out of ten he does, and then he goes for good."—Evangelist.

REV. J. L. PIERCE, D. D.,

THE PASTOR OF CARONDELET STREET M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

Six feet, or more, in height stands Rev J. L. Pierce, D. D., pastor of Carondelet Street M. E. Church, South. An ample form, but not portly; chest protruding, back bending in over-erectness; an undulatory gait in walking; high, back-tilting brow, with coves of bare forehead retreating, on either side, for back into his close-lying, black silken hair; black, scintillant, deep eyes; rather heavy, distinct, slightly arched eye-brows; straight nose; rather broad, dimpled chin; firm and quasi-pugnacious, very assertive lower jaw; a black moustache; a very fair complexion, tinted ruddily, with a roseate hue a maiden might envy; a face of manly beauty, expressive of kindly dignity and refined force and firmness of character. He would be called a handsome man by anybody, and a gentleman by all gentlemen, at a glance. His carriage, his manners, the expression of his face make about him an atmosphere of "suaviter in modo." A high-bred air, a poise of affability and dignity, a face where intellectuality, culture and refinement have set their seals, "to give the world assurance of a man," betoken one whose character has been shaped by the best influences to soften, adorn and elevate, socially and intellectually. And, looking deeper, you say he is not only one of "nature's noblemen," but one of "God's gentlemen." But, after all, a picture is out of the province of words. Perhaps it is not good form, knowing this, to attempt a description of the man physical.

Dr. Pierce is nothing of the actor, which goes so far with all great orators; the repertory of elocution which means so much in its highest sense; the voice, with its multifarious fascinations; the gestures, with their apt and innumerable meanings accordant with utterance; the play of feature, with its unutterable expressiveness. Nor has he those great gifts of the natural orator; that innate, indefinable eloquence that has its spells without elocutionary training, which is a law to itself (the genius of eloquence, in contradistinction to the art of oratory); that is resistless, though as uneducated to manner as lightning, and needs no education for much of its efficacy; those flashes and outbreaks of irrepressible fire, soul-sallies that storm and conquer the heart; or, to take a line from Virgil and to change the figure, "Pontem indignatus Araxes."

The merits of his oratory owe little to manner or delivery. They are embalmed in their subject-matter. There is no spell of delivery either in actions or tones. He is a rhetorician rather than an orator; but it is not the charlatanry of the declaimer; the mere, hollow artificial voice-play and gesticulation; no deliberate sallies to storm your admiration and lead captive your delight; no studied strokes of "ad captandum." His utterances are the careful creations of consecrated taste and intellectuality. They are often great, beautiful and touching, sometimes eloquent; but there are no enthralling bursts of feeling that possess him and bear you away on their enrapturing and resistless currents. His sermons are spoken lucubrations, delivered audibly, forcibly, with little modulation or inflection of tone, in a voice just now somewhat husky and ravelled, and with rather scant gesticulation. But his utterances will long outlast the organ that conveyed them. It is difficult to describe some of their best merits, the lofty fire of his sentiments—an eloquence of beauty that captivates the cultured taste, that elevates and invigorates the sensibility, that refines the thought, enlarges the heart. Grace, refinement, elegance, elevation—what do you not find in him that is high and beautiful? His is the eloquence of sentiment and of beauty of style. He generally describes his grounds of treatment prefatorially, or by way of exordium. Mark the force and straightforwardness of his evolution. His analysis of theme is deep, just, full, original, and piquant. He extracts the last scintilla of meaning out of a text, without prolixity, strained construction, or fantasticality, surely finding the thoughts, whether mere verbal analysis suggests the exposition, or the theme is covert in the meaning, rather than in distinct words of the text. He sometimes has some very nice, wire-drawn, hair-splitting distinctions; abstruse, yet most important and weighty. And I think it not too much to say that he sounds great depths of exegesis, perfectly true, but most profound and novel. Certainly his expositions smack most strikingly of richness, raciness, and vividness—the very antipodes of tameness, dryness, flatness, jejuneness.

As I contemplate Dr. Pierce, it seems to me almost impossible to draw a full-length portrait of him. His dimensions are too large for my canvas. I shall have to touch a feature here and there, without any attempt at symmetry or method. He is precise and nice, but not florid; elegant, but not cold and stiff. His words have such a reach and grasp and incisiveness of delineation that they do not so much express or clothe the ideas, as seem to intertwine, coalesce, and be blended with the idea itself. They are to thought what expression of the eye and face are to feeling; the fascination of delicate exactitude, when words cleave to the matter, have exquisite accuracy, inexplicable appropriateness, inseparability from their matter—"the dexterities of the manipulating intellect." And he has alternations of style that are natural, and not a "high pressure of uniformly sustained elevation." Few men have so much judgment and taste in connection with such a vigorous and trained imagination; hence he is free from aberrations which often mar some of the noblest excursions of that grand faculty, when not subject to the rein of the judgment. His imagery is profuse, his illustrations various, apt and beautiful, with a purple robe of dress. The richness and animation his figurativeness impart to his style give it a charm it were vain to attempt to depict. To one who knows his judgment, culture and taste, it is superfluous to enlarge upon his suitableness or adjustment of style to topic. It is never grovelling nor creeping when it ought to soar. It is never strained nor exaggerated when it ought to be temperate. He is a man of most independent view, an intense acumen of discrimination, a most kindling and glowing responsiveness to a recognition of characteristics, of most potent and unique precision, originality of expression, and power of language. These are generalities. How they ought to be illustrated! I believe that a most emphatic characteristic is, that he combines the technique of the literary artist with the elevation of sentiment and the imagination of a poetic nature.

I have said that Dr. Pierce is a rhetorician. But it would not do to call his sermons "rhetorical exercises." Their aim is too high for that; their effect too sacred. They have higher sections than mere literary charm; higher inspirations than the aim for mere literary success. Still, you can not resist the aspect of intellectual and literary entertainment—"the feast of reason and the flow of soul."

Dr. Pierce teems with sentiment. He has "sympathy for grandeur, enthusiasm for nobleness, and joy in beauty." Let us remember that "sentiments, as in human affairs, more potent than all physical inventions;" that "in the movements of men's being, the first and deepest thing is the sentiment which possesses him, the emotional and moral atmosphere which he breathes." An atmosphere of elevated and tender sentiment envelops the lovely literary form of many of his sermons, making them redolent, and lingering in the delighted taste or appreciation of his auditors. But this is not all—they invigorate his mind, heighten and electrify his faculties, and are an informing factor and forming adjunct to language. He is prone to amplification. He is seldom content to give one a glimpse of his thought. Trusts to no indirections; does not insinuate. You must see his thought on all sides, and in full dress, and all the light and pageantry of its investiture. See its magnificent accumulation; accrescent, never remiss, never repetitive, never pleonastic; no tortuous trains of involutions trailing their weary lengths along, like Lord Brougham or our late Evarts; but symmetrical, sinewy in structure, rolling on, gathering volume, gathering breadth and elevation, garnished with beautiful imagery, a lambent fancy irradiating it; mellifluous, grandiloquent, with sounding periods, and a roll and sweep and magnificent volume that reminds one of Tennyson's line in Enoch Arden:

"The league-long roller thundering on the reef."

With what precision he follows analogies. The nicety of his discrimination, and the acumen of his analysis of scriptural metaphor, are wonderfully rich and elucidatory. Rejecting all strained and hypothetical analogies, reasoned by any brilliant waywardness, in an active fancy, utterly aloof from the fantastic, never ostentatious of ingenuity, he sifts these metaphors, and gets of physical symbols the utmost of spiritual significance; and the garb of the peasant, the warrior's armor, the garnitures of landscape in lowly flower, in towering tree, in heaven-kissing heights, the spacious firmament, the heavenly orbs, are deeply translated into their spiritual imports.

GRAYBEARD

WE make 200 bottles of our GRAYBEARD every week. No more—no less. If 200 bottles don't fill all orders, some customer must wait until the next week. We mention this as some do not understand the delay. We have earned a reputation for making a clean, fresh, sure remedy for Cancer—Eczema, Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and we cannot make GRAYBEARD faster, and make it good.

"A few years ago Cancer appeared on my face in form of a scab—not a sore, but a scab that dropped off, and soon reappeared, some worse. Finally it annoyed me to shave. Darting pains set in, affecting my sight. People said I had Cancer—I was miserable. About that time a planter name Jordan, down the State, once similarly afflicted, sent me a bottle of GRAYBEARD advising me to take it. I did so and to my great joy got better. Skin cleared, appetite improved, I got stouter and Cancer left me. And it has not returned. GRAYBEARD saved my life.

Joseph Barnes, Taylor County, Ga."

$1 a bottle—6 for $5. If your druggist has'nt our GRAYBEARD, order direct, deducting 50c on $5 worth to help you pay freight.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Ambassador Cambon has received Spain's reply to President McKinley.

Naval Constructor Hobson visited Cervera at Annapolis, and was affectionately greeted by the Spanish admiral.

A Herald special cable dispatch from Gibraltar says that there is great confusion in the moving of troops and war supplies on the Spanish coast.

Secretary Long has given out a letter he had written, defending Rear Admiral Sampson, and giving him credit for the destruction of the Spanish fleet at Santiago.

General Miles is closing in on San Juan from four directions. Spanish citizens are fleeing from the city. The troops are increasing the fortifications, notwithstanding the desire for peace.

One result of the war with Spain will be to enhance the value of American citizenship in the eyes of the world. Hereafter the American flag and the American citizen will be respected abroad as they have never been before.

Captain-General Blanco is held responsible by Admiral Cervera for the destruction of the Spanish fleet. In his official report to Madrid, which has been transmitted to Spain though the French ambassador, Admiral Cervera calls attention to the orders issued by Captain-General Blanco for his entrance into the harbor of Santiago de Cuba and for his departure therefrom.

The death of Prince Bismarck has, of course, engrossed public attention in Germany throughout the week. While it can not truthfully be said that the impression created by the sudden death of the great Chancellor was as deep as would have been expected, and while there was nothing like general mourning visible in Berlin, yet there were unmistakable evidences of widespread sympathy.

The first woman has presented herself for the degree of doctor of philosophy in Berlin University, and has submitted her thesis. She is a Fraulein Neumann, and her subject is physics. The faculty has no fundamental objections to conferring a doctorate on a woman, and Fraulein Neumann will be put through the usual severe examination, the same as if she were a man, and will get her degree if she passes.

Surgeon-General Sternberg received a report declaring hospital supplies were not landed for the troops at Santiago, as the quartermaster's department furnished no facilities, and the commanding general ignored appeals for aid. General Shafter declared that he was not responsible for the condition of affairs on the transports "Seneca" and "Concho," and that there had never been enough medical supplies for his army.

The controversy over the construction of a levee in the Third District, this city, for the protection of lives and property, is being pushed to the limit of bitterness. Mr. Alonzo Bell, the city engineer, favors the raising of a new embankment, which would entail the expropriation of thousands of dollars' worth of property, while Mr. L. C. Brown, advisory engineer of the Orleans Levee Board, proposes to deflect the current of the river, have the erosion uniform and make the present levee defenses in that locality impregnable.

The British Empire is now engaged in watching with interest the progress of a political contest in one of its important autonomous colonies which may turn out of such proportions as to necessitate imperial interference as a final culmination. Since the defeat of the Ministry, Cape Colony has been in the throes of a campaign preceding a general election made necessary by the dismissal of the Colonial Parliament and the appeal of the Ministers to the electors. The fight in progress is not merely one of parties, but it is the most dangerous of all contests, namely, a race conflict.

That extreme diplomatic tension exists between St. Petersburg and London is generally admitted, though the officials deprecate the alarmist reports which are current. It is hoped that the firmer stand adopted by the Marquis of Salisbury during the last few days, which seems to have already created some misgiving at St. Petersburg, will have the desired effect of arresting Russian aggressiveness. It is felt both that the outcome of the dispute in regard to the Chwang Railroad extension is the crucial point of the success or failure of Great Britain's policy of the "open door."

The piteous appeal of General Shafter's division and brigade commanders, "This army must be moved at once or perish," that went ringing through the country, a few days ago, has aroused so much pity for the brave men who had faced the bullets of the Spanish defenders of Santiago, and were suffering from the severities of the climate, that every other consideration was lost in sympathetic regard for the sick heroes. But since time has been given for reflection, and all the facts of the case have been viewed in the light of reason and of duty, the people of this country are coming to realize that something heretofore unprecedented in the military history of this republic has taken place.

DEPARTED.

MR. EDITOR: Please announce the death of Mr. Jno. W. Buck, of Chester, Miss., father of Revs. J. E. and A. T. Buck, and of Mrs. Theodocia Mosley, of near Bankston, Miss., both on Aug. 3, and within a few hours of each other. Thus go to their reward two life-long Methodists, among the best this writer has ever known.

W. L. ANDERSON,
Their Pastor.

Chester, Miss., Aug. 4, 1898.

THE WISER WAY.

"How fresh and rosy you look, Nora," exclaimed Isabel, who had just returned from the beach, and was greeting her friend.

"Yes, dear," replied Nora, "I am feeling splendidly, and mamma says I have an alarming appetite."

"Where in the world have you been since I saw you?"

"I have remained at home," replied Nora, "and have worked hard every day. But I have been taking that wonderful medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it has done me, oh, so much good. You see I always like to feel well when I go away, and I leave for the mountains next week."

CENTENARY.

All old students and new ones who are anticipating attending school at Centenary College, mentioned elsewhere in this paper, will be sure to be there before or on Sept. 10, as the Y. M. C. A. of the college expects to give the students a grand reception that night in the beech grove just north of the college.

HOW TO GET TEACHERS.

Write to J. M. Dewberry, Manager of "The School Agency," Birmingham, Ala., stating kind of teacher desired and the pay. He recommends efficient teachers to Schools, Colleges and Families free of charge throughout the South and Southwest. Sells and rents school property. Efficient teachers desiring information should write for circulars.

PRACTICAL EDUCATION THE CRYING NEED OF THE SOUTHERN STATES.

Georgia's equipped School of Technology in Atlanta offers courses in civil, electrical, and mechanical engineering. Board, $6.50 to $10 per month. Fees nominal. The shops for manual training in wood, machine, smith and foundry work have no superiors. The catalogue lists all graduates and their occupations, and the record is unsurpassed.

All students living in the dormitories are under wholesome regulations, which protect morally and physically, save them from all pernicious influences, and promote their interest in studies. For industrial catalogue, with full particulars, address Lyman Hall, president, Atlanta, Ga. Fully equipped textile department opens February next.

THE SOUTH HAS ONE.

The United States Commissioner of Education in his official classification of the colleges of the country in his last report, page 1994, places the Randolph-Macon Woman's College at Lynchburg, Va., in Division A with Vassar, Wellesley and eleven other high-grade colleges for women. There are four in the East, seven in the North, and two in the West. The statistics show that our representative, though the youngest, stands well up in the list as to resources.

See advertisement of LaGrange Female College. It will pay you to send for its beautiful catalogue.

The Paint Question?

"The economic value of a paint is the sum total of the cost of the material and its application, divided by the number of times of renewal within a given term of years."

GOOD PAINT COSTS NOTHING BECAUSE IT SAVES MORE THAN ITS PRICE.

Property owners wish to know what paint will give the best protection for the longest period at the smallest comparative cost.

This problem is exhaustively discussed in our practical pamphlet, entitled "The Paint Question," by Stanton Dudley, which will be sent free on application.

FLOWERS.

God might have made the earth bring forth
Enough for great and small;
The oak tree and the cedar tree
Without a flower at all.

Then, wherefore, wherefore were they made,
All decked in rainbow light,
All fashioned with supremest grace,
Upspringing day and night?

To comfort man, to whisper hope,
Whene'er his faith is dim;
For whoso careth for the flowers
Will much more care for him.

ON THE ROLLING DEEP.

[The following letters from Rev. Henry B. Carre were written to his mother with no thought of their being published. At our request our good friend, Sister Carre, has kindly consented to their publication. We congratulate our readers, and in their behalf, as well as our own, tender her our hearty thanks.—EDITOR.]

MY DEAR MAMA: It is now fifteen minutes to twelve, and we have not seen land since about 2 P. M. of the ninth instant. This is, without doubt, a new experience. Nothing is to be seen but this ship, the great blue ocean, with occasionally a ship in the distance, and then, to crown all, spreads out the arching sky. How small it makes one feel, and how great nature seems! Since we steamed out of New York harbor the engines of this ship have not stopped once. Like some great sea-monster she pushes her way through the deep, whether it be calm or rough. We have been fortunate in having delightful weather most of the time. On the second and third days (I think it was) it was the least bit rough, and a number missed their meals, which is another way of saying they were sea-sick. I don't think I missed any of mine, though this is not saying I was free from the disease. I have had three very slight attacks, two lasting about ten to twenty minutes, and the other about one hour. I was really glad of a little "pitching," so as to know what it is. The racks were placed on the table to keep the dishes in place; the chairs on deck were roped to keep them from slipping. The passengers staggered like drunken men, and one old lady went sprawling on the deck, spectacles in one direction and case in the other. Tom and I were standing near, and assisted her to her feet. Fortunately, she was not injured, and took the experience good-naturedly, and, therefore, afforded some amusement to the passengers.

Except for the time consumed on this line, we are pleased with it. Everything about the boat is clean, and the officers are courteous and pleasant, and careful of the comfort of the passengers. The table is not, of course, the best, but it is as good as could be expected from the price. Boarding one person for eleven or twelve days for forty dollars is possible on land, but, of course, it is more difficult at sea, and, besides, the trip is given. You will probably be surprised to find what class of people we are traveling with. We have artists, professors, physicians, musicians, and the like. Several are going abroad to study art. We have Prof. Price, professor of English literature in Columbia University, with his wife and daughter. We have also a professor of Union College, New York, and one from Yale. There are several students on board, three of them divinity students. Two of these latter received the traveling scholarships from Princeton, which gives them about one year's travel abroad. There is some very good musical talent on board, which you may see from the enclosed program. Almost every evening we have had music in the saloon.

This long trip on the ocean has given us the most perfect rest. We can obtain no news of the outside world. We are almost as completely isolated as if we were on the moon. The most difficult problem the passengers have had to solve has been the "killing of time." It is even amusing to see what methods are resorted to for this purpose. Some walk, some sleep, some read, most talk, while a number resort to games, such as cards, checkers, chess, shuffleboard, throwing rings. Quite a number attempt to learn German or French, and others read their European guides, and map out their trips. From Aug. 7 to the opening of the university is not three months. You see the necessity of my getting the language in hand. Mr. Price says that is what I need first of all, in order to converse with the professors regarding my studies, etc.

Mr. Price is an excellent gentleman, a Virginian. He was professor of Greek at the University of Virginia. He expects to spend the Winter in Berlin, this being "Sabbatic year"—i. e., his year off from the university. He is very cordial, and may be very kind to Griff. and myself.

This line of steamers, though slow, has the reputation of being one of the safest. It has had but one serious accident, namely: the sinking of a vessel that struck a derelict. There were over 200 persons on board, yet not one was lost. The captain managed his men splendidly, and the press was loud in its praises of him. He is now captain of this vessel. Four years ago he made a heroic effort to save a United States fishing-vessel. It cost him several of his crew, and he failed; yet President Cleveland presented him with a handsome watch for his heroism. He showed it to Tom and me. It is handsomely engraved.

To-night (19th) is very foggy, and the fog-horn has been blowing every minute, or less. I have often heard of a fog-horn, especially in the expression, "He has a voice like a fog-horn." I find that it is nothing but the steam whistle. It is very loud and very unpleasant, but it is necessary to use it when the pilot can not see more than about fifty yards ahead. We are nearing Scilly Island—the first land sighted after leaving New York. It is about ten o'clock at night, and many of the passengers are on deck looking for the light-house, which we are expected to pass about this time. I judge, however, the fog will interfere with them.

This is the morning of the twentieth. I did not retire last night until about one o'clock. The night was very foggy, and I was interested in seeing how ships are navigated under such conditions. The deck was roped off so as to keep the passengers towards the rear, the object being to have as much quiet as possible about the officers. About six men were on watch, and, as I told you, the fog-horn was kept going about every minute. After a while we were answered by another vessel, then another. Later still we saw a ship's light, then another. This was about one o'clock. The fog began to lift, and the engines were put at higher speed, and all was well.

This morning it is very cold on deck. So far we have needed our overcoats but little; to-day they are necessary. We passed the southwest corner of England early this morning. We are now (11:15 A. M.) in the English Channel, with England's coast in view. A little later we shall steer for Boulogne-sur-mer, where some of the passengers disembark. This letter will be mailed there. We remain there about one hour, then sail for Rotterdam, which we reach in about twelve hours—i. e., to-morrow morning some time.

Though we have had a most pleasant trip, you don't know how good a little land looks after so long an absence from it. I could not help thinking this morning, as I looked upon land and experienced that feeling, how rejoiced I shall be to see the American shore after my long stay on a foreign shore. I am feeling splendidly, and look forward to a delightful Summer of sight-seeing, study, and recreation.

We have a great many Dutch and German passengers on board, and you may imagine how the beer has flowed. It was reported last night that there was no more beer on board. The drinking has not been confined to the men, either; ladies, old and young, have participated. The impression made on me by these frauen and fraulein is not the most flattering, and, unless there is a mighty change, you need not prepare yourself to greet one of these as a daughter. I think in all this world there are no girls equal to those of America living south of Mason and Dixon's line.

It is now 7:50 P. M. We have had a most beautiful day for going through the English Channel. It has been cold and clear. We have, therefore, had an excellent view of the coast of England. It took about an hour to pass the Isle of Wight, which we ran very close to. It was a beautiful sight. It is covered with pretty farms and many beautiful residences. Lord Tennyson had his home on the island on the opposite side of that we saw. A favorite drive of his was to go to the ridge and look down on this side on the channel. The Queen's Summer home is on the island also. We have now passed about all of England we shall see, and are heading for Boulogne-sur mer.

Since I wrote page 4 Griff. and I have about decided to go to Brunswick, and prepare ourselves by reading, getting the language in hand, etc.; to enjoy the scenery and historic places that we had planned to see by Aug. 7. There are many difficulties in the way of seeing the Rhine, etc., on wheels right away. Of course, we wish as little baggage as possible, and we do not know how to dress, whether for cold or warm weather. Besides, my wheel was late in reaching New York, and will probably be on next steamer. Tom will probably go direct to Greece, and we may meet the latter part of August, and see the Rhine with him, reaching Holland about Sept. 1, in time for the coronation. We expect to reach Boulogne-sur-mer to-night, and I shall close this.

Much love to all, and hoping all are well, I remain,

Your affectionate son, HENRY.

July 18, 1898.

IN GERMANY.

DEAR MAMA: After a journey of 5,000 miles, I have at last found a resting-place. But before telling you of my surroundings, I must say something of my trip since I last wrote home. We landed at Boulogne-sur mer about 11 P. M., Wednesday. Rather, we slowed up, and a lighter pulled alongside, and took a number of our passengers. A number of copies of the Paris edition of the New York Herald was brought to us by this lighter, and, after it left us, we proceeded to get the news. You may imagine our interest when you recall that we had not heard a word for eleven days, and when we left New York exciting news was expected daily from Cuba. The passengers collected near the saloon, and a young man read the headings aloud. The news included that of the sixteenth, and gave the surrender of Santiago. During the reading the passengers showed their enthusiasm by frequent cheers. On the following morning (Thursday) we sighted Holland, but had to anchor about eleven o'clock because of low water. At two o'clock the tide had risen sufficiently for us to proceed, and we weighed anchor. In about an hour we were steaming up the Maas, a narrow stream, and the end of the Rhine. It was not difficult to see that we were in Holland, for the large-finked windmills were on every side, and the land was low, and in places diked. What a queer sensation it is to enter for the first time such a land. With eyes and ears, and often mouth, wide open to learn what everything means, a person would make a good representation of Wonder. Disembarking, our next problem was to find a hotel. We took a carriage for the Grand Hotel Coomans (recommended by Prof. Deiler). That short ride to the hotel will long be remembered, for it was like passing through a panorama of strange sights. One of the first things to attract our attention was a dray, which had front wheels about fourteen inches high, and rear ones about twenty inches high. Tell grandpa that we saw many carts drawn by dogs and tended by women, but no men were sitting in them selling vegetables. You can not imagine how much business is done by means of these dog-carts. Most of the bread, vegetables, meat, milk, etc, is delivered in them. Sometimes there is one, and sometimes there are two dogs, usually the size of a large Newfoundland, hitched to the cart underneath. You must not imagine these carts to be heavy, lumbering things that go very slowly. They are very much like the carts pushed by our peanut and pop-corn men, only a little bit heavier. The morning after our arrival we saw two men coming down the street with their carts, and their dogs were barking at each other, and seemed to be running a race. They certainly had these men on a run. One of the strangest things, and one that I told Tom would interest you greatly, was the custom among the women (I think of the middle and wealthier classes) of wearing spiral spring gold ornaments jutting out from their temples thus:

They are held in place by, or attached to, a metal band, or often a hood, which covers the head. This hood is concealed by means of the bonnet, and a large piece of lace fitting under the back of the bonnet, and falling down over the shoulders.

The hotel was a typical Dutch hotel, and our reception was characteristic and entirely different from that in America. Instead of entering a large rotunda, hall, or office, we entered a small vestibule, and were invited up stairs into an improvised reception-room, sometimes, no doubt, used for the dining-room. In a few minutes a gentleman past middle life, dressed in evening dress, entered, and very politely told us his rates, etc., and took our names on a scrap of paper. He returned shortly and told us the numbers of our rooms.

Tom and I went out and cabled you "Zabumba," which, I suppose, you received about four o'clock, though it was about six when we sent it. The operator said about three hours were required to send the message. You must remember our time in Holland was five hours ahead of yours, and in Germany it is six hours ahead. We returned to the hotel and took dinner table d'hote, which was excellent; price, 65 cents. Taking our overcoats, we went out to see the town, and we saw it, walking until about eleven o'clock.

(Monday afternoon.) We have seen so many strange sights in the last few days that I must defer telling you of some of them until my next letter, as I wish to say a few words about our present surroundings. Griff. and I left Tom at Rotterdam, Friday morning, and reached Hanover Friday night, at 12:20. We called on the United States consul next morning to secure a passport for Griff, and while there we obtained the names of several persons that keep pensions, or boarding-houses. We immediately started out in search of a suitable place. Our search lasted from eleven till five o'clock, in which time we visited about ten houses, some of them very elegant. We decided on one kept by Fraulein Bierweith, Schlager strasse No. 4 (No. 4 Schlager street, second etage, or third floor). She is an old maid about fifty-five, and has a bachelor brother about the same age living with her. She takes boarders regularly, but just at present, on account of the holidays, she has none. On that account she takes us a little cheaper than usual—i. e., 80 marks ($19 40) per month. The best feature, however, is the advantage we have in learning German. She is a teacher with a government diploma from a normal school, and has had a wide experience in teaching German and English-speaking people. She spent three years in the United States, and speaks English. This, however, is an advantage rather than a hindrance, for she does not attempt to speak English with us, and yet we can ask her in English how to say this or that in German. Her price for board includes one hour, or more, spent with us each day helping us to acquire German. Her brother knows only a few English words, and the servant girl knows none. The fraulein and her brother are both great talkers and well read. We four constitute the family, and at our meals we rattle off German all the time. That is about one and one half hours' conversation daily already. Yesterday morning I went to church with the fraulein, and talked German there and back. After supper last night we sat and talked for about half an hour. This morning we rose at eight o'clock, took breakfast, and at a few minutes past nine were off for a walk in the forest on the edge of Hanover with the fraulein and her brother. We reached home at one o'clock, which gave us four hours with them. They have nothing important to occupy them, and seem to take a delight in talking with us and helping us in our conversation. Don't you think we are fortunate in securing such a place? Griff. and I talk some German with each other, and have agreed to speak nothing but German with each other after we have been here a week. We shall keep a bank and drop a coin in it for each English word used after that time. This is a most beautiful city, but I shall not speak further of it now, as I am anxious to get this off to you. We came here because the German spoken here is the best in the Empire. Both of us are well, but very sleepy. We sleep a great deal, however, and hope soon to have our account straight. The weather is very cold for July. We wear flannels and overcoats. The thermometer was 67 degrees Saturday morning in the consul's office, and he said that was about the warmest day they had had this Summer.

With much love to each and all, I remain, Your affectionate son,

HENRY.

Hanover, July 24, 1898.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

The friends of Millsaps College will be glad to know that the prospects are good for a large attendance of students next session. Indeed, unless the ordinary signs fail, the attendance will be in excess of anything we have hitherto had. And right here I want to express my sincere appreciation for the generous aid afforded by our preachers in bringing me into communication with young men who think of attending college. For genuine unselfish helpfulness in good works I put the preachers of the two Mississippi Conferences in the front ranks.

It is to be hoped that all students who contemplate coming will make their arrangements to be here at the opening of the session, Sept. 14. We will have interesting and profitable exercises in connection with the occasion. W. B. MURRAH, Pres't.

PREPARED FOR THE OPPORTUNITIES.

What we do upon some great occasion will probably depend on what we already are; and what we are will be the result of previous years of self-discipline.—H. P. Liddon.

A great occasion is valuable to you in just the proportion you have educated yourself to make use of it.

A great name, it is true, is often made in a very short time—perhaps in a day; but it has probably taken long years to prepare for this one day's work.

Commodore Dewey was sixty-one years old when the opportunity came, for which, during a life-time, he had been laying the foundation. At last, when the opportunity arrived, he seized it, was equal to it, and in a few hours was the world's hero.

Had it not been for the years of hard work, exacting drill, close observation, attention to dry details, the opportunity would only have made him ridiculous.

Farragut, who little realized for what he was training young Dewey, waited half a century for his opportunity. He had worked a life time getting ready for it; it came, and he seized it.

Von Moltke was more than half a century preparing for his opportunity. When the Franco-Prussian war was declared, he was awakened at midnight and told of the fact. He said coolly to the official who aroused him, "Go to pigeon-hole No. —— in my safe, and take a paper from it, and telegraph as there directed to the different troops of the empire." He then turned over and went to sleep, and awoke at his usual hour in the morning. Everyone else in Berlin was excited about the war, but he took his morning walk as usual, and a friend who met him said: 'General, you seem to be taking it very easy. Aren't you afraid of the situation? I should think you would be busy." "Ah," replied Von Moltke, "all my work for this time has been done long beforehand, and everything that can be done now has been done."

A chart had been made out showing just what was to be done when the war broke out. Every officer's place in the scheme was laid out beforehand. There was a schedule of trains which should supersede all other schedules the moment war was declared, so that the commander of the army could telegraph to any officer to take such a train and go to such a place at a moment's notice. The great general had left nothing to chance. The steps to his success were reduced to a science. He had been more than half a century preparing for his opportunity.

"What we call a turning point," says Arnold, "is simply an occasion which sums up and brings to a result previous training. Accidental circumstances are nothing except to men who have been trained to take advantage of them. An opportunity will only make you ridiculous unless you are prepared for it. Are you ready for a great opportunity?"—Success.

An instructive table of statistics of gifts to foreign mission work has been prepared by The Churchman. It divides the aggregate money given by each denomination by the number of communicants, showing what is the average gift for each member for last year. According to its calculations, the Congregationalists make the best showing with an average of $1.03 per member. Next come the Presbyterians at 94 cents per member. Next the Baptists, 80 cents; Protestant Episcopal, 43 cents, and Methodists, 34 cents.

LOOK ALOFT!

BY JOS. CAMM.

When fierce storms toss your fragile bark
And threatening waves around you roar
When clouds are low ring wild and dark,
And distant lies the friendly shore,
Then, look aloft!

When fearful shipwreck meets us
And not a harbor you can find;
But all along the rock bound coast
Wild beats the sea, loud moans the wind,
Oh, look aloft!

No star of hope may beam above,
No beacon shine upon your way;
Your compass may unfaithful prove,
Your ship no more her helm obey
Yet, look aloft!

Above the clouds there is an eye
Can pierce their gloom to watch your course;
And though the tempest rages high,
A voice can quell its mutterings hoarse,
Then, look aloft!

Oh, fear not, Christian sailor, fear
Nor storm, nor wave, nor rock-bound shore;
Launch boldly forth. He will be near,
And faith shall guide you safely o'er,
Then, look aloft!

WEAK POINTS IN SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORK.

AND HOW TO STRENGTHEN THEM.

(Geo. W. Williams, of Knightstown, Ind.)

(Concluded.)

The second weak point to which I call your attention is that developed by the Sunday-school. And I place as the greatest weakness in any Sunday-school and the one making the most disastrous failure, is a weak teacher. All the machinery of Sunday-school work is for the one purpose: that a man or woman may stand before a class and teach the Word of God. If the teacher fails, the whole purpose of the organization has failed. An imperfect organization and a consecrated teacher can succeed, but a splendid organization and a poor teacher is a failure. The teacher is the main-spring, and every other part of the machinery is simply to give force and power to the main-spring.

What constitutes a good teacher? Time will not allow me, nor do I care here to go into this part of my subject fully; but, passing, let me say, a Christian—one who is in touch with God; not necessarily of great intellectual attainment, but with spiritual power and life. They must be on intimate terms, socially, with the class. They must know how to shake hands and mean it. They must be in their places every Sunday. The class must know that you are willing to sacrifice your personal interests and desires for their welfare. Always prepare your lessons; know everything you can that has any bearing on the lesson. There is no people in the world so appreciative as a class of bright boys and girls. They can see a point as quickly as you can, and can detect the difference between husks and real grain at a glance. Teach the Word. You must believe that the Bible is the Word of God, and teach it that way. Never for one moment admit a single doubt of its truthfulness, its sacredness, or its absolute necessity. Never admit any argument on these questions, but regard them as fundamental facts. Infidels thrive and Christians grow lean on the discussion of baptism, predestination, Darwinism, and kindred themes long since worn threadbare in adult Sunday-school classes. Make your work your study. While your hands are employed your mind can be busy preparing your lesson for presentation. Recognize the dignity of your position, and remember you are a large factor in the great commission to bring the world to Christ.

It was said by one of old, "I had rather be a door-keeper in the house of my God than to dwell in the tents of wickedness." Christ said to his intrepid disciple, Peter, "Feed my lambs," and to give it additional emphasis, repeated it thrice.

Teacher, this is your commission, and no more responsible position can be found in the church of Jesus Christ than that of a Sunday-school teacher.

The third and last proposition is the weak points of Sunday-school work as developed in the world. By the world I mean our lives apart from the home and the church. That the world is no "friend to grace" is very evident. How to be a part of the great complex machinery of modern society without taking on its dissipations and being enslaved by its delusions is a problem demanding our prayerful consideration.

I shall treat on one point only. The most weakening and debasing tendency of this rapid age is Sabbath desecration. God's wisdom in establishing the Sabbath day is approved largely by human legislation. But the tendency is to divert its purpose and make it a day of secular recreation and pleasure, rather than worship, until in this day it is difficult to maintain a decent regard for God's holy day in ——. Yes, and in Lake Charles! There have been more compromises with the devil on this question in the last ten years than all other questions combined. Business men cater to what are regarded as public necessities, and open their shops and stores. Meat markets, drug stores and restaurants are open everywhere, and one by one the barriers are broken down, traditions are disregarded, laws are violated, and Sunday traffic is increasing to an alarming extent. The bicycle has introduced a new element. The Sunday excursion train is a large factor, contributing alike to our pleasure and our degradation. And, in fact, in every way where a single element of necessity or pleasure appeals for popular approval a compromise is effected, and one wedge is driven to widen the breach made by Sabbath desecrators. The silver-smiths who made shrines for the devotees of Diana, whose business was ruined by Paul's preaching, and who organized a mob that filled the public place, and for the space of two hours threw dust and dirt, and cried, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians," was no more potent in exciting the public clamor than are these modern desecrators when Christian people attempt in any way to interfere with their business.

The peril of the hour is the destruction of our American Sabbath, and unless Christian people rally bravely to its rescue ere another decade rolls around, we will see it annihilated, and in its place will be the lightness, the frivolity and the infidelity of France. God forbid that this should occur, for with the destruction of the sanctity of the Sabbath will come the death-knell of religious progress. The great factors for staying the tide of evil is, first, the home. God give us consecrated fathers and mothers. The Sunday-school and the young people's societies. When the church of Jesus Christ awakens from her lethargy, and forgetting her creeds and her minor differences of church polity, and remembers only that Christ said, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me," and steps to the music of that grand old hymn:

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in kindred love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above;"

then, and not till then, may we expect that we will have the ideal home, the ideal church, and the ideal Sunday-school.

Let us work and pray that we may each one, in our limited sphere, assist in bringing forward this millennium day.

CALIFORNIA LETTER.

It was my privilege to attend the California State League Conference at Los Angeles, July 8-12. Though not all that might have been desired, it was a success. About a hundred delegates were in attendance, including several ministers. The local attendance was sufficient to give us good audiences. The Pacific Conference was not largely represented, owing to the magnificent distances to be traversed and cost of transportation. This scribe traveled about five hundred miles each way (1,000 miles in all), and he is not in the most remote charge from the seat of the Conference by about 300 miles. The young ladies were largely in the majority, and I assure you there were some brilliant ones. Of the young men, lawyers led other classes. Our president, N. Newby, Esq., of Los Angeles, is an eloquent young attorney; then there were Duckworth and others.

The policy of the Executive Committee is to make some departments most prominent at one session, and others at another. This time the Literary Department and missions came in for the greater share of attention. An evening's entertainment based upon the reading course was very creditable indeed. It was a valuable object-lesson, showing the value of the reading course, and how to use it. It brought to the front Mr. H. N. Caldwell, of Lompoc, who delivered an address on Sydney Lanier that would have done credit to the foremost lecturers of the country. Mr. Caldwell was elected third vice-president, and a better choice could not have been made.

I was honored with a place on the missionary program with Rev. W. A. Davis, of Japan. We endeavored to enlighten the Leaguers concerning our own operations in the mission fields. Two years ago we resolved to endeavor to raise $500 a year towards the support of a missionary in China. So far we have raised but about $450 in all; but we will do better hereafter—see if we don't.

This was my first visit to Los Angeles. I enjoyed it. The population is now 105,000, having almost trebled within a decade. It is a beautiful city—broad streets, handsome residences, large residence lots decorated with orange and lemon trees (ripe fruit clinging to the trees, though the new crop is well advanced), shaded sidewalks, etc. The numerous oil wells have contributed largely to the advancement of the city. The supply of oil seems to be inexhaustible. It is used for fuel, being too crude for lighting purposes. We have one strong church in the city (Trinity, where the Conference was held), the strongest of our Western churches, and three weak missions. In fertility of soil Southern California will not compare with the broad valleys of the central and northern part of the State. There are indeed some fertile valleys, but they are small. It was my privilege to visit two of these—Santaldara Valley, in Ventura county, and Carpenteria Valley, in Santa Barbara county. Both are beautiful for situation. Here the orange and lemon and English walnut abound, and I am told that nine-tenths of all the Lima beans found in the markets of the country are raised here. The climate is unsurpassed.

On my return home, by invitation of the pastor, Rev. R. S. Boyns, I attended the dedication of a new church at Modesto, in the San Joaquin Valley. This was my first charge after bringing my family to California. After the big earthquake last year the plastering (including laths) of the old church fell, and, rather than repair, it was decided to build a new house. The new building is a handsome structure, and sufficiently commodious to meet our wants for many years, and, best of all, was dedicated out of debt.

The drouth has been equally severe in Southern California as in this section. But little has been or is being raised where there is no irrigation. Light crops are being harvested from Summer fallowed lands in parts of the San Joaquin and Sacramento Valleys.

Those of us who know Bishop Hendrix are pleased that he is to preside over our Conference this Fall, though there would have been no objection to the return of Bishop Hargrove.

Upon the whole, Californians are satisfied with the doings of the General Conference. The amendment to paragraph 120 is very mild, and should be cheerfully accepted by all parties in settlement of the evangelist question. W. P. ANDREWS.

THE JACKSON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Jackson District Conference convened in Canton, Miss., July 27, and was presided over by the presiding elder, Rev. R. D. Norsworthy. Prof. R. S. Ricketts was elected secretary, and B. F. Lewis, assistant. The elaborate programme which had been arranged was largely carried out, only a few of the brethren failing to respond with papers or addresses. This programme embraced most of the vital features of our Sunday-school and Epworth League departments, various phases of our missionary operations, and church extension interests. The papers showed careful preparation on the part of the leaders, and the discussions which followed, much thought and interest on the part of those who participated. The session was harmonious, and was generally pronounced one of the most delightful ever held in the district. We were relieved of the routine, stereotyped verbal reports from the several pastoral charges by the use of printed blanks secured from our Publishing House, and the appointment of suitable committees to summarize the work. Moreover, a much more satisfactory idea of the work done was had.

There were reported 4,654 members of the church, with 193 additions since Conference; about 120 family altars, 350 church papers, 1 class meeting, with an average attendance of 12. In the fifteen pastoral charges there are 52 houses of worship and 12 parsonages. Two thousand one hundred and ninety-two dollars have been spent on the churches, and $979 on parsonages. The assessment on the district for the Annual Conference collections aggregate $5,061, of which amount only $786 has been paid. The assessment for ministerial support is $10,360, of which sum $4,219 has been paid—nearly half. Three facts were suggested by these figures. First: the stewards have been better collectors than the pastors to date; secondly, with only a little over half the year gone, nearly half the salaries have been paid. I do not know that I can recall so fine financial report for this season of the year. It speaks well for the district. The idea seems to be exploding that the preacher can live off of affection for ten months of the year, and substantials the remaining two. The third: If this state of affairs can obtain on one district, why not on all? There are 40 Sabbath-schools, 1,797 pupils; 12 Epworth Leagues, 479 members, and $244 have been raised by the Leagues. The total amount raised on the district for all purposes was reported as over $8,500.

Two young brethren were licensed to preach: Bros. J. W. Campbell and C. M. Simpson. Two were recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial: Bros. J. W. Campbell and R. L. Webb. Bro. W. E. M. Brogan was recommended to the Annual Conference for local deacon's orders.

The following brethren were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: R. S. Ricketts, R. W. Millsaps, C. L. Ray, and R. F. Brown. Alternates: G. W. Galloway and J. M. Smylie.

A committee of three was appointed to act in concert with the district trustees in the disposal of the present district parsonage, and the purchase or building of another more eligibly situated.

At one o'clock Saturday (30) the Conference adjourned, having selected Terry as place of next annual session.

In Publication Report: How many auxiliaries have utilized other religious papers and secular papers in keeping prominent our work, as the Board also urged? How many reading circles and missionary libraries have we? How many district secretaries and auxiliaries have sent reports and items for our column? How many can conscientiously say that their whole duty has been performed in the circulation of our literature, and in obtaining subscribers to our Woman's Missionary Advocate and Little Worker? Very little self-denial in each home will place the Little Worker there, especially since the price is only ten cents per annum, and more necessary since it supplies the juvenile leaflets. This we consider a wise arrangement. We are pleased to find that the Board has emphasized the former emphasis of the value of our literature. Wise words are these: "To attempt to convert the world without educating it is grasping at the end and neglecting the means," etc. Secure the fund for the publication of the Minutes. Let each member endeavor to secure a new member. Let us approach our sisters, who are not of us, with our hearts overflowing with love for them, as well as the cause, manifesting our faith in the righteousness of the cause, and in Christ's name make our appeal. It is much easier to secure the $100,000 than the 100,000 members. Get the members, and the money will follow. Said Miss Ross: "No woman ever knows how rich life is till she is conscious of doing something for God and humanity."

As we have before kindly suggested in our column, that each auxiliary would observe a day of fasting and prayer specially for its own members and organization, being confident that the best results would accrue.

Let us consider the forceful words of Pierson: "Whoever undertakes work on missionary lines must remember that it is only legitimately done under the leadership of God." Then last, but not least. Would it not be well for every member to observe most faithfully and heartily the Friday before our annual meeting as a day of fasting and prayer, that we may meet spiritually prepared, be of one accord, and harmoniously and wisely conduct the Lord's business, else we may forget and "lean toward our own understanding," or be submerged, remembering Peter's dismay when he looked away from the Master of waves and storms?

The Christian Life.

FORGIVENESS OF INJURIES.

Forgiveness often seems to be more divine than any other virtue because it costs so much and is such an unmistakable proof of love. It cuts directly athwart that self-interest which is the gravest temptation, the deadliest danger of our lives. He who can and does forgive in anything like God's own spirit and manner has taken a long step toward ideal righteousness. We are to forgive those who have injured us, both for our own sakes and for theirs. For our own, because we need to learn to repress that indignant self-justification which is far too eager to exalt our own rights and belittle those of others; because we can not consistently ask of them the forgiveness which we, too, so often need unless we are willing to grant it in turn; and because we never can be sure that in their circumstances we might not have given offense, equal to, perhaps even greater than, theirs. For their sakes, also, because they may have battled long and nobly with the temptation to wrong us before yielding, and deserve credit for it; because they need to be encouraged to begin again and do better; because they are our brothers and sisters before God; and because, if we continue implacable, they will have good reason to doubt whether our spirit is truly that of our heavenly Father, and such a doubt is an injury to them which we can prevent.

Moreover, forgiveness ought to be hearty and convincing, not merely that of the tongue, but evidently the grand renewal of confidence. And, if we are to imitate the divine example set us, it ought to be renewed in all its sincerity as often as needed, provided it be sought with equal honesty. Seventy times seven! That means indefinitely—if the offendor be in earnest.

This suggests a limitation which is right and inevitable. He who seeks and receives forgiveness must prove his sincerity by the effort to avoid renewed offense. A merely formal request for forgiveness does not necessarily involve genuine penitence, and nobody has the right to impose upon one whom he has injured by pretending to be sorry when he is not sorry. Such a hypocritical wrong-doer must, for his own sake and for the general good, be refused forgiveness until he seeks it in the proper spirit. Travesties of penitence need rebuke, not pardon. Christian dignity, and the very dignity of God himself, must not be thus mocked. But with this exception it is both a sweet privilege and a solemn duty to forgive indefinitely, even as we hope to be forgiven.—The Congregationalist.

ONE SIN.

There was but one crack in the lantern, and the wind has found it out and blown out the candle. How great a mischief one unguarded point of character may cause us! One spark blew up the magazine and shook the whole country for miles around. One leak sank the vessel and drowned all on board. One wound may kill the body. One sin destroys the soul.

In little matters how carefully the rest of the lantern is protected; the one point which is damaged is quite sufficient to admit the wind. And so it little matters how zealous the man may be in a thousand things if he tolerates one darling sin; Satan will find the flaw and destroy all his hopes.

The strength of a chain is measured not by the strongest, but by its weakest link, for if the weakest snaps, what is the use of the rest? Satan is a close observer, and knows exactly where our weak points are; we have need of very much watchfulness, and we have great cause to bless our merciful Lord, who prayed for us that our faith fail not.

Either our pride, or our sloth, our ignorance, our anger, or our lust, would prove our ruin unless grace interposed; any one of our senses or faculties might admit the foe—yea, our virtues and graces might be the gate of entrance to our enemies. Oh, Jesus! if thou hast indeed bought me with thy blood, be pleased to keep me by thy power even unto the end. —C. H. Spurgeon.

THE MINISTRY OF THE RELIGIOUS PAPER.

A religious paper should be in every home, and by this we mean a denominational paper representing the church to which the family, or members of the family, may belong. It should be read by every member in the home who can read. Parents who fail to provide the home with such a paper are recreant to a sacred obligation, the fulfillment of which is essential to good influence in the home. It is better to be deprived of some things which may be considered "necessaries" than to be without good reading.

The church member who does not read his denominational paper will soon become shriveled, narrow, anti-missionary, and then go into "innocuous desuetude." On the other hand, a church member who reads, and becomes an agent in his church for a religious paper, is a benefactor. He is performing a service for Christ and the church, which is second to none. A pastor who will from time to time call the attention of his people to important articles, special numbers, and will urge upon his congregation the value and need of taking a religious paper, and will then follow it up with a little earnest solicitation, will strengthen himself among them. They will become informed, appreciative, and responsive to the denomination and to Christ.—Arthur T. Fowler, in The Standard.

YOUR BROTHER IS THERE.

They were digging a deep drain once in East London near Victoria Park. Some of the shoring gave way and tons of earth fell down upon several men at work there. There was much excitement. A man stood on the brink earnestly watching the men digging out the earth. Presently a woman came up, put her hand on his shoulder, and said:

"Bill, your brother is down there!"

Oh, the sudden change! He threw off his coat, sprang into the trench and worked as if he had the strength of ten men. Beloved, if we could realize that the perishing ones of earth are our brothers, how gladly would we work with all the strength for their salvation, how gladly would we deny ourselves that they might have the Bread of Life, how in an agony of prayer should we plead for the lost.—Selected.

CHRIST'S FELLOWSHIP.

The real distinction between Jesus and his disciples was his incredible approachableness, that he could get nearer to men than men could. The Son of God, because he would almost rather have been called the Son of man, abolished forever the divinity of distance and made fellowship the supreme attribute of God. With heroic simplicity he risked his mission on earth and founded his title to be ruler of men, upon letting them be familiar with him. The gospel consisted in knowing him. Redemption consisted in living with him. Salvation, impossible as an act, became inevitable as an acquaintance, and the whole New Testament wins our hearts because our hearts are woven into it.—Gerald Stanley Lee.

The Bible is a looking-glass for personal use. We know some men who never use it themselves, but always carry it about with them to show other people how they look.

The truest happiness is that which comes to us in a great many little pieces, from having done many little things wisely and well.—Exchange.

How often the memory of what others have done for us is embittered by the thought of how little we have done for them.—Selected.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Meridian District Conference convened at Lauderdale, Miss., at 9 A. M., Aug. 27, and adjourned at 4:30 P. M., Aug. 29, 1898; C. G. Andrews, D. D., presiding elder of the district, being present at opening, and in the chair at every session.

The attendance of preachers and laymen was good. In the multiplicity of statistics and pastoral reports the religious services were given due prominence each day.

Sunday-schools, Epworth Leagues and missionary work in all their phases were discussed.

Committee on State of the Church reported as follows, viz.: "We find only 133 ADVOCATES taken, 229 family altars reported, and thus far but 46 have been received on profession of faith. Some of the churches report revivals having been already held with fine results. Upon the whole, we think there is an upward tendency, spiritually, throughout the district."

Committee on Publishing Interests commended the "Bi-Monthly Review, the Epworth Era, the various Sunday-school periodicals, and the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE as being of the highest order, and claim our patronage." "Our own Conference organ, the ADVOCATE, published at New Orleans, is well edited, and meets its mission well, but its circulation in our district is not one-tenth of what it ought to be." "Resolved, That we pledge our beloved brother, W. C. Black, our hearty co-operation, our sympathy and our prayers." "Resolved, That this Conference memorialize the Annual Conference at its next session to take some steps to give our Conference a cheaper church organ."

In adopting the report of Committee on Sabbath Observance, each member pledged to be very strict in the observance of the Sabbath, and promised to do what he could to understand and enforce the present Sabbath laws, and use an influence upon the members of the next Legislature to get them to make stricter laws, especially for the protection of railroad employees.

Committee on Education: "We would remind the Methodist people of the Meridian district of their obligation to the schools under the care of the Mississippi Conference, believing that the advantages offered by these schools to be second to none in the State.

"We had with us President J. W. Beeson, of the East Mississippi Female College, who presented an encouraging report of this institution. During the session just closed he reported an enrollment of 327 pupils, and about 120 of these were boarders. About $4,500 have been spent on permanent improvements since last District Conference. We feel that we can commend the advantages of this school to the public as the equal of any in the State or in the South.

"Millsaps College for boys has just closed one of its most prosperous sessions, and, with its strong and active faculty, stands abreast with the best colleges in the South.

"We here record our disapproval of the act of the State Legislature in refusing to give the Law School of Millsaps College advantages given to the Law School of the State University.

"We learn that Whitworth, Fort Gibson and Edward McGehee Female Colleges have each just closed successful sessions, and we commend them to the patronage of our people."

C. P. Wetherbee, of Waynesboro, Miss., was elected to fill vacancy in Board of Education, caused by the removal of S. S. Cope to the Forest district.

License to preach was granted Alan Smith Cameron, of Meridian, Miss.

The following stood the proper examination, and were recommended to Annual Conference for admission on trial and deacon's orders: Thomas Joseph O'Neal, Frederic Lawson Crowson, and Louis Flemon Alford.

The license of local preachers were renewed as follows: T. J. O'Neal, L. F. Alford, F. L. Crowson, E. J. Coker, W. W. Holmes, A. Trotter, J. T. Griffith, J. D. Price, and G. S. Harmon.

Delegates to Annual Conference were elected as follows: L. P. Brown, T. P. Bell, S. B. Watts, and A. H. Morse. Alternates: W. H. Curtis, L. Porter, and T. C. Harmon.

Miss Sallie Smylie, corresponding secretary of Woman's Missionary Board, Mississippi Conference, and Mrs. S. B. Watts, district secretary of Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, were introduced to the Conference, and presented the claim of their respective works.

Strong resolutions of thanks were, by rising unanimous vote, given the people of Lauderdale and the wide-awake, earnest, spiritually-minded young Methodist pastor, G. S. Harmon.

Conference session closed with Doxology and benediction.

L. P. BROWN, Secretary.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. M. L. White, Decatur, Miss., Aug. 4, 1898: "I have held two protracted meetings—one at Centreville, and one at Hebron. Meeting at Centreville was very good. Five joined the church; nearly every member of the church was revived. Our Baptist friends took good interest. Was assisted in the meeting by Bro. J. N. Tucker. All were pleased with him. Some good accomplished at Hebron."

Rev. A. S. Lutz, Clinton, La., Aug. 8, 1898: "We have just closed a successful revival at Slaughter, La. The membership of the church was thoroughly revived, and there were about thirty professions of conversion. A large per cent. of the young men of the town were at the altar seeking salvation. Dr. J. T. Sawyer did some of his best preaching, and large crowds attended upon his ministry. A. W. P. and H. M. Society was organized by Miss Suzie Lyons, which bids fair to do good work."

Rev. J. White Davis, Indian Bayou circuit, Louisiana Conference, Aug. 9, 1898: "Just closed a meeting of one week at Indian Bayou Church, with 7 accessions. I never saw such large crowds attending services, except at camp meetings. We had from four to six hundred people every night. One good indication was the very best of order prevailed, notwithstanding the intense heat and immense crowds. Since Feb. 13 I have baptized 50 children—in less than six months—and have taken 17 into the church."

Rev. K. M. Blocker, Jeanerette, La., Aug. 6, 1898: "I assisted Rev. R. C. Grace at Plaquemine Brulee, two weeks ago, with a good meeting. We were limited to one week; yet the revival was a success, so far as the upbuilding of the church was concerned; and we had a few conversions. Some two or three of the converts were Catholics. Bro. Grace has his work pretty well in hand, and feels hopeful of success in all his circuit. We hold a meeting in Rayne next week. This is the writer's fourth year at Jeanerette. At Conference he will turn over to his successor a nice little station."

Rev. J. W. Tinnin, McComb City, Aug. 5, 1898: "We have just closed a great meeting at Whitestown. Rev. C. M. Crossley, of Binnsville circuit, Mississippi Conference, did the preaching the first week. Rev. J. L. Morrill, of Cartersville, Ga., was with us ten days. Visible results: 10 received in the church on profession of faith, 10 by certificate, more than 60 professed conversion, many family altars erected. The town is stirred as never before. Glory! We are to hold a tent meeting five miles northwest of McComb City, Aug. 14-24. Rev. J. L. Morrill is to do the preaching. Pray for us."

Rev. J. H. Montgomery, Ponchatoula, La., Aug. 8, 1898: "The first week in July we held a very successful meeting at James' Chapel. The church was greatly revived, and there were eight members received on profession of faith. Bro. F. N. Sweeney did the preaching. He won the confidence of the people the first sermon, and the Holy Spirit being present to save souls, there were shouts of joy to be heard all over the house. I never saw better behavior at any church. We held this meeting from Sunday until Thursday; two sermons a day, and dinner on the ground. This church, too, has paid her assessment up in full to date. Others on the work more able than James' Chapel have not done so well. Livingston parish is improving wonderfully. I have held two other meetings this year—one at Ponchatoula. Rev. N. J. Roberts, of Franklinton, did the preaching in great power. There was a great deal of good accomplished. The members of the church were revived, and every outsider that heard Bro. Roberts preach was much pleased and deeply impressed. Bro. J. I. Hoffpauir, of Amite City, held a four days' meeting for me at Springfield last week, which, I think, did a great deal of good. None were added to the church, but the membership was greatly revived. Bro. Hoffpauir won the love of those people by his earnest and simple, Christ-like preaching. All were sorry that he could not stay longer. We are doing well along every line. These good people of Ponchatoula charge have taken good care of their preacher and his family. I have not had to buy anything on credit, and we have not lacked for anything. God has wonderfully blessed me and mine this year. My daily prayer is, that God will give me his wisdom to lead men to Christ to get them soundly converted in head, heart, and pocket-book."

Rev. J. W. McGee, Ruleville, Miss., Aug. 6, 1898: "On the seventeenth of August we begun our Lehrton revival. Rev. G. W. Bachman did the preaching until the afternoon of Wednesday, when the preacher in charge preached. That evening, at 8:15, Rev. W. M. McIntosh begun preaching, and preached for one week. The results were wonderful. We had 125 or 150 conversions and reclamations; 46 accessions to the Methodist Church, and 13 to the Baptist Church. The church is on a higher plane of Christian living. Sister McIntosh added to the occasion very materially with her knowledge of music at the organ. She is a good worker in the altar, or anywhere else you put her. We trust that it will be our good fortune to have this man of God and his sweet, godly wife visit us again some time. The people gave Bro. McIntosh eighty some odd dollars, showing materially their appreciation for his having been among us. Wednesday, the twenty-seventh ultimo, our meeting closed here. Bro. J. W. Raper and myself left here at once for Sandy Bayou, where we begun a meeting that evening at 8:15. The congregation was small, but we had a good meeting, and the interest increased as the congregation increased. We had 25 or 30 conversions and reclamations, and 23 accessions to the church. Bro. Raper preached very earnestly, and God certainly did honor our labors. That is a very thinly settled neighborhood. We have a beautiful church there, and, if painted, it would be one of the prettiest little churches in all this country. Sandy Bayou is the banner church on this work, spiritually and financially. That is the only church on the work that has anything like kept its quarterage paid up. When we came on the work they had only 39 members (now they have 60 some odd), and assessed themselves $100. Bro. D. B. Driggins is a hustling steward, and his people respond liberally when he calls on them to pay their preacher. His home is the preacher's home. We begin another revival at McLamore on the thirteenth; one at Quiver on the twentieth instant. Pray for our success. We get the ADVOCATE regularly. It is a part of us now."

The Master Key.

A doctor who prescribes a dozen different remedies for the symptoms of one disease is like an old-time turnkey lugging about a ponderous bunch of keys, each one to open a different door. When anyone's blood is thin and watery and poisoned with bilious impurities this condition will show itself in every part of the body and the average doctor gives one medicine for the stomach, another for the head, a third for the lungs and so on; as if each particular symptom was a separate dungeon of misery to be unlocked with its own particular key; but the scientific, experienced physician looks deeper and seeks the one master-key which unlocks them all.

Thirty years ago Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., found the wonderful "Golden Medical Discovery" which has since made him famous: It is the perfect master-key which unlocks every torture chamber of weakness and pain caused by faulty action of the digestive system. It gives the stomach and blood-making glands power to produce the healthy blood which drives out all impure disease germs and waste products, and builds up healthy tissue, solid muscular flesh and nerve energy.

Mr. J. W. Brittin, of Clinton, Dewitt Co., Ill., (P. O. Box 475), writes: "For over a year I was troubled with 'liver complaint,' had no appetite, could keep nothing on my stomach and had severe pains in my stomach and bowels. I doctored with home doctors but did not obtain relief until a friend advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. After taking four bottles I think myself cured, as I can eat anything I want and my food never hurts me. Thanks for your medicines. I cannot say too much in favor of them."

For constipated conditions Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the best simple, comfortable laxative. They never gripe. Accept no substitutes or imitations.

THE RETURN OF PEACE.

The twelfth day of August, 1898, will be a memorable one in American history, for on that day the protocol providing for the establishment of peace between Spain and the United States was formally signed by French Ambassador Cambon for Spain, and by Secretary Day for the United States. In less than an hour after the signing of this important document had taken place, President McKinley issued a proclamation in accordance with the terms of the protocol declaring an armistice, and orders were at once telegraphed to our military commanders on land and sea to suspend hostilities. Instructions were also sent out to raise all blockades in force around Cuba and Porto Rico. Thus, after three months and twenty-two days of war, the white winged dove of peace has returned to perch upon our banners and sing of prosperity, liberty, and good will. The last act in this drama of nations has not been played, but the curtain has gone down upon its tragedies, and the closing scenes will be bright with manifestations of honor, magnanimity, and friendship.

Though a final treaty of peace has not been concluded, and will not be for probably some months, the protocol is of such a nature as to leave scarcely a doubt as to the continuance of the peace now inaugurated. Following is the protocol, which, in the main, agrees exactly with the ultimatum sent to Spain a short time ago:

Article 1. Spain will renounce all claim to all sovereignty over and all her rights over the island of Cuba.

Art. 2. Spain will cede to the United States the island of Porto Rico and the other islands which are at present under the sovereignty of Spain in the Antilles, as well as an island in the Ladrones archipelago, to be chosen by the United States.

Art. 3. The United States will occupy and retain the city and bay of Manila and the port of Manila, pending the conclusion of a treaty of peace, which shall determine the control and form of government of the Philippines.

Art. 4. Spain will immediately evacuate Cuba, Porto Rico and the other islands now under Spanish sovereignty in the Antilles. To this effect each of the two governments will appoint commissioners within ten days after the signing of this protocol, and these commissioners shall meet at Havana within thirty days after the signing of this protocol with the object of coming to an agreement regarding the carrying out of the details of the aforesaid evacuation of Cuba and other adjacent Spanish islands; and each of the two governments shall likewise appoint, within ten days after the signatures of this protocol, other commissioners, who shall meet at San Juan de Porto Rico within thirty days after the signature of this protocol, to agree upon the details of the evacuation of Porto Rico and other islands now under Spanish sovereignty in the Antilles.

Art. 5. Spain and the United States shall appoint, to treat for peace, five commissioners, at the most, for either country. The commissioners shall meet in Paris on Oct. 1, at the latest, to proceed to negotiations and to the conclusion of a treaty of peace. This treaty shall be ratified in conformity with the constitutional laws of each of the two countries.

Art. 6. Once the protocol is concluded and signed, hostilities shall be suspended, and to that effect in the two countries orders shall be given by either government to the commanders of its land and sea forces as speedily as possible.

At the outbreak of this war there was every prospect of its continuing much longer than has been the case. Some prominent authorities predicted that it would last a year; others that it would drag along for two years. Some of the over-confident and uninformed asserted that all would be over in a few weeks. The majority of our people, however, hardly dared to hope that it would end under six months, and this opinion was shared by many of our public officials. More than once was heard the muttering thunder of foreign interference; but when the news of Dewey's unparalleled naval victory reached European shores, consternation seized the would be helpers of Spain, which feeling of alarm was intensified later on by the report of the destruction of Cervera's fleet and the fall of Santiago. Truly we have cause to be thankful over the short duration of the war and over the insignificantly small losses our army and navy have suffered. When the statistics are all in, they will doubtless show that fully as many of our brave soldiers have died from disease as from wounds received in battle. Such, however, is the case in nearly every war ever waged. In this instance, as all know, there was special danger from disease on account the war's being waged in a tropical climate amid the heat and moisture of midsummer.

Surely, if the hand of God was ever manifested in any war, it was seen in this one, directing the movements of the army and navy, and bringing victories that are the wonder of the world. Superior skill and equipment do not wholly explain such marvellous results. The prayers of God's people that this should be a short and comparatively bloodless war have been signally answered.

That mistakes have been made, that there have been needless delays and preventable suffering, we do not doubt; but when it is remembered that we are a people who follow the pursuits of peace rather than the art and practice of war, this need not occasion great surprise.

As to what will be the ultimate fate of Cuba no one can say definitely. It is extremely probable, however, that, like Porto Rico, it will be annexed to the United States. Spain is now anxious for us to annex Cuba, as in that case the Spaniards on Cuban soil would be sure of protection, and Spanish commerce would have a fair chance there. Under a Cuban regime no doubt there would be a good deal of persecution and many limitations. We may now look for a large and flourishing trade to spring up with Cuba and Porto Rico, which will be of immense advantage to American merchants. But, next to the relief of the Cubans from long oppression, the grandest result of the war will be the opening up of that isle, as well as of a number of other isles, to Protestant teachers and preachers. As long as Rome had things her own way there was little chance for civilizing and elevating the natives. The various Protestant Churches of America already are awake to their duty and opportunity, and are preparing to send missionaries at once to the territory thus providentially thrown open.

The territory which Spain agrees to cede to the United States far exceeds in value the amount of the indemnity which it was proposed to demand, so that we have reason to be well satisfied with the financial outcome of our military and diplomatic manœuvres. Nothing is so costly in money and life as war. During the past month our war expenses have exceeded a million dollars a day. As the volunteers will have to be kept in the field for some time to come, the end of expense is not yet. But as it has been a struggle the justice and necessity of which the masses of our people have heartily believed in, there is little complaint on the score of cost. All are ready to bear their share of the burden.

In addition to succeeding in its prime object, the conflict with Spain has demonstrated most forcibly that American manhood has not deteriorated; that American patriotism is not dead; that military genius is not a thing of the past; that our soldiers are capable of as heroic and chivalrous deeds as ever graced the pages of history; and last, but not least, that the American nation is not dominated solely by greed and selfishness, but that it is capable of the sublimest humanitarianism.

"NO SECOND DECLARATION NECESSARY."

MR. EDITOR: I have just read in the ADVOCATE, of Aug. 11, what you say on "No Second Declaration Necessary." At one place you say: "This report (of the Senatorial Investigating Committee) went to record as a part of the proceedings of the United States Senate. The positive affirmation contained in the report is, therefore, now the affirmation of the Senate itself." If you had stopped there, I would have inferred that you regarded the finding of the Senatorial Investigating Committee as final, and so, that it must be regarded as the finding of the Senate itself, as in the case of our Committees of Appeal.

Your further statements, however, will not allow such an inference. You say: "When a committee makes its report to the General Conference, the report is subject to the disposal of the General Conference. . . . Unless the report is adopted, the General Conference is not responsible for it. But when the report is adopted, then the action of the committee becomes the action of the General Conference. Of course, the same rule applies to the United States Senate. When the Senatorial Investigating Committee made its report, that report was before the Senate for its action. When the Senate adopted the report, then the report became the action of the Senate itself."

As to the fact of there being "No Second Declaration Necessary," it seems to me that all are agreed. The point about which there is doubt is this: Has there been a first declaration made by the United States Senate? That the Senatorial Investigating Committee has made a declaration is unquestioned. That the Senate has adopted that report is questioned. If that report has been adopted, it is a matter of fact that the records ought to settle. Where shall we find a record of the adoption, by the Senate, of the report in question? I have inquired of others for this record, and among the most intelligent men with whom I have talked, the fact is denied. I am seeking information. Very truly,

J. A. MOORE.

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 10, 1898.

The above, from our esteemed friend, Prof. Moore, brings out a question of fact of great importance. Our statement that the United States Senate adopted the report of the Investigating Committee was made on authority of a journal which we have always considered reliable. If Prof. Moore is correct in his claim that the report of the Investigating Committee was not adopted by the Senate, then the Senate has not taken the "affirmative" action indicated by our Bishops as a condition of refunding. Such a report needs to be adopted by the Senate before it becomes the authoritative expression of the opinion of that body. What the action of the Senate was the official records will show. Whenever we get additional light on the subject, our readers will get the benefit of it.

Since the above was put in type we have received a statement from an authoritative source which makes it certain that Prof. Moore is correct, as is also Dr. Price, of the Midland. The Senate has taken no action on the report of the Investigating Committee. The report will doubtless come up for action early in the next session.

A FORGIVING SPIRIT.

If thy friend has offended thee, but is deeply penitent therefor, and is willing to do all in his power to make amends for his wrong, then, how darest thou, O son of man, to refuse to be reconciled? If thou prayest at all, thou sometimes prayest, "Forgive us our trespasses AS we forgive those who trespass against us." Suppose that prayer should be answered; suppose God should forgive thee just AS thou forgivest thy penitent friend, then what would be thy doom? And will not thy prayer be answered? "For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you; but if you forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." (Matt. vi, 13, 14.)

These are the words of the Son of God. They announce a law which is as universal as the presence of God and as unchanging as the divine nature. In the light of "this lamp from off the everlasting throne," it is as clear as the noon-day sun that there can be no such thing as an implacable Christian. As well might we talk about a dark light, a virtuous vice, or a true falsehood. He who thinks himself a Christian, and yet refuses to forgive those who penitently seek forgiveness, is simply deceiving himself. With his own hand he is keeping the door of mercy closed against himself.

"Vengeance is human; forgiveness is divine." He who is most forgiving is most God-like.

DEWEY.

Of all the officers in our army and navy, not one has achieved greater renown than Dewey. He has not only evinced valor and military skill of the highest order, but he has shown himself to be a man having a rare combination of high qualities. During the months when he was commander-in-chief of our forces in the Orient, in that part of the world he had many grave problems to deal with. A man of small calibre might have made an assault at an earlier date, and been defeated, might have had serious trouble with the insurgents, and might have involved us in war with other nations. Dewey has in every instance done the right thing at the right time and in the right way.

THE LAST BATTLE OF THE WAR.

Owing to a lack of direct telegraphic communications with Manila, Dewey could not receive the orders from the government for a cessation of hostilities for some days. Meantime, on Saturday, the thirteenth, he bombarded the city and captured it, the authorities surrendering unconditionally. Augusti, the Spanish captain general, during the bombardment, went aboard a German ship, and sped away to Hong Kong, China. This news was cabled to Washington by United States Consul Wildman from Hong Kong, and is given out by the government as reliable. So Dewey fought the first battle of the war and the last.

A NEW BOOK.

FACTS THAT CALL FOR FAITH. A Series of Discourses by Rev. David Gregg, D. D., Pastor of Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn; author of "Makers of the American Republic," "Our Best Moods," etc. 12 mo. 314 pages. Cloth, $1. E. B. Treat & Co., publishers, 241 and 243 West 23rd St., New York.

This book contains sixteen masterly and attractive discourses upon the great fundamental facts of the Christian religion, appropriately styled "Facts That Call for Faith." The essentials of Christian belief are here presented and defended in such a plain, practical and interesting way as to greatly strengthen faith, and deepen our convictions of truth and duty. The objections and arguments of the skeptic and agnostic come in for a share of attention, and are most effectively refuted both by illustration and argument. The author "proceeds by a consistent plan from the fundamental fact of 'God' to the completion of Christian character and destiny in heaven." Some of the other facts considered are: "Christ," "The Bible," "The Church," "The Lord's Day," "The Testimony of Human Experience," "Prayer," "Regeneration," and "Immortality."

The author clearly shows that religion lays no greater tax upon faith than science does, the marvels of science being believed in by mankind not because they fully understand them, but because of the dicta of scientists and scholars. In this connection Dr. Gregg well says: "In science human testimony is a ground of faith, and with multitudes the only ground; in religion men will not accept testimony, but go on in a life of unbelief."

While we dissent from some of the theological views expressed therein, we regard this as a most inspiring and instructive volume—in fact, a valuable contribution to sermonology along the line of apologetics. The author is a gifted and eloquent preacher, a fine reasoner, and a forceful writer. Moreover, he is peculiarly apt in the use of illustrations. Ministers and laymen alike will be delighted with this fresh, wholesome book.

The American Monthly Review of Reviews, for August, reviews the Santiago campaign by land and sea from start to finish. Winston Churchill, who wrote so acceptably on Admiral Dewey for the June Review, describes in this number the wonderful battle with Cervera's fleet, and his article is illustrated in part from Hemment's remarkable photographs of the Spanish ships taken the day after the fight. John A. Church, formerly of the Army and Navy Journal, contributes a full account of the Santiago land fighting, and his article also is illustrated from new photographs. Park Benjamin writes on the work cut out for the Eastern squadron under Commodore Watson. Altogether, the Review again shows its ability to keep well abreast of all important military and naval movements, and to exhibit a clean pair of heels to all its competitors in magazinedom.

HOW NEW TERRITORY WILL BE GOVERNED.

A great deal of ignorant and ill-advised discussion has been going on in the newspapers in regard to the form of government that will obtain in any new territory that may be acquired by the pending war. It has been asserted that the added colonies will be entitled to demand certain constitutional rights on an equality with citizens of the United States, and that they will claim as a matter of legal prerogative a republican form of government, with all the powers and privileges implied therein. This is a mistake. The decisions of the Federal courts long ago settled the question that territories have no constitutional rights, and can demand no privileges except such as Congress may see fit to bestow upon them. A territory acquired by annexation or conquest is wholly and arbitrarily under the jurisdiction of the Federal legislature, and it can be governed in any manner and by any sort of institutions that body may prescribe. There need be no uniformity in the government of the several territories. Cuba may have a military governor, whose will is absolute law, while the Philippines may be granted a more or less modified form of local self-government. What is lawful in one territory may be prohibited in another, and the entire system of laws and their enforcement is vested in the discretion of Congress. This well-settled doctrine has been recently reiterated by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at San Francisco, in a case involving the validity of the prohibitive liquor laws in Alaska, and it is applicable to any and all new territory to be acquired in the future.—Baptist Standard.

Bro. B. F. Ormond, one of the leading wholesale merchants of Meridian, died at his home in that city a few days since. He was a life-long Methodist, and had been an official member for many years. He was loyal to the church in every respect, and was efficient in every position assigned him. He was thoroughly exemplary in all the relations of life. He was held in high esteem by the entire community for his probity and honor and beautiful Christian life.

Prof. Thomas Carter seems to be much impressed with the sights of the Old World. By courtesy of a friend, we have seen a private letter from him, dated Aug. 2, from which we quote as follows: "Here I am just beneath the moon on the tower of the grand cathedral at Milan. Oh! the glory of yesterday's trip. Crossed Lake Lucerne, the most lovely water I've ever seen, and the Alps, too. The pen of a Macaulay, the brush of a Rubens, and the imagination of a Milton—all would fail to do justice to the visions of glory I saw."

There will be a Methodist mass meeting at First Church, Jackson, Miss., on Sunday, August 21, at which a missionary address will be delivered by Dr. Young J. Allen. Every Methodist in Jackson and for miles around ought to attend if possible. Dr. Allen is better posted on everything connected with mission work in the Orient than any man among us. He has been in that field for forty years, and has been an important factor in the development of our most important enterprises. No missionary in China has so much influence in literary and governmental circles. When you hear what Dr. Allen has to say on the subject of mission work in China you hear the views of an ecclesiastical statesman.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Booneville, Miss., EDITOR.

We call special attention of the Leaguers to the items furnished this column this week by the Carrollton Avenue Epworth League relative to a missionary social recently given by them. The League seems to be alive in New Orleans, and doing a great work. May God abundantly bless the preachers and Leaguers thereabouts!

From an article which recently appeared in the Nashville Christian Advocate under the caption, "The Methodist Preacher in Cities," we clip the following: "The Epworth League opens a door of hope to some of these puzzled and tired city pastors. The possibilities of this organization for active good are enormous. Most earnestly it is hoped the League will materially check this desertion from Methodist ranks among the young, and supply the place of many of the vulgar and damaging amusements now so popular in cities."

TO LOUISIANA LEAGUERS.

Shall we redeem the promise made at the Conference in Alexandria to raise four hundred and fifty dollars for the support of our missionary in China, Bro. W. B. Nance? A considerable part of this amount has been pledged, but we are still a great distance from the end. Shall we not fall in line with the Leagues of other States, and contribute our share?

Have you yet reported your pledge to Rev. P. O. Lowry, Farmerville, La.? If not, attend to the matter at once, and if you have, increase it, if possible.

A little systematic self-denial on your part will soon fill the treasurer's purse

Let pledges and subscriptions already made be paid as promptly as possible to Bro. Lowry.

ROBERT H. WYNN,
League Missionary Secretary.

The following is an excerpt from a letter recently addressed by Dr. W. R. Lambuth (Missionary Secretary) to the president of the Mississippi League Conference. We ask that the pastors call attention of the League officers in local chapters to this announcement.

"I inclose a marked copy of the new Epworth League Constitution. As you doubtless know, a Missionary Committee is to be appointed by the vice-president of the Devotional Department as a sub-committee. It is very important that this committee be appointed at once in every League. It is expected that the members of this committee shall have charge of the monthly missionary meeting, organize study classes wherever possible, and secure missionary libraries, maps, charts, periodicals and leaflets for the use of the League."

MERIDIAN DISTRICT LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

The Meridian District Epworth League Conference will be held at West End Church, Meridian, Miss., beginning Tuesday morning, Sept. 13, closing Wednesday night, Sept. 14. All the Leaguers of the district are cordially invited. Elect your delegates at once, and forward their names. A written report from each League in the district will be expected. In the absence of the president, one of the delegates must be appointed to read it. There will be a Committee on Records, and the record book of each League should not be forgotten. Every effort is being made to have a successful Conference. We hope much good will be derived by the Leaguers of this district from this meeting.

H. F. TATUM,
District Secretary.

CARROLLTON AVENUE EPWORTH LEAGUE.

The Carrollton Avenue Epworth League gave a very unique and interesting missionary social at the home of the chairman of the missionary committee, Mrs. J Cohen, on Friday eve, July 29. The rooms were decorated with the flags of Japan, China, Corea, Brazil, Mexico, Cuba, and America, which flags represent our mission fields. A brief sketch of the rise, progress and development of each particular work was given by Leaguers standing beneath the flag representing the country of which they spoke. Missionary hymns, solos, duets and choruses were sung between these addresses.

A novel feature of the evening was the filling of a large number of comfort bags to be sent to our soldiers. The articles, bags, etc., were furnished by the League, the guests filling them. Refreshments were served by the hostess and Leaguers. A contribution box was placed in a conspicous place to receive voluntary mites from the guests to help the League pay its subscription to our special missionary. This is the first of a series of missionary socials to be given during the year.

LESSON VII.

SUBJECT—OPENING THE EYES OF THE BLIND; OR, THE MIRACLE OF PATIENCE.

1. Search in the library for all available material on China and the Chinese. Their antiquity, conservatism, and peculiar form of religion make them one of the hardest problems ever confronted by the church of Christ. Note the prevalence of blindness among them. Seek to find the reason of this.

2. Study the character of Murray; especially in the light of his being a providential man. God frequently uses the natural aptitudes of men as channels to convey his blessings to the race. (Paul, Luther, etc)

3 Let some idea be given of the utmost difficulties presented by the Chinese language, and study the zeal and patience necessary to overcome these. Has not the history of missions proven over and over again the miracle of the "gift of tongues"? Memorize the striking sentence on page 101.

4 Note the development of this system from mere reading of the Word to its application to music—"the handmaid of evangelism," as our author justly calls it.

Suggestion: Let some one who has visited an asylum for the blind illustrate how they are enabled to read by means of raised letters.

Illustrate from this section the power of the simple Word of God in awakening the consciences of men to their need of Christ (vid. page 111).

INSTITUTION FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE DEAF AND DUMB, JACKSON, MISS.,

Will open its Fall session Oct. 5, 1898 This institution gives not only a good literary course, but also a course in Industrial Arts, which will prepare pupils, both boys and girls, to earn their own living. Its benefits are within the reach of the very poorest. For terms write to

J. R. DOBYNS, President,
Jackson, Miss.

THE MISSISSIPPI DEAF AND DUMB INSTITUTE.

This institution is well equipped, and has a good faculty. Prof. Dobyns, who has been at its head for a number of years, is a scholarly man of fine administrative ability and admirable Christian character. Miss Ada Saunders, one of the principal teachers, is thoroughly equipped in character, attainments, and experience. Miss Gillespie is a bright, accomplished woman of excellent family, who has had special training for the important place she fills. Prof. Jordan has been in the institution a number of years, and has given entire satisfaction. There are six other members of the faculty, all of whom are competent and efficient.

In addition to the literary course, this institution gives instruction in various industrial arts, thus preparing pupils, both boys and girls, to maintain themselves. Many of its graduates are taking care of themselves and others. If any of our readers know of deaf and dumb children who are growing up without education, they will do a good deed by putting them in correspondence with Prof. Dobyns. See ad. on this page.

N. B.—Prof. Dobyns has two ads. in this issue—one about the institution; another about a matron.

Niagara Vapor Baths.

We are the original manufacturers of portable Vapor Baths.

We have, during the last ten years, supplied thousands of our Baths to physicians, hospitals, sanitariums, etc., and we are now, for the first time, advertising them direct to the general public.

IN BUYING A VAPOR BATH Get one with a steel frame that stands on the floor. If a manufacturer does not show you a cut of the frame without the covering, you may take it for granted that his "Steel Frame" is a wire hoop that rests on the shoulders of the bather.

Get one that is covered with proper material. Insist on seeing a sample of material before ordering. We make our own covering material and print it with a handsome "all over" pattern of Niagara Falls.

Get one with a thermometer attachment. Don't go it blind—a bath that is too hot or not hot enough will be of no benefit to you.

Get one that you can return and have your money back if not satisfactory in every way.

Send for sample of material and interesting booklet that will tell you all about Vapor Baths.

Vapor Baths are an acknowledged household necessity. Turkish, Hot Air, Vapor, Sulphur or Medicated Baths at Home, &c. Purifies system, produces cleanliness, health, strength. Prevents disease, obesity. Cures Colds, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, LaGrippe, Malaria, Eczema, Catarrh, Female Ills, Blood, Skin, Nerve and Kidney Troubles. Beautifies Complexion.

OPPORTUNITY.

Addressed to the Boys of America.

A judgeship is vacant, the ermine awaits
The shoulders of youth, brave, honest and true,
Some one will be standing by fame's open gates
I wonder, my boys—Will it be one of you?

The president's chair of a great railroad maze,
Is empty to-day, for death claimed his due,
The directors are choosing a man for his place,
I wonder, my boys—Will it be one of you?

A pulpit is waiting for some one to fill.
Of eloquent men there are only a few,
The man who can fill it, must have power to thrill;
The best will be chosen—Will it be one of you?

The great men about us will pass to their rest,
Their places be filled by the boys who pursue
The search for the highest, the noblest, the best,
I wonder who'll fill them; I hope 'twill be you.

—Ram's Horn.

SHOW YOUR COLORS.

It is honorable for a regiment to bear its standard aloft in the thickest of battle. It is a sign of patriotism and courage. But it is a reproach to allow it to be lowered and trampled in the dust. When an army would disgrace its foe, it hauls down its ensign from the strongholds and plants its own standard there amid the hearty cheers of the victors.

Young man, young woman, show your colors. Let your light shine and your example be pure, constant, and positive. What a beautiful example was that of the little boy, Clarence Mackenzie, of the drum corps of the Thirteenth New York regiment. The troops were conveyed by a steamer to Annapolis; and, on the first evening out, the colonel, in passing, discovered Clarence asleep on the deck. The excitement and fatigue of the day had exhausted him, and he had fallen asleep unconsciously. He was aroused from his sleep and told to go below, the colonel directing him to a place in the cabin where he might spread his blanket and lie down for the night. As soon as the brave little boy had prepared his bed, amid the confusion surrounding him,—soldiers talking, laughing and singing,—he knelt down, folded his hands, and offered his silent prayer to God for protection. No sooner did the soldiers see his attitude, and know that he was at prayer, than they ceased talking and laughing, and every voice was still. There were men around him who had never prayed, and from whose lips words of profanity had dropped doubtless that night, but tears came to their eyes as they saw the brave boy on his knees. One man said: "I was deeply affected, and the thought came into my mind, 'that is probably the way in which my wife is praying for me at this moment.'"

The brave drummer-boy was honored for showing his colors, and his example became a beautiful and gentle influence among the soldiers.—Success.

Bad Blood

is a good thing to be rid of, because bad blood is the breeding place of disfiguring and dangerous diseases. Is YOUR blood bad? You can have good blood, which is pure blood, if you want it. You can be rid of pimples, boils, blotches, sores and ulcers. How? By the use of Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It is the radical remedy for all diseases originating in the blood.

"Dr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla was recommended to me by my physician as a blood purifier. When I began taking it I had boils all over my body. One bottle cured me."—
BONNER CRAFT, Wesson, Miss.

Take Ayer's Sarsaparilla

DID YOU EVER THINK?

That a kind word put out at interest brings back an enormous percentage of love and appreciation?

That, though a loving thought may not seem to be appreciated, it has yet made you better and braver because of it?

That the little acts of kindness and thoughtfulness, day by day, are really greater than one immense act of goodness once a year?

That to be always polite to the people at home is not only more ladylike, but more refined, than having "company manners?"—Our Sunday Afternoon.

SURE SIGNS.

Some folks don't believe in signs, but the wisest man in the world believed in them. Solomon said: "Even a child is known by his doings, whether his work be pure and whether it be right."

When I see a little boy slow to go to school, and glad of every excuse to neglect his books, I think it is a sign that he will be a dunce.

When I see a boy or girl looking out for "No. 1," and disliking to share good things with others, I think it is a sign that the child will grow up a selfish person.

When I see a child obedient to his parents, I think it is a sign of great future blessing from Almighty God.

When I see a boy fond of the Bible, and knowing it well, I think it is a sign that he will be a good and happy man.—Anon.

Hygiene.

INDIGESTION.

America has the reputation, less deserved now, perhaps, than it was half a century ago, of being the land of the dyspeptic. When we consider the causes that were formerly at work to prevent healthy digestion, we can not wonder that so many suffered from this malady.

The men were too busy to devote the necessary time to their meals, and bolted their food without the thorough mastication which ensures the proper beginning of the digestive process. The women had more time to eat, if they would have taken it, but they went out little, taking almost no exercise, and the amount of food eaten was almost always in excess of the needs of the body—a most favorable conjunction for the production of dyspepsia.

Finally, the food itself was of such a kind, and prepared in such a way, as to tax the digestive organs to the utmost. The frying-pan reigned supreme, and greasy, smoked and corned meats, with hot saleratus biscuits or heavy pancakes, led the assault at breakfast-time upon the sorely overworked stomach, hardly recovered after a night's rest from its herculean struggle with the hot bread, pie and doughnuts of the preceding supper.

So much has been said and written on this subject that these causes are less active to-day, but they are still sufficiently so to bring misery to large numbers.

The familiar symptoms of dyspepsia are a coated tongue, a disagreeable breath and a bad taste in the mouth. The appetite may be poor, or it may be ravenous, there may be nausea and vomiting, a feeling of weight in the stomach and often of oppression in the chest. There will probably be much flatulence and heartburn, and more or less acute pain.

Palpitation of the heart, a sound of beating arteries in the head, and a very rapid or an unusually slow pulse are often present, and may lead the patient to believe that he has heart-disease.

A great danger to be avoided in dyspepsia is self-treatment. The patient watches himself, cuts off one article of diet after another which he has been led to believe, often without reason, to be injurious to him, until he nearly starves himself; or he swallows box after box of pills, or bottle after bottle of Doctor Somebody's anti-dyspepticum, until his powers of digestion are utterly ruined.

If an intelligent physician is ever needed by anyone, it is by the sufferer from this distressing and complicated malady, which must be taken in hand early to be cured easily, or perhaps at all.—Youth's Companion.

Men say they dare not neglect the sober realities of life, for they are from God. Neither should we dare to neglect the brightness and happiness and joy of life, for they are from God just as truly. The sun shines by God's will just as truly as the clouds sometimes intervene between us and the sun by his will.—The Christian Leader.

REV. J. L. PIERCE, D. D.,

1 (Continued.)

Many other features are worthy of extended comment, if one could dare the "tonte ensemble." One ought to dwell on him as a pulpit search-light, in his piercing exposition of fallen human nature; upon an engraving pointedness of characterization of sinful traits; upon his store of lore, and aptness and abundance of quotation from English literature; upon an erudition utterly untainted with pedantry. His many-sidedness of intellect, fortified and enriched by severe and esthetic culture, constitute him a theme too broad for the occasion or my capacity. There is a constant temptation to contemplate him as a sort of psychological prodigy, so protean is he; now a poet, then a metaphysician; here an humorist, mildly quaint (generally), sometimes broad; there a philosopher; again living in the past and future with his vital imagination and pliant fancy; the analyst dissector of character the polemic thundering against sin with volleyed reprobation; the withering blight of his hissing scorn in invective, or the sparkling brilliancy of his gay and airy derision. His sentiments seem born of lofty moode, his language of deep literary inspiration—a deep immersion in, or imbibition of, the Castalian sprig. He seems a union of the cloistered scholar and the genial, urbane gentleman studious, but not ascetic; a man who loves "the midnight oil," like those who once were wont to haunt

"The studious cloisters pale;"

and also the man to delight in

"The breezy call of incense-breathing morn,"

"the sweetest influences," the "joy-fonts" of nature; and to be

"Tender to the spirit touch Of man's or maiden's eye"— in fine, a man in whom

"The elements are kindly mixt."

Dr. Pierce's imagination is not only graphic, but picturesque. It is artistic; it is pictorial, not statuesque. His pictures are full of delicate shading, delicious chiaroscuro. His work is not the cold, distinct, chiseled, vivid distinctness of a silhouette, where obtains the regency of isolation, but it is enriched by features pertinent, but not predominant. This is, perhaps, not classical, but more humane, so to speak; not Grecian, but Shakespearean. The by-play of the fancy is strongly in evidence. There is "a charming wealth of circumstance, a profusion of interesting detail." If the scenes be laid in Palestine, Siloam's shady rill makes music; the lily of the valley and the rose of Sharon regale the air; the cedars of Lebanon sigh, or the gladdening breezes, stirring the tree-tops to varied cadences, Harmon kisses the skies; over all arches the rainbow, and many other natural accessories beautify, but do not detract from the due impressiveness of the central figures. As a great critic puts it: "There is a setting of surroundings, without which the reality is not itself." This vivid, sympathetic imagination of his is one of the most distinguished of his faculties. He lives in the future with it; is a cotemporary of the past. In this latter power the character of its spell is beautifully portrayed, where Lord Brougham commente upon the lovely transition of Virgil, in Georgic 1,493, where, while in the midst of the Thracian war, "the magician strikes the ground on the field of battle where helmets are buried, and suddenly raises before us the husbandman in a remote age, peacefully tilling its soil and driving his plow among the rusty armor and moldering remains of the warrior;" only Virgil's transition is a forecast, and not a retrospect.

It may serve to enhance the estimate of Dr. Pierce's gift to quote this passage from a great modern English critic: "What a strength of imagination, what a large practice, what a facility in the details of fancy is required to picture the past and unknown world." The triumphs of his delineation are emphasized by the reflection that "it is a law of imagination, in most men, that it will not bear concentration, is essentially a glancing faculty."

He is a great analyst and delineator of men. His men are characters, not caricatures. No one within my knowledge, in the Southern pulpit, approaches him in dramatic intensity, except possibly two or three men. In it there is the imagination to conceive, the artist to portray, the humanizing, Shakespearean touch; the idealizing, Wordsworthian mood—the soul-painter, as well as that of the exterior man. His vivification of characters is something wonderful. His descriptions are soul-catching; psychological photographs. They paint the character; do not merely describe features, traits, manners. In his descriptive ability he seems to have lived then and there. He ate and slept with his heroes; knew the tones of their voices; heard their footsteps. It is not a literary delineation so much as an actual eyesight of them. His descriptions of men "are dramatic, not observant," or a cold enumeration of characteristics and actions; "not an animated catalogue raisonne of working thoughts and operative principles."

As I have said, there is no velocity of manner, no overwhelming ardor about Dr. Pierce. There is an artistic straightforwardness in perspicuity and swiftness of enunciation that come of literary dexterity, or, rather, felicity; but there is nothing precipitate and darting, in intense eloquence, through impassioned spontaneities, like the burst of flight of an eagle at the surprised or unexpected vision of its quarry. But, at times, there is an immense buoyancy, a grand grace of ease, a lofty elevation, a stately ascension. He is not impassioned, but majestic and splendid. In his magnificent excursions he reminds me of the palace of Pandemonium, which

"Rose like an exhalation, with the sound
Of dulcet symphonies and voices sweet."

I have termed Dr. Pierce a poet. Of course, I do not mean as to the movement of his language, the mere mechanical parts of measure and rhythm. As a great critic has said: "A nation may have versifiers with smooth numbers and easy rhythm, and yet may have no real poetry at all." But, in the highest effects of, and attainments in, poetry; in truth and seriousness, in beauty of diction, in elevation of sentiment, in ministries to soothe and cheer, to soften and melt the heart; in power to make one clearly feel and deeply enjoy the excellent, to interpret life for us, to console us, to sustain us, in what is "thought and art in one;" in many, many respects is he a poet. Let anyone read definitions of poetry by Emerson, Wordsworth, Matthew Arnold, Bagehot, Shairp, Dean Church—I know not how many more—and he will see what is meant. It is a dictum of a great modern English critic that "we are disposed to believe that no very sharp definition can be given—at least, in the present state of the critical art—of the boundary line between poetry and other sorts of imaginative delineation." At any rate, one may say he turns prose to poetry in better style than by mere feet and rhythm—in the measures of lovely heart-beats, the movements of tender and lofty graces of style; or, rather, he melts out their distinctions in the solvent of sensitiveness. Whatever it be, it is as true poetry as much to which metre ever timed its tuneful feet.

There can be no doubt of the artist of language in Dr. Pierce; of enthusiastic care, zealous nicety, exultant painstaking, buoyant drudgery, ecstatic patience, the splendid fortitude of endeavor, the pride of perfection that inspired Apelles at painting the shoe-buckle, the delight in the midnight lamp of Demosthenes, the almost religious scrupulosity of Virgil's labor limæ, the ravishing solaces in the triumphs of the last touches that crown the labors of devoted and accomplished artists. For does not Carlisle say that there may be genius, even in drudgery? Truly, there is no literary dilletantism in the man.

Aye, this is labor, to be sure. It may have taken a thousand centuries for the river to carve the cataract of Niagara, but this does not detract from the triumph and majesty of its transcendent thunder. But all this is not incompatible with a genius for style. Ah! how shall I ever be able to portray this? I am certain to be somewhat obscure, perhaps unintelligible; but I know what I am attempting to describe, and, if I had passages, would illustrate it to anyone's comprehension.

There are those, we believe, who, by looking persistently on the dark side of things, manage to persuade themselves that the world is growing worse all the while, and has been so growing from time immemorial. Their dismal doctrine, however, we are happy to believe, has no other foundation than their own ignorance of the past. Mr. Charles Dudley Warner, who declares confidently that the standard of morality is higher now and the churches purer than in his boyhood, is responsible for the statement that less than seventy-five years ago, "in a New England town, a distinguished doctor of divinity, the pastor of a leading church, was part owner in a distillery. He was a great light in his denomination, but he was an extravagant liver, and, being unable to pay his debts, he was arrested and put into jail, with the liberty of the limits.' In order not to interrupt his ministerial work, the jail limits were made to include his house and his church, so that he could still go in and out before his people. I do not think that could occur anywhere in the United States today."—Zion's Herald.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

In money value the islands ceded by Spain to the United States will far exceed the cost of the war.

Public opinion in favor of peace was so strong in Spain that no leader dared suggest a continuation of the war.

Great Britain has in commission at the present time 52 battle-ships, 18 armored cruisers, 96 protected cruisers, and 16 unprotected cruisers.

Orders have been sent to all military and naval commanders in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines instructing them to suspend hostilities, and informing them that the blockade of Havana and all other Cuban and Porto Rican ports was raised.

Rev. Judson B. Palmer, of Texas, is enlisting the Sunday-schools of that State in a plan to buy Captain Phillips, of the "Texas," a sword and Bible. Mr. Palmer suggested that in each of the Sunday-schools in the State, Sunday, Aug. 14, be designated for making the collection to be taken up for the purpose of buying the Bible and sword. It is not expected that any child should give over 5 cents.

The condition of the Pope no longer admits of disguise. His health has gradually gone from bad to worse, and his holiness is now a decrepit old man who rarely speaks. His voice is of the weakest; thinking tires him, and prayers confuse him. He has been observed to commence the same prayer ten times without noticing the repetitions. Cardinal Rampolla, papal secretary of state, conducts all of the vatican business.

The Cubans in the field have accepted the armistice, and are no longer fighting the Spaniards. H. S. Rubens, counsel for the Cuban delegation, said: "The Cubans may be depended upon to cooperate with the Americans in carrying out the establishment of a peaceful and stable government on the island. The Cubans stand accused, by the Spanish, as not being capable of self-government, and they feel that it is a question of dignity and honor to disprove that falsehood to all the world."

By Wednesday or Thursday of this week it is expected by War Department officials that all of General Shafter's command will have left Santiago for the United States. In a dispatch to the War Department General Shafter says that the early departure of the troops now depends entirely upon the transports, which are daily expected to arrive at Santiago. At the present time only about 5000 men of General Shafter's corps are at Santiago, the remainder having already sailed for this country.

Manilla was bombarded by Admiral Dewey on Saturday, Aug. 13, and quickly surrendered unconditionally to the American land and naval forces. The captain-general and his family took refuge on a German cruiser, and were hastily carried to Hong Kong. Admiral Dewey only bombarded the shore batteries. The popular hero opened the war with a glorious victory, and adds new laurels by completing his work after everybody else had quit fighting. General Merritt is believed to be in control of the city.

The United States government on Aug. 14 received the first congratulations from a foreign power upon the successful termination of the war with Spain. The congratulations came from Italy, through the Italian ambassador, Baron Fava. He communicated to the State Department, by direction of his government, an expression of the cordial satisfaction of Italy at the prompt signature of the preliminaries of peace, together with the wish of the Italian government that after the war, conducted with such conspicuous gallantry by the United States, this country might enjoy the benefits of peace.

The war which has raged between Spain and the United States for a period of three months and twenty-two days was quietly terminated on Friday, when Secretary Day, for the United States, and M. Cambon, for Spain, in the presence of President McKinley, formed the protocol which makes up the base of a definite treaty of peace. It is but simple justice to our sister republic of France to record the fact that to her good offices this speedy termination of a war that might have run on indefinitely was brought about, and the President, himself, deemed that action, on the part of the French government, as worthy of his special praise.

Rev. P. L. Cobb, Nashville, Tenn.—

DEAR BRO: Our Bro. C. D. Atkinson is now closing up his campaign in my district. He, I think, has done great good in the cause of missions. He has visited all my Leagues, except two, and will visit them in the next two days. I expect great results from his work. I heartily commend him to the churches and Leagues in any Conference, as an earnest and faithful worker in the cause of Christ.

Very truly yours,

B. T. CREWS, P. E.,
Arcadia Dist., La. Conf.

Arcadia, La., Aug. 5, 1898.

You will find a box of Ayer's Pills an excellent traveling companion. For costiveness, indigestion, sick headache, and nausea, they are prompt, safe, and efficacious. Taken in season, they may prevent serious illness and vexatious delay and disappointment.

NEW ORLEANS COOK BOOK.

The New Orleans Cook Book, by the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of Parker Memorial Church, of which we gave a notice in our issue of July 21, is for sale by Mrs. J. W. Wilkinson, 1024 Valmont street. Price, 50 cents. This attractively gotten up pamphlet is emphatically a home enterprise, all its recipes having been furnished by New Orleans women. Moreover, these recipes have all been tested by long use. Unlike most other cook books, it has not a worthless recipe in it, or one that is not adapted to this climate.

SITUATION WANTED.

A young Methodist, splendidly equipped with learning and experience in teaching Latin, Greek, French and English, desires a position. I can heartily recommend him.

Address REV. C. W. CARTER.
Jackson, La.

POSITION WANTED.

Position wanted by a refined Christian young lady as music teacher in a school, or governess for small children in family. Good references.

Address MISS B.
Vessburg, Miss.

PRACTICAL EDUCATION THE CRYING NEED OF THE SOUTHERN STATES.

Georgia's equipped School of Technology in Atlanta offers courses in civil, electrical, and mechanical engineering. Board, $6.50 to $10 per month. Fees nominal. The shops for manual training in wood, machine, smith and foundry work have no superiors. The catalogue lists all graduates and their occupations, and the record is unsurpassed.

All students living in the dormitories are under wholesome regulations, which protect morally and physically, save them from all pernicious influences, and promote their interest in studies. For industrial catalogue, with full particulars, address Lyman Hall, president, Atlanta, Ga. Fully equipped textile department opens February next.

For Sale.

GRAYBEARD

WE make 200 bottles of our GRAYBEARD every week. No more—no less. If 200 bottles don't fill all orders, some customer must wait until the next week. We mention this as some do not understand the delay. We have earned a reputation for making a clean, fresh, sure remedy for Cancer—Ecz ma, Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and we cannot make GRAYBEARD faster, and make it good.

"A few years ago Cancer appeared on my face in form of a scab—not a sore, but a scab that dropped off, and soon reappeared, some worse. Finally it annoyed me to shave. Darting pains set in, affecting my sight. People said I had Cancer—I was miserable. About that time a planter name Jordan, down the State, once similarly afflicted, sent me a bottle of GRAYBEARD advising me to take it. I did so and to my great joy got better, Skin cleared, appetite improved, I got stouter and Cancer left me. And it has not returned. GRAYBEARD saved my life.

Doctors

An experience of two years or more has demonstrated the curative power of the Electropoise far beyond any therapeutic agent or appliance known or available to the medical profession. Without a doubt the Electropoise has the gift and power to cure multitudes, who, without it, must surely die, and that, too, in early life or in the very maturity of strength, when their loss is most severely felt and the mystery of their untimely death is most terribly difficult of solution. C. COLEGROVE, M. D.,
Holland, N. Y.

Lawyers

The latter part of last February I was so much affected with rheumatism that I left home prepared to go to Hot Springs, Ark., for treatment. Being detained in Memphis two days, I concluded to try the Electropoise, and was so much benefited that I bought one and went back to my home in Oxford, Miss. I now feel very little effects of the rheumatism, and believe that anyone using the Electropoise according to directions and for a sufficient length of time will be entirely cured. I most heartily recommend it to all suffering humanity. Respectfully

I. G. HOLLOWAY,
Oxford, Miss.

Ministers

I find the Electropoise almost a necessity. It is, indeed, of great importance to my comfort. I experienced relief from neuralgia, which at one time threatened to keep me a constant sufferer. I take pleasure in speaking for the Electropoise, and hope these few words will induce those who read them to make trial of this "cure all."

How can I cease to pray for thee? Somewhere
In God's great universe thou art to-day;
Can he not reach thee with his tender care?
Can he not hear me when for thee I pray?

What matters it to him who holds within
The hollow of his hand all worlds, all space,
That thou art done with earthly pain and sin?
Somewhere within his ken thou hast a place.

Somewhere thou livest and hast need of him;
Somewhere thy soul sees higher heights to climb;
And somewhere still there may be valleys dim,
That thou must pass to reach the hills sublime.

Then all the more, because thou canst not hear
Poor human words of blessing, will I pray,
O true, brave heart! God bless thee, wheresoe'er
In his great universe thou art to-day!

LETTER FROM GERMANY.

[The following is an extract from a letter written by Rev. Henry B. Carre to his grandfather, Dr. E. D. Beach, to whom we are indebted for the privilege of publishing. It was written at Hanover, Germany, July 31. It may be well for us to state that in these letters "Tom" is Rev. Prof. Thomas Carter, of Tulane University. "Griff." is Mr. Lovelace, a Vanderbilter who, like Bro. Carre, is taking a post-graduate course in Germany.—EDITOR.]

In my last letter I did not give an account of my first trip on a European railway. Griff. and I left Tom at Rotterdam, Friday morning, July 22. In a few minutes the train pulled out, and we were hurrying through the old Dutch country. The scenery was not beautiful, but interesting. The country was level, and laid out in small farms, which were freely watered by means of small canals. The farming methods, like most things in Holland, are very primitive. Old fashioned wind-mills are numerous, and the houses are very old. The cattle are very fine.

We had not gone far before discovering in an adjoining compartment two students who had come over with us on the ship. They were on their way to Cologne, and we traveled together for some time. After a little we discovered that European railway was not so bad after all, even third class. We several times had an entire compartment to ourselves, and found it very pleasant. The tracks are very level, so that the riding is very smooth, and there is much less dust than on American roads, and almost no cinders.

For a while we traveled in ignorant blissfulness, thinking, of course, we were on the shortest route to Hanover. It was not long, however, before we had to change cars at Utrecht, and, though surprised, we thought it was all right that we had to go a little out of the way, as it looked to us on the map; but we began to see later that we were traveling southeast instead of east, or northeast. This put us to enquiring. There were in our compartment a young German soldier, who had been in England forty days, and could speak a little English, and a German who could speak no English, but who had a time-table, and could use it. Griff. could talk a little German, and I could say "ja" and "nein." When you recall what it means to work your way through the schedule of a single American railroad, your imagination can picture for you us four struggling with the schedule of the entire railway system of the German Empire.] The result of our investigation was to the effect that our ticket read from Rotterdam to Hanover by two ways—a short one and a long one—and that we were on the long one. The time by one way is about eight hours; by the other, fourteen. We reached Hanover at 12:20 that night. Except for the loss of time, we were not put out much, for we saw much of Germany, especially the mining and manufacturing districts.

At Hanover our train rolled into one of the largest and handsomest depots I ever saw. As we walked out of the depot we saw a handsome equestrian statue of a king of Hanover. The streets were so wide and clean, and everything looked so nice, that I felt sure I should enjoy staying here. We found a hotel; slept that night under the renowned German feather beds. On coming from the breakfast-room we met an American college student, who, with a friend, was seeing Europe on wheels.

Our first business was to find the American consul, and apply for a passport for Griff. We found him a very pleasant gentleman, and he made us feel quite at home.

Last Sunday I went to church with the fraulein, and while I understood little that was said, found the service novel and interesting. Almost all the churches here are Lutheran, and resemble the Roman Catholic in several particulars—most of all, perhaps, in architecture, both outside and in. They usually have a very large tower and a plain exterior. The interior is on the basilica order, with high vaulted ceiling and double rows of massive stone pillars. The floors are of stone or tiling, and the seats, which are of plain wood and without cushions, have straight backs, and rest on a floor raised four or six inches above the aisle floor. There is a large altar, with crucifix and candles. Before this the preacher, who wears a plain black gown with a white fluted collar of the Queen Elizabeth style, or a plainer one, chants, reads, and prays. Singing occupies an important place in the service, but it is very different from ours. The hymns do not seem to be poems, but pious prose divided into paragraphs numbering from 3 or 4 to 8 or 10. Almost everyone brings his own book and enters into the singing, which is plain, but very pretty. It is truly congregational singing, and is very inspiring. The sermon is delivered memoriter from a high pulpit, which adjoins one of the pillars at the side of the center aisle. It is enclosed by means of a high railing, and sometimes has a cover over it. As to the quality of the sermon, I can say little more than that it was good, not because I thought so, but because the fraulein said so.

This morning Griff. and I went to the church that the soldiers attend. It was crowded. There must have been about 1,000 soldiers present in full uniform. The choir was composed of about fifty soldiers. We were ushered far up in front, and it was a grand sight to pass so many men in beautiful uniforms. The service was much like that of last Sunday at another church. After dismission the soldiers lined up in front of the church, and marched off in order. It was an entirely new church experience for us, but made no great impression upon the citizens of Hanover, who can not walk two squares, as a rule, without seeing a soldier. Already we have seen so many that we have almost ceased to remark concerning them, unless it be one with some peculiarity, or a strange uniform. As a rule, the uniforms are very pretty, and of many varieties—perhaps twenty, or more.

Since I have begun on the soldiers, I shall tell you what I saw on the drill-ground. It is a level plaza about three blocks long by two wide. About 600 soldiers were on the grounds, being drilled in four or five detachments, each detachment doing something different from the others. One was practicing a peculiar step, another was practicing firing in different positions, another performed fancy drill movements, and another practiced scaling walls. They have two fences erected on the grounds—one about eight feet high; the other about fifteen feet. Getting over the first is not so difficult, but the second is quite a task. Four men stoop down with their backs to the fence—or wall, more properly—and make a stirrup of their hands. Four others put one foot into these stirrups, and are lifted high enough for them to get their hands on top, when they have to scramble for themselves. When all have gone over but one, those on the other side throw a rope over for him. Yesterday we saw about fifteen soldiers on the grounds practicing fancy drill movements on bicycles.

This is certainly a military country. It is the law here for the policemen to keep a careful record of the birth, occupation, residence, etc., of every citizen of the city. Boarding-house keepers are required to fill out certain blanks for their boarders, and send them to the police station. Ours were so filled and sent, but the officer said we must come to the office in person. Herr Bierwerth went with us to talk German for us. The officer could speak no English, and asked immediately, "Have you served?"—that is, "Have you served your term in the United States Army?" We told him we didn't have to. He then said, "Haven't you a war going on over there?" We said, "Yes; but we have as many men as we need." He couldn't understand such a state of affairs, and was not inclined to register us, whereupon I pulled out my passport, which, though he couldn't read it, silenced him immediately. We went to see the American consul after that to get Griff.'s passport, which had to come from Berlin. We told him our experience; and he seemed surprised that the policeman should ask such a question, since it was none of his business whether we had served or not. The consul was very pleasant with us, and when we told him we were expecting our wheels, he invited us to come round and ride with him, and offered to show us some of the interesting places around here. We asked him concerning the feeling of the Germans towards the Americans. He said that up to about four weeks ago it was not very cordial, but that it was now. He attributed the change to two things: 1. Our success (he says the Germans like to be on the winning side); 2. A very happy and soothing speech made by U. S. Consul White at a Fourth-of-July banquet given in Berlin.

Last week we went to Herrenhausen, the estate of the Hanoverian kings. It is, I think, the most beautiful estate, or park, I have ever seen, not excepting Central Park, New York, or Lincoln Park, Chicago. There is a good deal of history connected with it, which I hope to study up, and after several visits shall write more fully concerning it.

As I wrote you before, we are having very cold weather for July, unusual even for this place. We had fires two days last week. The twilight here is very long. We were walking the other evening, and saw a woman reading a book by daylight at five minutes to nine.

The morning papers announce the death of Bismarck. We think of attending the funeral. We may see the Emperor, and it will be worth going to see the funeral of one of the most important men of the century, the one who has made the German Empire.

In Holland and Germany the street car conductor gives one a receipt upon the payment of his fare. I enclose the first I received in Rotterdam. The price is seven and a half cents, but the Dutch cent is one-half the value of ours. The street car-fare here is ten pfennig, or two and a half cents U. S.

Griff. and I carry a pocket dictionary with us (German-English), and as we go along the streets reading signs, notices, cards in show-windows, etc., we pull out our little dictionary and see what this or that word means. In about two weeks more I hope to be able to understand an ordinary conversation fairly well, and in a month's time I hope to be speaking so as to be understood.

During the first week in September there is to be a national military display here. Hanover is already being put in order for it.

SAM JONES CAMP MEETING.

MR. EDITOR: The Sam Jones Camp Meeting for '98 has come and gone. The meeting was preceded by daily rains for some days, which detracted somewhat from the enjoyment of those tenters who came in advance of the opening; but during the meeting the weather was much better.

Services commenced Friday evening, twenty-ninth ultimo, and were opened by a short, but characteristically good sermon by Rev. J. A. B. Jones, president of the Association, to a respectable, attentive and appreciative congregation. The people down in that "neck of woods" have a warm corner in their hearts for Jab Jones, and they love to hear him preach, and they have lots of sense.

On Saturday morning we were favored with a good sermon by Bro. Mark Moore, who was with us that day only. Bro. W. W. Moore was also present, and preached twice on Saturday. Saturday night Bro. Geo. Huff preached an excellent sermon, timely, appropriate, and with the best results. Sunday brought with it a typical day and a big crowd, the tabernacle being full at the 11 and 3 o'clock services. Dr. Black, of the ADVOCATE, engaged the rapt attention of the immense audience at 11 in one of his masterly efforts. The Doctor's sermons are always of the best, and never fail to charm his hearers and hold their attention. We much regretted the necessity that called him to his office duties on Monday morning. Bro. M. M. Black did yeoman service, both in the pulpit and in the choir. Our well-beloved Dr. Hunnicutt divided his time between us and his sainted and sore-afflicted wife, who was suffering much, and whose condition grieved the hearts of all. Happily, however, she felt well enough later to brighten the camp with her presence a part of one day. The Doctor was, of course, active in every good word and work, doing all in his power to advance the interests of his Master's kingdom, and was welcomed everywhere. Our only regret was that his duties as presiding elder took him away at the time when he would have most enjoyed the meeting, viz.: after Bro. McIntosh's arrival. Pending that arrival, the chariot wheels of Zion seemed to be clogged, and there were no special indications of the presence of the Divine Spirit. The people seemed to think that we need expect nothing important to be done until the coming of the evangelist, and, as a natural consequence, nothing was done, apparently.

Wednesday morning brought our beloved Bro. McIntosh (who is not the sort of evangelist I am opposed to), and at the 11:30 service he demonstrated the fact that he, at least, had not cut loose from his Master, but that in every move, act, word and deed; he depended upon him, and him alone, for success. His subject was Christian sympathy, in all its manifold ramifications, and he handled it with a zeal, skill and earnestness that I never saw surpassed. The effect was marvelous. Before his arrival a sermon had been preached that was harsh, personal and unkind, in condemning the frailties of human nature and Christian character, and some whom God had borne with for many years, picking them up and forgiving them when they fell by the way, felt hurt and left the tabernacle. Whether Bro. Mc. chose his subject with a knowledge of these facts, I do not know, but I have never heard so severe a castigation administered, nor in so gentle and kindly a spirit. A spirit of fraternity, brotherliness and charity pervaded the hearts of God's people, and the success of the meeting was assured from that good hour. Interest increased with each service, and quite a number found peace and the joys of salvation. Twenty-seven persons made application for church membership, several backsliders were reclaimed, and God's people were abundantly blessed.

The communion service on the second Sunday morning, followed by an experience meeting, was one of the most precious sessions I have ever enjoyed; and when my good Bro. Seal led in singing the hymns and tunes of old-time Methodism, and the people told the old, old story of how God deals with his children, I thought we were getting right near Beulah land.

Our beloved Bro. Hicks Ellis was with us Friday and Saturday, and did, as he always does, the very best of service, both in the pulpit and around the altar. Our dear Bro. Abney, of Wesley Chapel, attended to the singing to the perfect satisfaction of everybody, except the two Sundays when he returned to his people from a sense of duty (a young man whose consecrated zeal in the service of his Lord will not be unrequited). In the absence of Bro. Abney, Bros. M. M. Black, Gray, and others, gave us excellent music, with Sisters Rosa Longmire and Maggie Webb, two lovely young ladies, attending to the organ. Bro. R. A. Breland was present part of the time, and preached one sermon.

A word more in reference to Bro. McIntosh. I have lived many years, and have seen many preachers in their efforts to save lost men, but in all the long list there is no one more unselfishly and entirely consecrated to his work, or more fully equipped for successful service, than is this man of God. With him the matter of money is a trivial incident of the campaign; not a sine qua non for the commencement of hostilities, as the manner of some is. To save a soul from eternal death, he is more than willing; he is delighted to spend and be spent. In the pulpit and around the altar he is the embodiment of Christian love and pathos. His appeals to sinners are coupled with so much personal interest in each one, and so earnest a desire for their salvation is so apparent, that it is seldom these appeals are disregarded, and this, in conjunction with the manifest presence of the Holy Spirit in his meetings, is the secret of his success in his chosen work. I am not partial to evangelists, but I thank the good Lord for raising him up, and would be glad if his tribe were to increase muchly. Any preacher who needs outside assistance will make a large-sized speculation, spiritually, if he can secure the services of Bro. Mac. May our God abundantly bless him!

Bro. C. C. Miller was with us one day, preached an excellent sermon, and tightened the bonds of love and affection that bind him to so many on the grounds. The renewing of old and the formation of new friendships, and the delights of fraternal intercourse, are elements of exquisite pleasure in these annual gatherings. If these things are so delightful here below, what will we enjoy when we have passed through the "dark valley" and entered the heavenly city, where the hand of parting is never taken, and where we can spend an eternity of joy together at God's right hand?

Bros. Cassels, Roberts (Uncle Jap), Uncle Artie, Van Randall, Hackett, Sessions, Longmire, Uncle Dan McNeil and his boys, Jim Roberts, Nelson and Dr. Whittington, Bro. Webb and Bro. Ferd Huff, of the old standbys, were all there; also Bros. Seal and Flowers, and, possibly, others, but there were many vacant places. Of course, Bro. Ball was on deck, and also, of course, everything is "all right." Anything the Lord does suits our saintly friend. I wish there were more of his sort. Bro. Williams was there, and found Jesus, much to his own delight and also to that of his wife. Of course, Sisters Cassels, De Lap, J. A. B. Jones, Roberts, Huff, Webb, Whittington, Aunt Mary, Rayford, Misses Rosa and Lela and Exel Longmire, Carrie Cassels, Ball, and the Sisters McNeil, and others, perhaps, of the old-timers were there all the time; also Sisters Sessions, Hackett, Holloman, Goodale and daughter. All these labored for the success of the meeting. May God bless each and all of them! It is also pleasant to note that our young friend and brother, Jno. Cassels, Jr., since last year has been soundly converted, and become an active worker in the vineyard of the Master. So it usually is that where the parents live the religion they profess, its excellence will commend itself to the children, and they will follow on to know the Lord.

The table was excellent, and the accommodations of the best. No complaint that I am aware of. The attendance of preachers from adjacent circuits and stations was not what it should have been. The preachers' tent should have been full. It does not follow because a preacher is not asked to run the camp meeting that he can not do and get good by attending it, and there is no charge that would not freely excuse its pastor for the entire ten days of the meeting.

We closed Sunday night with the usual sad accompaniment of the parting tear and handshake. God grant that if we all never meet again in this world, we may meet in the celestial city. Next morning we had the annual meeting of the Association, discharged its business, and adjourned to meet the Friday preceding the first full moon in August, 1899.

Yours truly, REX.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE Y. M. C. A.

The Young Men's Christian Association at Millsaps has been an inspiration to many of the boys, and we are endeavoring to make our association a greater power for good during the next session than ever before. We now have a larger room in the main building for a hall, and we are endeavoring to furnish that hall. Some improvements were made about the close of last session, and we have to make further improvements before the opening of next session—Sept. 14. Our new hall will be dedicated Friday night, Sept. 16, and we expect Bishop Galloway and Dr. Murrah with us on that occasion. A nice programme of music will be arranged, and we hope to make this dedicatory service an inspiration to all the boys. We should be glad to have the friends of the college and the association assist us in furnishing this hall. Some have subscribed to this work and have not paid, and a great many have not subscribed that could help us. If you can assist us in this cause right away, send amount to me at Kosciusko until Sept. 10. After that time send it to me at Millsaps. We hope to make considerable improvements before the fourteenth of September; therefore, we would be glad to get all money we can before that time. We want to furnish this hall nicely, and trust you will help us.

ROBT. A. CLARK,
For Committee.

From a private letter from a friend in North Mississippi we quote as follows:

Rev. J. S. Oakley, P. E., of Durant district, is most tireless and efficient in his work. In a private letter to a personal friend he says: "I leave tomorrow (Aug. 18) for the northeast corner of the diocese. My engagements are such I do not spend another night at home until Sept. 6." He works with such assiduity, lectures with such a charm, preaches with such force that he captures, holds and inspires the whole district. His work silences the croaking objectionist who thinks the office useless and the officer a burden to the church.

If a man will live up to all that part of the Bible about which there has never been any dispute, nobody will complain at anything he may say about the rest of it.—Bible Reader.

YOUR KINGDOM

There is some place for you to fill
Some work for you to do.
That no one else or ever will
Do quite as well as you.
It may be close along your way
Some little, homely duty.
That only waits your touch your sway
To blossom into beauty.

Or it may be that daily tasks,
Cheerfully seen and done,
Will lead to greater work that asks
For you, and you alone.
Be brave, whatever it may be,
The little or the great,
To meet and do it perfectly.
And you have conquered Fate.

A MISSIONARY SPIRIT NECESSARY TO A SPIRITUAL LIFE.

BY REV. C D CECIL.

(Published by request of Meridian District Conference.)

The spirit of missions is the spirit of Christ, the very genesis of our holy religion. It is a disposition to do good to all men in all the world. It repudiates all parties and stretches its line into the regions beyond, even to the uttermost parts of the earth. Its desires are proportioned to the spiritual needs of mankind and the will of God, who gave his Son to die that the world might have everlasting life. By a law of our nature every man is a missionary either for good or evil, conservative or destructive. Christians are co-workers with their Lord. Like him, we are to do good of every possible sort, and, as far as possible, to all men. Right principles are to be declared. We are not only to glorify God, but we are to "serve our generation." Christians must recognize the will of God taught in the Bible as the rule and guide of their faith and practice. Christ has an undoubted right to our allegiance. He created us and preserves us. This right is confirmed and intensified by purchase and redemption! "Lord, what wilt thou have me to to?" ought to be the inquiry of every Christian heart. The Bible gives answer, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, mind, soul and strength, and love thy neighbor as thyself." This is the law and the prophets. The true philosophy of life is found in the First and Second Commandments, "God is love." Christ is the exponent of God's love, for God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life.

Christ proposes the restoration of our race to the "unity of an all-embracing spiritual kingdom, of which he himself is the immortal head." We must be co-laborers with him if we partake of his Spirit, and thereby lead spiritual lives. The love of Christ constraineth, and with true missionary zeal the spiritual man cries out, "Be ye reconciled to God, for he hath made him to be sin for us who knew no sin." With the love of God shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Ghost we look forward with confiding hope to an "abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." The greatest good we can do any unconverted man is to point him to Christ, the Son of God, the Son of man, the God-man, the missionary sent of God the Father, the token of his love, who loved us and gave himself for us. "Be ye, therefore, imitators of God, as dear children, and walk in love as Christ loved us." The missionary spirit requires we come out from the world with the assurance that God's smile amply compensates for the world's disdain, and the testimony that we please God outweighs all earthly treasure and outshines all earthly glory. The world was not made as we find it. It has undergone some terrible disaster. Ask the philosopher to explain this, and he is dumb. Ask nature herself, through any of her oracles, and she, too, is dumb. Her groans that have not ceased since the fall of man are the only replies to the question. But consult the Scriptures; their reply is, "Sin has entered, and death by sin."

God pronounced creation good; man's sin has unhinged it. "Every flower was once fragrance, every sound was once harmony, every sight was beauty; but sin has fallen upon the earth, encircling with its poisonous influence the widest sphere, until the whole earth is tainted;" stricken, as it were, with paralysis; "groaning in travail, waiting for redemption." Man has sinned, and, therefore, suffers spiritual loss. The gospel tells us that "Jesus, who knew no sin, was made sin for us." These words are the marrow of all our sermons. They reveal the spirit of Christ, and "if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." One of our glorified Bishops has said: "The missionary spirit helps us to understand the Bible. It clarifies our theology; it enables us to grasp the great plan of redeeming love; it brings us into such sympathy with Christ that we see and feel the universal brotherhood of man." Christ the Son is the missionary of God the Father. Christianity is a missionary spirit, and that is the most spiritual church that is most deeply imbued with the spirit of missions. This spirit has "enlarged the views, quickened the zeal, energized the faith and deepened the love of the church." Christianity is not a rule, but a prescription; not merely a direction to the living and healthy, but a cure for the diseased, life for the dead. He who "knew no sin was made sin for us, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." The Bible insists on all who have themselves felt the truth—not preachers only, but all who have received the gospel—doing their utmost to make it known to those who yet remain in ignorance. "God be merciful unto us and bless us." Why? "That thy way may be known upon earth, and thy saving health among all nations." A man who can pray thus, and then pass by the "hat" at a missionary collection, contented, it may be, with giving nothing, or, what is worse, a nickel or two, does not know what the gospel is, or what Christianity really means. True, God can promote the gospel without our instrumentality, but it concerns us to ascertain not what God can do, but what he does. God's omnipotence is not our rule of faith. We know of, and he tells us of no other means. The sunbeams do not write salvation on the sky; angel voices do not chant it. The temple of nature tells us there is a God, but it tells not our relation to him. "How shall they believe if they have not heard, and how shall they hear without a preacher, and how shall they preach except they be sent?" Who, save men possessed of missionary spirit, will send them? Take a microscopic view of the home missions, and inspect the lanes and alleys of wretchedness, sin and demoralization at home, and then, with the telescope, sweep the broad horizon of the world from plain to mountain-top, and when you have gazed on these heart-rending scenes, hear the Son of God, first from the cross and then from the throne, saying, "Go, teach all nations."

Brethren, this command has ever been obeyed by spiritually minded men, notably the living ministry called of God; sent forth by the Head of the church into all the world to preach the gospel. Like Peter, we hear the voice of the Master by his spirit, saying, "Feed my sheep, feed my lambs." We can say with St. Paul, "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel." "The divinely called and commissioned ministers" of Christ in every age are the missionaries of the cross. "Embassadors for Christ, proclaiming his gospel and feeding the church of God" with all spiritual food. This was the "grand missionary lever" which, under God, "turned the world upside down," and in "one century spread the glad tidings of salvation commensurate with the Roman Empire." David possessed the missionary spirit when he cried, "Uphold me with thy free spirit, then will I teach transgressors thy ways, and sinners shall be converted unto thee." Paul said, "I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord." Life is not to be measured by years, but by obedience to him that loved us and gave himself a ransom for this sin-cursed world. The missionary spirit carries the good news of release from the bondage of fear, from darkness and death; echoes the divine call, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." When the missionary spirit shall have obtained in the world, the prediction of Isaiah will be verified, "Violence shall no more be heard in thy land, wasting nor destruction within thy borders, but thou shalt call thy walls salvation, and thy gates praise." The glory of Jesus will sparkle in the dew drop and in the boundless sea, in the minutest atom and in the greatest star, and this "earth, restrung, retuned, shall be one grand Eolian harp, swept by the breath of the Holy Spirit, pouring forth those melodies which began on Calvary and shall sound through all generations." Blessed is the man who, imbued with missionary spirit, shall have carried the good news of salvation upon its errand of mercy to the poor and broken-hearted. He shall be like Christ, for he shall see him as he is.

Brethren, we have not "received the spirit of the world, but the spirit which is of God, that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God, which things we also speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth," comparing spiritual things with spiritual. "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him. He who converteth a sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death and hide a multitude of sins. They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever. Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and enter in through the gates to the holy city beyond the starry regions, built by the God of love."

IN MEMORIAM.

CLAIBORNE J. FOSTER.

On Wednesday, June 22, 1898, a noble, immaculate life passed out of the portals of time, and entered upon its royal heritage as one of the sons of God. Claiborne J. Foster, whose name is as sweet ointment poured forth, was swiftly translated, in a moment's space, from the dust and din of earth to the glory that excelleth. Fitting end of so beautiful a pilgrimage, which, without divergence, through its nearly sixty-four years, was ever toward the heavenly city. He "walked with God: and he was not; for God took him." It is due the living that such a record as may be, should be given of one whose light shone so conspicuously, yet with such Christian humility, over the wide circle of his influence.

He was born Aug. 4, 1834, in Monroe county, Ala. While still very young his father moved to Louisiana, locating in Caddo parish. His education was completed at the Western Military Institute, Drennon Springs, Ky. An incident occurred here so typical of character that it should not be omitted from this sketch. Toward the close of the scholastic year an epidemic of typhoid fever was prevailing among the students. It was during the gala times of commencement, with their attractive entertainments, parties, and the usual social diversions always delightful to the young student after a year of work and isolation from the charms of social life. This boy, without a thought of the act as being one of divine self-denial, but viewing it simply as a plain duty not to be ignored, renounced all the gaieties his companions were enjoying, and sat by the sick-beds day and night, nursing with the tenderness of a woman. The boy was father to the man. Duty was his watch-word, his one sustained and life long purpose and aim.

During the Civil War he raised Company G, Twenty-seventh Regiment of Louisiana Volunteers; and, because of his military training and universal popularity, was made its captain. This company lost many members during the siege of Vicksburg, was noted for gallantry, and was ever chosen for special deeds of daring by the regimental colonel, when the necessity for picked men arose. During the siege of Vicksburg it became known to the commander of the forces there that on a certain dark night the Federal fleet intended to run the blockade of the Confederate batteries. A call was made for volunteers to cross the river and set fire to a group of buildings in order to illuminate the scene so as to assist the batteries in their destructive work—a perilous enterprise, where the chances of escape were small. Capt. Foster volunteered for this service; and, with a few picked men, crossed the river in skiffs, and skillfully accomplished the work. For this service he was complimented in a general order from the commander of the Confederate forces. This preparedness for duty was as conspicuous in times of peace as in his faithful service to the cause he so enthusiastically supported in war. He was ready for each emergency as it arose. Perhaps the highest mark of human ability is this readiness for whatever demands circumstances may impose upon our resources. Judged by this criterion, Captain Foster was entitled to a place of eminence.

At the close of the war he was married to Miss Eunice Burrus, a daughter of the late Rev. John C. Burrus—a marriage made in heaven. Four children were born to them—three sons, now living, and the little daughter whose brief life of six bright years was a delight and joy, and whose death was her father's one life-long grief.

For many years he pursued his business as a planter upon the old homestead; but seventeen years ago he removed to the vicinity of Shreveport, La., where his chief interests were located.

Such, in brief, are the leading events of a conspicuously useful and noble life, the larger view of which emerging from familiarity with its detail, and insight into specific aspects of character, is difficult to adequately portray because of the very richness of the personality. Yet the analysis of such a character not only embalms its virtues, as a permanent possession, for grateful memory; it leads us into the inheritance of those influences for good which live after they who have wrought them have ceased to work. His judgment was singularly clear, and was sustained by great executive ability. As a citizen, a friend, a member of the church, and in the sacred responsibilities of the family relations, he was regarded as a tower of strength. One of the most marked features of this life was its blending of large resources of character with profound and genuine humility. This humility was as conspicuous as his strength of resource. In no sense was he a self-seeking man. His life was thoroughly disciplined. His capacity for sustained work was enormous, and everything attempted was conscientiously and carefully completed. He wrought smoothly, deliberately, and symmetrically. His external life revealed no agitations because a consecrated will was enthroned in the regions of power which govern the human spirit. There was nothing of the recluse in his nature. He touched life. His personality throbbed with sympathy for his kind His influence was felt in the great interests of civil affairs in the place of his residence, in the movement of commercial and social relations, and in the fellowship of the church of Christ.

In his business relations Captain Foster was conspicuously just. Those who dealt with him, from the humblest to the highest, trusted him utterly. His word was unimpeachable. As his humble colored friends and tenants, in long procession, passed his coffin, many of them, sobbing with honest grief, were heard to say in broken voices: "He was my best friend." His nature expressed the most exquisite tenderness—that tenderness which is found alone in character naturally strong, but wrought into finer texture by the discipline of life, under the pressure of conflict, sorrow, and disease. The perfect efflorescence of this undying life was only seen in the sanctity of home. The reverent devotion which crowned his wife as most blessed among women; the tenderness and tact, the firmness and wisdom with which he controlled his growing boys, making them at once his loyal and admiring companions and most obedient children, his love and approbation being their goal and their reward, were traits as remarkable as they are unusual.

It is eternal truth that the best expression of a man is found in his religion. Captain Foster united with the M. E. Church, South, in 1875. His inner religious life was progressive. His profession of spiritual attainments was always in deep humility. His faith was potential, active, rather than mystic. His services to the church were conspicuous expressions of devotion, and permanent additions to its usefulness. His life was a confirmation of the truth of the gospel.

No time was given for partings and dying testimony, but the witness of a life so closely patterned after the Master's, so shining clear, so faithful in every detail, so strong and serene, the soul dwelling on the heights of God, while the willing members served him amid the toils and turmoils below, is radiant with the glory of heaven, is sealed with the divine signet; for his name was on his forehead. "Mark the perfect man and behold the upright; for the end of that man is peace."

CORINTH DISTRICT.

Our district is getting along fairly well, but is nothing like what it ought to be. While at Greenville annual meeting, we felt ashamed that so little had been accomplished, compared with other districts. On account of the many changes in district secretaries, this district has suffered very much. I have only been in this district about three-quarters of the Conference year, so my time to work has been somewhat limited. Have had the pleasure of visiting several of the auxiliaries, and found them doing good work.

My first trip was to Guntown to revive the auxiliary and organize the juveniles. We had, I trust, a profitable meeting. Sister Houston, who has been working in the lead at this place, has been confined at home since last Fall nursing a sick son. Since the visit to her society, the son, and also her husband, have passed away. May God's grace be sufficient in all this affliction! We were entertained in this Christian home during our stay in the delightful town. Bro. and Sister Foust added to our enjoyment in every way possible, and we were glad to leave the new juveniles in such good hands as Sister Foust's.

Our next visits were to Corinth and Iuka. On going through Corinth to Iuka, Sister Sullivan did everything in her power to add to our comfort and enjoyment. As Doctor was at General Conference, she had to fill his place and hers, too; also had to act for the society in meeting the trains (only came four times in my behalf). Sisters, no preacher's wife or missionary worker will ever be neglected when they go to her town. We tried to have two meetings with the society, but very few present. Hope, though, some good was accomplished.

Our visit to Inka was pleasant indeed. One of the good sisters turned her horse and buggy over to Bro. Shumaker for the day. He and his good wife did everything possible for my comfort and enjoyment. We held a very interesting and profitable meeting with the ladies at the church. After adjournment, the entire auxiliary were chaperoned by Sister Doan to the Iuka College, to enjoy ice cream, etc. The table was beautifully decorated with flowers. We retired to the springs to enjoy the pure mineral water and cool breeze by which it is surrounded. Sister Dean certainly knows how to entertain, and is a remarkable woman; is president of the auxiliary at that place, which is indeed in good working order.

I am very proud of "Rankin Helpers," of Inka. They have 30 members and 31 subscribers to The Little Worker. Can any juvenile beat that, when it comes to subscribers? An efficient lady manager, and extra good president and officers, prove a great blessing to any society.

As the Little Worker is reduced to ten cents a year, we hope our lady managers will try to get it in every Methodist home in Corinth district.

Our district meeting will embrace fourth Sunday in September. We hope to have a good representation, as we had none at the annual meeting.

With the new district secretary, Mrs. M. J. Hoskins, we hope the district will do great things before another annual meeting.

The Christian Life.

PRETTY IDLENESS.

Every now and then a conscience among the men and women who live easy, thoughtless lives is stirred, and some one looks up anxiously, holding up some one of the pretty idlenesses in which such people spend their days and nights, and says: "Is this wrong? Is it wicked to do this?" And when they get the answer, "No, certainly not wicked," then they go back and give their whole lives up to doing their innocent little piece of uselessness again. Ah! the question is not whether that is wicked, whether God will punish you for doing that. The question is whether that thing is keeping other better things away from you; whether behind its little brink the vast privilege and dignity of duty is hid from you; whether it stands between God and your soul. If it does, then it is an offense to you, and though it be your right hand or right eye, cut it off, pluck it out, and cast it from you. The advantage and joy will be not in its absence, for you will miss it very sorely, but in what its loss reveals, in the new life which lies beyond it, which you will see stretching out and tempting you as soon as it is gone.—Phillips Brooks.

EXTENDED INFLUENCE.

Here is a true story, very encouraging to all who believe in spreading good books: A Puritan minister named Sibbs wrote a booklet called "The Bruised Reed." A copy of this was given by a humble layman to a little boy at whose father's house he had been entertained over night. That boy was Richard Baxter, and the book was the means of his conversion. Baxter wrote his "Call to the Unconverted," and among the multitude led to Christ by it was Philip Doddridge. Doddridge wrote "The Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul," and "the time would fail to tell" its blessed influence. By it Wilberforce was converted, and of his life and labors volumes could be written. Wilberforce wrote his "Practical View of Christianity," and this led not only Dr. Chalmers into the truth, but Leigh Richmond to Christ. Richmond wrote "The Dairyman's Daughter," which has been published in a hundred languages, and many million copies have been sold.—The Primitive Methodist Journal.

A young man who had been seeking the Lord's direction in regard to a particular movement in his life, remarked the other day in his quandary, "The Lord does not make our way plain enough." Many feel as he did, but they forget that we read events through a darkened vision and a weak faith. Nor do we wait long enough for Providence to develop the divine purpose. If the seeker after light will keep eyes and ears open, and follow up the indications at hand from day to day, he will clearly ascertain what God would have him do. It becomes us to be careful about misjudging God's leadership and guidance. His purposes often ripen gradually. He may think it best to try us for awhile, or to have us go forward trustingly, and then reward our faith in some very conspicuous way.—The Presbyterian.

There is really only one way to live a genuine, healthy, useful Christian life. And that is never to draw any promissory notes for our blessed Lord and Savior, but to perform the duty of the hour in the hour, and to take the next step that is right before us. The eccentric John Randolph once cried out in his shrill tones, "Mr. Speaker, I have discovered the philosopher's stone—it is, pay as you go!" This is as sound a maxim in religion as in finance. A vow of consecration is a rightful, solemn, legitimate act; but, like the vow of wedlock, is to be of perpetual obligation. To perform a vow means to do at once our dear Master's bidding. The secret of faithful keeping of our vows to him is to keep our hearts in the love of Jesus.—Rev. T. L. Cuyler.

The record of our Lord's life is full of strange, serene leisure. His Father's business was done for thirty quiet years at Nazareth. The Son of God served so long an apprenticeship of patience before his ministry began. And afterwards, when he became the vortex of eddying multitudes, he never showed a trace of hurry or excitement. Through all those crowded days of healing and controversy he never knew what it was to be feverish or flurried or distraught. He moved like a king in his own realm, master of the pageant that stays for his pleasure.—British Weekly.

The secret of the Christian's victory lies in this: To meet our enemy as an already conquered foe, and not as one who has yet to be conquered.—H. W. Smith.

A MISSIONARY'S WIFE

Interesting Letter from India—A Long Summer Season.

The following letter is from the wife of an American Baptist missionary at Nowgong, Assam, India: "After living here for several years I found the climate was weakening me. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla every summer. This I found so beneficial that I now take one dose every morning for nine months in the year, that is, through the hot weather. My general health is excellent and my blood is in good condition. My weight does not vary more than one pound throughout the year. I find Hood's Sarsaparilla indispensable in the summer and recommend it for use in a debilitating climate." MRS. P. H. MOORE.

The above letter is similar to thousands received and constantly coming in.

RESOLUTIONS OF THE NATCHEZ DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

(Published by request.)

Whereas, Certain persons and a few District Conferences and General Conference delegations have thought it proper to pass resolutions of censure upon the Book Committee, as well as upon the Book Agents of the M. E. Church, South, for the part they took in securing the payment of the debt owed by the United States to the said Methodist Church for the use of their Publishing House during our Civil War; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Natchez District Conference assembled at Centerville, Miss, that we see no just ground for the censure either of the Book Committee or of our Book Agents other than the disapproval of certain forms of expression employed by the latter, which were contained in the report of the former when they made investigation of this whole matter.

Resolved, That we regard the holding of what is confessedly one's own a widely different thing from withholding what may be another man's.

Resolved, That we see no reason why our church should lose her dignity, not to say her self-respect, in hasty and costly endeavors to return instanter to the United States Government money which justly belongs to the church, and which the government had withheld from us for thirty years without interest. If the money was not justly and legally ours, Congress should not have paid it to us. If it is justly and legally ours, we are not under obligation to return it to Congress.

Resolved, That we see nothing in our present surroundings demanding an extra session of the General Conference.

Resolved, That we call the special attention of all who are disposed to censure the church or her agents in this matter to the following wise words of Dr. D. H. Moore, editor of the Western Christian Advocate, published in Cincinnati:

If Col. Stahlman has been paid too much, that is the business of the church, and not of the Senate. If Barbee & Smith did not see fit to publish to the world the Book Committee's confidential contract, all business sense and precedents justify them. What they intended to do with the money when they got it was no concern of the Senate, which had no right to press any such question, its sole prerogative being to decide whether the money was theirs. Instead of censuring the Agents, we are rather disposed to commend their wisdom and prudence, even while regretting that their first telegram was not fully guarded against erroneous inferences.

It is a burning shame that Congress, by its indifference toward legitimate claims, makes the employment of lobbyists and attorneys a necessity, and thus opens the way to the well-nigh criminal abuse especially of worthy claimants unable to secure lobby or law. The senators who affect the greatest horror that the church would pay such fees knew that such a percentage is not uncommon, and their own consciences should teach them why such fees are possible. A reform in practice, whereby all claims should receive prompt and impartial consideration, would remove the possibility of such wrongs and outrages.

The Southern Bishops, sensitive as they are magnanimous, propose that the money shall be tendered back to the government. But we are sure the government would decline the tender. Having paid the claim because it was just, it will not take it back because its owner seems prodigal in its use. If there is a stain on anybody, it is on Barbee & Smith; the Senate committee scrupulously excepts the church, and we have seen that no valid charge of deception can be laid against the Agents.

We trust our brethern will go right on as they have planned, and use the money to enlarge and strengthen their publishing interests for still greater contributions to learning and vital piety—the twin conservators of our political and social institutions.

AN URGENT CASE.

The readers of the ADVOCATE most likely know that Bro. A. D. Miller has the task of raising sufficient funds, at least, to pay our Choctaw preacher for his time and labor in the Lord's vineyard. It is desired and necessary to pay him $75 or $100 for his year's work, but up to this writing Bro. Miller has only received about $12 on this year's salary (?) or allowance. Most of the money paid in by those who remitted in the early part of the year was used to settle with him for last year's work—all of which, except $250, was paid on a debt for a horse to ride his circuit, and his doctor's bill. This I know to be so, for I paid out the money to these parties myself. He is in great need of decent clothes to wear and a saddle on which to ride (the one he has is split wide open), and his family are being compelled to go very scant of the commonest kind of clothes and, I guess, food. But in all this he is uncomplaining, and goes ahead with his appointments as if all were well!

Now, brethren, if you propose to pay him this allowance, let us do it when he needs it, when he can not reap the benefit of his little cotton crop. Some man who has a good substantial saddle which he can afford to lend to his Lord, let him send it by freight or express prepaid to Newton, Miss., to my address, and it will be delivered to him. And let those who have no saddle, send Bro. A. D. Miller some money at once for this, our brother in red. In remitting be sure to state that it is for the Choctaw preacher—Jim Johnson. Should you be so generous as to desire to help the white missionary to the Choctaws, you may send it to me at Philadelphia, Miss., by registered mail or money order. But in case you send it to Bro. Miller for me, state plainly it is for the white missionary. We are getting along very well. Pray for us.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. H. Bass, Belzona, Miss., Aug. 15: "We have just closed a fine revival at Sky Lake, on my work. I have no ministerial assistance (except the presence of several Mormon elders), but we got along splendidly. We had services twice per day for twelve days, except one night rained out. The church was wonderfully revived, and we had 20 or more conversions in and out of the church and 9 additions by ritual. God is blessing us all the way."

PHILIP WERLEIN, Ltd.

"Arlieneice," Walker, La., Aug. 6, 1898: "We had a glorious meeting with the people of Palmetto Church, conducted by Presiding Elder R. W. Tucker, of Jackson, La.; Rev. L. McMennis, of Grangeville, La., and Rev. N. Brown, of Baton Rouge, La. Meeting begun Friday night, July 29. On Saturday we had a splendid sermon by Bro. Tucker, which had good effect. Then dinner was spread under the grove. After dinner a Church Conference was held. Then there was a sermon by Rev. N. Brown, which had good effect. The Sunday morning service, conducted by Rev. Tucker, caused many sinners and Christians to turn their thoughts to a better life. In the evening after service many were baptized, among whom were a number of children. Then Rev. Tucker, whose deeds of kindness will ever be a green spot in our memory, left for his home, and left Bro. McMennis in charge of the meeting, which was successfully carried out."

WHITE CHAPEL CIRCUIT.

I conducted a meeting recently with the assistance of a united community at Turkey Creek, which resulted in thirteen accessions to the church. Then at Bayou Claire, where I pretracted a few days through rain with Rev. H. L. Hughes, where a profound impression was made. One month later, under Rev. W. T. Woodward, this writer, and Rev. J. P. Blaney, who preached once, a gracious meeting was held, resulting in fourteen accessions to the church. The class received there was a most desirable one, and I confidently expect much to come of them. Then we removed to Chicot, where large congregations heard the Word, and some eight or ten professed conversion. Many were benefited and two applied for membership. Bro. Woodward did the preaching, and did it well. He bore away the love and well wishes of all who heard him both at Bayou Claire as well as at Chicot. We had the meeting there under a large arbor. At White Chapel recently we also had a good revival. Rev. W. J. Roberts came down from Alexandria and preached a week. We had a good revival in the membership and four accessions.

Altogether, we have had nearly forty accessions this year to date, with several meetings to hold yet. Rev. George Jackson has been in feeble health of late and has resigned part of the work.

To all these brethren who have helped me I extend thanks, and praise God for his mercies and blessings. The work is large and laborious, but pleasant.

H. S. JOHNS.

THE MISSION OF WORK.

Work is the grand mission of all human beings. Play is an incident, which can be indulged largely only to the detriment of both the individual and the public. Civilization, as it advances, so far from dispensing with work, adds to the tale of duties. No man is so much at leisure as the savage who has few wants and no high ambitions. As the savage rises in the scale, becoming conscious of new wants and wider responsibilities to others, he finds additional exertion indispensable. He must not only work, he must work consecutively; there must be foresight and introductory preparation. He must co-operate with others, and become organized as a regular soldier in the army of labor. This means that he is taken out of the condition of the savage and placed in that of the civilized man; and it means, also, that the transformation is wrought by means of labor. Labor is the great schoolmaster of man, whose discipline is both severe and salutary. To this drill of life we owe both manly virtue and the success attained by its exercise along any of the lines of human industry. To do, and to do with purpose, is the glory of man; to be idle is to decline toward the condition of the savage.—Zion's Herald.

CONSISTENT.

One of the best ways to get some persons to do a thing is to urge them not to do it. The old deacon in the following story was a man of that stamp:

He was always on the off-side of every question that came before the church. When the temperance reform was in full feather, and the question was discussed in the church of which he was an officer, he, as a matter of course, opposed it. He would not sign the pledge; he would not consent to its presentation in the Sunday-school; he objected vehemently to the distribution of tracts.

One day, in the presence of a full house, one of the members of the church made the case of the deacon a subject of prayer. "O Lord, if thy servant, our brother, continues his opposition to us, wilt thou, in thy tender mercies, remove him from the church militant below to the church triumphant above!"

"I won't go!" thundered the indignant and obstinate deacon.—Bible Reader.

Character-building is a constant ongoing process. It goes on whether under wise direction or sad neglect. The child's salvation begins with the first shapings of its character. The world will be wiser and better when mothers learn that they are better fitted to mold the characters of their children than nurses and ignorant servants. The State will have a better instruction when it gives proper recognition to character-education.—Recorder.

There are three periods in all life—the time of the bud, of the flower and of the perfect fruit. It is thus that girlhood emerges into womanhood and womanhood into motherhood. Almost all of the ills from which women suffer have their inception in weakness and disease of the feminine organism, which bears the burdens of wifehood and motherhood. These disorders usually begin with puberty, childbirth or with the "turn of life." Thousands of women suffer silently for years in this way, rather than undergo the examinations and local treatment insisted upon by the majority of physicians. This is unnecessary.

An eminent and skillful specialist, Dr. R. V. Pierce, for thirty years chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., long since discovered a wonderful medicine that will cure all troubles of this nature in the privacy of the home. This medicine is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs that make wifehood and motherhood possible. It makes them strong, healthy and vigorous. It allays inflammation, heals ulceration, soothes pain and tones up the nerves. It banishes the indispositions of the period of impending maternity, and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It transforms weak, sickly, nervous invalids into happy, healthy wives and mothers. All good medicine dealers sell it, and no honest dealer will urge a substitute upon you.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure constipation.

As will be seen in Dr. Cooper's notice in this issue, Rev. T. B. Clifford has accepted a financial agency for Centenary College and also for Mansfield Female College. If Louisiana Methodism does not do something financially for its colleges, it will not be Clifford's fault. It was his hustling propensities that gave him his well-known sobriquet, "Cyclone Clifford."

What is repentance? A soldier's definition was "right about face." It is true sorrow for sin, which leads to forsaking it. God commands repentance (Acts xvii, 30); Christ gives it (Acts v, 31); the Holy Spirit works it in the soul (John xvi, 8); its evidence appears in life (Luke iii, 8-14). Has God's Spirit wrought this in your heart?—Exchange.

BISMARCK.

On Saturday, July 30, Prince Bismarck, familiarly known as the "Iron Chancellor."—Germany's greatest statesman—passed away at his home in Friedrichsruhe, where he spent the years of his retirement. For a considerable portion of his life he was the most prominent and influential statesman and diplomatist in Continental Europe.

It is a remarkable coincidence that he and Gladstone, both of whom figured so conspicuously in European affairs, particularly in shaping the course of national events in their respective countries, should have been called to their final reward within so short a time of each other. Both were intellectual giants, sturdy of frame, mighty in endurance, and possessed of tremendous will-power. Each has left a lasting impress upon the country to which he belonged, and each will be honored for ages to come. In many respects, however, they were unlike, the German Chancellor suffering greatly by comparison with England's great Premier. Gladstone was a hero of revolutions, but these were peaceful and beneficent. He liberated and reformed, but without the use of the sword. Bismarck was a revolutionist and a nation-builder, but the unification of Germany, and its elevation to the rank of one of the great world powers, was accomplished through resort to despotism and bloodshed. Such power did he wield at one time that he precipitated wars, humiliated national enemies, made and unmade alliances, dictated treaties, and directed governmental affairs almost at will. To trace his career fully would be to rehearse the whole history of modern Germany.

Bismarck was born at Schoenhausen, April 1, 1815. He came of an old family which, for several generations back, had produced many distinguished statesmen and soldiers. He was favored with a university education, having studied first in Gottingen and then in Berlin, where he was admitted to the bar. While at school, and for several years afterward, he showed no signs of greatness. Though he read history enthusiastically, he was an indifferent student, spending no small part of his time in carousing. He succeeded in obtaining a doctor's degree, but "without high praise." So excessive a drinker, so reckless a horseman, and so ready a fighter was he during his student days, that he became known as the "mad Bismarck." He is said to have fought in all twenty-eight duels, being wounded but once. After his graduation, following the German custom, he spent several years in the army, and then settled down for a while on his estates.

His marriage in 1847 to Johanna Puttkamer, a young woman of fervent piety and lovely character, proved to be the turning-point of his life. Under the influence of an inspiring home-life his habits and purposes underwent a transformation, and it was not long before he began to climb the ladder of fame. Gratefully referring to his wife in later years, he said: "She it is who made me what I am." In a letter to his wife in 1851, in which he spoke of his early dissolute life, he wrote: "If I had to live now as I did then—without God, without yourself, without the children—I really do not know why I should not throw off this life like a dirty shirt."

His public career began at the age of thirty-two, when he entered the Prussian Parliament, in which he soon attracted attention by his uncompromising advocacy of the divine right of kings and of the absolute authority of the throne. This attitude, whether assumed from principle or policy, brought him at once into favor with the king, to whom he proved thoroughly faithful. Twelve years of his life following 1851 were spent in diplomatic service, first at Frankfort, next at St. Petersburg, where he won the friendship of the Czar, and thus paved the way for Russian neutrality during certain Prussian wars, and lastly at Paris. As a diplomat, he was cunning and unscrupulous, and rarely failed to carry his point. To such a deplorable condition had diplomacy sunk in his time that he acknowledged that in order to deceive, he often told the plain truth, knowing that he would not be believed.

In 1862, in response to the request of William the First, who recognized in him the man for the emergency, he became Prime Minister of Prussia. "It was," as one writer says, "a critical hour for the king and the nation." The king was anxious to obtain funds with which to gather and equip a large army preparatory to a struggle which he believed imminent. Parliament saw no danger, and refused to vote the money. Just as the king, in discouragement, was about to abdicate, Bismarck, now at the head of the cabinet, though without money and popularity, gave assurances that the money would be forthcoming at all hazards. He then gave Parliament to understand that if he and the king found it necessary to go to war, they would do so "with the approval of Parliament or without." Cromwell-like, he soon caused Parliament to be dissolved, and then for four years managed affairs with an iron hand, and, in consequence thereof, became the best-hated man in all Prussia. He did a splendid work, however, in reorganizing the army, and in preparing for future national conflicts and successes. Finding Austria in the way of German unification, he next precipitated a conflict with that country which resulted in her overwhelming defeat at Sadowa, and in her elimination from Prussian politics. The way was now open for federation, and twenty-two previously jealous, discordant and constantly warring States were firmly united together—a work of which any statesman might well be proud. France found to her sorrow in 1870 that it was not safe to interfere with Bismarck's plans for German unity and glory.

The industrial and commercial development of the German Empire was Bismarck's next great work. Through his efforts a high protective tariff was established, and largely owing to his skill, Germany has witnessed amazing progress during the twenty years preceding 1890.

In 1873 he came into conflict with the Roman Catholics, who had become over-arrogant in their claims and defiant in their attitude. He brought about the passage of legal measures restricting the freedom of the Catholic Church, causing the expulsion of the Jesuits, and the imprisonment of several Bishops. Later on the policy of the Roman Catholics in Germany having been greatly modified under the direction of the present Pope, Bismarck had the anti-Catholic laws repealed.

Though for a long time execrated by Catholics and by the Socialists, against whom also he waged unrelenting war—more than one attempt having been made upon his life—the great chancellor became remarkably popular during his later years, the splendid service he had rendered his country being recognized and appreciated. He it was who inaugurated Germany's colonial policy, the wisdom of which is yet to be determined.

It seems strange that so ardent a defender of despotic government should have lived in the nineteenth century. Though he resorted to measures and pursued a policy with which we of free, Christian America have little or no sympathy, he was, no doubt, a man for the times and for his country's need. The conviction possessed him that God had raised him up for a great work, which fact in part explains his determined perseverance.

When the present Emperor came to the throne, Bismarck, realizing that he could no longer be virtual ruler, wisely went into retirement. Towards the last his relations with King William were more harmonious than just after his resignation.

As a Christian, his life was full of inconsistencies. Unfortunately, there was a wide divergence between his faith and practice. Though it is almost impossible for us to reconcile some of his acts with his profession, it is certain that he believed himself to be a true Christian. About twenty-five years ago he thus wrote to a friend: "If I were not Christian, I would not continue to serve the king another hour. Why should I incessantly worry myself and labor, exposing myself to embarrassments, annoyances and evil treatment, if I did not feel bound to do my duty on behalf of God? Did I not believe in a divine ordinance which has destined this German nation to become good and great, I had never taken to the diplomatic trade, or, having done so, I would long since have given it up. I know not whence I derive my sense of duty if not from God. Orders and titles have no charm for me. I firmly believe in a life after death. Deprive me of His faith, and you rob me of my fatherland. Were I not a stanch Christian, did I not stand upon the miraculous basis of religion, you would never have possessed a federal chancellor in my person."

SPIRITUAL ATHLETICS.

Within recent years there has been a great revival of interest throughout the country, especially in the colleges, in athletic sports and in physical development. In consequence thereof, the coming generation will be more sturdy in build and in endurance than their fathers and mothers were. Though undue attention is being paid in some quarters to physical training, it is well that intelligent effort should be made to strengthen and develop the physical man.

But while many are using the bicycle and other means in order to make themselves sound and robust, and the advantages of various forms of athletics are considered, there is far too little inquiry as to how the spiritual nature may be developed and made strong. Unfortunately, not a few of those who are endeavoring in every way to improve themselves physically manifest little or no interest in soul-culture. Many a young man is anxious to become a Sandow or a Corbett, a champion foot ball player or an oarsman, imagining success in such a line to be the grandest thing one could strive for, but thinks scarcely at all about his need of Christ. Thus to train and exercise the body to the neglect of the soul is to commit the folly of Esau. Shall we be so unwise as to bestow more attention upon the strengthening and preservation of the temporary tabernacle of clay in which we live than upon the immortal spirit within which bears the impress of the divine image, and which, purified by the blood of the cross, is fit to be companion with angels and archangels—yea, with God himself? Are we not all heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ?

While bodily exercise, then, is advantageous, let us not forget that spiritual culture is transcendently important. It is not enough that the seeds of righteousness and truth have been planted within us. We must till the soil of the heart until the harvest-time appears. It is not enough to believe on Christ and be converted. We must "exercise ourselves unto godliness," as the Apostle Paul tells us, else our love will grow cold, our spiritual energy will become feeble, and our faith will die. A spiritual decline is sure to overtake the believer who does nothing for his Lord, though he may boast that he does no harm.

As the athlete becomes strong and skillful by the patient and persistent use of his muscles, so the Christian can become mighty in spiritual things only by the constant exercise of his spiritual faculties. What a pity it is that so few people are ambitious to become spiritual athletes! How lamentable that so small a per cent. of church members are willing to labor in the Lord's vineyard with the same zest and perseverance that college students, in general, manifest in the training of the body!

We believe it was Phillips Brooks who said once to a discouraged believer, "Do something with your religion, and it will not die." There is no little force in the remark. The life of many a Christian is barren and joyless simply because so little is attempted for God. There is so little self-denial, so little prayer, so little liberality, so little attendance upon church service, so little help rendered to the needy, so little sympathy for the distressed, that God can not, without violating his Word, impart fullness of grace.

If we will insulate ourselves from sin as far as in us lies, and, by a full surrender to the divine will, prepare ourselves to be filled as vessels with electrical energy from above, we shall find the grace of God sufficient for our needs; but we must remember that our whole life is meant for a discipline, and that completeness in Christ is not reached at a single bound any more than an acorn becomes an oak in a moment of time. The Christian, though weak in faith at first, by diligent use of the means of grace and the faithful exercise of his spiritual powers, after a while may reach heights in grace that transport the soul where Satan's darts have no power.

Indolence, whether physical, intellectual, or spiritual, is always a great hinderer of growth and a destroyer of vigor. Strength of soul, robustness of spiritual life, is not wholly the work of divine grace, but is the product of faithful, persistent obedience to God under the aid and guidance of his blessed Spirit. Wouldest thou grow in grace and in favor with God? Exercise thyself in prayer, in the study of the Word, in self-sacrifice, in visiting the sick, in ministering to the needy, in going to the house of worship and listening to the preached gospel, in speaking words of kindness, and in keeping a conscience void of offense toward God and man. "If a man love me," says the Master, "he will keep my words, and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him and make our abode with him." "Then shall we know, if we follow on to know the Lord."

"Not enjoyment and not sorrow
Is our destined end or way,
But to act, that each to-morrow
Find us farther than to-day."

THE MISSISSIPPI METHODIST HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

The charter of this proposed organization has been granted under our law by the Governor, and officially declared by the Secretary of State. Its objects are to collect and preserve writings, prints, books, papers, and other things pertaining to the history of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Mississippi and elsewhere. We hope soon to have a valuable and interesting Methodist museum, and a collection of manuscripts and documents for the use of future historians.

It was a happy suggestion, which has been happily carried out, to convert "Wesley's House," in which he died, adjoining City Road Chapel, into a museum. The building has been endowed, and into its quaint old rooms will be gathered souvenirs, articles, manuscripts, etc., associated with the marvelous history of Methodism. A similar, but more modest purpose we have in view. Those associated with the old age of our early Methodist fathers in Mississippi are passing away. From them we should gather and record valuable incidents before they are forever lost.

A recent visit to Natchez and old Washington, the site of Mississippi's first Methodist Church and the "Mother of Female Colleges"—the Elizabeth Female Academy—has stimulated my own historic conscience. I brought home a brick from the ruins of that first church, built on land deeded by the eccentric "Lorenzo Dow and Peggy, his wife," and which is connected with the most heroic names of early Methodism. Thanks to the hospitable and large-hearted Mr. Bryant, present owner of the old Elizabeth Female Academy, I secured a brick from the old building and was presented with the bell used by Mrs. Caroline M. Thayer, the accomplished governess, as far back as 1826. There is to me a melody in its clear tones that wakes the glorious memories of a mighty past.

To my special friend, Mrs. Judge Foote, of Macon, Miss., I am indebted for a small volume of poems written by Mrs. Caroline M. Thayer during her connection with the Academy, and also for a long poem on Ireland, written by the great orator, Rev. John Newland Maffitt. Rev. T. L. Mellen has sent the Certificate of Distinction given his mother, Sarah C. Lewis, by the authorities of Elizabeth Female Academy, June 3, 1827, signed by Jno. C. Burrus, president of the Academy, and Wm. Winans, president of the Board of Trustees.

Recently Rev. John A. B. Jones has sent me the saddle used by the inimitable Tommie Owens, one of the bravest, truest, but most humorous of Mississippi's early apostolic heroes. And to Mrs. Baldwin, of Canton, Miss., one of the best of friends on my first circuit, I am greatly indebted for the privilege of reading the manuscript autobiography of her rarely gifted and distinguished father, the Rev. Thomas Griffin. From those hitherto unpublished pages I have gathered valuable material for literary use.

I bespeak the cordial co-operation of all our preachers and people in promoting the objects of the Mississippi Methodist Historical Society.

Mr. Tudor Carre left a few days since for a three months' business trip to the old world. He will visit England, Ireland, Scotland, France and several other countries.

A NEW BOOK.

"THE MAKERS OF THE AMERICAN REPUBLIC." By Rev. David Gregg, D. D., LL.D., Pastor of Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, N. Y. 12 mo. 405 pages. Cloth, $1.50. E. B. Treat & Co., publishers, 241 and 243 West 23rd St., New York.

This book is a series of popular lectures, full of historical data and pioneer incidents of Colonial times; vividly portraying pen-pictures of the Virginia Colonists, the Pilgrims, the Hollanders, the Puritans, the Quakers, the Scotch and the Huguenots, with chapters on the influence of the discoveries of Christopher Columbus, and the work of George Washington as a factor in American history, and the effect of the growth of the Christian Church in the formation and development of the nation.

It embodies the results of a large historical research, and sets forth in a vivid and attractive light the races, the personalities, the principles, and the occasions, entitled to credit in the construction of the American Republic. It is highly suggestive of American history yet to be written. The book pleads for the broadest and purest type of Americanism and is outspoken and fearless in advocating the highest interests of our nation.

These historic lectures have been delivered with great acceptance to audiences of thousands, and on this account carry with them a telling endorsement of their life and power. This fact should weigh with those who wish to purchase and possess effective patriotic literature. It is the teachings of such patriotic recitals that assure us of a future for our republic. Their legitimate product will be intelligent Americans, on fire with a holy enthusiasm to make ultimate America the realization of the brightest visions of the great men of the different races who lived and died for the republic.

NOTES.

We invite attention to the article, on our first page, about the Y. M. C. A. in Millsaps College.

Many thanks to the brethren who are working assiduously to extend the circulation of the ADVOCATE.

Rev. A. S. Lutz, of the Louisiana Conference, shed the light of his countenance into our sanctum recently.

***

By invitation of the pastor, Rev. N. B. Harmon, Dr. H. W. Knickerbocker is dispensing the Word this week in a revival meeting at Ellisville, Miss.

The Woman's Home Mission Society realized $54.85 from the New Camelia excursion last week. As a social gathering of New Orleans Methodists from the different churches, it was a most enjoyable affair. In our own behalf and in behalf of the entire party, we tender thanks to the good sisters who originated it.

We are indebted to our friend, Hon. Frank A. Daniels, postmaster of this city, for some novelties in the way of pictorial postal cards. One of them has a beautiful and thoroughly life-like view of Jackson Square, with the cathedral and adjacent buildings. The other has two views—one a river scene, the other a levee scene during the cotton season.

Sister Deavenport, wife of Rev. J. M. Deavenport, of the North Mississippi Conference, died on the eighteenth at their parsonage home at Fern Springs, after an illness of about three weeks with typhoid fever. She leaves four sons, all of that tender age which needs a mother's care. We sympathize deeply with our brother in his sore bereavement, and pray that he may find strength and comfort in that abounding grace of God which is promised to all who put their trust in him.

No words of ours are needed to induce our readers to peruse Bishop Galloway's article on the editorial page. The movement for the organization of a Methodist historical society comes none too soon. In the preparation of our modest booklet, "A Centennial Retrospect," written during our pastorate at Natchez, we delved among the antiquities of Methodism in the Southwest sufficiently to ascertain that there is a rich mine in that quarter awaiting development. No more heroic souls have trod the soil of this mundane sphere than were the pioneers of Methodism in this part of our beloved Southland. A record of their lofty achievements will be a noble heritage to transmit to our posterity.

JUNIUS ORGANS. 1001-1003 Canal St. PIANOS. HART.

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY."

Rev. J. W. Malone, A. M., president of Grenada Female College, is pressing the Snmmer campaign in the interest of his school. This is the only school the North Mississippi Conference has under its control, or under its wing. We ought to stand by it in full force. Bro. Malone is doing a great work for Christ, for our daughters and for Methodism. One female college is enough for a Conference the size of this. Two would be too many, and three more than enough. All our efforts, money, patronage and prayer ought to be concentrated on this institution. The property is now, practically, free from debt, only two or three hundred dollars yet to be paid. The grounds are ample and the buildings substantial and valuable. There is present and pressing need for another building. The boarding department needs to be enlarged. The number of boarding pupils could easily be doubled if there were room for them. This addition would make the plant far more valuable than it now is. An outlay of ten thousand dollars would increase the income of the school seventy-five or one hundred per cent. It is a pity to see a valuable and efficient man and a fine school crippled for the lack of room. Surely the tens of thousands of Methodists in North Mississippi could equip one school for full and efficient work. The trustees are intelligent, liberal, broad-minded men. They have the interests of the church and of this school at heart; and they are willing and ready to devise large and liberal things. They need the backing and hearty support of the members of the church in our bounds. They ought to have it at once.

I firmly believe the time has come, or is coming soon, when all our church colleges for girls will have to be liberally and strongly endowed. This is indispensable to the fullest and strongest independent work. It guarantees life and permanency to a well-equipped, but dependent working corps. The conditions for female education by the church have all been changed in the last twenty-five years. We come into competition with State institutions supported by public funds. The treasury of the State will have to be offset by the endowment of our colleges, both male and female. Our State college for girls has of late been jammed, for a time, into a close financial corner, and likely would have closed for a term of two years but for the skill of a Methodist Bishop and the cash of a Methodist layman. This act of loyalty to the State was praiseworthy in both prelate and layman. Who would have come to the rescue so promptly and loyally had the Grenada College been in a similar condition? We will have to make our church schools independent of the chances and accidents of changeable times. We ought to be as wise, liberal and provident in our church work as the State is in her civil work. The State will not attempt and can not do the work of the church. The character of work done by the church will not be done by any person or organization but the church. The State provides for the education of its citizens, and the church must provide for the Christian education of her members. Less than this will be lack of loyalty to God, and lack of love for souls committed to our care.

It is well understood that for ages past the church has been the pioneer in educational enterprises and work. The church and individuals have occupied this field alone. The State now claims part of this field and work. It deserves all praise and hearty support in this great and noble enterprise; but the energy, strength and good work of the State call for renewed zeal, enterprise and outlay of both work and money on the part of the church. No sane man would have the State do less, but all good men would have the church do more. There is plenty of work for both church and State. The State levies and collects a tax for the support of her schools, but the church is dependent on the voluntary contributions of her people. For this reason, if for no other, our church colleges ought to be liberally endowed. An endowment properly invested secures a permanent fund for the maintenance of a church school. Bro. Malone needs a nest egg in the way of endowment at Grenada, and other eggs ought to be deposited till the nest is full. Then there will be security, permanency and independence in all his school work. Somehow people prefer to patronize a well-endowed school to one that has no endowment at all. They expect better work to be done by an endowed school than by one that has to pander somewhat for public favor and patronage. In fact, I believe people, generally, have a liking for institutions and enterprises that have a good backing of cold cash. "It is money that makes the mare go" in stores, farms, factories, banks, schools, colleges and universities. Nothing, no kind of business, can go without money. A stock farm for improved breeds of cattle is a costly investment; and an improved breed of men and women will cost money, too. Men and women are worth more than cows and horses. They have souls; horses and cows have not. GILDEROY.

AGENT FOR CENTENARY AND MANSFIELD.

We are glad to state that Mansfield and Centenary have engaged Rev. T. B. Clifford, of the North Mississippi Conference, as financial agent. We speak for him a cordial welcome. We expect to place these noble institutions on a basis of great prosperity. Bro. Clifford is the right man in the right place.

We expect a flattering opening, Sept. 7. The students, we trust, will make a special effort to be present on the day of opening, as we have prepared to have quite an interesting occasion. We expect a number of visiting brethren to aid us in this by addresses, etc. Students coming on the early morning and the evening trains will get off at Ethel, where they will meet a conveyance to bring them to Jackson at once. Students coming on noon trains will stop at McManus, and come direct to Jackson on the Jackson railroad. Special rates on these conveyances will be given the first few days. We trust all will get the benefit of these reduced rates. I. W. COOPER.

THE E. M. F. COLLEGE FACULTY.

President Beeson tells us that he has by far the finest faculty for next session he has ever had. His teacher of Languages is an A. B graduate of Wellesley College, which is one of the foremost female colleges in the world, and ranks with Harvard and Yale. His teacher of Higher English is first a graduate of a fine female college in South Carolina; then after teaching a number of years, she went to the University of South Carolina, graduated with high honors, along with the men in the A. B. course. Both of these are teachers of great experience and fine reputation, and left their present position only for this, a better one. The Kindergarden teacher is one of the finest in the country, being a graduate of the Louisville Kindergarden Training-school, and is an experienced and successful teacher.

The Elocution teacher is from the Boston School of Expression, and is the best equipped one that has ever been to Meridian. The Vocal teacher is said to be the finest in her State. She comes from Salem, N. C. Two of the old teachers are studying in the University of Chicago, doing post graduate work and getting the latest methods of teaching. This faculty can hardly be excelled in the South. —Meridian Daily.

We have, during the last ten years, supplied thousands of our Baths to physicians, hospitals, sanitariums, etc., and we are now, for the first time, advertising them direct to the general public.

IN BUYING A VAPOR BATH Get one with a steel frame that stands on the floor. If a manufacturer does not show you a cut of the frame without the covering, you may take it for granted that his "Steel Frame" is a wire hoop that rests on the shoulders of the bather.

Get one that is covered with proper material. Insist on seeing a sample of material before ordering. We make our own covering materials and print it with a handsome "all over" pattern of Niagara Falls.

Get one with a thermometer attachment. Don't go it blind—a bath that is too hot or not hot enough will be of no benefit to you.

Get one that you can return and have your money back if not satisfactory in every way.

Send for sample of material and interesting booklet that will tell you all about Vapor Baths.

Vapor Baths are an acknowledged household necessity. Turkish, Hot Air, Vapor, Sulphur or Medicated Baths at Home, 3c. Purifies system, produces clear skin, health, strength. Prevents disease, obesity. Cures Colds, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, La Grippe, Malaria, Eczema, Catarrh, Female Ills, Blood, Skin, Nerve and Kidney Troubles. Beautifies Complexion.

KEEP YOUR RECORD CLEAN.

The world's a field of battle,
An earnest, noble strife
Against a host of evils
That seek to ruin life.
From infancy to manhood,
The years that lie between
Are full of sore temptation;
O, keep your record clean!

Great dangers throng about you,
The foe is everywhere;
Be pure and brave in living,
Be strong to do and dare.
Touch not the thing unholy,
That will your life demean;
In station high or lowly,
O, keep your record clean!

From birth to the day of dying
Each page is white and fair;
O, keep from blot or blemish
The story written there!
In all our earthly trials
No grander thing is seen
Than stainless, upright manhood;
O, keep your record clean!

—St. Louis Advocate

MENTAL STIR-UPS.

Most of us women are stirred up mentally the better part of our lives. If we are born with sensitive souls, then we suffer keenly, and run rather than fight. If we are given a harder outside soul crust, we simply wrangle. In either case results are the same. We suffer, and suffer keenly.

The folly of it all is so apparent when we are fortunate enough to run across a solitary exception to this general rule in the woman who can meet trying situations and trying people with unconcern. She is our admiration. We long to be like her. We ponder over her calm imperturbation. We think she must be a saint or a fiend incarnate. Either mental state, we argue, would serve as a protection against the world's shafts.

I have carefully studied one woman who has reached a plane immeasurably higher than that occupied by any other sister of my acquaintance. Many opportunities have been given me for this interesting character dissection, and I have made the most of them. Some days I have been swayed by one opinion, some days by some other. In spite of my watchfulness I have failed to detect that lapse which I have felt sure would come.

Living in the world this woman must of necessity be of it. She is bound to come in for its full share of its stings, and we know how many we are given during the three hundred and sixty-five days of the year. Social whirlwinds, domestic maelstroms, fail to catch her in their treacherous embrace. Slights, snubs, cuts direct are in no way a part of her life.

The tranquillity of her existence fails to be ruffled by so much as one unpleasant eddy. She goes right along, day by day, doing her duty untouched apparently by unpleasant outside influences. A skin as smooth as a baby's, an eye as bright as a girl of sixteen, and a manner always hearty and wholesome, in fact, a physique physically and mentally charming, gives this woman a personality that is to be coveted.

I have discovered, after much thought and many misgivings, the secret of this graceful living. It is simply that my friend has trained herself to close her ears to the things of this world that steal away in such insidious fashion our peace of mind, our self-poise.

Stop to consider for a moment the methods of the average woman when called upon to face life even at its best. She is keenly alive to its everlasting smallnesses. Petty criticisms burn into her very soul. Mischief-making people are encouraged by her attentions. A word whispered by a neighbor against her and hers rankles and rankles until happiness flees before the miserable condition of her mind. The disparaging word casually dropped, the venomous dart hurled so stealthily, the thoughtless remark never meant to wound reaches ears eagerly alert for every passing comment. Mind mole hills are magnified into mountains. There is always that looking for an insult, until life is so embittered that it ceases to hold one hour of real contentment for the misguided one.

Women need to understand, as my friend has done, the folly of allowing anything save an accusing conscience to disturb for one moment the beauty of every-day life. When we have learned to shut our ears absolutely to the things that disturb, that irritate, that offend, then, and not until then, shall we know the joy of being at peace with oneself and the world.

Begin to-day. There is nothing easier, when once the training has begun, than to listen only to such things as you wish to hear. It is all a question of mind discipline after all. There are good women enough in this world of ours to bar out from our presence the bad ones, and by bad I mean that class given to gossiping about the heart affairs, the dress affairs, the business affairs, the domestic affairs of those with whom they are brought in contact.

You may call this indifference to outside criticism a hardening process. Not at all. The heart only ossifies under certain conditions. Ignore these and you will keep it in a softened condition.

Yes, close your ears to unhappy outside influences. Become deaf to the poisonous insinuations that destroy serenity. You need not think this will place you among the world's nonenities. You will simply become a lovely, lovable woman, one whom those whose friendship is worth cultivating will long to call you friend.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

THE GIRL WHO WILL BE "INTERESTING."

"A young woman told a friend of mine at a Summer resort," says Helen L. Manning, in "Health Culture," "that she was soon to be married. She had spent the whole season in novel reading, lounging upon a sofa or swinging in a hammock. Her only care was to make her personal appearance as attractive as possible by dress and the use of various toilet articles and appliances. She took to herself airs, because her new doctor gave the aristocratic name of 'consumption of the blood' to her disease, and said she needed 'building up.' The latter is undoubtedly true, but the 'building up,' to be of any value, must be from within, by such a thought-education as shall give her stability of character and a worthy aim in life. Referring further to her engagement, she said languidly that she would be very glad of a fine establishment of her own; so she must have a husband to provide it. The man she was to marry had money, and she liked him 'rather well,' but she never expected to be 'good for anything,' meaning that she did not expect to serve any useful office as home-maker.

INVALID WIVES.

"What a travesty upon marriage and upon life! No wonder marriage is often voted a failure when it is made such a hollow mockery as this young woman intends to make it! Think of a blase, spiritless, diseased, inharmonious creature taking upon herself the vows of wifehood! Think of her selfishness in coolly taking everything and giving nothing! Is there not room for the establishment of an educational guild to save young men from such imposition? A great deal has been written, and justly, about saving young ladies from marrying unworthy men, but such cases as this make me feel that there is some claim for the establishment of a counter society.

"No properly educated young man who dreams of half the consequences, would, for a moment, think of taking a weakly, semi-invalid for a wife. To do so would be to put fetters upon himself which would gall and chafe continually, and he would find himself handicapped in ways that might become almost unbearable. The bills for doctors, sanitariums and nurses would drain his purse. Instead of enjoying the companionship of a true helpmeet, he would be called upon to dance attendance upon a nervous invalid whose illness would be apt to make her self-centered and exacting. True, there are those who are saints of light in the midst of great invalidism and suffering, but they are so in spite of their afflictions, and not because of them."

Surely no argument is needed to prove that, with these three classes of girls, there needs to be a toning down and a bracing up before the summer vacation can become of physical, mental, or moral value.—Success.

POWER.

You want power? Well, the desire is legitimate, and its realization possible.

But what kind of power? Physical? Then stop fretting. Take exercise. Avoid excesses. Form regular habits. Eat nourishing food. Sleep long and soundly. That means a sound body.

Mental power? All right. Use your brain. Think. Think systematically. Think below the service. Grapple with the great thoughts which others have put into books. That will give fiber and grip to your mental life.

Or is it moral power you are after? Very good. It may be had. Think pure thoughts. Look at lofty ideals. Live right. Crucify self. Loathe all vileness. Develop the Good Samaritan side of your life. That will promote a high morality.

But there is something higher. It is spiritual power. Ah! that is it. The foot of the ladder is on the earth, but its top is in heaven. Climb! Do you say, "It is high, I can not attain unto it?" No, no! Read the first chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. Then to your knees! Look up. Turn your back upon the bad past. Surrender utterly to God. Lose your will in his. Plead the promises. Believe, believe, believe! Claim the pentecostal gift. Receive ye the Holy Ghost!—Epworth Herald.

LET US STOP TO THINK.

Let us stop to think of the good-bye kiss. Better miss a car than leave a heartache.

Let us stop to think of the children. We, too, were children once and loved to be remembered.

Let us stop to think of the aged. For us, too, the evening shadows will close at length and we shall, perchance, be left at desolate hearthstones. We shall need to be remembered then.

Let us stop to think of the stranger. We, too, have been alone, and have needed the touch of a kindly hand upon our lives, and many a life has gone out in the blackness of darkness for the lack of such a touch as any one of us might have given.

Let us stop to think of God and the future. At best the time is short and the end is near. And when it shall come, blessed will be he to whom the entrance upon another life will be but the realization of dear and familiar dreams, the consummation of a lifetime of longings. Let us stop to think. If there be any virtue, if there be any praise, let us stop to think upon these things.—The Lookout.

The happiness of life may be greatly increased by small courtesies in which there is no parade, no annoyance, and which manifest themselves by tender and affectionate looks, and little kind acts of attention, and giving others the preference in every little enjoyment, at table, in field, walking, sitting, or standing.—Sterne.

It is not what we read, but what we remember, that makes us learned. It is not what we intend, but what we do, that makes us useful. It is not a few faint wishes, but a life-long struggle, that makes us vigilant.—H. W. Beecher.

Meet the measure of your responsibility in all life's relations. As a father, be good and faithful; as a mother, devoted; as a husband, kind and true; as a wife, loving and steadfast; as a son, noble and worthy; as a daughter, responsive and helpful; as a member of society, generous and considerate; and as a member of the church, active and zealous. Let fidelity, in all directions, be your distinguishing trait.—Presbyterian.

Kind words do not cost much. They never blister the tongue or lips. We never have heard of any mental trouble arising from this quarter. Though they do not cost much, yet they accomplish much. They make other people good natured. They also produce their own image on men's souls, and a beautiful image it is. We have not yet begun to use kind words in such abundance as they ought to be used.—Southern Advocate.

A little boy who had been repentedly told that only boys who did not tell lies went to heaven, astounded his parents who had frequently taught him the lesson of George Washington's early love of truthfulness, by solemnly remarking one day: "I don't care to go to heaven. It must be an awful lonesome place. Nobody there but God and George Washington!"—California Prohibitionist.

ORANGES AS MEDICINE.

There is no doubt that pure fruit juice is one of the best blood purifiers and system regulators that we possess—in fact, there are many who can testify to this fact, particularly as regards oranges. Some people who have hitherto eaten fruit between meals, or just before going to bed, and condemned it as injurious, have learned to eat one or two oranges with nearly every meal, particularly breakfast, and have found, to their pleasant surprise, that it exercised a marvelous effect upon their general health. Many remarkable things have been claimed for oranges taken as a food, such as making the complexion clear and beautiful, curing the drink habit, and numerous other things as varied as marvelous, and there are doubtless persons who have made themselves ridiculous eating oranges by wholesale in the endeavor to cure the diseases to which the flesh is heir. Thousands of persons can testify, however, that a judicious use of oranges is a good thing, but a few precautions must be taken. In the first place, buy nothing but good fruit, especially ripe fruit. Green or bad fruit can not be good for anybody. Then peel your orange carefully, for the white pith lying beneath the yellow rind is one of the most indigestible substances known in the vegetable world. Do not eat too many oranges at first; but if the habit of eating them with meals is once formed, a person will never be satisfied to eat a meal without fresh fruit of some kind. The habit will work wonders in a short time in the direction of regulating the system, keeping the blood in good condition, and creating a good appetite.—Lutheran Observer.

OBITUARIES.

Obituaries of 200 words published free. For all words in excess of that number send one cent per word.

AUSTIN—Martha Elizabeth Austin was a native of Giles county, Tenn. She was the daughter of John and Martha Porter, devout members of the Methodist Church. In the thirties the family moved to Mississippi, and in 1839 Miss Porter was married to Dr. W. G. Austin, a talented young physician from Maryland. About 1847 they moved to the city of New Orleans. Here Dr. Austin became noted as one of its most skillful and successful practitioners. He was appointed several years ago by the governor to the presidency of the Board of Health. His wife was identified with the Methodist Church, South, during all the period of her life, and died on the twenty-sixth of July at their seashore residence in Ocean Springs (the spot where, above all others, she hoped to die at), in the eighty-first year of her age.

Her end was more than peaceful. Her only surviving child, Miss Mattie M. Austin, writes of it that "she was unceasing in her expressions of gratitude to God for all his loving-kindness to her. Such expressions, with portions of Scripture and hymns, filled her month, and while heretofore she had a horror of death, now such peace of God seemed to abide with her that it filled the house. She frequently burst out in song and 'hallelujahs' to God. Certainly her end was peace."

We are reminded, by this happy departure of our dear friend, of the exclamation of Mr. Wesley's Quaker friend, "John, thy people die well." J. C. Keener.

PHILLIPS—Mrs. Eugenia Watkins Blackshear Phillips was born in Alabama, May 18, 1863, of Capt. Uriah T. Blackshear and Elmira Tellfero; joined the M. E. Church, South, during the Annual Conference in Opelousas, La., December, 1877; was married to Mr. J. Hope Phillips, Sept. 22, 1882; died July 3, 1898, leaving a devoted husband and five children, besides numerous relatives and hosts of friends, to mourn her loss.

She was piously reared, and thus the foundation was laid for future holiness and usefulness. This writer can testify that during an acquaintance of ten years he has known no act on the part of the deceased, or word spoken, what was inconsistent with the dignity of the Christian profession.

She was devoted to her family and church. No work that she could do went undone for the well-being of either. Her greatest church work, however, was in the Sabbath-school, where she taught and impressed her gentle spirit in attestation of the purity and power of the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ.

She was taken with a congestive chill on Sunday evening, July 3, at five o'clock, and died at 11:30 the same night. We laid her remains to rest in the Opaloneas Protestant Cemetery, July 4, 1898, Rev. T. K Fannt LeRoy assisting in the funeral ceremonies.

ALLEN—Mrs. Laura Flowers Allen was born Nov. 2, 1854, and died of cancer at her home near Kilmichael, Miss., July 3, 1898. She was the youngest daughter of John and Eliza Flowers, and was married to W. H. Allen, March 12, 1879. To them were born six children, four of whom, with their father, still live; and because of this bereavement, are now in the midst of a sorrowful experience that can never again in this life be brightened by the presence and companionship of the fond mother and loving wife.

She embraced the Christian religion and joined the Methodist Church in 1869 under the ministry of the Rev. John A. Ellis, and ever afterward maintained her integrity and lived the humble Christian as best she could; therefore, when the final summons came, she, like her mother before her, could exclaim, "I am ready; all is peace between me and my God." Death was without its terrors to her, and as she well knew, was the only sure relief from her intense pain and suffering, and would be the gate to the haven of eternal rest in the Father's house of "many mansions."

"May they all meet and live together again in joyous companionship in that home immortal in the "sweet by-and-by!"

J. E. Flowers.

HOSS—Whereas, God, in his wise providence, has translated from earth to heaven our esteemed friend and co-worker, Mrs. Ronkit Ross, who had for many years been a devoted and faithful member of our Aid Society; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we will cherish in our hearts the memory of her many virtues, her unwavering faith, her constancy and zeal in the service of the Lord, and her faithful attendance upon the weekly meetings of our society.

Resolved, That we will bow in humble submission to the will of our God, who doeth all things well, knowing that our loss is her eternal gain.

Resolved, That in the death of our sister we have sustained the loss of a faithful and earnest fellow-laborer and a loving friend.

Resolved, That we emulate her example of loyalty to, and untiring service in, this work of our Master, and press on till the success she so much desired shall be attained.

Resolved, That we extend our deepest sympathy to the desolate husband and the little ones, who will so sorely miss a mother's tender care, and pray that the consolations of divine grace may be theirs in this hour of sorrow. Mrs. S. Eastland, for Com.

POWER—Mrs. Anna Power (nee Jones) was born in Attala county, Miss., Oct. 23, 1872, and died in same county July 8, 1898. She professed religion when about twelve years of age, and joined the M. E. Church, South; married J. O. Power, Nov. 24, 1892.

The above gives only the birth, second birth, marriage and death of our departed loved one. Of the joys and sorrows it is needless to speak. I think it can be truthfully said of her that "she did what she could." Did what she could to alleviate suffering, soothe the sorrowing, and comfort those that needed comfort. She left a little boy and a babe a few days old. The babe has since died. The bereaved husband has been left desolate, but has comforting assurance that his loved ones are safe in the "everlasting arms." Her parents and one sister and one brother survive. May all her relatives live so as to be ready for death as she was! She told weeping friends not to grieve for her, and tried to sing, "My soul is so happy," but could not. God bless the sorrowing ones left to struggle with the duties, trials and temptations of this life, and help them to live as she did, trying to do good to all with whom she came in contact.

Her Uncle.

FOSTER—Leland Whitfield, little son of R. W. and M. S. Foster, was born April 9, 1895, and died July 11, 1898.

The angel of death has saddened another home by entering and taking another one of its fairest flowers. Leland was a bright, promising and sweet child. He was the light and joy of the home in which he was the one object of love and prayer. The sweet little bud was soon pinched from earth to bloom in heaven, for suddenly the disease, congestion, was laid upon him, and, after a few hours of suffering, God took sweet little Leland to live forever in heaven. His pilgrimage on earth was short, but he has been transplanted to a purer home. He is missed at home, oh! so much, but heaven seems brighter now since God has called the precious one home.

We tender our sympathies to the bereaved parents, and may God protect and shield them from all danger, and finally save them in heaven! is the prayer of their sister,

Eliza.

FLANDERS—Elizabeth A. Flanders, the daughter of Edward and Mephellta Bendernegel, and wife of Mr. C. C. Flenders, was born in New Orleans, March 30, 1872, and died June 30, 1898, aged twenty-six years four months and twelve days. She was married to Mr. Flanders in Morgan Street Church, Feb. 10, 1897. She joined the M. E. Church, South, Feb 28, 1892, during the pastorate of Dr. J. B. Walker, and was a consistent member of the church of her choice until the day of her death. She was a Sunday-school teacher until her marriage. Hers was a beautiful and consistent religious life. In her home she was an example of love and devotion to her parents, to her husband, and, above all, to her Lord. The Lord wisely takes his people away from the evil to come, and translates them to the church triumphant above. We sorrow over our loss, but are comforted with the thought that she rests from her labors, and her works follow her. J. F. Scurlock.

DEBARDELABEN—Resolutions of respect to the death of Charlie Debardelaben:

Whereas, God, in his providence, has seen fit to call out of our midst one of the brightest and most consistent members of our church and Sunday-school; And, whereas, We are unable to understand these strange dispensations of our heavenly Father, but we bow in humble submission to the will of him who rules over the destinies of all men, and who doeth all things well; therefore, be it

Resolved, That our hearts go out in sympathy to the loved ones who are left behind waiting to join him in that realm of eternal peace and joy.

Resolved, That in the death of Charlie we sustain a loss that can only be felt greatest by those whose pleasure it has been to be constantly and closely associated with him.

Resolved, That although having been with us only a short time, yet we had learned to love him for his many noble virtues as well as for his strict adherence to the obligations of the church.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Yerbe Jones,
For Committee.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

If the acquisition of Cuba, Porto Rico, the Philippines, Hawaii and other territory has made it apparent that for the future the United States must maintain a larger standing army, the necessity of a large navy is even more manifest.

Ever since the signing of the peace protocol made it evident that the war was at an end, the army authorities have been at work elaborating a scheme of army reorganization. The army officials recognize the utter inefficiency of our present army system, and they also realize that the large acquisition of new possessions will make a permanent increase in the regular army essential.

Now that all further resistance from the Spaniards is at an end, the Government realizes that there is a serious problem ahead of it in preserving order in the newly-acquired territory. The insurgents, both in Cuba and the Philippines, seem determined to demand a share in the fruits of victory, and are giving trouble, which eventually promises to assume formidable proportions.

The falling-off in immigration has for years past been quite noticeable, and not only this, but there has been a great change in the nationality of the people who are coming. The Springfield (Mass.) Republican has been figuring on the returns and finds that the Germans and Irish no longer make up the bulk of arrivals, their places having been taken by the nations of southern and eastern Europe.

The city of Manila is quiet. The banks are now open and business has been resumed. Armed rebels are not allowed in the city. Major-General Merritt has ordered that armed rebel forces retire ten miles from Manila within three days. Representatives of Aguinaldo agreed to these terms last week asking on their part for employment under the American government of the leading rebels, which was granted.

Now that the season is at hand when the Fall trade may be expected to open shortly, the outlook for business is a subject engaging the attention of merchants. From all parts of the United States most cheerful predictions as to the activity ahead during the coming Fall and Winter are heard. Crops everywhere are good; manufacturing industries are reported as recovering rapidly from the lethargy of the Summer, augmented by the war, and business men are preparing to widen their field of operations.

A document entirely unique in the annals of warfare has been cabled to the War Department by General Shafter. It is in the form of a congratulatory farewell address issued to the soldiers of the American army by Pedro Lopez de Castillo, a private Spanish soldier, on behalf of the 11,000 Spanish soldiers. No similar document, perhaps, was ever before issued to a victorious army by a vanquished enemy. The President was much impressed by the address, and after reading it carefully authorized its publication.

The London Times says: "If America is prepared to undertake the responsibility of the government of the whole Philippine group, it is hard to see how any other power could legitimately interfere. If the United States repudiates such responsibility, a very perilous state of things might ensue, because it would not be easy to dispute the right of other powers to terminate the state of anarchy. Therefore many difficulties may be avoided by American annexation. In any case no European power may rely upon finding the United States as easy to coerce as Japan."

Senor Sagasta, the Premier of Spain, has stated that the actual situation now existing between Spain and the United States is neither peace nor war, and that the situation is merely a suspension of hostilities. Spain desired an armistice, but the United States did not agree to it. Spain in resigning her sovereignty in Cuba and Porto Rico has not renounced all belonging to her. The United States, as an honorable nation, will not seek to annex that which can not legitimately be considered as booty of war according to the conditions under which peace was concluded. Senor Sagasta believes that a cessation of hostilities having been proclaimed the taking of Manila does not affect the Philippine problem.

G. R. ELLIS, P. C.

Have you ever had in the morning what is fancifully called a "dark brown taste" in the mouth? If so, it is the effect of a deranged stomach and liver, the best remedy for which is a dose of Ayer's Pills, together with a little discretion as to diet and mode of living.

PRACTICAL EDUCATION THE CRYING NEED OF THE SOUTHERN STATES.

Georgia's equipped School of Technology in Atlanta offers courses in civil, electrical, and mechanical engineering. Board, $6.50 to $10 per month. Fees nominal. The shops for manual training in wood, machine, smith and foundry work have no superiors. The catalogue lists all graduates and their occupations, and the record is unsurpassed.

All students living in the dormitories are under wholesome regulations, which protect morally and physically, save them from all pernicious influences, and promote their interest in studies. For industrial catalogue, with full particulars, address Lyman Hall, president, Atlanta, Ga. Fully equipped textile department opens February next.

BRIGHT PROSPECTS FOR E. M. F. COLLEGE.

We learn from the president that the outlook for the college for next session is very flattering. Most of the old students will return, and he has already engaged many new ones, and more applicants in almost every mail. He has had two stenographers busy answering letters and sending catalogues and journals. Room in the college will be at a premium this year. With a curriculum equal to that of most male colleges in the South, and a faculty unsurpassed by any Southern female college, and a conservatory with talent that compares favorably with that at Boston and Cincinnati, no wonder the school is growing so much in favor in every quarter.—Meridian Daily News.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Booneville, Miss., EDITOR.

The Epworth Era is now a twelve page paper, wide awake and up-to date. Send in your renewals and subscriptions at once.

It abounds with lithographic cuts of places of interest and men of mark and merit. Each League should keep a copy of each week's issue on file for future reference.

The picture of City Temple, London, together with the letter of Bro. Marcus L. Gray, descriptive of English Scenes, brought a feeling of home-sickness to this scribe.

Liverpool, Rugby, London, Aldersgate Street, St. Paul's Cathedral, the Mansion House, etc.! The very reading of the names awoke a thousand recollections of how in our boyhood and young manhood days we were accustomed to hear of and visit these well-known places in "Old England."

Half way between Rugby and London and almost in sight from the railway is the ancient ivy-encircled Episcopal Church where my mother dedicated me—by the rite of infant baptism—to God and the church. She is in heaven now. I hope to meet her some sweet day by and by.

A private letter received from Miss Vic. Thompson (corresponding secretary and treasurer of Mississippi Leagues) tells of the delights and advantages to be found at Monteagle, Tenn., at which place she is sojourning for a few weeks.

Monteagle (Tenn.), Chautauqua (N. Y.), Winona-on-the-Lake (Ind.), and such places are delightful Summer resorts. They promise physical, mental and moral improvement to all who attend.

Let the young people everywhere be careful in selecting places for Summer outings and recreation. It was our purpose recently to take a much-needed rest at a certain place in a certain State, but upon close investigation we found that in order to get the benefit of the spring water and bracing atmosphere we would necessarily be subjected to such public sights as germans and card parties; and although we were cordially invited to preach on Sundays, nevertheless the place hereinbefore mentioned was not selected by this writer as a recreative resort.

In another place in these columns will be found report of the treasurer of the Mississippi Leagues, showing those who have thus far paid on amounts pledged at Meridian.

The treasurer of the Booneville Epworth League desires us to say in this connection that but for pledges made for local work early in the year the amount pledged at Meridian would have been paid some time since. The local work has been completed. Some funds are now in the treasury, and ere long the amount promised for missions and the State Orphanage will be forthcoming.

Miss Thompson desires the Leagues who have not yet paid shall know that the Mission Board and Orphans' Home Board are greatly in need of the full amount pledged ($1200). Send amounts to Miss Vic. Thompson, corresponding secretary and treasurer, Tupelo, Miss.

LESSON VIII.

SUBJECT—WILD MEN TAMED; OR, THE MIRACLE OF PURITY.

1. Study the Karens and their peculiar habits of life. Note their deep immorality and disgusting vices (pages 117 and 119 and 127). A modern picture of what the greater part of the world was when the gospel began its work.

2. Note the successive stages of the work under Boardman and Mason and the great transformations wrought in 15 years. (See pages 128 and 130.)

3. Be careful to observe that the force working was not the culture (so-called) of our modern civilization, but the purifying influence of the gospel of grace. (Vid. page 131)

4. From the library cite instances illustrative of the concessions made by the secular government as to the value and efficiency of modern missions (vid. the extract from the government report on page 130) and also refer to the testimonies of Darwin, the representative of science, and Stanley, the representative of travel, which give unqualified praise to the beneficent effect of missionary enterprises.

Suggestion. Does not a study of the passage on page 121—the deification of the Book—suggest that some Christians are hardly better than heathens along this line? The Bible is not a sacred relic to be worshiped, but a book whose principles are to become the bone and sinew of our moral natures.

GOD KNOWETH BEST.

BY MARY WHEATON LYON.

The gates of life swing either way
On noiseless hinges night and day.
One enters through the open door,
One leaves us to return no more.
And which is happier, which more blest.
God knoweth best.

We greet with smiles the one who comes
Like sunshine to our hearts and homes.
And reach out longing hands with tears
To him, who in his ripened years
Goes gladly to his heavenly rest.
God knoweth best.

He guards the gates. We need not dread
The path those little feet must tread,
Nor fear for him who from our sight
Passed through them to the realms of light.
Both in his loving care we rest:
God knoweth best.

LETTER FROM CHINA.

We are indebted to our distinguished friend, Dr. C. G. Andrews, for the privilege of publishing the following extracts from a private letter from Sister Fearn, wife of our Chinese missionary, Dr. John Burrus Fearn:

The Chinese New Year is almost upon us. The mountain side seems alive with people cleaning up graves and getting things in readiness for the rites and ceremonies of the season. Soon the night-lights will begin to glow among the graves, and food will be left for the sustenance of the departed spirits. On our walk yesterday Dr. Fearn and I saw several piles of ashes where paper sedan chairs, trunks, clothes, etc., had been burned to serve the same purpose.

Last night we heard quite a commotion on the street about bed-time, which, on investigation, proved to be a funeral, and a great pile of ghost-money was burned just under our bed-room window. From now on, for a week or two, the nights will be made hideous by the noise of rocket and fire-cracker, necessary accompaniments to the ascent of the kitchen god, which is burned with pomp and ceremony at the threshold of every heathen home. I suppose you know that this god has a place in every kitchen, where he is installed at the beginning of each new year. His duty is to keep watch over the family, and at the end of the year render his report to the higher authorities in the regions unknown. On the night of his ascent—or descent—his mouth is carefully stuck up with molasses to prevent his making an adverse report, and in a small bamboo chair he sits over the fire until god, molasses and chair are no more. Everyone you meet has a spray of holly or some evergreen in his hand, as well as ghost-money galore—a necessary part of the season's worship. Everyone is pretending to clean up. Even my amah, who is really pretty neat, is waiting until the New Year to buy herself a new braid of hair. For this one reason it would be pleasant to have the New Year a quarterly festival. But for all that, this is a season of holiday and happiness. There is a dark spot of misery that even the New Year can not soften. I wonder if you know, even by observation, what suffering from starvation means. From the famine-stricken districts in Northern China day after day boat-loads of refugees—hundreds and even thousands of hungry, miserable, poverty-worn men, women and children—are landed in the different cities in this part of the country. Hardly do they land before the officials seize upon as many boats as are necessary to transport this multitude of beggars, and force the boatmen to lend their boats to the cause. They are paid twenty cents a head per day to supply rice to the crowd, and a little something extra for the use of the boat, and ordered to take them on to the next city, where the same thing is repeated. They live like cattle herded together, regardless of age or sex, in the midst of such filth and dirt as makes the heart sick. At home starvation stares them in the face, while almost worse a fate is theirs on the boats. Though death seems preferable, they are too human not to cling to life with a fearful tenacity.

We have been having very exciting times of late, and since the danger is over, I will write you about it, as there is now no cause for you to be uneasy on our account. I suppose, of course, you know that Germany took possession of the stronghold of one of China's most important provinces, and asked besides a most enormous ransom in money and land for the lives of two murdered German missionaries. This action of the part of Germany seemed to warrant England, Russia, France and Japan in putting in their claim, which they are doing by simply taking possession of the section of the Empire most suitable to their liking. This dividing the Empire has left the country in a most unsettled state, although no trouble has grown out of it for us yet, because the Chinese are so dissatisfied with the present Manchurian administration that they would welcome almost any change of government as something better than they have at present. We would not be surprised at any time to find ourselves in the midst of an insurrection. As a natural consequence of all this, there is much talk among the natives. In Yang Yok, for the past three or four weeks, there have been all sorts of rumors to the effect that we are to be killed and our house burned. Our servants, while on the street, have been warned that they would be included in the general massacre. The nights have been full of terror for me, at least. Hour after hour I have lain awake planning ways of escape, and wondering if we could reach the yamen, or would we be murdered in our beds?—listening for any unusual sound, and shivering with horror at the thought that we might be killed, and the precious baby fall into the hands of these lawless men. This was the worst that could happen—far more to be dreaded than death for us all. For days I have kept a package of the baby's clothes tied up, and ready to pick up and fly at any hour in the night. For the last two or three days, however, there has been less talk, the officials have promised us protection, and soldiers have been sent from Soochow, and are stationed on the hill near us. We really feel that our position here is more secure now than it has ever been, and we are so thankful that it has been settled without our leaving the city. We felt that to leave in the midst of the talk would mean endless trouble for the future, with constantly threatened riots, and possibly a necessary and final end to our work here. Dr. Fearn was so brave, and had so much faith that all would be well, that it made me more courageous, especially in the morning, for I must confess that as night came on my heart grew heavier and heavier, until by bed-time I felt sure we would never see another dawn. At one time things looked so gloomy that we thought all of our Chinese servants, teachers, etc., would leave in a body for Soochow, and I begged to have the baby sent to Mrs. Park, but Dr. Fearn thought we could not spare her, and even if the worst should come, she would be better off with us. We feel very safe now, and my last two nights have been as peaceful as if we had been in Shanghai.

We are expecting several guests during the holidays. Dr. Fearn and Mr. Pilley thought it best to spend this time at home, as the city is so full of idlers that it seems a good time to get at them. They expect to spend much time on the street and in the chapel preaching and selling books, and we hope that much good will come out of it. The work is growing visibly, and we feel so thankful for the encouraging signs that the gospel is spreading and the church growing. The better element is with us, and this was shown by the fact that though an attempt was made to stir up the people against us, it failed.

We had two guests from Shanghai with us last week—two English gentlemen. They were anxious to see something of the officials, so we gave them a dining, and invited the eight highest officials and scholars in the city to meet them. After dinner we had our photographs taken together. Everything passed off nicely. They all snuffed snuff all during dinner, smoked their water-pipes, got up and changed their clothes when they felt too warm, and acted with anything but what we would call good manners, though, according to their way of thinking and doing, nothing could have been more proper.

Dr. Fearn has had a wonderful compliment paid him. At the dinner given us and our guests by the official, he asked if there was any way to secure Dr. Fearn's return to Yang Yok, and Dr. Park replied that by writing a letter to the Bishop, and asking him, it might be done. So, a few days later, there came a letter—a vox populi epistle—asking from the people that he be returned to Yang Yok. Then later on came two great red envelopes from the two highest officials, making the same request. Such complimentary letters I have never read. I felt quite proud of my husband. This is the first time in the history of the missions that this has been done. When all the letters have been translated, I will send you copies.

Yesterday I received two out-calls—one to see a woman who must have been dead before the messenger reached me, and the other to see a woman who had been dead some time. In the latter case they wanted me to look at her and tell the cause of her death. When I suggested a post-mortem, they left without answering—that was too much.

The Spring rains have been upon us now for several weeks, and everything is mouldy, damp, and as disagreeable as possible. We can't leave a damp towel on the rack over night without danger of mildew, while our matting, shoes and clothes not in use for a day are nicely coated with mould. No one can imagine the disagreeableness of this season. It is steaming hot, rain and sunshine together, and no breeze whatever. This lasts a month, and sometimes two, or more.

THE NEW TEACHERS AT WHITWORTH.

Having met all of my new teachers for the coming year, I think it wise that I should state that every change has been for the better.

Miss Enla Mortimer takes our Primary Department. She has had seven years' experience in this special work. This is her second school. Her patrons at Crystal Springs are wondering how their school can run without her.

Miss Gilmore, Reader, is the best elocutionist I have heard. Everywhere the people praise her, for they understand her. She is devoid of rant and an overdone Delsarte. Whitworth offers her patrons the services of a master of the art of expression.

Prof. C. B. Snyder, director of music, is kind, genial, versatile. Being a Christian both by profession and practice, he delights in the songs of Zion. He has rare skill as an organist, and his playing on the piano is characterized by a beauty of expression rarely met. No conservatory has a better man; few have as good.

Prof. E. L. Sherwood, A. M., University of Mississippi, takes the place made vacant by the resignation of Rev. C. W. Crisler. His record as a scholar and a Christian gentleman are known to all Mississippi teachers. Prof. R. W. Jones says of him, "He is well qualified to fill a chair in any college." Rev. W. S. Lagrone says: "He has developed our school in every line. . . . In everything he is a worthy example to his pupils." Rev. S. M. Thames, presiding elder of Aberdeen district, says: "In all the positions he has occupied, and at all times, he has demonstrated the principles of a cultivated Christian gentleman. He is a fine student, a good scholar, and a teacher of rare ability. I regret exceedingly to give him up from my district."

Miss Virginia Hart assumes control of the Art Department. Her work is excellent. The Art Institute of Chicago wrote us, "She is the best teacher we have to offer you." Her record as a Christian worker, in addition to her many accomplishments, makes us think that we have in Miss Hart a teacher much to be desired.

Miss Brunie Hill, a graduate in English under Baskerville, a young woman of great talent and a true member of the church, takes the chair of English. Dr. Price writes, "A young woman well equipped for her life-work, and having special gifts as a teacher." Her pastor writes, "She is always willing to do her part of the work, whether in prayer meeting, League service, or church." Her patrons demonstrate their faith in her by sending their children to Whitworth, where they will still be under her care and instruction.

Whitworth has for its motto, "The best educational facilities for the least possible money." Look at our advertisement and see our prices. Prospects are good. Let every loyal Methodist send us his daughters. Help us to build in Mississippi a college which shall have every facility. Help us to put the extreme South in the front ranks of the educational movement of our day.

JOHN W. CHAMBERS, Pres.

PORTO RICO.

BY ALFRED SOLOMON,
Of the Porto Rican Assembly.

The population of Porto Rico, some 800,000, is essentially agricultural. A varied climate, sultry in the lowlands, refreshing and invigorating in the mountain ranges, makes possible the cultivation of almost every variety of known crop—sugar, tobacco, coffee, annatto, maze, cotton and ginger are extensively grown; but there are still thousands of acres of virgin lands awaiting the capitalist. Tropical fruits flourish in abundance, and the sugar-pine is well known in our market, where it brings a higher price than any other pine imported. Hardwood and fancy cabinet wood trees fill the forests, and await the woodman's ax. Among these are some specimens of unexampled beauty, notably a tree, the wood of which, when polished, resembles veined marble, and another, rivaling in beauty the feathers in a peacock's tail. Precious metals abound, although systematic effort has never been directed to the locating of paying veins. Rivers and rivulets are plenty, and water-power is abundant; and the new regime should see the installation of power plants and electric lighting all over the island, within a short time after occupation. On the lowlands large tracts of pasturage under guinea grass and malojilla feed thousands of sleek cattle, but, as an article of food, mutton is almost unknown. The native pony, small, wiry and untireable, has a world-wide reputation, and for long journeys is unequaled, possessing a gait, as they say in the island, like an arm-chair.

Perhaps a third of the population of the island is of African descent; but, strangely enough, the colored people are only to be found on the coast, and are the fishermen, boatmen and laborers of the seaports. The cultivation of the crops is entirely in the hands of the jibaro, or peasant, who is seldom of direct Spanish descent, while the financiering and exportation is conducted almost entirely by peninsulares, or Spanish-born colonists, who monopolize every branch of commerce to the exclusion of the colonial-born subject. In fact, the Porto Ricans have long since given up every attempt to compete in commerce. Harassed on every side by government officials, subject to open and prejudiced discrimination in the settlement of tariff adjustments, accused of revolutionary intentions if patronized by their friends, they have abandoned the unequal struggle, and have turned their attention to the liberal professions, graduating in our universities, and taking back with them to their country new ideas of civic rights and progression which have made them still further objects of suspicion of their vulgar insular masters.

To evade absolute ill-treatment and, in some cases, even torture, many have taken out papers of American citizenship; and in the States to-day are Porto Ricans, whose success and the estimation in which they are held by all who come into contact with them, bear witness to their mental and moral fiber. That these men will play a large part in the regeneration of the island under its new conditions is a foregone and logical conclusion; and it is equally certain that their experience of republican institutions and the influence they possess over their countrymen will enable them to lend most effective aid to this government when it decides to institute reforms foreign to the customs of the island, and which the natives might, at first sight, suppose to be inimical to their interests.

The personality of the Porto Rican is a very charming one. Generations of ill-treatment have developed in them a patient resignation which has about it nothing of cowardice. Even now, with liberty within grasp, nothing is heard of recrimination, and none will be practiced. The same hospitality will be offered to the Spaniard as to other nations, and that hospitality is proverbial.

The social life of the cities is identical with that of most all other tropical Spanish-American countries. The mass, in the cool of the morning, at which it is to be feared religious thoughts are not the only ones which fill the heads of the youth of both sexes; the retreta after sundown, where slim-waisted, dainty senoritas glide up and down the plaza to the sound of a fine military band; shopping by gaslight, which develops into a series of skirmishes between buyer and assistant, dear to the hearts of the fair sex, and an occasional ball at the captain-general's palace, where costumes may be seen which have the undeniable stamp of Rue de la Paix, and faces which have a beauty which is at once touching and enchanting. Small features, large, black, lustrous eyes, and perfect oval outlines make the criolla a distinct improvement on the sensual-faced Spanish woman, and she is of more refined instincts and gentler disposition. As mothers, they are unexcelled, and literally sacrifice themselves for the welfare of their children. The capital, San Juan, being the seat of government, is, of course, the social center, while Ponce is, commercially, of more importance, and is of more modern construction and advanced ideas.

A visit to the rural districts introduces us to a class of peasantry ground down by unjust taxation, but simple, thrifty, and hard-working. Living in a hut constructed of palm branches thatched with palm leaves, his only clothing a cotton duck suit from the New England looms, and surrounded by a numerous family, usually in a state of nature, he passes his day working in his patch of corn or sugar-cane, and his evenings dancing the native danzas to the sound of the guiro and tiple. He can neither read nor write, and has not the facilities afforded him for learning to do so, and knows our country only by the dried fish and rice it sends him for his consumption. His bete noir is the Spanish civil guard, who patrol the country in mounted pairs, and whose boast is that they never bring in a prisoner alive. He pays direct tax to the government in the form of assessment on the value of his farm, and the cedula, or internal passport; and it has been stated that these taxes amount to about sixty per cent. of his net income. But he is ready for emancipation, and, when educated, will prove a valuable and law-abiding citizen.

The internal administration of the island disposes of a budget of about $3,300,000, and is a woful example of corrupt officialism. Of this sum only about $650,000 is expended in the island, the remainder being applied to payment of interest on public debt, salaries of Spanish officials, army, navy, and other extra-insular expenditure. But the whole of the revenue is collected in the island. This is indeed absentee landlordism with a vengeance. As an example of an oppressive system of taxation, nothing can beat the levy made on the transfer of real estate, which is two per cent. on the assessed value of the property, and an equal amount on mortgages to afford the privilege of inscription and record on the civil register. The press is nominally free, but articles attacking any branch of the public service are not tolerated, as being subversive of order and good citizenship. Questions of general policy are discussed, but within certain limitations well understood by the editors, who have to assume responsibility for all unsigned communications, and frequently pay the penalty for publishing news distasteful to the government by imprisonment and suspension of their periodicals. Such censorship, however, has never been quietly submitted to, and it speaks well for the press of the island that hardly a day passes but what some editor is fined or imprisoned. The courts of justice presided over by Spanish judges are so only in name, and for two reasons. The first is, that the judiciary is not independent of the administration, and judges can be removed or transferred at the will of the executive. The second reason owes its being to the fiction that the island is a province of Spain, and, therefore, the court of last appeal is situated in the peninsula, where venal Spanish judges and prejudiced Spanish juries are hardly likely to do justice to the hated and down-trodden colonials.

With the removal of the cancerous growth of absolute tyranny, and the implantation of republican institutions, a bright future awaits the unfortunate isle. Whatever form of government it be accorded—territorial, autonomous, or colonial—the inalienable right of mankind to free speech, free press and free education, can not but, being practiced, bear fruit, and add one more stone to the temple of liberty which this nation is building with materials gathered from the four corners of the globe.—New York Independent.

Capt. Robley D. Evans, of the "Iowa," in a letter written at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, July 21, to Rev. H. H. Clark, D. D., of Annapolis, Md., his former chaplain, says: "It certainly was the most beautiful sight that I have ever witnessed to see my men, at one instant tearing the enemy's ships literally to pieces and with the desire to kill every man on board of them, and half an hour afterwards taking off their clothing to cover the wounded prisoners. It gave me a higher opinion of American manhood under a blue shirt than I have ever had before, and that is saying a great deal. It comes very near being pure Christianity, according to my notion."—Zion's Herald.

Be what you wish others to become. Let yourself, and not your words, preach for you.—Amiel.

SELF SACRIFICE.

BY J. B. SMITH.

They who Christ's spirit seek his mind possess;
In sacrifice and service others bless.
Christ's servants are the most in perfect line
With Christ himself and with God's plan divine.

He left the Father's house, his home above,
To manifest his condescending love
When men conspired him but to crucify,
And gave him but a cross on which to die.

Honored of God and men, those who aspire
To save the lost and lift the fallen higher
Instead of seeking rest and self repose,
Make deserts bloom and flourish as the rose.

A life well spent, with human weal inwrought,
Which helpful aid to human need has brought
Is worth a hundred lives of gilded show,
Whose impress on the world none ever know.

SOME THINGS I OBJECT TO.

BY "REX."

I object to discussing creeds and dogmas at a camp meeting. There are preachers who will attend a camp meeting, and, in defiance of the expressed wishes of the camp meeting association, will occupy the hour allotted them in discussing the second-blessing theory of sanctification. Such preaching invariably proves a disturbing element. The preaching of a sermon in opposition to this doctrine is equally to be condemned at a camp meeting. Such preaching does only harm. At a camp meeting the great aim of preaching ought to be to call sinners to repentance, as our Savior did.

I should also condemn a sermon in opposition to this doctrine as sweepingly and earnestly as I protest against it in this case. Such preaching does only harm. At a camp meeting the great aim of preaching ought to be to call sinners, not the righteous, to repentance, as our Savior did.

I wish also to enter my protest against what I regard as little less than profanity in the pulpit. We are taught that we ought never to mention the name of God in a light, or trifling, way, but only with that reverential awe which is due from a creature to his Creator. Yet there are preachers who, in the pulpit, very frequently use the name of God in a jovial, flippant way. This may be done without any intention of being irreverent, but it is nevertheless an error that ought to be corrected. It does no good; and is it not sinful?

Again: I wish to inquire why it is that at the present time nearly every station and circuit in Methodism is annually dependent for a revival, not on God, as in its early and spiritual days, but on the advent of an evangelist. Where is the fault? It can not be with God! That it is not with the laity is, relatively, true. Hence we must look elsewhere for a solution of the problem. It must be, therefore, that something is wrong with the clergy. Possibly in some cases a spirit of self conceit and an overshadowing idea of their own ability, coupled with their knowledge of books and things, not at all justified by the facts, makes them careless of the closet and its helpful power. Festus thought because Paul was making a good talk, that his learning had made him mad, and since then the impression seems to obtain that a man's ability to teach or to preach the gospel is covered entirely by his erudition and a knowledge of Greek and Hebrew. So entirely is this true, in many instances, that the closet is seldom entered, and when it is, only such prayers or sentiments fill the heart as this, no matter what form of words is used in the perfunctory petition addressed to the throne of grace: "Lord, I have an appointment to preach next Sunday at 11 o'clock. My sermon is an able effort, and is gotten up along the lines laid down by our Bureau of Theology. It is so worded as not to offend the sensibilities of people of refinement, or excite their fears of an eternal, or any other kind of a hell; nor is there a thing in it that will be likely to anger anybody, not even the devil himself, or endanger our financial system. I have remarked, incidentally, that there is no moral turpitude in practicing the grossest deception to secure material returns for the church, as a body. While I am always pleased to have you around, I flatter myself that I can run this business to the better satisfaction of the people by myself; hence I shall not object if you conclude to remain away. However, if you desire to be present, of course, I shall not object, but I beg you will not interfere and spoil my plans. I know that it is your church, and the people look on me as your monthpiece to them, but the simple, loving truths of the gospel are behind the age, and we must keep step with modern progress, or we shall be outstripped by the other churches in the race for material greatness and numerical strength."

The idea I wish to convey here, as a reason for the failure of the stationed preachers to have revivals on their work without the aid of evangelists, is found in the fact that they depend too much on their books, and too little on their communion with God in their closets; are too lenient with the faults of their people, are too prone to make the church of God a corral for any and everything that asks admittance, no matter why; and, finally, are too chary of the terrors of God's law in the preaching of his Word. Our Lord will accept no second place, either in the heart or in the pulpit, and where he is not the first and only real reliance for help by the occupants of the ladder, the results of their preaching will be nil in the matter of saving humanity.

It is gratifying to know that among our preachers there are but few of this sort; but there are some, and, if they read this, they can put on the coat—it was made for them. It is also a fact that this evangelizing business has spoiled the people, and nothing will do lots of them except an imported evangelist. The only remedy for this sort is for preachers of this class to ask God to re-convert them, and put in a little common sense with the dose of religion they get.

JOHN BURRUS FEARN, M. D.

John Burrus Fearn, M. D., was born in Hinds county, Miss., Aug. 19, 1871. He lived near all of his life in Jackson, Miss. He was educated in the schools of Jackson and at the Agricultural and Mechanical College at Starkville, Miss. He was graduated as a doctor of medicine in the Medical College in Memphis, Tenn., in 1894.

He was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in Jackson, Miss., in the fifteenth year of his age. While attending the Medical College in Memphis he distinctly felt and acknowledged the call to go as a missionary to China. He offered himself to his own church, but the condition of the treasury was such that the Board of Missions was constrained to assure him of its inability to send him, and of the very small probability of obtaining the financial strength anywhere in the near future.

In his great anxiety to go to China he applied to the China Inland Mission. When that mission learned of his youth and education and piety, it encouraged him to make ready to go. But in the final articles of agreement sent him to sign was the question, "Do you believe that the heathen will surely be lost without the gospel?" He answered that he believed, as a rule, all would be lost without the gospel, and that any saved without it would be under immense difficulties almost amounting to an impossibility; but that he believed the Bible taught the possibility of the salvation of some of the heathen, as in these Scriptures, "There is a light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world," and again, "For when the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, their having not the law are a law unto themselves, which, when the work of the law united their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts the mean while accusing, or else excusing one another."

The China Inland Mission replied that they required all their missionaries should believe in the final and universal loss of all the heathen who never heard the gospel. They wrote that such a belief was needed to inspire an unremitting zeal.

Although the young missionary's heart was burning to go to China, still he declined to subscribe to a dogma that seemed to him so unlike the spirit of his heavenly Father. For a while he seemed to be without the opportunity to carry out his cherished purpose, and began to cast about for some other employment for the Master.

At the session of the Mississippi Conference of the M. E. Church, South, held in Meridian, Miss., Dec. 12-17, 1894, Rev. W. R. Lambuth, Missionary Secretary, made a stirring missionary address showing the fields white unto the harvest, and appealing for laborers in the vineyard. Rev. C. G. Andrews, member of the Mississippi Conference, and maternal uncle of Dr. J. B. Fearn, arose in his place and commended Dr. Lambuth's fervent appeals for laborers, but added that just now there was a greater need of money than of men; that here was a young man of ardent nature, of pure natural endowments, of good academical education, with a diploma as Doctor of Medicine, possessed of the deepest piety, and with a burning zeal to go as a missionary to China, but there was no money to send him. Immediately the members of the Conference and the friends of missions subscribed the amount necessary. The Mission Board soon after approved him and employed him as a missionary, and in 1896 the cherished purpose of his life was complied with, and he set sail for the Celestial Empire, where he has been engaged since that time in practicing medicine, and in preaching the glorious gospel to those who sit in darkness and in the shadow of death.

Dr. Fearn was married in China, in 1897, to Dr. Anna Walter, who was employed by the Woman's Board in the hospital in Soochow. She is a lady of the finest character, and of great excellence in knowledge and in piety. She has proved a helpmeet indeed, brightening the home of her husband, and giving to him the most valuable aid as consulting physician, and in the management of difficult surgical operations.

Dr. Fearn is most highly appreciated by those among whom he labors. Recently an entertainment was given to him and other missionaries by an official at Yang Yok. The official asked if there was no way by which Dr. Fearn's return to Yang Yok could be secured. Dr. Park replied that it might be done by petitioning the Bishop. A few days later there came a letter, variously signed by officials and people, asking that Dr. Fearn be returned to Yang Yok. Then later on came two great red envelopes from the two highest officials, making the same request. Letters so complimentary from high officials, and requests so urgent from natives for the return of missionaries, have been rarely known in missionary circles.

TEMPTATION.

In the form of pleasure or pain all temptation comes. Failing to win by intrigue, sin would carry the citadel by assault. From the wilderness to Gethsemane is a beaten path of Satan. The temptation of Christ, beginning with the seductive pictures of universal dominion, continued in all possible combinations of pain and pleasure through the years of his ministry, exhausts the gamut, and reaches its natural culmination in the loneliness and suffering of the garden and the cross. The frowning, thunder-riven clouds that hung above Calvary at the sunset hour were but the regathered and transformed elements seen in the rose-tinted, fleecy clouds of the dawn from the mountain-top in the wilderness. Satan appears as an "angel of light," with luring eyes and resplendent robe, or as a frightful, demonic spirit of hell, with burning, baleful eyes, in a garb of terror dyed in the deepest colors of woe. He comes to all mankind with the golden bribe of pleasure or the scowling front of pain.

"Temptation destroys the sight, but guilt restores it." Men think they can snatch the bribe from Satan's fingers without giving value received; that they can sin without incurring the consequences of sin; and this gives the tempter his strongest hold upon the human heart. They only realize their terrible mistake after the fetters are hung upon the soul. Sin appears in siren-like beauty when she tempts, but in beastly, haggish ugliness when her end is gained. What a beautiful creature she is as she lures the sinner on! Her hair flows back in rippling volume from the whiteness of her brow, and in its meshes dew-wet roses gleam. Passion-thrilled glances leap from the wonderful depth of her eyes. A bewitching smile plays about her cherry lips. Her cheeks are as delicately colored as if kissed by the rosy lips of dawn. With sylph-like, willowy gracefulness of form, warm white arms extended in winning invitation, and heaving voluptuous bosom, she stands, the incarnation of sinful pleasure. Intoxicated by her sensual beauty, and yielding to her honeyed words, the sinner flings himself into her riotous embrace. As soon as her arms close around his form she impresses a burning kiss upon his lips that awakes him to the terrible reality. Not in the loving arms of a siren does he find himself, but in the scrawny clutches of an ugly hag. Her beautiful tresses have changed to grizzled shreds, and her passion-thrilled glances to blistering gleams of hate. Her bewitching smile has changed to a leering, sardonic grin, which hovers about her lips, parched and cracked by her stench-laden breath. Her rosy cheeks are shriveled and yellow. All beauty and grace have disappeared. Gaunt, cadaverous, diseased, sin clasps her victim to her bosom, where a putrid cancer feeds, and laughs in horrid glee at his futile struggles. Only the bright possibilities are seen by the tempted, but the dark are visible to the fallen. O sinner, be not deceived; "he that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption."

Temptation in the form of pleasure is to self-indulgence in the form of pain to self repression or cowardice. In some lives pleasure, and in others pain, predominates. St. Paul, for instance, was not lured by the pleasures of sin, but was harried by life-long persecutions. He maintained his integrity in and through them all. Like some grand river that brooks no opposition, his life flowed onward over pain and suffering, even through the gorge of martyrdom into eternity. The secret of his strength was an indwelling Christ. "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." No matter what the temptations of life may be, we may conquer through him. He met temptation in all its essential forms, and triumphed over it. He alone knows the full power of temptation, for he alone has broken this cable forged upon the anvils of hell. Knowing its power, he sympathizes with us in our struggles, and is "able to succor them that are tempted." "In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world."

THE CHARTER OF THE MISSISSIPPI METHODIST HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

Section 1. Be it known, that Charles B. Galloway, Edward Mayes, John A. B. Jones, T. L. Mellen, Geo. T. McGehee, W. L. C. Hunnicutt, A. F. Watkins, E. H. Monnger, J. S. Hamm, Dabney Lipscomb, H. W. Foote, J. R. Bingham, J. S. Oakley, T. W. Lewis, J. D. Cameron, T. C. Wier, and J. M. Wyatt, and such other persons whom they may associate with them, have agreed and do hereby form "The Mississippi Methodist Historical Society," whose domicile shall be Millsaps College, in or near the city of Jackson, Miss.

Section 2. The objects of this charter are to gather together and preserve safely, by printing or otherwise, writings, prints, papers, books, and any and all other things pertaining to, or illustrative of, the history of the Methodist Church in Mississippi or elsewhere; and to this end may receive gifts of such articles (or may purchase the same), as well as gifts of money and means and lands in any manner not violative of the Constitution of the State of Mississippi; and may, from time to time, dispose of the same by exchange, barter, sale, or gift, as the Executive Committee of said incorporators may direct; and may have all powers and privileges conferred by Section 836 of the Annotated Code of said State of Mississippi, so far as the same may apply to a religious organization such as this is intended to be; and any seven of said-named incorporators, after notice duly written and mailed to all said-named persons, may meet and organize and adopt such by-laws and regulations necessary in the premises and not repugnant to this charter or chapter 25 of said Annotated Code.

Executive Office, Jackson, Miss.

The within and foregoing Charter of Incorporation of the Mississippi Methodist Historical Society is hereby approved.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the great seal of the State of Mississippi to be affixed, this 19th day of August, 1898. A. J. McLAURIN.

The Louisiana Woman's Foreign Missionary Conference met in Opelousas, June 24-28. Several delegates were present, and some societies represented only by written reports. It proved a pleasant and, we hope, a profitable session. Our president and corresponding secretary were absent on account of the afflicting hand of Providence. Both having been called to pass through the deep waters, our hearts go out in sympathy to them. Our vice president, Mrs. T. K. Fannt LeRoy, presided with her characteristic grace and dignity. Mrs. LaPrade was also with us. She had represented us at the Woman's Board, and she greatly enhanced the interest of our meetings by her intelligent, bright and cheerful little talks, which were interspersed throughout our deliberations.

The pastor, Bro. Fannt LeRoy, and Bros. Manly and Porter were with us, and gave us appreciated help and sympathy.

Our corresponding secretary's report shows that our numbers stand almost the same as last year, and we were gratified to see that our treasurer's report had not diminished in consequence of the quarantine last Fall and the war cry this year. While we are thankful to note no decrease, we sincerely hope soon to be able to chronicle a decided increase in both these reports.

In consideration of our president's feeble health and inability to attend our meetings, we elected Mrs. LaPrade president for the ensuing year. Our vice president, corresponding secretary, recording secretary and treasurer remain the same. Several new district secretaries were appointed whose names the president will probably publish in due time.

Our meetings were held in the house in which the Louisiana Conference was organized, nearly fifty-two years ago. In that half century how many of our sainted fathers have anchored safely on the other side! May the heavenly Pilot guide our little craft, the missionary society, over smooth waters, help us to bend to the oars, and, after doing all we can, to "patiently await to hear the keel upon the shore."

We found Opelousas a most hospitable place. I was pleasantly entertained in the home of the pastor.

Bro. Porter preached our anniversary sermon. He preached earnestly, and all were edified.

A children's meeting in the afternoon and a night sermon by the pastor were prevented by a very heavy rain.

The kind ladies of the church gave the delegates and visitors a reception on Monday night, which was very much appreciated, though the rain again materially interfered.

After a delightful drive over the little city and out to the Opelousas Camp Ground on Tuesday, we bade good-by to the many kind friends we had met, hoping our visit had not been in vain. L. PAXSON, Recording Secretary.

The Christian Life.

A STEP AT A TIME.

In accomplishing your day's work you have simply to take one step at a time. To take that step wisely is all that you need to think about. If I am climbing a mountain, to look down may make me dizzy; to look too far up may make me tired and discouraged. Take no anxious thought for the morrow. Sufficient for the day—yes, and for each hour in the day—is the toil or the trial thereof. There is not a child of God in this world who is strong enough to stand the strain of to day's duties and all the load of to-morrow's anxieties piled upon the top of them. Paul himself would have broken down if he had attempted the experiment. We have a perfect right to ask our heavenly Father for strength equal to the day; but we have no right to ask him for one extra ounce of strength for anything beyond it. When the morrow comes grace will come with it sufficient for its tasks or for its troubles.

"Let me be strong in word and deed,
Just for to-day;
Lord, for to-morrow and its needs
I must not pray."

—Theodore L. Cuyler.

NO FRIEND OF THE CHURCH.

The man who is everlastingly finding fault with his church, local or general, is no friend of the church, however lond may be his professions of love and loyalty. He who ceases to be a helper and becomes a fault-finder, not only hinders to the extent of his own influence, but he turns others into hindering mote-magnifiers. It is a puny plea that wrongs to be righted must be discovered and public attention called to them; this is true of some wrongs—others will correct themselves; but the man who does nothing but hunt for wrongs and proclaim them soon destroys his own ability to right them. One man earnestly at work to build up the church is worth more than a hundred men laboriously trying to pick flaws in the church. One man at prayer for denominational growth and greatness is more valuable than a whole presbytery or synod or General Assembly engaged in making notorious a few denominational faults discovered here or there.—Cumberland Presbyterian.

DO IT.

If your seat is too hard to sit upon, stand up. If a rock rises before you, roll it away, or climb over it. If you want money, earn it. If you wish for confidence, prove yourself worthy of it. It takes longer to skin an elephant than a mouse, but the skin is worth something. Don't be content with doing what another has done—surpass it. Deserve success and it will come. The boy was not born a man. The sun does not rise like a rocket, or go down like a bullet fired from a gun; slowly, but surely, it makes its round, and never tires. It is as easy to be a leader as a wheel-horse; if the job be long, the pay will be greater; if the task be hard, the more competent you must be to do it.—Methodist Herald.

LIFE'S LONELINESS.

Life's loneliness—there are times when we all have to go into it; there are chambers in the soul where no foot can fall, no dearest friend can come. There are circumstances that reveal to us this loneliness and intensify our sense of it. Who will show us any good at such times? There is nobody, there is nothing, that promises any hope. Life is a thing empty and forsaken, with no hand that can lead us, no voice that can speak to us, no light that can break through the haunting gloom. There is but one answer to that cry of the heart: "Lord, lift thou up the light of thy countenance upon us!"—Mark Guy Pearse.

A prudent man ought to escape many of the evils of life. Surely there is no lack of warning. Danger signals hang out everywhere. The history of the world is a solemn and a mighty admonition. Biographies of distinguished men, both good and bad, point a moral. No sane and observant man can doubt the baleful consequences of sin. He who sins now sins with his eyes wide open. When we come to the parting of the ways there are sign-boards to show us the safe route. That we may profit by observation and experience should be our constant prayer.—Texas Advocate.

Religion is genius for justice; recognition of the rights of others, with prompt, cordial performance of duties. As such, it is a sentiment; but a sentiment embodying itself in an action, whose possibility is defined in the divine command that requires it. Command of God is always and everywhere the measure of the character of man.—Western Christian Advocate.

He who has seen only the daylight knows nothing of that heaven of stars which all night long hangs overhead its lamps of gold. When death has dusted off this body from me, who will dream for me the new powers I shall possess? It were vain to try. Time shall reveal it all.—Exchange.

A man may know that he is without God if he is without prayer. Prayer is the simple expression of the desire for God. It is by prayer we invite God to come in to occupy his throne, and when he is in, prayer is inevitable.—James Stalker.

Devotion inspires men with sentiments of religious gratitude and swells their hearts with inward transports of joy and exultation.—Addison.

Health, Voice, Appetite and Strength Failed—Completely Restored by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Last year my health failed entirely. My limbs were so weak that I could scarcely walk. I had no appetite and suffered with constipation. My voice failed me in the pulpit. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and very soon I saw a great improvement. In the winter I was attacked with the grip which left me weak and prostrated. I went back to my old friend, Hood's Sarsaparilla, which seems to be the thing for me." REV. C. S. BEAULIEU, pastor Christian church, Lowellville, Ohio. Remember.

For the ADVOCATE.

A PLEA TO GOD WHO BLESSES.

BY B. M. ELLIS.

Father, hear thine erring child,
Sunk beneath his guilt and shame;
Cleanse this heart by sin defiled,
Cleanse it in the Savior's name.
Lord, forgive the past, forgive!
Save me from eternal woe:
Thine the power to bid me live
To love the God who blesses so.

Father, take this heary of sin,
And anew thy creature make;
Write thy law of love within,
This I plead for Jesus' sake.
Pardoned only, I must yet
Faint and fall beneath the foe:
Thine my nature be, and let Me honor God who blesses so.

Father, if the work is wrought,
Speed the witness now to me;
May my heart, divinely taught,
Know its kinship unto thee.
Speak, O, speak! the seal impart!
Light and life and joy bestow;
And with all my life and heart
I'll praise my God who blesses so.

Fort Gibson, Miss.

FROM CENTENARY COLLEGE.

MR. EDITOR: Will you kindly allow me space in the dear old ADVOCATE to express my sincere thanks, and the heartfelt gratitude of our entire Young Men's Christian Association of Centenary College, to Dr. C. W. Carter for a valuable present of 187 nice books for our library? While there are at present only a few members of the association in Jackson, I will take the liberty of saying that words are inadequate to express our appreciation. Dr. Carter is indeed the Good Samaritan to us. The books are upon different subjects, viz.: Religion, Science, Biography, Law, Business, Missionary, History, Poetry, and a number of miscellaneous subjects. May God bless him for this gift, and may others be inspired to give us books and money to make our hall more attractive!

Here is an opportunity to help us. We need a nice book-case. Dr. Carter has a nice walnut case, which cost him $25. He offers it to the association for $15. Who will make the association a present of it? Let me hear from you at once.

I also desire, Mr. Editor, to thank "A Friend," of Bunkie, La., for $2 for our college reading-room. Who will be the next one to send us something for that purpose? Surely "A Friend" is not the only Methodist in the State who has an interest in our reading-room.

Fraternally, D. F. TURNER,
Cor. Sec. Y. M. C. A.

TEACHERS' BUREAU.

The Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has, under paragraph 415 of our Discipline, established a Teachers' Bureau.

The purpose of this bureau is the advancement of Christian education.

We propose to do our best to secure for the graduates of our institutions, and for other competent persons, positions in our schools and colleges; but we guarantee a position to nobody.

Applicants for positions will be furnished, upon request, with our application form, which will explain itself.

Since the making of money is not the purpose of our Bureau, we will make our nominations with the greatest possible care. Presidents of our schools and colleges, and Boards of Trustees seeking teachers, will do well to apply to us.

The facilities of the Board for this work are unusual. We have a constituency—preachers and laymen—of one million and a half.

We request the pastors throughout our connection to advertise this bureau and to notify us of any vacancy in any school, secular or Christian, as soon as it occurs. By so doing they will greatly aid us in promoting Christian education.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. O. L. Savage, P. C., Coffeeville, Miss., Aug. 19, 1898: "We have just closed a fine meeting at Long Branch Church; 18 accessions. Money enough raised to re-cover the church. Rev. B. P. Patterson assisted me. The Lord was with us in power. Pray for us."

Rev. C. C. Griffin, P. C., Hiram, Miss., Aug. 19, 1898: "We have held our meeting at Hopewell, with fine results. Seven conversions, two accessions, and a great many reclamations. We are now holding the Mt. Carmel meeting. Up to date we have had six accessions, sixteen or seventeen claimed conversion, and quite a number of reclamations. We have had the Holy Ghost in great power with us, converting and saving men. To God be all the glory. Pray for us."

Rev. Sam. B. Cox, P. C., Jonesboro circuit, Miss., Aug. 23, 1898: "I was stricken down with typhoid fever the first of February, and was kept out of my work until ten days ago, Rev. W. W. Edge filling the work. We have had some excellent meetings; more than twenty conversions and accessions. The charge is in good condition, spiritually. I thank my brethren for their prayers for me. It has been the sweetest year of my life. Our collections, of course, are behind; so we have some hard work to do between now and Conference."

Rev. J. A. Bowen, Water Valley; Miss., Aug. 23, 1898: "On Aug. 6 we closed a good meeting at Blount's Wells, eight miles east of Coffeeville, Miss. The meeting resulted in many conversions and the organization of a Methodist Church with eighteen members. Others will join. The old-time power was manifest from the first to the last service. We were ably assisted by Revs. G. S. Morehead, Arthur Martin, and W. O. Sadler. We could not have succeeded without these consecrated young men. The day we organized the church Capt. I. T. Blount and others assured us that a good church-house would soon be erected. This is the sixth good revival that I have assisted in this year. My health is good. Have only missed one week's work during the year. Water Valley Methodism continues to prosper in all departments. Come to see us."

Rev. R. M. Blocker, Jeanerette, La., Aug. 19, 1898: "I am just home from a glorious revival meeting at Rayne, where I assisted the pastor, Rev. R. C. Grace, eleven days. The work in the church was good. About fifteen conversions and reclamations and two sanctifications. Among the converted (and accessions) were four members of a Creole Catholic family of excellent social standing—a man, his wife and two sons. The meeting was a very happy one all the way. It is generally understood that Rayne never had a more thorough revival. It is due Miss Nellie Cunningham to say that she broke the ice in the way of that Catholic family by getting some of the children into her Sunday-school class."

Rev. G. A. Klein, Nesbit, Miss., Aug. 2, 1898: "Last week we held our meeting at Hinds Chapel, which is one of the oldest Methodist Churches in this section of our Conference. We were at a disadvantage, owing to the fact that there was a great deal of sickness in that community. Bro. H. T. Gaines, from Senatobia, was with us, and took charge of the meeting. He readily took in the situation, and laid his plans to revive that grand old church, which may well be called 'a mother of Methodism.' Soon the congregations began to swell until the church, which is extra large, could not hold the congregation. After self-denial and prayer, Bro. Gaines would stand before that throng of people to proclaim a simple gospel, and, as he preached, the Spirit of the Lord came upon him, and he, as Elijah of old, would fearlessly denounce sin in plain language. He spared no one, but with sledge-hammer truths he roused stewards, members, and sinners. It was a hard pull, but, trusting in the Lord for guidance and help, he steered the meeting safely through the week, and closed out last Sunday night. Our church has been wonderfully revived. One and another of the stewards and members would come to me and promise to be more faithful in the discharge of their obligations to God. We estimate that there were about thirty-five conversions, though our attention was given mainly to the salvation of the church. We find so many in the church who are not enjoying religion—yea, who are leading godless lives—and we feel that the present time demands a pure church. To this end we have labored, and God sent Bro. Gaines to us at a most opportune time, and we feel that truly we are 'on rising ground.' May God continue to bless his labors!"

FROM REV. SAM. Q. BASS.

I have been at home most of this year, reading, watching, and praying. Have read a great deal. In some respects this has been the hardest year of my life; but, thank God! I have not seen my children go hungry, or needing raiment. Thank God for grace and stickability! I have stuck to God and the right when it seemed to me that every friend abandoned me.

I am glad to see good reports from some of the pastors. Would that all the reports were good. Scarcely anything delights my soul more than to see or hear of souls being born to God.

I wish to call attention to a paragraph or two in Bro. Bachman's letter, of Aug. 5. Judging him by what he says, he would have no one save, or help save, a soul but some Conference preacher. He says that "an eminent layman was heard, not long ago, to say to his pastor, 'If you do not hold a meeting yourself soon, I am afraid that you will backslide.'" He then compliments the layman for this utterance. I have had as good and eminent laymen as we have say to me: "Bro. Bass, I long to see the day when some of our pastors will lay down this selfish principle they have in regard to local preachers and evangelists." And one of the best men in our church said to me once: "Bro. Bass, I love our pastor dearly, until I think of his littleness against so-called evangelists." If the "calling help" to the pastors were left to the laymen, there would be several at work who are not. I refused two calls of this and last week. The brethren's statement to me was: "Our pastor, together with another good man, has tried to hold us a meeting, and have done no good that we can see." "We want you to hold a meeting for us." "Our pastor will not be there. Will you come?" My reply was, "No." Our good Bro. Bachman says: "But let no pastor permit another to take his crown." I wonder what crown he has reference to? I wish Bro. Bachman had not written the first part of that letter.

Oh, that we all could get rid of the awful sin of prejudice—prejudgment.

I had written these words in all kindness to Bro. Bachman and to all others who oppose local preachers' help.

I hope to meet my engagements in October and latter part of September.

SAM Q. BASS.

Corinth, Miss., Aug. 15, 1898.

There is another attitude as important as that of truth and duty for the development of great personality. It is the attitude described in the word "love." Ever and everywhere be a lover! The occupying of such a point of truth and duty and love will make you a personality which shall be like a cathedral, strong with the strength of buttressed principles, beautiful with the memory of holy deeds, and seen from afar as the symbol of the presence of God.—Charles F. Thwing.

How much property a man will leave when he dies depends largely upon his health. The man who suffers from ill-health stands little show of being a successful business man. The man who comes to his desk in the morning with a headache, who suffers all day from dullness and drowsiness, who goes to his meals without an appetite and tosses restlessly through the night without sleep, is not likely to leave a competence for his widow and orphans. Success is even more dependent upon health than upon ability.

Few men realize these truths. They think that everything can be accomplished by work, and that health is a secondary consideration. Work is useless unless it is good work, and good work is never done save by a thoroughly healthy man. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the best of all health restorers and health preservers. It makes the stomach strong and active. It sends a man to his meals thoroughly hungry every time. It facilitates the flow of digestive juices and makes assimilation perfect. It invigorates the liver. It purifies the blood and fills it with the life-giving elements of the food. It is the great blood-maker and flesh-builder. It tears down inert, half-dead tissues and builds new, firm, muscular flesh. It does not build flabby fat like cod liver oil and does not make people more corpulent.

Mr. John Brooks, of Boylston, Mass., writes: "I write to tell you of the great benefit I have received from Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I was taken with a bad cold which settled on my lungs. The doctors said I was in consumption and could not get well. I took Cod Liver Oil and it did me no good. After taking it four months I heard of your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and it saved my life."

WORK.

BY LUCY LARCOM.

Work is the holiest thing in earth or heaven,
To lift from souls the sorrow and the curse;
This dear employment must be given,
While there is want in God's great universe.

Religion that costs nothing is worth nothing.—Exchange.

When imperfection thinks itself perfection it makes a conspicuous display of faults.—Churchman.

Our first concern is not to be successful in winning souls, but to be faithful to God's truth.—Matthew B. Riddle, D. D.

False friends are like our shadow, keeping close to us while we walk in the sunshine, but leaving us the instant we cross into the shade.—C. N. Bovee.

There is no happiness in having and getting, but only in giving; half the world is on the wrong scent in the pursuit of happiness.—Henry Drummond.

How near must a person live to me to be my neighbor? Every person is near to you whom you can bless. He is nearest whom you can bless most.—William Ellery Channing.

Education is a better safeguard of liberty than a standing army. If we retrench the wages of the schoolmaster, we must raise those of the recruiting sergeant.—Edward Everett.

We talk often of preparing to meet our God. Let us think of the other phase of this same duty—preparing to leave our fellow men. What sort of influence shall we leave behind us?—Selected.

To do wrong is to inflict the surest injury on our own peace. No enemy can do us equal harm with what we do ourselves, whenever and however we violate any moral or religious obligation.—Channing.

It was a good answer that was once given by a poor woman to a minister who asked her, "What is faith?" She replied: "I am ignorant, I can not answer well, but I think it is taking God at his word."—Pulpit.

There is nothing faith can not make noble when it touches it. You need not say I want to get away from my daily business or from my domestic concerns in order to show my faith. No, no, stop where you are and show it.—D. L Moody.

The philosophy of human life is a simple one. It is to develop for God, men and self the powers with which the life is naturally endowed. Beyond this man has no duty in life given him. The truly successful men have been those who did this. All others have failed of the highest accomplishment.—Selected.

God keeps a school for his children here on earth; and one of his best teachers is named Disappointment. He is a rough teacher; severe in tone and harsh in his handling, sometimes, but his tuition is worth all its costs. Many of our best lessons through life have been taught us by that same stern old schoolmaster, Disappointment.—Theodore L. Cuyler.

HONESTY.

Character is more clearly revealed in the acquisition and handling of money than perhaps in any other way. In these times of mammon-worship, extravagance, and pleasure-seeking, any course or method that brings success is highly popular with a large class, while strict integrity is looked upon as inexpedient and unnecessary. That the business world is well nigh honey-combed by dishonesty and fraud, that there is amazingly little of square and fair dealing among men, needs no argument. While we believe there has been some improvement over former times in the matter of business integrity, it is nevertheless true that rascality and dishonesty are alarmingly prevalent.

"Ay, sir, to be honest as this world goes
Is one to be pick'd out of ten thousand."

Honesty is not the whole of religion, but it certainly is an essential part thereof. If the Bible be true, no man can be a true Christian who is not just in all his dealings, small as well as great. We are of the conviction that the necessity and prime importance of common honesty is not stressed enough in the home, in the school-room, and by the pulpit. A short time ago a prominent statesman in England said that during his public career he had heard many sermons on justification, on the Trinity, on the credibility of the Scriptures, etc., but not one on honesty, though all that time cheating and thievery were the commonest sins.

It is astounding how little conscience many professed Christians have when it comes to money-making and business affairs. Mighty emphasis needs to be put just now upon Paul's injunction to "provide things honest in the sight of all men." There are some who fancy they can make amends for crooked practices in business by giving largely of their ill-gotten gains to charity, to education, or to some public benefaction. It was thus that the owners and promoters of the once-famous Louisiana Lottery sought to justify the existence and perpetuation of that gigantic swindle. Some men are brazen enough to assert that it is impossible to be honest and at the same time succeed in business, but the fallacy of this has been exposed again and again. The magnificent fortune of A. T. Stewart, of New York City, was amassed by means of fair dealing, industry, and economy. Numerous other illustrations of like success might be cited. While success, based on down-right integrity and fair dealing, is often much slower in coming than success otherwise obtained, yet it is nearly always permanent, while the other is seldom so. Far better is it, however, to have the approval of God and of one's own conscience even in failure, than to roll in wealth dishonestly gained, for at last we must give a strict account of our stewardship.

It is beyond question that "honesty is the best policy;" but the man who is honest merely from policy and not from principle is a scamp, and only waits a favorable opportunity to cheat or defraud. However temperate, energetic, or well educated a man may be, if he has a reputation for being dishonest, he will find employment exceedingly hard to obtain. Dishonesty often parades itself under the guise of smartness. Many people think it is a fine joke to beat a railroad company out of a fare. It is not to be wondered at that so many boys form habits of trickery when their parents, instead of rebuking such tendencies and indications, laugh at their cleverness, and encourage them in the dangerous belief that it is commendable, as well as smart, to take advantage of another in a trade. Thus it is that rascals are being trained.

Well has it been said that "getting ahead in this world too often means getting behind in the world to come." The merchant who measures with a short yard-stick, or who over-charges an unwary customer, may stand high in the world, and occupy a prominent pew at church, but in the eyes of God he is a thief. The capitalist or the planter who takes advantage of the poverty and helplessness of his employees in fixing the price of their wages is guilty of dishonesty far more cruel than that of the bank embezzler or the stock speculator. The laborer who scruples not to beat his employer out of time or money, if he has a chance, is no better than a petty thief.

When it comes to politics, what shall we say? God knows there is need enough of solid integrity in this realm. Some men who are corrupt themselves go so far as to say that "every man has his price." Such an assertion is an unwarranted slander upon society. Though there are many in official position to whom character is dearer than life, still it is true that the prevalence of bribery in public life is one of the greatest menaces to the stability of our government and civilization. Let us do our best to put none but men of incorruptible honesty in office.

A corrupt public sentiment is responsible for much of the dishonesty now existing. As Bishop John P. Newman strikingly puts it: "Society scourges the thief of Necessity, but pities the thief of Fashion. The man who steals a loaf of bread to feed his starving family is sent to jail, but the man who is successful in bold, dishonorable speculation, by which others have been wronged, is caressed by society."

The beginnings of dishonesty, like most other beginnings in crime, are usually small at first, but ere long they increase rapidly. More than one boy has begun a career of rascality by stealing something as insignificant as a few apples or melons from a neighbor's patch. Many a clerk dates his ruin from the time when, in an emergency, he extracted a few dimes from his employer's till, or when he overcharged a customer a small amount, and put the money in his pocket. "Earn money before you spend it" is an excellent motto for every man to follow.

One of the best legacies any man can leave his children is an unsmirched reputation for honesty. It is related that when one of the Highland ancestors of Dr. David Livingstone, the famous explorer, lay dying, he called his family around his bedside, and said: "Now, my lads, I have looked all through our history as far back as I can find it, and I have never found a dishonest man in all the line, and I want you to understand you inherit good blood. You have no excuse for doing wrong. My lads, be honest."

"An honest man, though e'er sae poor,
Is king o' men for a' that."

A REMARKABLE DOCUMENT.

The amicable and congratulatory cablegram addressed to the American army by eleven thousand Spanish soldiers, of which mention was made in the news columns of our last week's issue, is a very remarkable document. We herewith present it entire:

"Soldiers of the American Army—We would not be fulfilling our duty as well-born men, in whose breasts there live gratitude and courtesy, if we should embark for our beloved Spain without sending to you our most cordial and sincere good wishes and farewell. We fought you with ardor, with all our strength, endeavoring to gain the victory, but without the slightest rancor or hate toward the American nation. We have been vanquished by you (so our generals and chiefs judged in signing the capitulation), but our surrender and the bloody battles preceding it have left in our souls no place for resentment against the men who fought us nobly and valiantly. You fought and acted in compliance with the same call of duty as we, for we all but represent the power of our respective States. You fought us as men, face to face, and with great courage, as before stated—a quality which we had not met during the three years we have carried on a war with a people without morals, without consciousness, and with doubtful origin, and we could not face the enemy, and who shot their noble victims from ambush and then fled. This kind of warfare we had to sustain in this unfortunate land.

"You have complied exactly with all the laws and usages of war as recognized by the armies of the most civilized nations of the world; have given honorable burial to the dead of the vanquished; have cured their wounded with great humanity; have respected and cared for your prisoners and their comfort; and lastly, to us, whose condition was terrible, you have given freely of food, of your stock of medicines, and you have honored us with distinguished courtesy, for after the fighting the two armies mingled with the utmost harmony. With this high sentiment of appreciation from us all, there remains but to express our farewell, and with the greatest sincerity we wish you all happiness and health in this land which will no longer belong to our dear Spain, but will be yours, who have conquered it by force and watered it with your blood, as your conscience called for, under the demand of civilization and humanity. But the descendants of the Congo and of Guinea, mingled with the blood of unscrupulous Spaniards and of traitors and adventurers, these people are not able to enjoy their liberty, for they will find it a burden to comply with the laws which govern civilized communities.

"FROM ELEVEN THOUSAND SPANISH SOLDIERS.
"PEDRO LOPEZ DE CASTILLO,
"Soldier of Infantry.

"Santiago de Cuba, Aug. 21, 1898."

This document is a record-breaker. Never before in the annals of human warfare was such a communication sent by the private soldiers of a vanquished army to the rank and file of the conquering foe. Such a testimonial to the magnanimity and high character of our nation's defenders should be regarded as one of the proudest trophies of the war. For the first time in the annals of the world two nations seem about to wind up a war with a love-feast, figuratively speaking. Certainly no war of which we have any knowledge ever closed with so little of animosity rankling in the breasts of the combatants. The anti-Cuban sentiment expressed in this manifesto is entirely natural under the circumstances, but it will have no appreciable effect upon public opinion here. Americans believe that the Cubans are capable of self-government, and will give them an opportunity to vindicate their title to autonomy.

UNIVERSAL PEACE.

A blast from Gabriel's trumpet would hardly have been a greater surprise to the population of this mundane sphere than was the announcement made, on Monday last, that the Czar of Russia had sent to all the civilized nations of the earth a communication asking for an international conference with a view of ushering in an era of universal peace. If such a proposition had been made by the United States or England, the world would not have been very greatly surprised, but that it should come from Russia is a marvel of marvels. It has set all tongues to wagging. There is no reason whatever to doubt that the proposition is made in perfect sincerity. We think it unquestionable also that the nations will accept the invitation for an international conference. Whether any agreement can be reached that will accomplish the desired end no one can foretell. But whatever may be the outcome of the conference, the Czar has gone up a thousand per cent. in the world's estimation on account of this action. The desire to bring about a reduction of the standing armies of all the nations of the earth, and thus reduce the burdens of taxation that are oppressing the people, stamps him as a very different type of man from that which he has been popularly supposed to be. When such a military potentate as the Czar of Russia puts himself on record as favoring the settlement of international disputes by arbitration instead of by war, it may be truly said that "the world moves."

This first conference of the nations may not be productive of very large, immediate results, but it shows the trend of the age, and is prolific of beneficent promise. The rulers of the nations are beginning at last to realize the wanton wastefulness of war, and are beginning to sigh for the coming of that era long since heralded by the voice of prophecy when the sword and the spear shall be beaten into plowshares and pruning-hooks. It is now given out as a fact that Emperor William of Germany has intended for some time to issue just such a call as that of the Czar, but that he deferred the matter until he should make his contemplated visit to Bethlehem, so as to give it additional effect by issuing it from that sacred shrine, the birth-place of "the Prince of peace." This was a beautiful sentiment, but His Imperial Highness has received a very practical lesson concerning the evils of procrastination.

WHY?

A brother wishes to know why we have not published his article anent the Publishing House claim. Here is our answer:

If we were to publish all the matter that has been sent us on this subject, beginning next week, and using two whole pages per week for the purpose, we would not get through by the first of January. And if we may judge the future by the past, by that time we would have, perhaps, hundreds of other communications on hand, most of them as long as a Pharisee's prayer. A little later we might have to rent a place to store our manuscripts. And when the end came, not one additional fact would have been made known. As there is no reason why one of these articles should be published to the exclusion of the rest, we think our brother's question is answered. No true friend of the ADVOCATE wishes to see its columns filled for months with matter of this sort. All the facts have been given, and the final action of the church has been foreshadowed by our Bishops.

A NOBLE EXAMPLE.

Like the sensible woman that she is, Miss Helen Gould took a trip, a few days since, to Montauk Point to see for herself whether the newspaper accounts of the needs of our sick soldiers are correct. Her benevolent heart was so touched by what she saw that she at once put $25,000 into the treasury of the National War Relief Association. With her characteristic modesty she tried to keep the matter out of the newspapers. Our readers will remember that she gave the government $100,000 at the beginning of the war. As told in a former issue of the ADVOCATE, there is never a day that she does not spend a considerable sum in charity. If all whom God has blessed with wealth had the spirit of Helen Gould, the conflict between capital and labor would soon be a thing of the past.

What a blessing is wealth when properly used! Thousands of sad hearts have been cheered and thousands of lives brightened through the benefactions of this noble woman. And none of her labors of love have been trumpeted to the world through any agency of hers. As far as possible, she lets not her left hand know what her right hand doeth. And who can doubt that by thus using her talent as a trust from God she has solved the problem of happiness for herself? In her daily deeds of mercy she finds a pure, exalted happiness which no butterfly of fashion or devotee of pleasure ever knew.

A NEW BOOK.

BIBLE TOOLS FOR BUSY PEOPLE. By Rev. John H. Nichols, of the Tennessee Conference. Author of "Grub Ax," "Pump," etc. 12 mo. 375 pages. Cloth, $1. Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn.

The author of this volume is a controversial writer of some note, and during the past few years has published a series of strong doctrinal pamphlets that have had an immense circulation. These booklets, treating from the Methodist standpoint, of infant baptism, immersion, apostasy, the right of a sinner to pray, close communion, depravity, the "second blessing," etc., have now been gathered into one volume, with additional new matter, and in this more permanent form are worthy of a place in every Methodist library. In proving the truth of the positions assumed and the doctrines set forth, the author has all the way through closely followed the Scriptures, "to the law and to the testimony" evidently having been his motto in the work of preparation. To an unprejudiced mind the arguments used are, in the main, unanswerable. Among the unique chapter-titles, by which the pamphlets composing the volume have been familiarly known, may be mentioned "The Wheel," "The Grub Ax," "The Curry-Comb," "The Furnace," "The Shipwreck," "The Sprinkler," etc. The author has the rare knack of presenting truth in a plain, practical, and striking way, which makes the book readable as well as instructive. In most of the chapters the dialogue form is used. This is a most excellent book for persons who are in doubt upon certain doctrinal points, as well as for those who desire clear and condensed information as to the Methodist creed.
